This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

VIII. PROCEDURE, IN GENERAL

Sec. 911. [Sealing and testing of writs.] All writs and processes issuing from the courts of the United States shall be under the seal of the court from which they issue, and shall be signed by the clerk thereof. Those issuing from the Supreme Court or a circuit court shall bear testament of the Chief Justice of the United States, or, when that office is vacant, of the associate justice next in precedence, and those issuing from a district court shall bear testament of the judge, or, when that office is vacant, of the clerk thereof. The seals of said courts shall be provided at the expense of the United States. [R. S.]

"Circuit" courts mentioned in this section were abolished by Judicial Code, § 229, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

Supreme Court Rule 5 requires that all process of the Supreme Court shall be in the name of the President of the United States.

Effect of section.—This section means no more than that when a writ or process issues from a federal court it must be signed by the clerk, and shall be authenticated in the manner therein set out. It is not an ordinance to the effect that no action or proceeding in a federal court shall be instituted except by the issue of process, signed by the clerk, duly sealed, etc. Leas v. Merriman, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 510.

Construed with R. S. sec. 914.—The provisions of this section are not inconsistent with, and therefore are not repealed by, the subsequent Act of Congress embodied in R. S. sec. 914, infra, p. 21. Giving due effect to the latter, the practice, and form and modes of proceeding, in the courts of the United States, in common-law actions, are to be formed to, and be regulated by, those of the state courts, when there is no statute of the United States prescribing different practice or forms or modes of procedure. When the statutes of the United States are silent, the practice of the state courts will prevail, but when those statutes speak they are controlling. Peaslee v. Haberstro, (1879) 15 Blatchf. 472, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,884; Dwight v. Merritt, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 614.

In any original suit in a federal court which must be commenced by a summons or other process of the court itself, such process must be signed by the clerk and issued under the seal of the court, to be valid, regardless of any different provision as to the form of a summons in the state courts, the general conformity statute not operating to waive this specific requirement as to the process in the federal courts embodied in this section. In re Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 234 Fed. 443.

Other than in the necessary particulars prescribed by this section and R. S. sec. 912, infra, neither the form of the writ or process, nor its contents, nor the manner or method of its delivery to the marshal for service, nor its formal drafting, is sought to be controlled by any legislation of Congress, further than to ordain generally that the writ shall, as to these particulars, so far as possible, harmonize with and be similar to the writs and processes obtaining under the code of procedure of the state in which the court has jurisdiction. Jewett v. Garrett, (C. C. N. J. 1891) 47 Fed. 625.

Process defined.—The word "process," as used in this section, means an order of court, although it may be issued by the clerk. Leas v. Merriman, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 510.

Processes of the court, in its narrowest sense, and as used in this section, means the writs and mandates of the court, under the seal thereof. U. S. v. Murphy, (D. C. Del. 1897) 82 Fed. 893.

Preparation of process.—Any suitor or duly authorized attorney may draft the process or writ. Jewett v. Garrett, (C. C. N. J. 1891) 47 Fed. 627.

Signed by the clerk.—A summons will be set aside when not signed by the clerk. If the summons had been signed by the clerk, it could be amended as regards the seal. Peaslee v. Haberstro, (1879) 15 Blatchf. 472, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,884.
See also Bowler v. Eldredge, (1846) 18 Conn. 1.

By a deputy clerk.—The signing of a venditioni exponas by a deputy clerk in his own name, and the want of the signature of the clerk himself, was held to be an irregularity only, and not to avoid the writ and proceedings under it. Griswold v. Connolly, (1871) 1 Woods 193, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,833. See also Bragg v. Lorio, (1871) 1 Woods 209, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 1,800.

Test of writ.—On all process and writs from the Supreme Court, including writs of error, the statute makes test of the chief justice indispensable. Wells v. McGregor, (1872) 13 Wall. 188, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 536; Middleton Paper Co. v. Rock River Paper Co., (W. D. Wis. 1884) 19 Fed. 252.

A summons issued from a District Court, bearing the test of the chief justice instead of that of the district judge, is irregular in that particular, but may be amended under the provisions of R. S. sec. 984, infra. In re U. S. v. Turner, (D. C. S. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 734.

The test of a writ from the former Circuit Court by a deputy clerk was not a compliance with the statute. U. S. v. Antz, (E. D. La. 1883) 16 Fed. 119.

Vacancy in office of judge.—All writs and processes issuing from a District Court when the office of its judge is vacant shall be tested in the name of its clerk. In re Urban, etc., Realty Title Co. (D. C. N. J. 1904) 132 Fed. 140.

Power to amend process.—Power to amend process is given by R. S. secs. 948 and 954, infra, pp. 90, 98. That power is power to amend a want of form in process, but not to amend a paper void for want of compliance with the statute. Dwight v. Merritt, (S. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 614, wherein it appeared that an attempt was made to commence a suit at common law, by serving on the defendant a paper purporting to be a summons, in the form prescribed by the statute of New York for commencing a civil action. It was signed by the plaintiff's attorney, but was not under the seal of the court nor was it signed by the clerk of the court. On motion of the defendant to set aside the summons because of these defects, the plaintiff asked to be allowed to amend the summons, nunc pro tunc, by having the seal and signature added. Denying the motion to amend, and setting aside the summons, the court said: "Power to amend the process is said to be given by sections 948 and 954. That power is power to amend a defect in process, and power to amend a want of form in process. But there must first be a process to be amended. There must be something to amend and to amend by. This paper is no process. The process which can be amended under the power conferred, is process issuing from the court. This paper never issued from the court. If it had in fact issued from the court and was signed by the clerk, but had no seal, or had a seal but was unsigned, what it had might perhaps be accepted as showing that it issued from the court, and the lacking particular might be supplied."

In U. S. v. Turner, (D. C. S. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 734, the original summons issued out of the District Court bore the test of the chief justice, and not of the district judge. The court held that this was a defect or irregularity subject to amendment. As the summons bore the seal of the District Court and issued from the court there was something to amend and to amend by.

Likewise a summons duly signed by the clerk can be amended as regards the seal. See Peales v. Haberstro, (1879) 15 Blatchf. 472, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,894.

Delivery of process for service.—Nowhere is it required by statute of the United States that the clerk shall deliver the writ or process to the marshal for service, and, when the clerk has performed all of the acts prescribed by Congress for the issuing of writs and processes, the writ or process, as the case may be, is clearly issued by him. Perris Irrigation Dist. v. Turnbul, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 662, 132 C. C. A. 74, following Leas v. Merriman, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 510; Jewett v. Garrett, (C. C. N. J. 1891) 47 Fed. 625.

But in some districts it seems to have been for many years a settled practice after writ and process has issued in obedience to this section, for the clerk to prepare the requisite number of copies thereof, attesting the same true copies of the original writ and process, and to deliver them to the marshal or his deputy for service. The officer, having made service of such true and attested copies, makes indorsement to that effect upon the original. Elson v. Waterford, (C. C. Conn. 1905) 135 Fed. 247.

Copy of writ.—As the original writ must be issued under the seal of the court, a copy of it, of course, can only be certified by the clerk, who is custodian of the seal, who alone can issue the writ, and who has charge of and makes the record authorizing its issuance. Taylor v. U. S., (E. D. Tenn. 1891) 45 Fed. 531, reversed (1893) 147 U. S. 605, 13 S. Ct. 479, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 335.

Process subject to requirements of section.—In general.—The provisions of this section apply only to writs and processes issuing from the courts themselves. Adverse Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 254 Fed. 443.
Notices.—Notices given by the parties are not processes of the court and are not embraced within the terms of this section. Hence in any proceeding which may be properly instituted and proceeded with upon mere notice to the parties in interest, without process from the court itself, as in condemnation proceedings, the requirements of section 911 have no application. In re Condemnation Suits, (E. D. Tenn. 1916) 234 Fed. 443.

Garnishment notice.—A garnishment notice is not such a “process” of the court as must conform to the requirements of this section. Such notices are governed by the provisions of state statutes, under the provisions of R. S. sec. 915, infra, p. 64. Wile v. Cohn, (S. D. Ia. 1894) 83 Fed. 750, affirmed (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 70 Fed. 138, 36 U. S. App. 165, 17 C. C. A. 25. But see Middleton Paper Co. v. Rock River Paper Co., (W. D. Wis. 1884) 19 Fed. 252, wherein it was held that a garnishee summons, served upon the defendant in garnishment proceedings, in the form prescribed by the law and practice in the state court, and running in the name of the state, without seal, and issued and signed by the plaintiff's attorney, cannot be sustained in the federal court. The statutes and decisions of the state courts regard the garnishee proceedings as the commencement of a new suit against the defendant therein.

Notice of motion for judgment.—This section does not apply to a notice given under a state law authorizing a judgment on a contract to be obtained on motion after fifteen days' notice to defendant, and the practice thereunder, which is for the plaintiff or his attorney to sign the notice and serve the same on defendant, such a notice not being a “process issuing from the court.” Leas v. Merriman, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 510.

A warrant of arrest, for preliminary examination, must be under seal, as required by this section. Clough v. U. S., (W. D. Tenn. 1891) 47 Fed. 791, modified (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 373, 6 U. S. App. 377, 5 C. C. A. 140.

A warrant of attachment, against a vessel, was held to come within the requirements of this section. Bowler v. Eldredge, (1846) 18 Conn. 1.

Sec. 912. [Tests of process, day of.] All process issued from the courts of the United States shall bear tests from the day of such issue. [E. S.]

Day of tests—Writ of error issued out of term.—It is no objection to a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court to a state Supreme Court that it bears tests on the day of its issue, which was not a day of the term of the United States Supreme Court. Atherton v. Fowler, (1875) 91 U. S. 143, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 265.

In Kane v. Love, (1822) 2 Cranch C. C. 429, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,608, the court refused to quash a fi. fa. on the ground that it was issued after the day of the defendant, where the judgment was in the lifetime of the defendant and the execution bore tests before his death.

An alias capias ad respondendum could not issue unless it was tested of the term to which the original was returned, and made returnable to the next immediately ensuing term. U. S. v. Parker, (1797) 2 Dall. 373, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,992.

Sec. 913. [Mesne process, and proceedings in equity and admiralty.] The forms of mesne process and the forms and modes of proceeding in suits of equity and of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction in the circuit and district courts shall be according to the principles, rules, and usages which belong to courts of equity and of admiralty, respectively, except when it is otherwise provided by statute or by rules of court made in pursuance thereof; but the same shall be subject to alteration and addition by the said courts, respectively, and to regulation by the Supreme Court, by rules prescribed, from time to time, to any circuit or district court, not inconsistent with the laws of the United States. [R. S.]

See also R. S. sec. 917, infra, p. 75, and note thereto.

Power to make rules.— Powers as ample as legislation can give are conferred by this section and R. S. sec. 918, infra., p. 77, on the District Court in cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction as to the "forms and modes of proceeding," and "such alterations or additions thereto as the said courts shall in their discretion deem expedient," and "to regulate the practice as shall be fit and necessary for the advancement of justice," subject only to any existing provisions of law or the rules established by the Supreme Court. The Hudson, (S. D. N. Y. 1883) 15 Fed. 162.

The general rule prescribed to the Supreme Court an adoption of that practice which is founded on the custom and usage of courts of admiralty and equity constituted on similar principles, but that court is authorized to make such deviations as are necessary to adapt the process and rules of the court to the peculiar circumstances of this country. Grayson v. Virginia, (1896) 3 Dall. 320, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 619.

Under this section, R. S. sec. 918 (infra, p. 77), and rule 48 of the Supreme Court, a District Court has authority to make a general rule providing for the issuance of commissions, either open or closed, to take testimony, which shall be executed as nearly as may be in accordance with the rules of the state of which the district is a part, and under which rules a sedentary potestas may be issued to examine certain persons in a foreign country upon oral interrogatories and cross interrogatories. The Titanic, (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 206 Fed. 500.

Under this section and R. S. secs. 917 and 918, infra., pp. 75, 77, the forms of mean process in equity and the forms and modes of proceeding therein are to be according to the usages of courts of equity, except as otherwise provided by statute or by rules of court made in pursuance of statute. But any Circuit (now District) Court may alter and add to such forms and modes, subject to the right of the Supreme Court to regulate the matter for such Circuit Court. The Supreme Court has power to prescribe the forms of writs and process and to regulate the whole practice in suits of equity in the Circuit Courts, but any Circuit Court may, in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States or with any rule prescribed in the Supreme Court, regulate its own practice to advance justice. Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Jones, (C. C. Vt. 1882) 13 Fed. 567.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has no power to prescribe rules for the District Courts. This power is vested in the Supreme Court. The Philadelphia, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 80 Fed. 425; 21 U. S. App. 90, 9 C. C. A. 54.

Force and effect of rules.— The equity rules prescribed by the Supreme Court and the rules promulgated by the inferior federal courts (subject to alteration by the Supreme Court) have the force and effect of law unless they are inconsistent with the statutes of the United States. American Graphophone Co. v. National Phonograph Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 127 Fed. 349. See also The Bremen v. Card, (J. C. S. C. 1888) 33 Fed. 144; Bailey v. Sandberg, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 583, 1 U. S. App. 101, 1 C. C. A. 387.

Inherent discretionary powers.— Rules prescribed by the Supreme Court do not deprive a court of equity of the inherent power to mould its rules in relation to the time and manner of appearing and answering so as to prevent a rule from working injustice, and it is not only in the power of a court of equity but it is its duty to exercise a sound discretion upon this subject and to enlarge the time if it shall appear that the purpose of justice require it. Putnam v. Fayette, (1838) 12 Pet. 472, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1161.

Territorial courts are not governed by the provisions of this section, and it is within the power of a territorial assembly to adopt a code of practice which unites legal and equitable remedies in one form of action. Hornbuckle v. Toombs, (1873) 18 Wall. 648, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 666. But see Orchard v. Hughes, (1863) 1 Wall. 73, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 560; Dumphy v. Klein- smith, (1870) 11 Wall. 610, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 223.

Federal uniformity of equity procedure.

A United States court sitting as a court of equity cannot take cognizance of a proceeding begun by a stipulation, signed by the parties to the controversy, setting forth an agreed statement of facts and consenting that the court may take jurisdiction, hear, try, and determine the case, and render decree without pleadings. If a state statute authorizes such a proceeding in the courts of that state the jurisdiction and practice of a federal court as a court of equity are not affected by that statute Nickerson v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (C. C. Kan. 1880) 30 Fed. 85.

Admiralty practice.—The admiralty practice alluded to in this statute is the admiralty practice of this country as granted upon the British practice, and has no reference to all courts of admiralty. Manro v. Alimeda, (1825) 10 Wheat. 473, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 389.

"The rules of the High Court of Chan- cery of England have been adopted by the courts of the United States. In exercising this jurisdiction the courts of the Union are not limited by the chancery system adopted by any state, and they exer- cise their functions in a state where no court of chancery has been established. The usages of the High Court of Chancery in England, whenever the jurisdiction is exer- cised, govern the proceedings. This may be said to be the common law of chancery, and since the organization of the government it has been observed." Pennsylvinia v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., (1851) 13 How. 518, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 249. See also Vattier v. Hinde, (1833) 7 Pet. 222, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 675; Bein v. Heath, (1851) 12 How. 168, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 940; New York City Bank v. Skelton, (1846) 2 Blatchf. 23, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,740; Stretele v. Bellou, (C. C. Colo. 1881) 9 Fed. 238; Richmond v. Atwood, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 52 Fed. 10, 15 U. S. App. 151, 2 C. C. A. 506, 17 L. R. A. 615.

Garnishment.—A general equity rule adopted by the Supreme Court under this section cannot have the effect of giving the flood of garnishment proceedings to enforce a decree on the equity side of the court. U. S. v. Swan, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 65 Fed. 647, 31 U. S. App. 119, 13 C. C. A. 77.

Attachments in equity.—There may be attachments against property in suits in equity when a rule of court has been adopted so providing. Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Jones, (C. C. Vt. 1882) 13 Fed. 567. See also Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Sears, (C. C. Vt. 1881) 9 Fed. 9.

prohibiting an appeal from an interlocutory decree made in the District Court, appeals could not be taken from such decrees, following the practice of the High Court of Chancery in England, as the whole policy of the federal statutes had been to allow but one appeal, and that from the final decree. Clark v. Iselin, (1871) 9 Blatchf. 196, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,924.

In the absence of statute regulating the time when appeals shall be taken, a course of practice followed by the court is equivalent to a rule of the court. Norton v. Rich, (1824) 3 Mason 443, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,362.

Cited in the case of In re Louisville, etc., Packet Co., (E. D. Ky. 1915) 223 Fed. 185, on the question of the authority of the Supreme Court to promulgate a rule distributing admiralty jurisdiction.

Sec. 914. [Practice and proceedings in other than equity and admiralty causes.] The practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding in civil causes, other than equity and admiralty causes, in the circuit and district courts, shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding existing at the time in like causes in the courts of record of the State within which such circuit or district courts are held, any rule of court to the contrary notwithstanding. [R. S.]

This is commonly known as the "Practice Conformity Act."

"Circuit" courts, mentioned in this section, were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1062.

The language of the text section is used in the Act of Aug. 1, 1888, ch. 728, § 2, in title PUBLIC PROPERTY, BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS, in respect of the practice in proceedings by the United States to condemn real estate for public uses.

The substantive law of the several states, consisting chiefly of their statutory and constitutional provisions, is adopted, with certain qualifications, as rules of decision in trials at common law in the federal courts by R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1123.

Competency of witnesses in civil cases and proceedings in federal courts is determined by the laws of the state or territory in which the court is held, as required by R. S. sec. 588 (as amended by Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3608) in title WITNESSES.

Depositions of witnesses for use in federal courts are to be taken in the mode prescribed by the laws of the state in which said courts are held, as required by the Act of March 9, 1892, ch. 14, in EVIDENCE, vol. 3, p. 225.

The practice in equity and admiralty causes is chiefly regulated by the Equity Rules and the Admiralty Rules promulgated under authority given in R. S. sec. 913, supra, p. 18, and R. S. sec. 917, infra, p. 75.

The practice in bankruptcy proceedings is regulated by various provisions in the Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, and amendments thereof, and by the General Orders and Forms in Bankruptcy; and General Order No. XXVII is a general provision as to the practice to be followed in proceedings in equity and at law for enforcement of rights and remedies given by the Bankruptcy Act. For all of the foregoing see BANKRUPTCY, vol. 1, pp. 495, 583, 659.

I. CONSTRUCTION GENERALLY

1. Constitutionality

2. Purpose of Act

The purpose of this statute was to bring about uniformity in the law of procedure in the federal and state courts in the same locality, taking cognizance of the statutory enactments of many states. Webb v. Southern R. Co., (S. D. Ala. 1916) 235 Fed. 578.

The idea was to harmonize, as nearly as may be, the manner and form in which parties should present their claims and defense in the preparation of the trial of cases in the federal courts, to those prevailing in the state courts, and it was not the intention to require the federal courts to conform to state courts in all matters of detail respecting practice and procedure, at least as to such details the power to regulate which every court is presumed inherently to possess and exercise as from time to time the ends of justice may require. Such are the details respecting matters of continuance, intermediate operations, and incidental powers respecting the control of the parties, or the situation of the case in the court. Manitowoc Malting Co. v. Feucht wanger, (E. D. Wis. 1912) 196 Fed. 506. See also Steers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th 1911) 192 Fed. 1, 112 C. C. A. 423, wherein it was held that matter pertaining to the conduct of the trial by the trial judge is not governed by this conformity act.

This section is the successor of the Act of Congress of May 19, 1829, ch. 88, § 1, 4 Stat. 278, which declared that "the forms of meane process . . . and the forms and modes of proceedings in suits in [certain] courts of the United States . . . shall be the same . . . as are now used in the highest court of original and general jurisdiction of the" states in which the federal courts are situated. In respect of this statute it was held in Bath County v. Amy, (1872) 13 Wall. 244, at page 250, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 538, that: "It was a provision, designed only to regulate proceedings in the federal courts after they had obtained jurisdiction; not to enlarge their jurisdiction, . . . It is quite too much to infer from this [statute] an enlargement of jurisdiction, or an adoption of all the powers of the state courts." Section 914 must be construed in the same manner. Sewchulius v. Lehigh Val. Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 492, 147 C. C. A. 358.

As to federal practice in actions at law prior to the enactment of the text R. S. sec. 914, see cases cited in notes to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1217, 1218.

3. Principles Controlling Construction
a. In General
State decisions and statutes not conclusive.—Notwithstanding this provision neither the statutes of a state nor the decisions of its courts are conclusive upon the federal courts in respect to questions of jurisdiction. Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, (1910) 215 U. S. 437, 30 S. Ct. 125, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 272; Southern Photo Material Co. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 224 Fed. 523.

It is settled that this statute does not require a federal court to follow the state procedure, where to do so would defeat the purpose or impair the effect of any congressional statute. U. S. v. Beaty, (W. D. Va. 1913) 198 Fed. 259.

The Act leaves to the federal court "some degree of discretion in conforming entirely to the state procedure" and to reject, "as Congress doubtless expected," any subordinate provisions in such state statutes as would unwisely interfere with the administration of the law and tend to defeat the ends of justice. Mani- towoc Malting Co. v. Feucht wanger, (E. D. Wis. 1912) 196 Fed. 506.

Thus, any such section empowers a federal court to use a similar remedy to that provided by a state statute to enforce its judgments, it does not require the court to follow the method prescribed by a state statute in serving a writ of scire facias to revive a judgment on a nonresident defendant if it deems such method insufficient. Collin County Nat. Bank v. Hughes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 389, 83 C. C. A. 641.

As to the District Court in Porto Rico it was said prior to the abolishment of the Circuit Court: "We think it was the intention of Congress in the Porto Rican act to require the District Court exercising the jurisdiction of a Circuit Court, in analogy to the powers of the Circuit Courts in the states, to adapt themselves, save in the excepted cases in equity and admiralty, to the local procedure and practice in Porto Rico. This conclusion is in accord with the policy of the United States, evidenced in its legislation concerning the islands ceded by Spain, and secured to the people thereof a continuation of the laws and methods of practice and administration familiar to them, which are to be controlling until changed by law." Perez v. Fernandez, (1906) 202 U. S. 80, 20 S. Ct. 561, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 492.

b. Constitutional Restrictions

So it has been said that: "It must be held that the body of the local law thus adopted in the general must be construed in the courts of the United States in the light of their own system of jurisprudence as defined by their own constitution as tribunals, and of other Acts of Congress on the same subject." Einstein v. Rothschild, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 22 Fed. 61.

The requirements of this statute apply only to cases of which the court has jurisdiction according to the Constitution and laws of the United States. Goldfe v. Morning News, (1895) 156 U. S. 518, 5 S. Ct. 599, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 517.
4. Clauses in Act Constructed

a. "Practice, Pleadings, and Forms and Modes of Proceeding"

The provisions for uniformity do not extend to modes of procedure established by judicial interpretation of the common law, but only to such as are established by the statutes of the several states. Wall v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 55 Fed. 595, 57 C. C. A. 129.

There are certain powers inherent in the judicial office, and it may be questioned how far the legislature may grant the government to impair them or dictate the manner of their exercise. Nudd v. Burrows, (1875) 91 U. S. 426, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 286. See also Strahm v. Deims, (N. D. Ill. 1896) 73 Fed. 430.

Disqualification of judge.—While it section does not expressly authorize a federal court to adopt a state rule as to who shall constitute a disqualification of judge, notwithstanding it has been held that judge is justified in adopting "as near a... may be" as his guide on such a question the state rule or statute; and that where under such rule or statute disqualification exists, the judge will decline any further connection with the cause. The right to certify a case to another court because of the disqualification of the district judge was provided for by R. S. sec. 601 (now superseded by the equivalent provision in Judicial Code, § 20, supra, this title, vol. 4, p. 831, and expressly repelled in Judicial Code, § 207, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085). In re Eatonton Electric Co., (S. D. Ga. 1903) 120 Fed. 1010.

Relationship of judge to party.—Where the relationship of the judge to party has an interest in the controversy was declared by a state law to be a disqualification, it was held to be a proper ground to the action of a federal judge sitting in that state. In re Eatonton Electric Co., (S. D. Ga. 1903) 120 Fed. 1010.

b. "Civil Causes"

So the United States Supreme Court declared, prior to the abolishment of the Circuit Courts, that this section "in terms excludes equity causes therefrom, and the jurisprudence of the United States has always recognized the distinction between law and equity as under the Constitution matter of substance, as well as of form and procedure, and, accordingly, legal and equitable claims cannot be blended together in one suit in the Circuit Courts of the United States, nor are equitable defenses permitted." Scott v. Armstrong, (1892) 146 U. S. 499, 13 S. Ct. 148, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 1059.

And in another case it says: "If the defendant have equitable grounds for relief against the plaintiff, he must seek to enforce them by a separate suit in equity." Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Paine, (1887) 119 U. S. 561, 7 S. Ct. 323, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 513.

Similarly the Circuit Court of Appeals for the second circuit has declared: "It is hardly necessary to state that the law of the remedy is not to be determined by the decisions of the courts of the state in which the action was brought, and that neither the decisions of its courts nor the statutes of New York can confer authority upon the federal courts sitting within that state to exercise equitable jurisdiction in actions at law. State legislatures cannot abolish in the federal courts the distinctions in actions at law and in equity by abolishing such distinctions in their own courts." Goodyear Shoe Machinery Co. v. Danzel, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 692, 56 C. C. A. 300.

And the Circuit Court of Appeals for the ninth circuit states: "It is thoroughly settled that it was not the design of this section to abolish, in the federal courts, the distinction between actions at law and suits in equity." Hill v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 914, 51 C. C. A. 544.

Again, in the fourth circuit the following language is employed: "The distinction between legal and equitable defenses, whatever it may be elsewhere in other jurisdictions, in the courts of the United States is always recognized and jealously guarded. They cannot be mixed. Equitable suits must be on the equity side of the docket, and actions at law on the law side. No principle is better settled in these courts." Levi v. Mathews, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 152, 76 C. C. A. 122.

And in a Circuit Court decision it was remarked that: "In the courts of the United States the distinction between actions in law and suits in equity is firmly maintained, and it is not competent for the Congress or the state legislature to abrogate such distinction. The federal courts will take cognizance of and enforce newly created statutory rights, but they will do so according to the practice of those courts. Newly created rights which are of a legal nature will be enforced in courts of law, while such rights as are equitable in their nature must be enforced by suits in courts of equity. Hence, if the statute of the state has created new rights of action or grounds of defense which authorize the blending together of legal and equitable rights and remedies in one pleading, while such pleading would be proper in the courts of the state it cannot properly be entertained in a federal court. To permit it would be to disregard the distinction between legal and equitable rights and remedies, which is inadmissible." Jewett Car Co. v. Kirkpatrick Constr. Co., (C. C. Ind. 1901) 107 Fed. 622.

"In all actions at law equitable defenses may be interpolated," etc., is the provision in Judicial Code, § 2744, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1061. Said section 2745 was enacted March 3, 1915, and affects some of the rulings in the foregoing paragraphs of this note. Judicial Code, § 2745, enacted at the same time (supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1059), provides for amendment of pleadings to obviate the objection that the suit was brought on the wrong side of the court.

c. "As Near as May Be" General doctrine.—"This section is intended to secure on the law side of the federal courts the practice which prevails in like causes in courts of the states. Its requirement is that such proceeding shall conform 'as near as may be' to that prevailing in the state courts 'in like cases.' This section was not intended to require that the practice shall be consistent with the terms or defeat the purposes of the legislation of Congress. Luxton v. North River Bridge Co., (1893) 147 U. S. 337, 338, [13 S. Ct. 358, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 194]; Chappell v. U. S., [1888] 160 U. S. 409, 512, [16 S. Ct. 397, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 510]. In fact, the language of the statute is itself an indication that the state practice cannot be at all times and under all circumstances complied with. It is enough if the federal courts in adjudicating the rights of parties comply with the state practice 'as near as may be.' State statutes which defeat or encumber the administration of the law under federal statutes are not required to be followed in the federal courts. Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Finkney, [1893] 149 U. S. 154, [13 S. Ct. 580, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 699]. It follows that where the state stat-perhaps, supplant the equity practice which prevails in the federal court; it is reasonable to conclude that although a case was instituted by summons, instead of the filing of a bill and the issuing of a subpoena, when the parties and subject matter are brought within the jurisdiction of the court, it is then within the power of the court to attain the cause upon the law or transfer it to the equity docket, as may be necessary in order fully to administer the rights of the parties with reference to the subject matter of the action. Wilson v. Waldo, (W. D. N. C. 1816) 221 Fed. 505.

But in Amy v. Watertown, (1889) 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 946, the court said that the statute "is peremptory, and whatever belongs to the three categories of practice, pleading, and forms and modes of proceeding, must conform to the law and the practice of the state courts, except where Congress itself has legislated upon a particular subject and prescribed a rule. Then, of course, the Act of Congress is to be followed in preference to the laws of the state."

Discipline given to courts.—These words are construed as leaving to the federal courts some degree of discretion in conforming entirely to the state procedure, and were intended to qualify what would otherwise have been a mandatory provision. "These words imply that, in certain cases, it would not be practicable, without injustice or inconvenience, to conform literally to the entire practice prescribed for its own courts by a state in which federal courts might be sitting." Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Pinkey, (1893) 149 U. S. 194, 13 S. Ct. 599, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 699. See also Senior v. Pierce, (S. D. Ia. 1897) 31 Fed. 625.

d. "Any Rule of Court to the Contrary Notwithstanding"

It may be stated generally that no rule of court is ordinarily effective against the provisions of this section. Perris Irrigation Dist. v. Turnbull, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 562, 132 C. C. A. 74.

So, in Dexter v. Sayward, (C. C. Wash. 1902) 139 Fed. 729, it was held that a rule of court, requiring matter in abatement to be pleaded in a separate plea or answer, is a nullity, when the Civil Practice Act of the state permits the defendant to set forth in his answer as many defenses as he may have. See also Amy v. Watertown, (1889) 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 946, and Perkins v. Watertown, (1873) 5 Biss. 320, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,991, as to mode of serving process.

It has, however, been declared that from this section, and R. S. secs. 915 and 916, infra, pp. 84, 70, it appears "that while it was the purpose of Congress to bring about a general uniformity in federal and state proceedings in civil cases, and to confer upon suitors in courts of the United States the advantage of remedies provided by state legislation, yet that it was also the intention to reach such uniformity often largely through the discretion of the federal courts, exercised in the form of general rules, adopted from time to time, and so regulating their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice and the prevention of delays in proceedings." Shepard v. Adams, (1898) 168 U. S. 618, 18 S. Ct. 214, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 602.

So a federal court may, by a standing rule, change subordinate provisions which they deem unsuited to their procedure. Hein v. Westinghouse Air Brake Co., (N. D. Ill. 1909) 168 Fed. 766.

And it has also been held that this section and R. S. sec. 915, supra, p. 77, are to be construed together to give due effect to both. "The general provision of the one as to practice, pleading, and forms and mode of procedure applies to systems of judicial procedure as matters of separate study, and not to details of methods of doing the business of courts. . . . The rules of court under the other section, and the returning of writs is there specially mentioned as a subject of such rules, which are within the power of the court, and valid when made." Ewing v. Burnham, (C. C. V. 1896) 74 Fed. 254.

e. "Like Causes"

Actions in personam and in rem.—"It is a proper construction of this section to hold that, while the provisions of the code of Kentucky in regard to pleadings in civil suits in personam apply to like causes in the federal courts in Kentucky, they do not apply to suits in rem by the United States for the forfeiture of property, after its seizure, for the violation of a revenue law, because there are no 'like causes' known to the laws of Kentucky. Such suits in rem are peculiar in their practice, pleadings, and forms of procedure, and so long as there is ample scope for the operation of section 914 of the Revised Statutes in regard to civil suits in personam, and no intention is manifest to change the established practice in such suits in rem, and any change in practice is limited to 'like causes,' we must continue to regard the former practice as applicable to the present suit." Coffey v. U. S., (1886) 117 U. S. 233, 6 S. Ct. 717, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 890. See also U. S. v. Fifty Boxes, etc., Lace, (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 92 Fed. 601.

II. FEDERAL LEGISLATION EXCLUSIVE

In general.—"The power of the federal courts to administer rights and remedies in equity was vested in them as part of the judicial power of the nation under the Constitution of the United States and the Judiciary Act of 1789, and as it was not granted by, it may not be revoked, impaired, or destroyed by, the legislation or act of any state. Butler Bros. Shoe Co. v. U. S. Rubber Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 1, 84 C. C. A. 167.

And this Act applies only in the absence of direct legislation upon a subject by Congress. Berry v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Ky. 1915) 228 Fed. 395.

It does not require a federal court to follow the state procedure, where to do so would defeat the purpose or impair the effect of any congressional statute. U. S. v. Beatty, (W. D. Va. 1912) 198 Fed. 254.

And the direction of the statute must give way whenever to adopt the state practice would be inconsistent with the terms, defeat the purpose, or impair the effect of any legislation of Congress. Luxton v. North River Bridge Co., (1893) 147 U. S. 327, 13 S. Ct. 397, 37 L. ed. (L. ed.) 184.

In such cases the rules of the state practice in respect thereof are superseded, and the extent and limitations of the powers of the courts of the United States are to be found in the congressional enactments, and not in the laws of the states. Lange v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 338, 62 C. C. A. 48; Sillivas v. Arizona Copper Co., (D. C. Ariz. 1914) 213 Fed. 504.

Conformity is required to the state law and practice only in matters of practice, reading, and forms and modes of proceedings, and not even in such matters where Congress has prescribed a rule; and not in matters of jurisdiction, as to which Congress has prescribed the rule. Shumaker v. Security Life, etc., Co. of America, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 112, 36 C. C. A. 302.

Nor can a substantive right or defense arise under a federal law be lessened or destroyed by a rule of practice. Norfolk Southern R. Co. v. Ferebee, (1915) 238 U. S. 289, 35 S. Ct. 781, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1503.

Where the state statute or practice is not adequate to afford the relief which Congress has provided in a given statute, resort must be had to the power of the federal court to adapt its practice and issue its writ and administer its remedies so as to enforce the federal law. Buckley Powder Co. v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours Powder Co., (D. C. N. J. 1912) 196 Fed. 514.

III. Effect on Jurisdiction of Federal Courts

1. General Doctrine

sens of different states lawfully invoke the jurisdiction of the federal courts to determine controversies between them which involve the requisite amounts, they have the constitutional right to the conduct of that litigation by the methods, to the administration of the remedies, and to the determination of those controversies by the independent judgments of those courts; and so state, by conferring exclusive jurisdiction of such issues upon its own courts, by prescribing exclusive methods of commencing or of conducting litigation, by prohibiting the seizure of the subject of the litigation during its pendency, or by any other means, may lawfully strike down that right or take away the plenary power of the national courts to conduct litigation, to administer their remedies, and, in the exercise of their judicial discretion, to control the possession of its subject-matter during its pendency in accordance with their established rules and finally to adjudicate the claims of the parties and to enforce their judgments." Morrill v. American Reserve Bond Co., (W. D. Mo. 1907) 151 Fed. 305.

And the United States Supreme Court has declared: "In cases which concern the jurisdiction of the federal courts, notwithstanding the so-called conformity act, Rev. Stat. sec. 914, neither the statutes of the state nor the decisions of its courts are conclusive upon the federal courts. The ultimate determination of such questions of jurisdiction is for this court alone." Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castileman, (1910) 215 U. S. 437, 30 S. Ct. 125, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 272. See also, to same effect, Southern Photo Material Co. v. Eastman Kodak Co., (N. D. Ga. 1915) 224 Fed. 523.

2. Equity Courts

a. General Doctrine

Equity causes are expressly excepted from the operation of the conformity statute (Rev. Stat. sec. 914), with the result that the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of procedure in such causes are uniform in the United States courts, and are not governed by state laws, statutory or customary. U. S. v. California Timber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 196, 149 C. C. A. 386.

JUDICIARY

By the legislation of Congress and repeated decisions of the Supreme Court it has long been settled that the remedies afforded by the enactments of proceeding pursued in the federal courts, sitting as courts of equity, are not determined by local laws or rules of decision, but by general principles, rules and usages of equity having uniform operation in those courts wherever sitting. Guffey v. Smith, (1915) 237 U. S. 101, 35 S. Ct. 528, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 856.

In the administration of their equitable jurisdiction the federal courts are not, excepting so far as affected by local statutes, administering the laws of the state in which they sit, but are administering the law as applicable to all the states. And in applying the general principles of equity, such as alone are involved in this controversy, they determine for themselves what those principles are, untrammeled by differing decisions of the state tribunals.

While the reasoning of a state court in determining such a question is always to be regarded with respect, and will be followed, if persuasive of a correct statement of the law, it is in no sense conclusive or binding upon a federal court. Loewe v. California State Federation of Labor, (N. D. Cal. 1911) 189 Fed. 714.

In the case of a statute which requires the complainant, in any suit for an injunction to interfere with proceedings for the collection of taxes or for the recovery of property sold for taxes, to allege and prove that before commencing suit the amount justly due was paid, or tendered and refused, it has been said that so far as this statute extends the rule of equity which requires a suitor in equity to do or offer to do equity on his part, it is not controlling in a court of the United States, which cannot be hampered, in the exercise of its chancery jurisdiction, by local statutes. Klenk v. Byrne, (W. D. Wash. 1906) 143 Fed. 1008.

b. Qualification of Doctrine

While it is well settled that the state cannot exercise control over the chancery powers of the federal court, nevertheless "an enlargement of equitable rights by state statute may be administered" by such court "as well as by the courts of the state." Farr v. Hobe-Peters Land Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1911) 188 Fed. 10. 110 C. C. A. 180. See likewise National Surety Co. v. State Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 593, 56 C. C. A. 657, 61 L. R. A. 394; Carravan v. O'Calligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 657, 60 C. C. A. 347, affirmed (1905) 190 U. S. 89, 25 S. Ct. 727, 80 U. S. (L. ed.) 101.

Property and convenience are greatly promoted by pursuing the practice of the courts of the state, and if there be nothing in the character of the equities recognized by the state statute or the remedies prescribed which interfere with what legitimately pertains to the chancery practice, the federal courts will deal with controversies instituted under a state statute, so as to give effect to state legislation and state policy. Ames Realty Co. v. Big Indian Min. Co., (C. C. Mont. 1906) 146 Fed. 166.

And it is said to be the settled doctrine that an enlargement of equitable rights by state statute may be administered by the courts of the United States. U. S. Shipbuilding Co. v. Conklin, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 132, 80 C. C. A. 889.

And in this connection it has been declared that: "It is well established, that state legislation on the subject of procedure cannot impair the remedial powers of federal courts of equity. Over against this, however, stands the equally well established principle that the legislature of the state may, within constitutional limits, change the substantive law; such changes will, of necessity, frequently produce changes in remedial relief. A system of practice which took no account of changes in the substantial rights of litigants would be anomalous indeed. Whole departments of equitable jurisdiction have been swept away by changes in the substantive law. . . . A statute which gives a new right, that may be enforced by an action at law, may remove the very evil which was the ground of equitable jurisdiction. When such a statute is passed, it must be taken in connection with section 723, Rev. St. U. S., and the combination must produce a change in the right to equitable relief in the federal courts." Union Pac. R. Co. v. Wild County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 631, 138 C. C. A. 175. R. S. sec. 723, mentioned in the foregoing quotation, now constitutes Judicial Code, § 267, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 989. See further as to enforcement by federal courts of new rights created by state statutes the notes to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, at pp. 1126-1127.

But it is not always easy to determine whether a given statute of a state (1) enlarges equitable rights, in which case the jurisdiction of the federal courts in equity may be indirectly increased; or (2) enlarges the jurisdiction of a court of equity, in which case it is without application to the federal courts. Only by a comparison of the decision cases of binding authority can the court determine into which class a statute in question properly falls. Mathews Slate Co. v. Mathews, (C. C. Mass. 1906) 148 Fed. 490.

It is also declared to be a well-established doctrine that, when rules of practice of federal courts in equity conflict with the constitutional laws of the state in force when contracts regarding land were made, the latter prevail, because they become a part of the contracts between the parties. Childs v. Ferguson, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 795, 104 C. C. A. 305.

IV. APPLICABILITY IN GENERAL

"There can . . . be no doubt of the general principle that matters respecting the remedy—such as the form of the action, sufficiency of the pleadings, rules of evidence, and the statute of limitations—depend upon the law of the place where the suit is brought." Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1918) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 252. See also same effect Day v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 26, 102 C. C. A. 854.

But this section is not applicable to causes in the appellate courts of the United States. The practice in such cases is governed by the constitutional, statutory, and common-law provisions applicable to writs of error in actions at law in appellate courts of the United States, and by the rules of those courts. Farmer v. Atlantic Coast Line R. Co., (E. D. S. C. 1912) 255 Fed. 319. "The statutes of the state, under section 914 of the Revised Statutes, govern the trial courts in actions at law, but the proceedings in the appellate courts are not amenable to such statutes or rules adopted in pursuance thereof, but are governed by the statutes of the United States and the rules adopted in pursuance of the powers therein granted." Western Union Tel. Co. v. Aldridge, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 121 Fed. 836, 126 C. C. A. 506.

V. APPLICABILITY IN PARTICULAR INSTANCES

1. Amendments

So it has been held that in an action at law a federal court sitting in New York will regulate its practice so far as may be by the Code of Civil Procedure of that state and the rules of practice of the state Supreme Court. Hanum v. Jerome, (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 184 Fed. 179.

Power of court generally.—This section and R. S. sec. 916 and 954, infra, pp. 77, 98, must be construed together and their full effect should, as far as possible, be given to each of them. While it was the clear intention of Congress that the practice and pleadings in civil actions at law in the federal court should generally conform to the practice and pleadings in like causes in the courts of record of the state in which the federal court should be held, exact conformity is not required, but only conformity "as near as may be." Federal courts, subject to the requirement of such general conformity, may in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States or with any rule lawfully prescribed by the Supreme Court "regulate their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice," and permit parties to "amend any defect in the process or pleadings upon such conditions" as they shall, in their discretion and by their rules, prescribe. Van Doren v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 260, 35 C. C. A. 282. See also same effect Salisbury v. Bennett, (S. D. N. Y. 1896) 72 Fed. 743; New York Importers' etc., Nat. Bank v. Lyons, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 510.

So it has been held that a federal court where an amendment to pleadings is sought is not, by reason of this provision, bound to follow the practice act of a state requiring the filing of an affidavit showing good cause therefor, as R. S. sec. 954 contains the legislation of Congress on the subject of amendments to pleadings in the federal courts and is paramount to the local state statute. Truckee River General Electric Co. v. Benner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 211 Fed. 72, 127 C. C. A. 503.

And a state statute providing that the allowance by the court of an amended declaration shall be conclusive evidence of the identity of the cause of action stated therein with that relied on in the original declaration is not made binding on a federal court in that state by this section, the allowance of amendments in such courts being governed by R. S. sec. 954. De Valle Da Costa v. Southern Pac. Co., (C. C. Mass. 1908) 167 Fed. 654.

Limitation on power of court.—Amendments of process and pleadings cannot follow the state statutes and practice when they are inconsistent with the federal statutes of amendments. Booth v. Denike, (W. D. Tex. 1894) 65 Fed. 43. See also Tiller v. Clavin, (1898) 3 Summ. 379, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,066; Einstein v.

And it has been declared that in the matter of the amendment of pleadings plenary power has been conferred by Congress upon the federal courts; and whether a amendment when authorized and made work a waiver of substantial rights or a release of errors should be determined by the principles which obtain in those jurisdictions and not by those which prevail in the state tribunals. Williamson v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 54, 72 C. C. A. 542, 5 Ann. Cas. 402.

Amendments after verdict.—In North Chicago St. R. Co. v. Burnham, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 699, 42 C. C. A. 584, the court said that a state statute, "if designed to go so far, will hardly be followed by the federal courts to the extent of ordering or permitting after verdict amendments which involve the formation of new issues." See Whitaker v. Pope, (1876) 2 Woods 483, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,528.

But if the order allowing an amended petition to be filed could be lawfully made in this case, so long as final judgment had not been entered it was equally within the power of the court to modify that order so as to treat the amendment as a mere addition to the original petition, and thus to preclude the contention that she had not possessed the necessary knowledge, which she had once solely avowed. Henderson v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1887) 123 U. S. 61, 8 S. Ct. 60, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 92.

a defendant in an action for money received in a fiduciary capacity may be followed in a federal court in such an action. Moffett v. Goree, (1873) 6 Ben. 556, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,844. See also Marble v. Fulton, (1873) 1 Hask. 462, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,059.

4. Bill of Exceptions

See in this connection infra, this note, V, 24, d, p. 42.

5. Bill of Particulars

See in this connection infra, this note, V, 36, a, p. 56.

6. Claim and Delivery Action

7. Commencement of Proceedings

Although a state statute provides that a suit is commenced "by the service of a summons . . . or by filing a complaint with the county clerk," it has been held that national courts will not be governed by such a practice and that jurisdiction only attaches upon the service of process. U. S. v. Eisenbeis, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 190, 60 C. C. A. 179.

A state statute providing that an action at law in the state courts may be commenced by filing the petition in the office of the clerk was followed in a case in a federal court in Texas in which it was held that in the Circuit Court of the United States an action at law was commenced by petition filed in the office of the clerk. International Bank, etc., Co. v. Scott, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 55, 96 C. C. A. 248.

8. Continuance

The granting or refusing a continuance is a matter within the discretion of the court, notwithstanding the applicant for continuance has complied with the terms of the state statute, a compliance with which in the state courts gives a right to a continuance. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Nelson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1892) 50 Fed. 514, 2 U. S. App. 213, 1 C. C. A. 688.

9. Copyright Suit

In a copyright suit the court considered a motion to strike out a pleading in the form of a common-law plea, and granted it on a construction of this section and R. S. sec. 4969, which provided that "in all actions arising under the laws respecting copyrights, the defendants may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence." Johnston v. Kloepch, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 692. R. S. sec. 4969, above cited, was repealed by force of section 63 of the Copyright Act of 1909, in title Copyright, vol. 2, p. 622.

A direct proceeding to secure condemnation and forfeiture of goods for a violation of the copyright laws is not an ordinary action of replevin under the New York Code which is dependent on the plaintiff having the right of property or possession before commencing the action. American Tobacco Co. v. Werkmeister, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 375, 76 C. C. A. 847.

10. Costs and Fees

As to right to costs see also R. S. sec. 791 and notes thereto, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1166-1168, and R. S. secs. 823, 824, in Coers, vol. 2, pp. 624, 628, and notes thereto.

Prior to the Act of Feb. 26, 1853 (R. S. secs. 823, 824, above cited), the taxation of costs between party and party in civil suits, in the various districts, conform to the practice of the state in which the district was situated, and it has been held that since its passage the practice has been the same except so far as in terms restricted by that statute. Primrose v. Fenno, (C. C. Mass. 1902) 113 Fed. 375.

So when a proceeding is adopted from the state practice under this section it is held that the allowance or refusal of costs will also follow. Hunter v. Esposon, (C. C. N. H. 1883) 15 Fed. 732; New Hampshire Land Co. v. Tilton, (C. C. N. H. 1887) 29 Fed. 764; Morrison v. Bernards Tp., (C. C. N. J. 1888) 35 Fed. 400.

And where a suit commenced in a state court to recover from the collector of internal revenue for taxes alleged to have been illegally assessed and collected from the plaintiff has been removed to a federal court, it has been decided that if the case is one in which the plaintiff would have recovered costs in the state court if the suit had not been removed, he is entitled to recover costs in the federal court, although if the suit had been originally brought in that court he would have recovered no costs. De Barry v. Carter, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 130, 42 C. C. A. 200. But see Richter v. Magone, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 47 Fed. 192.

And if Acts of Congress make specific provision for costs, they control. If they make no provision for certain kinds of costs, the provisions, if any, of the state statutes may be followed (Scatcherd v. Love, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 186 Fed. 53, 91 C. C. A. 639, and cases cited), at least if they do not result in injustice in a particular case (Primrose v. Fenno, [C. C. Mass. 1902] 113 Fed. 375). Such seems to be the prevailing doctrine at this time. b. Security for Costs

A state statute permitting a court to require a plaintiff to give security for costs may be followed by a federal court, where no federal statute covers the case. Handy Varnish Co. v. Midland Linseed Oil Co., (E. D. Mich. 1911) 161 Fed. 256. See also Visking Mfg. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1910) 180 Fed. 624.

The question whether the plaintiff should be required to give security for costs, there being no federal statute on that subject, is determinable either by a rule of the court or by the state statute on the same subject made applicable by this section. Silvas v. Arizona Copper Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 116, 136 C. C. A. 208.

c. Attorneys’ Fees

A decision of the highest state appellate court sustaining a statute allowing attorney’s fees against a defeated defendant has been followed by the United States Supreme Court. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Cade, (1914) 233 U. S. 642, 54 U. S. Ct. 678, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1135.

And it has been declared that a state statute allowing attorney’s fees to a plaintiff in certain actions relates to a matter of procedure and will be followed by a federal court in that state. Kline v. Royal Ins. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 192 Fed. 378.

And according to the well-settled rule in Pennsylvania the amount of the attorney’s commission stipulated for in the mortgage and accompanying bond is subject to the control of the court by whom it may be reduced to such sum as appears to be an adequate compensation for the labor that has actually been performed. So, in such a case a federal court in that state, in a bankruptcy proceeding, will act in conformity to that rule. In re Wendell, (E. D. Pa. 1907) 152 Fed. 672.

d. Referee’s Fees

The fees of a referee appointed by an order of a federal court must be controlled by the allowance of that court if not agreed upon by the parties. New Jersey Terminal Dock, etc., Co. v. Long Beach, (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 973.

11. Counterclaim

A contention that according to the practice under a state enactment, a counterclaim must be set up by a defendant in his answer and cannot, if not set up, be used as an independent cause of action, will not be sustained by a federal court where the provision has not been so construed by the highest appellate court of the state. Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. v. Kirven, (1908) 215 U. S. 252, 30 S. Ct. 76, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 179.

12. Creditors’ Bill

A state statute which allows the filing of a creditors’ bill upon every judgment for the payment of money after an execution has been returned nulla bona, whether the original cause of action was in contract or in tort, provides a remedy which will be administered by the federal courts. Jahn v. Champagne Lumber Co., (W. D. Wis. 1908) 167 Fed. 407.
13. Criminal Cases

Setting aside verdict.—The setting aside of a verdict and granting of a new trial by a federal court in a criminal case is not governed by any statute, but is a matter of discretion, which may be exercised at any time before judgment has been entered upon the verdict, although the term at which the verdict was returned may have passed. U. S. v. Rogers, (W. D. Ky. 1908) 164 Fed. 520.

14. Damages

As to following state decisions as to measure of damages, see notes to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1169.

A federal court should apply in the assessment of damages, whether in actions in contract or tort, the rules existing and applicable in the state court; such assessment being a matter of practice. Loew v. Union Sav. Bank, (D. C. Conn. 1915) 226 Fed. 294. See also to same effect Raymond v. Danbury, etc., R. Co., (1877) 14 Blatchf. 133, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11593; Johnson v. Bridgeport Deoxidized Bronze, etc., Co., (C. C. Conn. 1903) 125 Fed. 631.

Where a state statute creates an action for the exclusive benefit of the widow and next of kin to recover damages for the death of a person as a result of the negligence of another it has been held that although a court of admiralty has jurisdiction of such cause of action in consequence of its maritime nature as a tort committed upon navigable waters, it can give no relief except in conformity with the statute that creates the right. Stern v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 996.

15. Demurrer to Evidence

A demurrer to the evidence is a matter of "practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding," as to which the courts of the United States are required to conform as near as may be to those existing in the courts of the state within which the trial is had. Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., (1891) 159 U. S. 24, 11 S. Ct. 478, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 55.

16. Continuousness

A discontinuance and withdrawal of a juror may be made upon request of the plaintiff. Wolcott v. Studebaker, (N. D. Ill. 1887) 34 Fed. 8. See also Nusbaum v. Northern Ins. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1889) 40 Fed. 337, as to discontinuing a suit as to part of the amount sued on.

17. Dismissal

A dismissal of the case on motion by the plaintiff, upon an announcement by the court that it would direct the jury to find a verdict for the defendant, should be allowed when the motion to do so is reasonably made in accordance with the state statute. Gassman v. Jarvis, (C. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 603.

But it has also been held that this section does not control the dismissal of a case by the federal court for failure to try the case when reached, and the rule obtaining in state courts allowing the case to be dismissed if later issues have been tried cannot be invoked. Watts v. M. Hamilton Coal Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 219 Fed. 1003.

And under a statute providing that "an action may be dismissed, and such dismissal shall be without prejudice to a future action": (1) By the plaintiff, before the final submission of the case to the jury, or to the court when the trial is to the court," it has been held that an announcement of a purpose to dismiss comes too late when made after the court has directed a verdict for the defendant and a juror designated as foreman is in the act of signing the verdict. Duffy v. Glucose Sugar Refining Co., (S. D. Ia. 1906) 141 Fed. 206.

18. Ejectment Actions

Such an action has been held to be one which may be revived in accordance with the provisions of a state Code of Civil Procedure. McArthur v. Williamson, (S. D. Ohio 1891) 45 Fed. 154.

And where it is settled by the laws of the state that the holder of an oil or gas lease cannot maintain an action of ejectment thereon it has been decided by the United States Supreme Court that it results from the text section 914 and R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1123, that such an action cannot be maintained in a federal court. Guffey v. Smith, (1916) 287 U. S. 101, 35 S. Ct. 526, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 856.

So a recognition by the state court of ejectment as a proper remedy under state laws for a riparian owner to secure the removal of a structure that interferes with access by him from his land to navigable water is a sufficient answer to an objection to jurisdiction by the federal court. Scranton v. Wheeler, (1900) 179 U. S. 141, 21 S. Ct. 48, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 126.

But in actions of ejectment, as the controversy concerns merely the legal title of the parties, the rules of courts of equity do not obtain, and it matters not whether the one or the other is the best equitable title. This is the law of the federal courts, even when they are sitting in states in which equitable titles are triable in ejectment. Mead v. Chesbrough Bldg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 996; 81 C. C. A. 184; McRae v. Darling, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 1006; 81 C. C. A. 192.

See also to same effect Tegarden v. LeMarchel, (W. D. Ark. 1904) 129 Fed. 487.

And a state practice of permitting the action of ejectment to be maintained upon warrants for land upon other titles not complete or legal in their character, but equitable only, can in no wise affect the jurisdiction of the United States courts.

19. Eminent Domain

As to following decisions in state courts relating to eminent domain, see annotations to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1177.

In general.—In condemnation proceedings the federal court is required by this section to follow the modes of procedure in like causes in the state court. U. S. v. Eisenbeis, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 190, 50 C. C. A. 179.

And it has been held that R. S. sec. 586, infra, p. 121, does not embrace condemnation cases, and there is no reason why state procedure should not be followed unless by so doing procedure in the federal courts is unduly encumbered. U. S. v. Beaty, (W. D. Va. 1912) 196 Fed. 234.

In condemnation proceedings under the Act of Aug. 1, 1888, ch. 728, 25 Stat. L. 357 and the Act of Aug. 18, 1890, ch. 797, 26 Stat. L. 315, 316, both Acts in title PUBLIC PROPERTY, BUILDINGS, AND GROUNDS, it has been held that the provision that the proceedings shall be prosecuted in accordance with the laws of the state cannot be construed literally so as to limit the federal court of jurisdiction, where the state statute designates a special tribunal for such proceedings, but only requires a general conformity to the state practice as a whole. U. S. v. Certain Land in New Castle, (C. C. N. Y. 1908) 185 Fed. 763. See also U. S. v. Honolulu Plantation Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 581, 58 C. C. A. 279; U. S. v. Sargent, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 81, 89 C. C. A. 81.

A district attorney of the United States, authorized to institute and conduct proceedings to condemn land for public building within a state, has the same power to bind the United States by an agreement to submit the matter of damages to arbitration, in accordance with a provision of a state statute applicable to such actions, as the attorney for an individual litigant would have. Judson v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 637, 57 C. C. A. 99.

Right to jury.—Where a state statute relating to proceedings for the condemnation of land provides that any party to any such proceeding "before the appointment of commissioners . . . and before the expiration of the time for the defendant to appear and answer may demand a jury of freeholders residing in the county in which the petition is filed, to ascertain, determine and appraise the damages or compensation to be allowed," it was held that a jury could not be impaneled for such purpose in any event, unless some party to the proceeding required it, nor unless said party should require it before the appointment of commissioners and before the expiration of the time for the defendant to appear and answer, and that a party failing to comply with this requirement waived its right to a jury. Broadmoor Land Co. v. Curr, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 421, 73 C. C. A. 537.

After the removal of condemnation proceedings from the court of a state to the United States court, the latter court is bound to follow the statutes of the state regulating the taking of private property for public purposes, and the ascertainment of proper compensation therefor. Broadmoor Land Co. v. Curr, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 421, 73 C. C. A. 537.

20. Evidence and Mode of Obtaining

As to following decisions and statutes relating to evidence, see annotations to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1177 et seq.

So it has been held that a state statute permitting a party to an action at law to be examined by his adversary as a witness in advance of the trial is not a rule for the guidance of the federal courts. The federal statutes provide a system to govern the practice of procuring testimony to be used in the courts of the United States, and exclude all other modes of proof. Ex p. Fisk, (1885) 113 U. S. 713, 5 S. Ct. 724, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1117; Beardsley v. Littell, (1877) 14 Blatchf. 102; Cas. No. 1,185; Easton v. Hodges, (1877) 7 Bina. 324, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 4,358.

So examination before trial authorized under the procedure in New York has been held to be inapplicable to actions in the federal courts within that state. Barnes v. Trees, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 194 Fed. 230.

In Anderson v. Mackay, (S. D. N. Y. 1891) 46 Fed. 105, the court said that the Fisk case, supra, did not cover an examination of a defendant to enable plaintiff to frame a complaint.

Interrogatories.—A state law providing that a party to a suit as law may submit interrogatories to the other concerning matters material to the issue, and that written answers shall be made thereto within thirty days, which answers shall only be evidence in the cause if offered by the party proposing the interrogatories, is not applicable to federal courts. Smith v. International Mercantile Co., (C. C. N. J.) 154 Fed. 786.

Physical examination of party.—The United States Supreme Court has decided that the power to order such an examination, where authorized by a state statute, exists by virtue of R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1123. Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Stetson, (1900) 177 U. S. 172, 20 S. Ct. 617, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 721.

And a state statute which authorizes a state court to require that the defendant allow a reasonable inspection of his premises has been held to be applicable to actions at law in a federal court to recover for a personal injury. Mills v. Providence Belting Co., (C. C. R. I. 1906) 145 Fed. 447.

Taking down examination in writing.—State statutes requiring, upon request of a party, the evidence to be taken down in writing by the clerk need not be followed. Parsons v. Bedford, (1830) 3 Pet. 433, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 739.

Deposition.—Where a party to an action elects to follow the mode prescribed by the state law for securing testimony, it is incumbent upon him to proceed in conformity with the requirements of the state law as to the mode of procuring a deposition. Pullman Co. v. Jordan, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 573, 134 C. C. A. 301.

Taking testimony on legal holidays.—Where being nothing in the law to prevent a federal court from being in session on a legal holiday and taking testimony in open court, the statute of a state relating to legal holidays and the taking of testimony on such days is not controlling in the case of rebuttal testimony taken on a holiday. American Automonteeer Co. v. Porter, (E. D. Mich. 1913) 206 Fed. 106.

Objection to introduction of evidence.—The practice of objecting to the introduction of any evidence “for the reason that the petition shows on its face that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover” is said to be very objectionable and not recognised in the national courts, though it may be permitted in the courts of a state where a cause is pending. United Kansas Portland Cement Co. v. Harvey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 316, 192 C. C. A. 460.

A federal court has, however, ample power in some cases to issue a subpoena duces tecum under this section. Palmer v. Mahin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 737, 57 C. C. A. 41.

And in Frescoe v. Lancaster, (E. D. Pa. 1895) 10 Fed. 337, the court made an order on the defendant to produce in advance of the trial certain "plans," it being averred by petition that the plans were a part of the agreement sued upon, and that an inspection by the plaintiff was necessary to fully complete his pleadings in the cause, following the practice in the state courts. See Victor G. Bloede Co. v. Joseph Bancroft, etc., Co., (C. C. Del. 1899) 98 Fed. 171.

Burden of proof.—In a contest as to the validity of a will, the state practice and mode of proceeding, throwing the burden of establishing the will and its validity upon the party who relied upon it to the same extent as if it had never been probated, is within the state. Sawyer v. White, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 223, 58 C. C. A. 587. See Roberts v. Lewis, (1892) 144 U. S. 653, 12 S. Ct. 781, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 579, and Foster v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 56 Fed. 434, as to burden of proof of diverse citizenships; Imperial Refining Co. v. Wyman, (N. D. Ohio 1898) 38 Fed. 574.

But it is a misnomer to say that the question as to the burden of proof as to contributory negligence is a mere matter of state procedure, for in some states proof of plaintiff's freedom from fault is a part of the substance of his case. He must not only satisfy the jury (1) that he was injured by the negligence of the defendant, but he must go further and, as a condition of his right to recover, must also show (2) that he was not guilty of contributory negligence. In those states the plaintiff is as much under the necessity of proving one of these facts as the other, and as to neither can it be said that the burden is imposed by a rule of procedure, since it arises out of the general obligation imposed upon every plaintiff, to establish all of the facts necessary to make out his cause of action. Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1915) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 262.

In Delaware, etc., R. Co. v. Welchman, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 82, 143 C. C. A. 358, L. R. A. 1916E 815, applying and approving Erie R. Co. v. Schmidt, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 513, 140 C. C. A. 655, as to the effect to be given to the New Jersey statute regulating to the care of persons crossing a railroad crossing at which there is a guard or warning safety device, the court said: "This statute has not been sought to be enforced by the New Jersey courts, and its full meaning may not be entirely free from doubt; but so far as the facts of the present case require us to declare its full meaning we think the proper construction is as follows: A railroad company may protect a crossing by a safety device, or by a flagman, or by both these means. If the device is not in order, due notice to that effect must be given; in the absence of such notice, an approaching traveler may assume that the device is in order and will be duly and properly operated. If a flagman is on duty, the traveler may assume that such employee will give sufficient warning of danger; and if the traveler be nevertheless injured or killed, no action brought for such injury or death shall be defeated by the mere fact that the traveler did not stop, look, and listen. . . . In our opinion, the railroad is in no way in supposing that the act compels the trial judge to submit to the jury every case of injury or death at a protected grade crossing in New Jersey. The evidence may establish contributory negligence so clearly that the judge would be bound to give the jury binding instructions in favor of the railroad. The act does no more than declare as a rule of evidence that in certain situations the mere fact that the deceased did not stop, look, and listen shall not of itself defeat recovery; but it does not attempt to lay down a rule that every grade crossing, case where contributory negligence is alleged must be submitted to a jury. For example: A situation may easily be supposed where the warning of a flagman might be seen and recklessly disregarded, and in such a case the duty of the judge has not been changed by the statute. The legislature has done nothing more than exercise its conceded power to regulate procedure; it simply provides that a plaintiff is not to be defeated unless more than a specified minimum of evidence be present. This, of course, would bind the state courts, and we see no reason why the federal courts in New Jersey should not conform to the same procedure."

As to presumption of negligence being overcome by undirected testimony that due care was exercised, a state rule so held was followed as a rule of evidence in Great Northern R. Co. v. Coats, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 452, 53 C. C. A. 382.

21. Foreclosure Proceedings

Foreclosure proceedings in a federal court must go upon the ordinary lines of such proceedings in the courts of the state in which the property is located. Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Penacock Mfg. Co., (C. C. N. H. 1900) 100 Fed. 814. If it is the practice in a state for a decree in foreclosure proceedings to be entered before assessment of damages by a commissioner, judgment of foreclosure may be entered as of the day when the plaintiff shall elect to take it. If, under the practice, computation and assessment of damages must first be made, judgment may be entered as of the day when such assessment is filed in the clerk's office. Knickerbocker Trust Co. v. Penacock Mfg. Co., (U. C. N. H. 1900) 100 Fed. 814.

22. Garnishment

When a garnishee has been summoned and files his answer, and the plaintiff takes issue thereon, it is a civil action within the meaning of this section, notwithstanding the suit may have grown out of the remedy and process of attachment. "While the suit grows out of the remedy and process of attachment, which is provided for by R. S. sec. 915, infra, p. 64, it is not part of that process any more than a suit between the plaintiff in the attachment and a third person who intervenes and claims the attached property can be said to be a part of the attachment. Citizens' Bank v. Farrell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 570, 12 U. S. App. 409, 6 C. C. A. 24. See also Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 490, 43 C. C. A. 68. And see U. S. v. Swan, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 60 Fed. 947, 31 U. S. App. 112, 15 C. C. A. 77.

23. Interpleas

"If the statute of the state contained provisions regulating trials of the right of property in such cases, it might be most convenient to make them a part of the practice of the court, as contemplated by sections 914, 915, 916 of the Revised Statutes." Krippendorf v. Hyde, (1884) 110 U. S. 273, 4 S. Ct. 27, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 145. See also Gumbel v. Pitkin, (1888) 124 U. S. 131, 8 S. Ct. 379, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 374; Bowen v. Needle Nat. Bank, (S. D. Cal. 1896) 76 Fed. 176.

24. Judgments and Proceedings Subsequent to a. In General

As to following decisions and statutes of state as to operation and effect of judgments, see annotations to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1197 et seq.

Application generally of section.—This section applies to the forms and modes of procedure for procuring judgment, and not to subsequent proceedings. Friedly v. Giddings, (C. C. Vt. 1902) 119 Fed. 438.

Everything after judgment, looking to a review by an appellate court, is regulated solely by the acts of Congress, the practice at common law, and the rules and decisions of the federal courts, and this section is not applicable. Detroit United Ry. v. Nichols, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 289, 91 C. C. A. 257. See to same effect Laurel Oil, etc., Co. v. Galbreath Oil, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 162, 91 C. C. A. 106.

So it has been held that a motion for an adjudication that the cause of action arose from the willful and malicious act of the defendants, and that they ought to be confined in close jail, should not be granted. Friedly v. Giddings, (C. C. Vt. 1902) 119 Fed. 438.

And it has been held that the court is to be guided by the common law and not by the state statute where a motion is made to set aside a general verdict and enter judgment for the defendant on certain findings. Detroit v. Grummund, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 273, 132 C. C. A. 417.

But it has been held that an order in a proceeding in aid of execution, under a state statute, directing a garnishee to pay to the judgment creditor money which he owed to the judgment debtor, is not a judgment which does not determine finally the liability of the garnishee, and such practice will be followed in the United States courts in that state, and a federal court erred in directing that execution issue against the garnishee if payment should not be made according to the order, as the payment of the money can be enforced from the garnishee to the creditor only by an ordinary action. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Hopkins, (1876) 94 U. S. 11, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 48.

Judgments against one or more of several parties, when authorized by state law, may be rendered in the federal courts in that state. Sawin v. Kenny, (1879) 93 U. S. 289, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 926. See also Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Laird, (1896) 164 U. S. 393, 17 S. Ct. 120, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 485; Witters v. Sowles, (C. C. Vt. 1889) 34 Fed. 119.

This section applies to the mode of entering and recording judgments, including provisions for entering judgments against one or more defendants. Knight Judgment for part of items claimed.—
In accordance with state practice, a court has directed a judgment to be entered in favor of plaintiff for certain items as to which an affidavit of defense was found to be insufficient, without prejudice to the right to proceed for the balance of the amount claimed. Harding v. York Knitting Mills, (M. D. Pa. 1905) 142 Fed. 228.

Judgment for part of land in ejectment.
In an action of ejectment, when, by the local statute, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the whole of the premises, or any part thereof, or any interest therein, according to the rights of the parties, judgment may be entered on a general finding for the plaintiff only as to a part of the land in controversy. Morgan v. Eggers, (1888) 157 U. S. 65, 8 S. Ct. 1041, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 66.

Adding interest to judgment.—A state statute providing that "when final judgment for the plaintiff is rendered the clerk must add to the sum so awarded interest thereon from the decedent's death and include it in the judgment," is a matter of procedure, and is made a rule of the federal court, but the plaintiff may waive the interest. Robostelli v. New York, etc., R. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 34 Fed. 710. See also Marke v. Northern Pac. R. Co., (C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 76 Fed. 941, 44 U. S. App. 714, 22 C. C. A. 430.

Signing of judgments by judge.—A state statute providing that "the judge must sign all definitive or final judgments rendered by him, but that he shall not do so until three judicial days have elapsed, to be computed from the day when such judgments were given," is a rule of practice for United States courts within that state (Louisia). Yznaga del Valle v. Harrison, (1876) 93 U. S. 235, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 892.

Provision of judgments in state statute as to notice before entry of judgment need not by reason of this section be followed where the parties have by stipulation agreed otherwise. Nelson v. McMillan, (Ia. 1916) 156 N. W. 923.

In the mode of entering and recording judgments the state law will be followed. Morrison v. Bernards Tp., (C. N. J. 1888) 35 Fed. 400. See also Chicago Fourth Nat. Bank v. Neyhardt, (1876) 13 Blatchf. 393; 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,991; Detmold v. G. \\

As to the form of judgments in actions on official bonds, see Hagood v. Bylthe, (C. C. S. C. 1889) 37 Fed. 249.

"At common law, a judgment non obstante veredicto could only be granted upon the application of the plaintiff, and upon a plea to the declaration which confessed the cause of action and set up matters in avoidance, which, upon their face, were insufficient to constitute a defense or a bar. German Ins. Co. v. Frederick, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 144, (19 U. S. App. 241), 7 C. C. A. 122. The rule has been relaxed in most of the states so far as to permit a judgment on the pleadings notwithstanding the verdict in behalf of either the plaintiff or the defendant." U. S. v. Gardner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 285; 66 C. C. A. 683, holding that where there is no statute in a state nor decision of the Supreme Court therein further relaxing the rule so as to permit the consideration of the evidence in a case, a federal court sitting in that state will grant such a judgment, if at all, solely upon the record.

A statute provided that "whenever upon the trial of any issue a point requesting binding instructions in writing is made, and the party declining the party presenting the point may . . . move the court to have all the evidence taken upon the trial duly certified and filed so as to become part of the record and for judgment non obstante veredicto upon the whole record; whereupon it shall be the duty of the court, if it does not grant a new trial, to so certify the evidence and to enter such judgment as should have been entered upon that evidence." As construed by the Supreme Court of the state, such statute does not infringe upon the province of the jury, but merely gives the court the same power after verdict that it had before to direct a verdict for either party upon the whole evidence. Such practice is adaptable to the federal courts, and one which the Circuit Courts within the state are required to follow by a prior decision of state law. Foss v. Bergren, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 165 Fed. 380, affirmed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 176 Fed. 76; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. McCune,
(C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 991. 98

Construction of judgment of dismissal.—
The state law will be followed as to whether a judgment of dismissal is a judgment on the merits. U. S. v. Parker, (1887) 120 U. S. 89, 7 S. Ct. 454, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

b. Enforcement of Judgment

Proceedings for a stay of execution upon a judgment prescribed by state law are not governed by this section. R. S. sec. 916, infra, p. 70, provides for remedies on judgments. Lamaster v. Keeler, (1887) 123 U. S. 376, 8 S. Ct. 107, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 238.

c. Motions for New Trials

As to new trials see Judicial Code, § 269, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1047.

So it is said by the United States Supreme Court: "It has long been the established law in the courts of the United States that to grant or refuse a new trial rests in the sound discretion of the court to which the motion is addressed, and that the result cannot be made the subject of review on a writ of error. We cannot think that Congress intended by the Act of June 1, 1872 (17 Stat. L. 197, § 5), to abrogate this salutary rule." Newcomb v. Wood, (1878) 97 U. S. 581, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1086.

And a state statute providing that where the Supreme Court orders a new trial or further proceedings in the lower court the record shall be transmitted to such court and proceedings had thereon within one year from the date of such order, or in default thereof the action shall be dismissed, has been held not to be obligatory upon a federal court. Manitowoc Malting Co. v. Feuchtswanger, (E. D. Wis. 1912) 196 Fed. 506.

d. Bill of Exceptions

This section does not apply to bills of exceptions and proceedings on review.

So it has been said that: “It has been uniformly held by the federal courts that the settlement of bills of exceptions is governed by the federal statutes and the practice of the federal courts, and not by the practice of the several states.” New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 50 Fed. 188, 5 U. S. App. 443, 5 C. C. A. 461; Green v. Fitchburg R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 872, 56 C. C. A. 402.

In the courts of the United States the proceedings preparatory to obtaining a review of their rulings, including the questions of when an exception need be taken and how motions and rulings, not in themselves part of the record, may be made such, are not regulated by state statutes, but by the statutes of the United States, and, if they be silent, by the common law and the practice prevailing in those courts. Ghoist v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 105 Fed. 841, 94 C. C. A. 263.

e. Vacating or Modifying Judgments

In general—“After the term has ended all final judgments and decrees of the court pass beyond its control unless steps be taken during that term, by motion or otherwise, to set aside, modify, or correct them; and if errors exist they can only be corrected by such proceeding by a writ of error or appeal as may be allowed in a court which by law can review the declaratory judgment. The question relates to the power of the courts and not to the mode of procedure, and state statutes and decisions on the point are not binding. Bronson v. Schulten, (1861) 104 U. S. 410, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 797. See also to same effect U. S. v. Wallace, (D. C. S. C. 1891) 46 Fed. 586; Tryon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 269, 49 C. C. A. 309, 55 L. R. A. 638; Tryon v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (D. C. N. J. 1914) 213 Fed. 49.

So where in U. S. v. Mayer, (1914) 235 U. S. 55, 35 S. Ct. 13, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 129, the question arose whether the District Court had power to vacate its own judgment, the court said: “In the absence of statute providing otherwise, the general principle obtains that a court cannot set aside or alter its final judgment after the expiration of the term at which it was entered, unless the proceeding for that purpose was begun during that term. . . . There are certain exceptions. In the case of courts of common law,—and we are not here concerned with the special grounds upon which courts of equity afford relief, —the court at a subsequent term has power to correct inaccuracies in mere matters of form, or clerical errors, and, in civil cases, to rectify such mistakes of fact as were reviewable on writ of error coram nobis. See also the cases generally with which the proceeding by motion is the modern substitute. . . . These writs were available to bring before the court that pronounced the judgment errors in matters of fact which had not been put in issue or passed upon, and were material to the validity and regularity of the legal proceeding itself; as where the defendant, being under age, appeared by attorney, or the plaintiff or defendant was a married woman at the time of commencing the suit, or died before verdict or interlocutory judgment,—for, it was said, ‘error in fact is not the error of the judges, and reversing it is not reversing their own judgment.’ So, if there were error in the process, or through the default of the clerks, the same proceeding might be had to procure a reversal. But if the error were ‘in the judgment itself, and not in the process,’ a writ of error did not lie in the same court upon the judgment, but only in another and superior court. . . . The errors of law which were thus subject to examination were only those disclosed by the record, and, as the record was so drawn up that it did not show errors in the reception or rejection of evidence, or misdirections by the judge, the remedy applied ‘only to that very small number of legal questions’ which concerned ‘the regularity of the proceedings themselves.’ See Report Royal Commission on Crim. Code (1879) p. 37; 1 Stephen, History of Crim. Law, 309, 310. In view of the statutory and limited jurisdiction of the federal district courts, and of the specific provisions for the review of their judgments on writ of error, there would appear to be no basis for the conclusion that, after the term, these courts in common-law actions, whether civil or criminal, can set aside or modify their final judgments for errors of law; and even if it be assumed that in the case of errors in certain matters of fact, the district courts may exercise in criminal cases — as an incident to their powers expressly granted — a correctional jurisdiction at subsequent terms analogous to that exercised at common law on writs of error or appeals (see Bishop, New Crim. Proc. 2d ed. § 1369), as to which we express no opinion, that authority would not reach the present case. This jurisdiction was of limited scope; the power of the court thus to vacate its judgments for errors of fact existed, as already stated, in those cases where the errors were of the most fundamental character, that is, such as rendered the proceeding itself irregular and invalid. In cases of prejudicial misconduct in the course of the trial, the misbehavior or partiality of jurors, and newly discovered evidence, as well as where it is sought to have the court in which the case was tried reconsider its ruling, the remedy is by a motion for a new trial (Jud. Code, § 289) — an application which is addressed to the sound discretion of the trial court, and, in accordance with the established principles which have been repeatedly set forth in the decisions of this court above cited, cannot be entertained, in the absence of a different statutory rule, after the expiration of the term at which the judgment was entered."

See to the same effect Forty Fort Coal Co. v. Kirkendall, (M. D. Pa. 1916) 233 Fed. 704; wherein the court said: "However, it will not be denied that many of the state law courts have and exercise this power. In some states it is expressly conferred by statute; in others it is considered one of the 'inherent powers' of the law courts. In a state court, where a system has been adopted which amalgamates the equitable and law jurisdiction in one form of action, it is easy to see how relief might be granted on motion in a case like this. It would be a matter of no consequence whether the case be considered as one at law or in equity; the form of action and the court which had jurisdiction would be the same. It would be useless to examine the state decisions on this subject, for neither the practice of the state courts in exercising control over their judgments and administering equitable relief in a summary way, nor the statutes of the states, can determine the actions of the courts of the United States on this subject. 'It is a question of power, and not of procedure. Jurisdiction at law and in equity are as separate in the federal courts as if administered by different tribunals.'"

Similarly in Bronson v. Schulten. (1882) 104 U. S. 310, 26 L. Ed. 787; Justice Miller, speaking for the court upon this point, said: "In this country all courts have terms and vacations. The time of the commencement of every term, if there be half a dozen a year, is fixed by a statute, and the end of it by the final adjournment of the court at the session of that term. This is the case with regard to all the courts of the United States, and if there be exceptions in the state courts they are unimportant. It is a general rule of the law that all the judgments, decrees, or other orders of the courts, however conclusive in their character, are under the control of the court which pronounces them during the term at which they are rendered or entered of record, and they may then be set aside, vacated, modified, or annulled by that court. But it is a rule equally well established that after the term has ended all final judgments and decrees of the court pass beyond its control, unless steps be taken during that term, by motion or otherwise, to set aside, modify, or correct them; and if errors exist, they can only be corrected by such proceeding, by a writ of error or appeal, as may be allowed in a court which, by law, can review the decision. So strongly has this principle been upheld by this court that, while recognizing that there is no court which can review its decisions, it has invariably refused all applications for rehearing made after the adjournment of the court for the term at which the judgment was rendered. And this is placed upon the ground that the case has passed beyond the control of the court." Wellman v. Bethes, (E. D. S. C. 1914) 213 Fed. 367, was a case where the court held that a state statute empowering the courts of a state to vacate their judgments at any time within one year could not apply to the federal courts, as under the authoritative decisions these courts have no power to make any order affecting the validity or legal effect of a judgment after the adjournment of the term at which it was rendered. And it now appears to be the rule of universal application, see also Cameron v. McRoberts, (1818) 3 Wheat. 591, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 467; Sibbald v. U. S., (1838) 12 Pet. 488, 9 U. S. (L. ed. 1) 116; Phillips v. Negley, (1886) 117 U. S. 605, 6 S. Ct. 961, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 1013; Allen v. Wilson, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 21 Fed. 881; Baptist v. Farrell Transp. Co. (N. D. Ohio 1886) 29 Fed. 180; Grames v. Havley, (C. C. Kan. 1883) 50 Fed. 319; Klever v. Seawall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1894) 65 Fed. 373, 22 U. S. App. 468, 12 C. C. A. 463; U. S. v. 1,201 Pounds of Fur Clippings, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1900) 106 Fed. 161, 45 C. C. A. 263; King v. Davis, (W. D. Va. 1905) 137 Fed. 222; O'Connor v. O'Connor, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 449, 73 C. C. A. 565; U. S. v. One Trunk, (E. D. Mich. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 1; Electric Vehicle Co. v. De Dietrich Import Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 159 Fed. 492.

But in Virginia, etc., Steel, etc., Co. v. Harris, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 428, 80 C. C. A. 658, it was held that the power conferred on judges by the state law to vacate a judgment after the term at which it was rendered, and within one year, when rendered against a party through his mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, may be excused by a federal court sitting in that state.

And it has been held that state statutes giving the court jurisdiction to vacate or modify a judgment after the term at which it was rendered, and providing a full scheme for the trial of a proceeding for that purpose, as in an action by proceedings at law, are applicable to and govern procedure in the federal courts in cases coming within their purview. Such statutes afford a party a plain and adequate remedy at law, and forbid a resort to a court of equity for relief. Travellers' Protective Ass'n v. Gilbert, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 299, 49 C. C. A. 309, 55 L. R. A. 538.

—Judgment by default for want of an appearance will be stricken off the record upon motion of the defendant, on affidavit showing a proper case for relief following the state statute and practice, and the defendant will be let in to try the case upon its merits upon pleading an issuable plea and paying the costs of the suit up to date. Brown v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (C. C. Del. 1891) 9 Fed. 153. See also Republic Ins. Co. v. Williams, (192) 3 Biss. 370, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,707.

f. Methods of Review

"The question of the finality of a judgment or decree for purposes of review by writ of error or appeal in the federal courts is not affected by the procedure in the state courts, but must be governed by the rules established by federal legislation and by the decisions of the federal courts." Menge v. Warrin, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 816, 57 C. C. A. 432.

The power and practice of the federal appellate courts are derived exclusively from the Constitution, the Acts of Congress, the common law, the ancient English statutes, and the rules and practice of the courts of the United States, and they are neither controlled nor affected by the statutes of the states or the practice of their courts. Francisco v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 354, 79 C. C. A. 292, 9 Ann. Cas. 628; Boatsman's Bank v. Trower Bros. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 151 Fed. 804, 104 C. C. A. 314 (citing the earlier cases).

"No portion of the proceedings touching the removal of causes in the federal courts on error or appeal, from the noting the exceptions to the close, is governed by the local rules." New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 188, 5 U. S. App. 443, 5 C. C. A. 461. And, in general, this section has no application to the practice or proceedings of appellate courts or to matters relating to bills of exceptions, motions for new trials, or any other means adopted to secure a review of judgments or decrees. Its effect is limited to the practice and proceedings in the trial courts to secure their judgments. Francisco v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 149 Fed. 554, 79 C. C. A. 292, 9 Ann. Cas. 628.

It has also been held that this section is inapplicable to a subsequently created appellate court for a circuit comprising several states. Shumaker v. Security Life, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 112, 86 C. C. A. 302.

g. Writ of Error

This section has reference only to practice on the law side of the trial courts. It has nothing to do with the prosecution of the common-law writ of error which prevails in federal appellate procedure. McBride v. 1st. Fed. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 966, 131 C. C. A. 562.

"The Acts of Congress give to defeated litigants in the national courts the right to a review of final judgments at law against them by writs of error, and a right to a review of final decrees in equity by appeal. These Acts grant the power and fix the jurisdiction of the federal appellate courts. They are not matters of form or practice, but matters of power and jurisdiction. They are not affected by the act of conformity (R. S. sec. 914), nor by the legislation or practice of the state." Hooven, et al., Co. v. Featherstone, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 81, 49 C. C. A. 229, quoted and followed in Smith v. Currie, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1918) 230 Fed. 805, 146 C. C. A. 113.

b. Remedies on Appeal or Superseded Bonds

Where the statutes of a state authorize a summary judgment against the sureties on an appeal or superseded bond, District Courts of the United States in that state may render such judgment. Egan v. Chicago Great Western R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1908) 163 Fed. 344.

i. Actions on Judgments

By the common-law procedure, the appropriate form of an action at law to recover an amount due upon a judgment is an action of debt, and although under a state statute an action to recover on a judgment is styled an action in assumpsit yet it has been said that the principles applicable to the case, since the action was one to recover a sum certain alleged to be due on a decree or judgment, were the same as those that are applicable to an action in debt at common law instituted for that purpose. Du Bois v. Seymour, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 600, 81 C. C. A. 590, 11 Ann. Cas. 656.

In an action in a federal court on a foreign judgment the form of the action and the pleadings are matters in respect to which the court will be governed by the practice of the state within which the court takes jurisdiction. Cruz v. O'Boyle, (M. D. Pa. 1912) 197 Fed. 824. See to same effect Springs v. James, (N. D. Ga. 1909) 172 Fed. 626.

25. Judicial Sales

In case of a judicial sale without confirmation, whatever the practice in the federal courts, and however erroneous a decree that does not provide for confirmation, the United States court sitting in a state has power to enter such a decree where at the time the sale took place it is the established rule in that state that such confirmation and approval is not a prerequisite to the validity of the title acquired at the sale. Paulding v. Tilton, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1911) 192 Fed. 297, 112 C. C. A. 555.

26. Jurisdiction

The question of the amount necessary to give a federal court jurisdiction is not a local question, controlled by the statute of the state, or the rulings of its Supreme Court. It pertains to a subject matter of procedure exclusively within the federal jurisdiction, in which it is well settled that in the action of assumpsit, like that of an action on several notes, bonds and the like, the requisite jurisdictional amount is the aggregate of the judgments prayed for. Heffner v. Gwynne-Treadwell Cotton Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 635, 87 C. C. A. 606.

27. Jury and Jurors

a. In General

As to juries in federal courts see Judicial Code, ch. XII, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1063 et seq.

But where a state statute does not point out any method for raising questions as to the proceedings before a grand jury it will not be literally followed so as to deny a defendant the right to challenge such proceedings. U. S. v. Wells, (D. C. Idaho 1908) 163 Fed. 313.

Challenges to jury.—The practice in a state court in respect to challenges to the jury is not binding on the federal courts. U. S. v. Davis, (W. D. Tenn. 1900) 103 Fed. 457.

Conduct of jurors.—"Neither in letter nor in spirit does the Conformity Act apply to the power of the court to inquire into the conduct of jurors who had been summoned to perform a duty in the administration of justice, and who, for the time being, were officers of the court. The conduct of parties, witnesses and counsel in a case, as well as the conduct of the jurors and officers of the court, may be of such a character as not only to defeat the rights of litigants, but it may directly affect the administration of public justice. In the very nature of things the courts of each jurisdiction must each be in a position to adopt and enforce their own self-preserving rules." McDonald v. Pless, (1915) 238 U. S. 264, 35 S. Ct. 783, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1300, affirming (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1913) 206 Fed. 263, 124 C. C. A. 131.

Waiver of jury and submission to referee.—When there is a written waiver of a jury, and the cause has been referred to a referee under the authority of a state statute, the referee and the trial court shall be governed by the local practice and modes of proceeding "as near as may be" in accordance with the Conformity Act as generally construed. Tierman v. Chicago Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir 1914) 214 Fed. 238, 131 C. C. A. 254.

b. Submission of Case to Jury

General doctrine.—The statutes, rules and practice of the state and state courts of the state in which the case is tried have no application in the submission of a case to the jury. U. S. v. Oppenheim, (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 228 Fed. 220.

The law of the state does not control the federal courts in respect to the mode in which causes shall be submitted to a jury. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Reardon, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 159 Fed. 356, 66 C. C. A. 366.

The matter of instructing a jury pertains to the conduct of the trial itself by the trial judge and is not governed by the Conformity Act. Steers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 192 Fed. 1, 112 C. C. A. 423.

This section does not require federal judges to conform to state regulations in the submission of causes and the control of the deliberations of juries; such proceedings being governed by the common law. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co. v. N. & M. Friedman Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 713, 66 C. C. A. 543.

So a rule of practice under a state statute that it is error for a judge during a recess of his court, in the absence of a party and his counsel, and without notice to them, to give instructions to the jury to whom the case has been submitted, is not applicable, under this section, to the federal courts. The power of federal judges, as defined by the common law, in the submission of cases and the control of the deliberations of juries, is not automatic. Yates v. Weylbooke Cooke Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 603, 137 C. C. A. 327.

And in Times Pub. Co. v. Carlisle, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1890) 94 Fed. 762, 36 C. C. A. 476, the court said that the refusal of the trial court, in an action where punitive damages were recoverable, to instruct the jury to state separately the amount thereof in their verdict in accordance with a state statute, was not error.

Instructions in writing.—State statutes requiring that all instructions of the court to the jury shall be in writing are not obligatory on the United States courts. Lincoln v. Power, (1894) 151 U. S. 436, 14 S. Ct. 387, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 224.

Nor are state statutory provisions requiring written instructions to be taken by the jury on retiring, or permitting papers read in evidence to be taken by them, or requiring written instructions, or forbidding the separation of the jury, or requiring exceptions to the charge to be made before the jury retires. Knight v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 368, 103 C. C. A. 514.

So where an assignment of error complained of the action of the court in instructing the jury to retire instead of in writing, for the reason that under the laws of the state of Texas the courts were required to give their instructions in writing, and for the further reason that the defendant could not reserve its exceptions to the charge of the court without interrupting the court at the time it was delivering its charge, and the jury could not so well understand the law under verbal instructions as they might have done under written instructions, the court declared that assuming that this assignment of error was serious, it would be dismissed with the remark that the laws of Texas with regard to instructing juries in the state courts did not prevail in the courts of the United States. Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Glover, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 356, 46 C. C. A. 334.

Instructions taken by jury on their retirement.—A state statute requiring that the instructions shall be taken by the jury on their retirement, and returned with the verdict, and that papers read in evidence, other than depositions, may be carried from the bar by the jury, is not adopted by this section. Nudd v. Burrows, (1875) 91 U. S. 426, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 286. See also Western Union Tel. Co. v. Burgess, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 108 Fed. 28, 47 C. C. A. 168.

Nor is a provision in the constitution of a state forbidding judges making any comments on the facts in their instructions applicable to the practice in the federal courts. Southern R. Co. v. Carborundum Coal Co., (C. C. Wash. 1898) 91 Fed. 357. See also same effect Knight v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 368, 103 C. C. A. 514.

"A state constitution cannot, any more than a state statute, prohibit the judges of the United States from informing jurors with regard to matters of fact."

28. Limitation of Actions

"Matters of substance and procedure must not be confounded because they happen to have the same name. For example, the time within which a suit is to be brought is treated as pertaining to the remedy. But this is not so if, by the statute giving the cause of action, the lapse of time not only bars the remedy but destroys the liability... In that class of cases the law of the jurisdiction, creating the cause of action and fixing the time within which it must be asserted, would control even where the suit was brought in the courts of a state which gave a longer period within which to sue," Central Vermont R. Co. v. White, (1915) 238 U. S. 507, 35 S. Ct. 865, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 1433, Ann. Cas. 1916B 252.

In A. J. Phillips Co. v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (1915) 236 U. S. 602, 35 S. Ct. 444, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 774, which was a case begun in Michigan, it was held that the Michigan practice which did not permit a defendant to take advantage of the statute of limitations by a general demurrer to the declaration did not apply to a cause of action arising under the Hepburn Act, which indicated its purpose to prevent suits in delayed claims by the provision that all complaints for damages should be filed within two years and not after. Under such a statute the lapse of time not only bars the remedy, but destroys the liability.

29. Mandamus

In general the practice in the federal court in mandamus proceedings is not affected by this section. U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1873) 2 Dill. 531, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,599. See also Bath County v. Amy, (1871) 13 Wall. 244, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 539.

But see a dissenting opinion in Rosembaum v. Bauer, (1887) 120 U. S. 460, 7 S. Ct. 533, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 743, in which Bradley, J., and two others concurring, said: "If there be such a suit in which, by the law of the state, the form of proceeding is required to be in mandamus, section 914, R. S., applies." See also Virginia Coupon Cases, (E. D. Va. 1884) 25 Fed. 644. And see Parsons v. Marya, (E. D. Va.)
JUDICIARY

Power to issue writs of mandamus, see Judicial Code, § 262, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 928.

30. Mechanic's Lien
Proceedings to enforce a mechanic's lien in the courts of the United States must be by a suit in equity, notwithstanding that by the statute of the state in which the lien is created the enforcement thereof may be had by an action at law. Continental, etc. Trust, etc. Bank v. Corey Bros. Const. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 976, 126 C. C. A. 64. See also to same effect Armstrong Cork Co. v. Merchants' Refrigerating Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 184 Fed. 199, 107 C. C. A. 93.

31. Partition Proceedings
A code provision that: "Tenants in common, joint tenants and coparceners, shall be compellable to make partition, and the circuit court of the county wherein the estate, or any part thereof, may be, shall have jurisdiction, in cases of partition, and in the exercise of such jurisdiction may take cognizance of all questions of law affecting the legal title that may arise in any proceeding," has been held applicable in the case of a like a federal court for partition of real estate and for an accounting. Woods v. Woods, (N. D. W. Va. 1910) 184 Fed. 159.

32. Nonsuit
a. Voluntary Nonsuit
In the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals this section has been held to apply to a state law permitting a plaintiff to dismiss without prejudice before final submission of the case to the jury; and in such case it is said to be error to refuse to allow the plaintiff to dismiss without prejudice before a peremptory instruction for defendant, though a motion was made after the judge stated he would sustain the defendant's motion for a verdict. Knight v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 190 Fed. 565, 103 C. C. A. 518.

So, in a case in the Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, it was said that while it may be true that there is sufficient elasticity in the Conformity Act to permit the United States courts to decide that the state practice giving plaintiffs in actions at law, where jury trial has not been waived, the right to take nonsuits at any time before the jury retire should not be applied to the disposition of a case on the mere murmur to the evidence, or on the present-day substitute, the motion for a directed verdict, nevertheless the long-established custom of the United States courts sitting in Illinois of following the Illinois practice respecting nonsuits should be adhered to, at least until duly promulgated rules the bar have been advised of the change, and it was held error to refuse plaintiff's motion for leave to take a nonsuit, after the judge had announced his decision sustaining a motion for a directed verdict.

Again, in a case in the Southern District of Illinois, where an action was brought by an administrator for damages for the death of his intestate and the case was tried by a jury, and at the close of plaintiff's evidence the court gave a peremptory instruction, directing the jury to find for the defendant, and discharged the jury from further service in the case, whereupon, and while the jury still remained in their seats, counsel for plaintiff moved the court that the plaintiff be allowed to suffer a nonsuit, it was held that the statute of the state controlled the question. Drummond v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ill. 1901) 109 Fed. 531.

And the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit follows the established practice of the state court with respect to the right of a party to take a nonsuit. Connecticut Fire Ins. Co. v. Manning, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 893, 101 C. C. A. 107.

Also in this circuit it has been decided that a voluntary nonsuit may be taken by the plaintiff after a request by the defendant for an instruction directing a verdict in its favor. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Metalstaff, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 769, 41 C. C. A. 669.

But in the Fourth Circuit it has been held that, although according to the practice in a state court a plaintiff may take a voluntary nonsuit after a motion has been made to instruct a verdict for the defendant, a federal court will not recognize such a right, even in a case arising in that state. Cogdill v. Whiting Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 189, 129 C. C. A. 194.

In an earlier case, however, in the same circuit and state, in which it was insisted by the plaintiff in error that the court below erred, first, in refusing to permit the plaintiff in error to take a nonsuit after all the plaintiff's evidence had been introduced and after the defendant had made a motion to instruct a verdict in his behalf, and the court upon argument of such motion had passed thereon favorably to the defendant, and, secondly, in directing the jury to find a verdict in favor of the defendant in error, the court said: "We think that under the circumstances it was within the discretion of the court to either permit the plaintiff to take a nonsuit or to direct a verdict in favor of the defendant in error." Parks v. Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 276, 74 C. C. A. 414.

In another case in the Fourth Circuit, where error was assigned for refusal below to permit a nonsuit, it was said: "The courts of the United States have always exercised the right to control the disposition of causes pending before them, when either the allegations of the plaintiff or the evidence introduced in support thereof has failed to make out the case." Hunt v. McNamee, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 295, 72 C. C. A. 441.

And in the Eastern District of Arkansas it has been held that it is too late for a plaintiff to ask for a nonsuit after the court has granted a motion for a peremptory instruction in favor of the defendant and directed the jury to sign it, unless demanded by some extraordinary reason. Whitten v. Southwestern Tel., etc., Co., (E. D. Ark. 1914) 217 Fed. 835, wherein the court, advertizing to the conflict of opinion among the national courts on this question, said: "The authorities on the question as to when the court may permit a voluntary nonsuit are anything but harmonious. Some of the courts hold that no nonsuit can be taken after the motion for a directed verdict has been made; others hold that the action may be dismissed at any time before the court announces its decision, but not thereafter. Some of the courts hold that it may be taken at any time before the court has actually directed the jury to return the verdict, but not thereafter; and still others hold that the cause may be dismissed at any time before the verdict has been actually signed by the jury."

b. Peremptory Nonsuit

If the state law permits a nonsuit where the evidence, with all the inferences to be drawn therefrom, would not sustain a verdict for the plaintiff, such practice may be followed by a federal court under the provisions of the conformity statute. Russo-Chinese Bank v. National Bank of Commerce, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 187 Fed. 80, 100 C. C. A. 398; Shank v. Great Shoshone, etc., Water Power Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 206 Fed. 833, 134 C. C. A. 35.

But a compulsory nonsuit is not allowed in the courts of the United States, except where a statute of the state authorizes it; the practice of directing a verdict for the defendant when the evidence is clearly insufficient to support a verdict for the plaintiff having taken its place. Denver v. Home Sav. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 28, 118 C. C. A. 256.

33. Parties

a. Parties Plaintiff

And where a state statute expressly authorizes the prosecution of a suit by a pendente lite assignee of the demand in the name of the original plaintiff, his assignor, it has been held that the rule of practice established by the state statute will prevail in the federal court. Greensboro v. Southern Paving, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1909) 168 Fed. 880, 94 C. C. A. 292.

Where the rules of the common law prevail, choses in action are assignable in equity only, and courts of law will not recognize an assignment so as to allow the assignee to sue on it in his own name, and the federal courts will follow such established rules of the state wherein the suit is brought. Nederland Life Ins. Co. v. Hall, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1898) 54 Fed. 278, 55 U. S. App. 598, 27 C. C. A. 390.

But where a state statute required actions at law to be prosecuted in the name or names of the real parties in interest, 2 however the rule may be in the courts of the state, section 914 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, requiring conformity of practice of the federal courts in actions at law with the practice in the courts of the state, does not compel or even authorize the maintenance of an action at law by any one except the owner of the legal title in cases exclusively cognizable in the courts of the United States." New York Continental Jewell Filtration Co. v. Sullivan, (C. C. Ind. 1901) 111 Fed. 179.

Trustees of an express trust.—Under a state statute an agent of a corporation to whom, "as executive agent of the company," a promise is made to pay money, is "a person with whom, or in whose name, a contract is made for the benefit of another," and may therefore sue in his own name on the promise. Albany, etc., Iron, etc., Co. v. Lundberg, (1887) 121 U. S. 451, 7 S. Ct. 958, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 983.

Husband and wife.—Where a state statute provides that the husband is not a necessary or proper party to an action to recover damages to the person, estate, or character of his wife, it has been held that such statutory modifications of the common law in regard to the rights of husband and wife as plaintiffs in actions at law are applicable also in the United States courts for such state. Morning Journal Ass'n v. Smith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 56 Fed. 141, 1 U. S. App. 270, 4 C. C. A. 8. See also cases cited supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1192, under sidehead, Actions by married women.

Action by executor or administrator.—Where it is provided by a state statute that "any executor or administrator, by virtue of letters obtained in another state, may proceed in any court of this state, without first taking out letters in this state, provided such executor or administrator shall, upon commencing suit, file in the office of the clerk of the court in which such suit shall be brought an exemplified copy of the record of his or their appointment," such provision will be followed in the federal court. Hayes v. Pratt, (1892) 147 U. S. 557, 13 S. Ct. 503, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 279.

b. Parties Defendant

Necessary parties defendant.—As the federal court is governed by, and follows, the local laws in proceedings to establish claims against the estate of deceased persons, it is only necessary in such a proceeding in that court to serve those whom it would be necessary to serve if the proceeding was in the state court; and such parties only are indispensable parties defendant either in the state or federal court. Farmers' Bank v. Wright, (N. D. Ia. 1908) 158 Fed. 841.

Absent defendants.—State statutes conflicting with R. S. sec. 737, as to proceedings to try where some of the defendants cannot be found, will not be followed. Allnut v. Lancaster, (C. C. S. C. 1896) 76 Fed. 131. See also cases cited supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 485, under sidehead, State laws and practice.

Joint of parties.—A state statute providing for a joint action against both principal and sureties on a bond furnishes the rule of practice for the United States courts. St. Louis Brewing Ass'n v. Hayes, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 97 Fed. 559, 35 C. C. A. 449. See also Borland v. Haven, (N. D. Cal. 1888) 37 Fed. 394, as to actions against stockholders of a corporation.

So where in case of a joint and several bond the common-law right to sue the parties jointly or severally has been modified by a state statute, such a statute will control in a federal court sitting in that state, as to what parties are necessary. Columbia Digger Co. v. Rector, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 215 Fed. 618.

And a state statute providing that "where two or more persons are jointly bound by contract the action thereon may be brought against all or any of them, at the plaintiff's option" (section 4480, Gantt's Dig., 1874); that "judgment may be given for or against one or more of several plaintiffs, and for or against one or more of several defendants" (section 4701), and that "though all the defendants have been summoned, judgment may be rendered against any of them separately where the plaintiff would be entitled to judgment against such defendants if the action had been against them alone" (section 4704), furnishes a rule of practice for the courts of the United States in that state. Sawin v. Kenny, (1876) 93 U. S. 259, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 926. See also Atlantic, etc., Co. v. Laird, (1896) 164 U. S. 393, 17 S. Ct. 120, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 485; U. S. v. Tracy, (1875) 8 Ben. 1, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 16,536.

Again, the legislature of a state has a right to say that in an action for the protection of water rights a plaintiff may make all persons who have diverted water from the same stream parties to such action, and that the courts of the state may in one judgment settle relative priorities and rights of all the parties to such action; and, having so provided, the federal courts may conform to the state practice, and in so doing are but applying their mode of proceeding to the enforcement of a remedy substantially consistent with the ordinary modes of proceeding in chancery. Ames Realty Co. v. Big Indian Min. Co., (C. C. Mont. 1906) 140 Fed. 166.

After the removal of a cause from a state court the jurisdiction of the federal court is not ousted by admitting as a party, under the state law, a citizen of the same state. Phelps v. Oaks, (1886) 117 U. S. 236, 6 S. Ct. 714, 29 U. S. (L ed.) 888.

Parties improperly joined.—Where a state statute provides that no action shall be defeated on account of the misjoinder of parties if the matter in controversy can be properly dealt with and settled between the parties before the court, the court may order any party improperly joined in any action to be stricken out. Such a statute will be followed. Perry v. Mechanics' Mut. Ins. Co., (C. C. R. I. 1882) 11 Fed. 478.

Admitting new party defendant.—The jurisdiction of the court once lawfully attached by removal of the cause from a state court cannot be defeated by admitting, under the state practice, a party as a codefendant who is a citizen of the same state as the plaintiff. Phelps v. Oaks, (1886) 117 U. S. 236, 6 S. Ct. 714, 29 U. S. (L ed.) 888.

Substitution of one defendant for another.—A state statute provided that a defendant against whom an action to recover upon a contract is pending may, at any time before answer, upon proof by affidavit that a person not a party to the action makes a demand against him for the same debt, without collusion with him, apply to the court, upon notice to that person and the adverse party, for an order to substitute that person in his place and to discharge him from liability to either on his paying into court the amount of the debt; and that the court may, in its discretion, make such an order." Such proceeding was adopted by this section. Harris v. Hess, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 10 Fed. 263.

34. Patent Suits

The section is applicable to the federal jurisdiction over patent cases, but it does not change the methods of trial of an issue at law under R. S. sec. 861 (in Evidence, vol. 3, p. 168), which requires a motion under R. S. sec. 724 (in Evidence, vol. 3, p. 160), or a bill of discovery to obtain the relief given in the New York courts by section 803 of the New York Code of Civil Procedure, including the examination of property. Cheatham Electric Switching Device Co. v. Transit Development Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 292.

In Fischer v. Automobile Mfg. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 199 Fed. 191, the court said: "The plaintiff has sued at law and expects to try the case before a jury. The procedure, therefore, while based upon jurisdiction in the federal courts over patent causes, will nevertheless conform, as near as may be, to the practice in the state courts, under section 914 of the Revised Statutes. But in spite of this the defendant would not be entitled to an examination of the parties, unless its application be brought under the sections of the Revised Statutes providing for the taking of testimony."

In a patent infringement suit the court considered a motion to strike out a plea, and granted it on a construction of this section and R. S. sec. 4919 (in Patents). Celluloit Mfg. Co. v. American Zylonite Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 54 Fed. 744; See Campbell v. Haverhill, (1895) 155 U. S. 610, 15 S. Ct. 217, 39 U. S. (L ed.) 280, as to a state statute of limitations; Cottier v. Stimson, (C. C. Ore. 1883) 18 Fed. 659, as to the verification of the plea in an action "on the case;" May v. Mercer County, (C. C. Ky. 1887) 30 Fed. 246, as to the sufficiency of plaintiff's "petition" or "declaration."

We think that inasmuch as the Circuit Court of the United States is vested with exclusive jurisdiction to try cases involving the validity of patents issued by the United States, it cannot be said that there are "like causes" in the courts of the several states to which the practice, pleadings, forms and mode of proceedings shall conform. It is not material whether the declaration is called a "petition" or a "declaration," nor is it very important as to the precise form in which it is expressed; but it should contain all the essential averments that are prescribed for a declaration in an action on the case under the common-law form of pleading, because that was supposed to be in the mind of Congress when section 4919 was enacted. The petition in this case contains all such essential averments, and is therefore a good petition; but we do not think the plaintiff has the right to avail himself of the provisions of the Ohio statute in attaching to his petition interrogatories, and thereby compel the defendant to disclose testimony which is important in the issue of the cause. The statutes of the United States specifically provide how testimony in actions of this kind may be secured and offered in the courts of the United States." Marvin v. Aultman. (N. D. Ohio 1891) 46 Fed. 338. See also Myers v. Cunningham. (N. D. Ohio 1892) 44 Fed. 346; Kulp v. Snyder. (E. D. Pa. 1899) 94 Fed. 613.

35. Penalty Actions

Where a statute affixes pecuniary penalty to an act or a neglect, and there is no imprisonment provided for, or provision to suppose that a mere punishment is intended, and no special remedy is pointed out in the statute, a civil action will lie for their recovery, and an action of tort will lie in a United States court sitting within a state in which by the law such a form of action will lie to recover a penalty. U. S. v. Elliott. (1879) 25 Int. Rev. Rec. 319; 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,043.

36. Pleadings

a. General Matters

Amendments to pleadings, see supra, this annotation, Amendments, p. 32.

As to the blending of legal and equitable remedies, and the setting up of equitable defenses to actions at law, see supra, this note, Civil Causes, p. 24.

Purpose of section with reference to pleadings.—The purpose of this section was to secure a harmony between the state and national courts in respect of the general structure or framework of pleading and practice in civil causes, other than those in equity and admiralty, but it does not require an adherence to the state rules in all their subordinate and minor details. Williamson v. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 141 Fed. 54, 72 C. C. A. 542, 5 Ann. Cas. 402.

The object was to assimilate the form and manner in which parties should present their claims and defense, in the preparation for the trial of suits in the federal courts, to those prevailing in the courts of the state. Liverpool, etc., Ins. Co. v. N. & M. Friedman Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 713, 66 C. C. A. 543.

Forms and mode.—This section applies especially to the form and order of pleading, which in actions at law must conform to the requirements of the state statutes and practice. Brown v. Cumberland Telephone, etc., Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1909) 181 Fed. 246. See also to same effect Sanford v. Portsmouth, (1877) 2 Flipp. 105, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,315; Monarch Tobacco Works v. American Tobacco Co., (W. D. Ky. 1908) 166 Fed. 274.

But it has been declared that the rules to be followed do not include modes of procedure established by judicial construction of common-law remedies. Sunford v. Portsmouth, (1877) 2 Flipp. 105, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,315.

Order of pleading.—"Under this Act, the Circuit Courts of the United States follow the practice of the courts of the state in regard to the form and order of pleading, including the manner in which objections may be taken to the jurisdiction and the question whether objections to the jurisdiction and defenses on the merits shall be pleaded successively or together." Southern Pac. Co. v. Denton, (1892) 146 U. S. 202, 13 S. Ct. 44, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 942.

Discretion of court as to following state rule.—A federal court may refuse to follow the state statutes in matters of pleading, where to do so would unduly extend the trial and involve the parties in great expense. Elk Garden Co. v. T. W. Thayer Co., (W. D. Va. 1913) 206 Fed. 212.

b. Construction of Pleadings

Pleadings should be construed as they would be in the state courts. Dakota County

...unless the strictness of the common-law rules of pleading, so that, instead of construing pleadings strictly against the party, they are to be construed liberally in his favor, for the furtherance of justice, such a rule of construction will be observed in the United States courts in that state. U. S. v. Parker, (1887) 120 U. S. 89, 7 S. Ct. 454, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 601.

And the federal courts will follow a rule of construction in the state courts, that where an answer sets up several distinct defenses, a denial in one is held to be qualified by an admission in another. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Paine, (1887) 110 U. S. 561, 7 S. Ct. 323, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 513.

And the federal courts may look to the state statutes upon the question of the construction of pleadings. Bryson v. Gallo, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 70, 103 C. C. A. 424.

But a liberal construction of the pleadings and procedure will not be permitted to work an injustice. Davis v. Bessemer City Cotton Mills, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 784, 102 C. C. A. 232.

c. Sufficiency and Scope of Pleadings

Thus under a state law, requiring that the invalidity of a statute if relied on should be alleged by special plea, it was held that an interstate railroad was not entitled to offer evidence to show that a local statute was invalid as an unreasonable regulation of interstate commerce, where such objection was not pleaded. Southern R. Co. v. King, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1908) 160 Fed. 332, 87 C. C. A. 284.

So a federal court will follow the state practice, in the matter of the sufficiency of the declaration and the statement of the several causes of action relating to an injury arising from a single occurrence in one and the same count. J. W. Bishop Co. v. Shelhorse, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 643, 73 C. C. A. 337.

Alleging character of title in adverse suits.—Where, in construing a state statute as to adverse suits, the state Supreme Court has repeatedly held that it is not necessary for a plaintiff to set out specifically the character of his own title, or the alleged title of the defendants; that it is always sufficient simply to allege that plaintiff is the owner and in possession of the property, describing it, and that the defendants are unlawfully asserting a claim thereto adverse to him, the sufficiency of a complaint in such a case will be tested in a federal court by the same rule. Tonopah Fraction Min. Co. v. Douglass, (C. C. Nev. 1903) 123 Fed. 936.

Exception in statute of limitations.—Where, according to a state practice, an exception in a statute of limitation need not be pleaded in the complaint, but may be introduced by way of reply, that practice is said to be binding on the federal court therein. St. Louis Boatsman's Bank v. Fritzlen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 145, 137 C. C. A. 46.

Pleading damages.—Where the practice in a state is that if the damages claimed are such as would usually or naturally accompany or follow or be included in the results of the injuries complained of, they may be stated and claimed in general terms, but that other and further damages can neither be proved nor recovered unless expressly averred and shown, such practice will be followed in a federal court sitting in that state. Monarch Tobacco Works v. American Tobacco Co., (W. D. Ky. 1908) 165 Fed. 774.

Contributory negligence.—While the burden of proving contributory negligence is in the national courts on the defendant, the question as to whether he must plead it specially or not depends upon the practice of the state in which the court is sitting. Hardy v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. Minn. 1909) 172 Fed. 454.
Under the rule of the federal courts that contributory negligence is a matter of special defense, the facts constituting such negligence must be set out, and, where the answer contains only a general averment, a motion will lie to require it to be made more specific when, under the practice of the state in which the court is sitting, such motion would lie as to any matter of special defense. Gadomex v. New Orleans R. Co., (E. D. La. 1904) 128 Fed. 805.

Action to cancel usurious mortgage.—A complainant may ask relief in equity for the cancellation of an alleged usurious mortgage without averring an offer to pay the money loaned with legal interest, where if the suit had been brought in the state court the complainant would undoubtedly have been entitled to the relief, because the state usury laws expressly so provide for it, notwithstanding a borrower has not paid and did not offer to pay the amount. Oida v. Curlette, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 146 Fed. 661.

An affidavit, in a suit for the recovery of personal chattels in specie, may be made under the provisions of a state statute by "the plaintiff, his agent or attorney," and when made by a special agent of the general land office, it was sufficient if made "to the best of his knowledge, information, or belief," as the making of an affidavit by an agent or attorney necessarily implies that he may not be able to make it on positive knowledge. U. S. v. Bryant, (1884) 111 U. S. 499, 4 S. Ct. 601, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 496.

d. Joinder of Causes of Action

A federal court will follow a state rule as to whether a cause of action is entire. Beckwith v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1916) 223 Fed. 858.

The rule of pleading of the courts of the state of New York requires that different causes of action relied upon must be stated separately, and each must contain facts sufficient to sustain such cause of action, irrespective of any averments of another first cause of action, and objection to a complaint because of a failure to comply with such provision has been sustained in a federal court. Moore Bros. Glass Co. v. Drever Mfg. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 154 Fed. 737.

And where according to the practice in a state, actions ex delicto and ex contractu cannot be joined, the same rule will be followed in the federal court. Tiana v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Wash. 1915) 228 Fed. 824.

But it has been held that a statute providing that "any number of persons claiming liens against the same property may join in the same action" does not authorize the United States courts to entertain jurisdiction of several separate causes of action in one suit, when each claim is for a less amount than is necessary to give the court jurisdiction. Holt v. Bergevin, (N. D. Idaho 1894) 60 Fed. 1.

And when a case which unites both legal and equitable grounds for relief, as permitted by the prescribed practice in the state in which it is brought, is removed into a federal court, the pleadings should be recast so as to separate the action at law from the suit in equity, and the two cases should proceed separately, each according to its nature. Hatcher v. Hendrie, etc., Mfg., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 267, 68 C. C. A. 19. See also to same effect Fletcher v. Burt, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 619, 63 C. C. A. 201.

e. Defendant's Pleadings Generally

"All defenses are open to a defendant in the Circuit Court of the United States, under any form of plea, answer, or demurrer, which would have been open to him under like pleading in the courts of the state within which the Circuit Court is held." Roberts v. Lewis, (1892) 144 U. S. 653, 12 S. Ct. 781, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 579.

A defense that must be specially pleaded in the state court, as the defense of res ju- dicata, may be so pleaded in the federal court. Preferred Acc. Ins. Co. v. Barker, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 158, 35 C. C. A. 250.

The right to enter a special plea instead of the general issue was allowed, though the construction of the state statute was doubtful. English r. Saleton, (E. D. Pa. 1901) 112 Fed. 272.

Statute providing allegations in com- plaint not controverted are true.—When the state statute provides that "each ma- terial allegation of the complaint, not controverted by the answer," "must, for the purposes of the action, be taken as true," a ruling of the state court that when none of the allegations of the complaint were denied in the manner required by the stat- ute, no issue is joined upon any one of them, will be followed. Robertson v. Per- kins, (1899) 129 U. S. 233, 9 S. Ct. 279, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 686.

And where, under the state practice as regulated by statute, a defendant does not waive his right to object to the jurisdic- tion, by including in his answer every defense upon which he relies to defeat the action, a federal court sitting in that state will not depart from that practice. Leonard v. Merchants' Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 885, 89 C. C. A. 575.

When, under the state code, the answer puts in issue every material allegation in the complaint, it is incumbent upon the plaintiff to prove at the trial all such allega- tions. Hodges v. Easton, (1882) 106 U. S. 408, 1 S. Ct. 307, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 169.

f. Plea in Abatement

In general.—Since the assimilation of the practice in the national courts to that in the state courts by the Conformity Act, in those states where the answer takes the place of all pleas at common law, and where it must contain a general or specific denial of each material allegation of the petition controverted by the defendant, the common law requirement of pleading matters in abatement of the action before taking issue on the merits has become ob- solete, and a denial in the answer of all the allegations of the petition puts each and all of them in issue, whether they be matters in abatement or in bar. Cole r. Langenbach, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 349, 56 C. C. A. 253; Yoeum r. Par- ker, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 770, 66 C. C. A. 80.

Exception to view that statute controls.—Where there is a manifest intention in a federal statute that jurisdictional defects may properly be raised by plea in abate- ment, the rule of the state codes that all pleas and defenses shall be embodied in the answer is not obligatory upon the federal courts when dealing with the subject of jurisdiction. Hill r. Walker, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 241, 92 C. C. A. 633.

And to the operation of this act of con- formity there is also an exception, and that is, where the defense is that the court has no jurisdiction of the defendant, that defense must be set up by a special plea in abatement. Kimball v. Detroit, etc., Short Line R. Co., (N. D. Ohio 1910) 189 Fed. 406.

g. Demurrers to Pleadings

Where under the state law a defect in a complaint, in that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, cannot be taken advantage of on motion or in any other way than by answer, which answer, however, may be a demurrer, this state law binds the United States courts. Chemung Canal Bank v. Lowery, (1876) 93 U. S. 72, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 408. See Kent v. Bay State Gas Co., (C. C. Del. 1899) 93 Fed. 887. See also Kester r. Western Union Tel. Co., (W. D. N. Y. 1901) 106 Fed. 928, as to a demurrer to an answer.

h. Bill of Particulars

This conformity provision has been applied in the case of a bill of particulars. Wetmore v. Goodwin Film, etc., Co., (D. C. N. J. 1915) 226 Fed. 352.

The practice in a state court as to bills of particulars will be followed in a federal court in that state, where such prac- tice will save time, labor and expense in the trial of the real controversy. Wet- more r. Goodwin Film, etc., Co., (D. C. N. J. 1915) 226 Fed. 352.

So it has been held that a federal court sitting in New Jersey has power under the statute in that state to permit, in the exercise of a sound discretion, a bill of particulars in an action of ejectment to be amended at the trial. Lamar r. Spalding, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 27, 83 C. C. A. 111.

i. Verification of Pleadings

A state statute as to the verification of pleadings regulates the pleading, in simi- lar cases in the federal courts. Ralls County r. Douglass, (1861) 105 U. S. 728, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 937; St. Louis, etc., R.
In this connection it has been held that cases tried by a referee in the federal courts in states where such practice exists cannot be reviewed in the Supreme Court. Boogher v. New York Life Ins. Co., (1880) 103 U. S. 90. 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 310.

So under a state law, authorizing a reference by consent in actions at law, which, by virtue of this section, is applicable in actions in the federal courts, or at least may be made so by consent of the parties, and which provides that in case of such reference the referee shall try all the issues whether of fact or law, and "report a finding and judgment thereon," which must stand as the finding of the court, and "may be excepted to and reviewed in like manner as if made by the court," the court has no power on exceptions filed to a referee's findings of fact to review the evidence, but can only do so on a motion for a new trial, as in case of a finding by the court or the verdict of a jury; the office of the exceptions provided for being merely to bring in question the conduct of the referee, the regularity of the proceedings, or the sufficiency of the findings under the order of reference or to meet the issues. U. S. v. Ramsey, (C. C. Idaho 1907) 158 Fed. 488.

Although the state practice in conducting a reference may be followed if stipulation be made, nevertheless the rules as to the entry of judgment and of hearing upon appeal or by writ of error will still be controlled by the United States statutes and the practice of the United States courts. Alder v. Edemborn, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 198 Fed. 926.

38. Removal of Cloud from and Quieting Title

The settled rule of the Supreme Court of the United States seems to be that, independently of a statute of the state wherein the land lies, a bill to remove a cloud upon the title of a complainant will not lie where he, the complainant, is not in actual possession of the premises, and that such a bill must show a legal and actual possession. American Asn. v. Williams, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 17, 93 C. C. A. 1.

But it has been frequently adjudged "that where the laws of a particular state give a remedy in equity, as, for instance, a bill by a party in or out of possession, to quiet title to lands, such remedy would be enforced in the federal courts, if it does not infringe upon the constitutional rights of the parties to a trial by jury." Smith Oyster Co. v. Darbee, etc., Co., (N. D. Cal. 1906) 149 Fed. 555. See also cases cited, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1128, under headline Cloud on title.

And the remedy given by a state statute to remove a cloud from title may be enforced in the federal courts when the parties are inhabitants of different states.

So where by a local statute a bill in equity will lie to remove a cloud independently of possession, the enlarged equitable right thus created may be enforced by an equity court of the United States where there exists the requisite diversity of citizenship or some other ground of federal jurisdiction. American Asso'n v. Williams, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 17, 93 C. C. A. 1.

The rule that a bill to quiet title cannot be maintained save by a party in possession may be dispensed with by a state statute, and where this is done an action in conformity with the state practice may be maintained in a federal court sitting in that state. Baum v. Longwell, (D. C. N. M. 1912) 200 Fed. 450; Warren v. Oregon, etc., Realty Co., (W. D. Wash. 1907) 156 Fed. 503; Kraus v. Compton, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 18, 88 C. C. A. 182; American Asso'n v. Williams, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 17, 93 C. C. A. 1. But see Gibson v. Cook, (W. D. Ark. 1903) 124 Fed. 986.

And where a statute provides that "an action may be brought by any person against another who claims an estate or interest in real property, adverse to him, for the purpose of determining such adverse claim," it has been held that such a remedy may be enforced in a federal court. Smith Oyster Co. v. Darbee, etc., Co., (N. D. Cal. 1906) 149 Fed. 555.

But although under the laws of a state a bill may be maintained in the Circuit Court of the United States by a person not in possession against another who is also out of possession, "still this does not make the complainant's rights any the less dependent upon title in him, nor does it put him in a position to have a cloud removed from a title which has no existence." Dick v. Foraker, (1894) 155 U. S. 404, 15 S. Ct. 324, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 201. In Holland v. Challen, (1884) 110 U. S. 15, 3 S. Ct. 495, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 52, it was said: "Undoubtedly, as a foundation for the relief sought, the plaintiff must show that he has a legal title to the premises;" and in Frost v. Spitley, (1897) 121 U. S. 552, 7 S. Ct. 1129, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1010: "The necessary conclusion is that Spitley, not having the legal title of the lots in question, cannot maintain his bill for the purpose of removing a cloud on the title." See also Guarantee Trust, etc., Co. v. Delta, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 5, 43 C. C. A. 396.

39. Restoration of Lost Records

A proceeding to restore records does not come within the general term of practice or pleading in the courts, and is not governed by this section. Turner v. Newman, (1872) 3 Blass. 307, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,262. 40. Review of Action

Revisor is governed by the law of the state where the suit is brought and prosecuted. Spears v. Sells, (S. D. Ohio 1909) 176 Fed. 797.

But where it was sought to revive a suit brought to enjoin the defendant from maintaining a dam, it was declared that the right to revive the suit was not governed by local state statutes, but that both the right and procedure seemed to be governed entirely by the federal equity rules and practice in the courts of the United States. Miller v. Wattler, (C. C. Ore. 1908) 165 Fed. 359.

See also cases cited, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1171, under sidehead Abatement and revisor.

41. Set-Off and Counterclaim

In matters of set-off the federal courts follow the laws of the state, provided the distinction between law and equity is not lost sight of. Arkwright Mills v. Aultman, etc., Machinery Co., (C. C. Mass. 1904) 128 Fed. 195.

The right to assert a counterclaim in actions at law is governed by the state law relating thereto. Californian Canneries Co. v. Pacific Sheet Metal Works, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 978, 91 C. C. A. 106.

But it has been held that statutes relating to set-off do not deprive courts of the United States of jurisdiction in equity even if, by providing a remedy at law, they would a state court. Sowles v. Flattsburg First Nat. Bank, (C. C. Vt. 1900) 100 Fed. 552.

42. Survival of Actions

"If the cause of action survives, the practice, pleadings, and forms and modes of proceeding in the courts of the state may be resorted to in the courts of the United States for the purpose of keeping the suit alive and bringing in the proper parties." Schreiber v. Sharpless, (1884) 110 U. S. 76, 3 S. Ct. 423, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

But where the cause of action is given by a federal statute, a federal court cannot have recourse to a state statute in order to determine whether the cause of action survives or not. Walsh v. New York, etc., R. Co., (C. C. Mass. 1890) 173 Fed. 494.

See also cases cited, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1171, under subhead Abatement and revivor.

43. Transcripts of Stenographer's Notes

Where by the act of a state relating to the appointment of official stenographers they become sworn officers of the court, and the act further provides that it shall be the duty of the official stenographer to make a typewritten transcript of his notes, and that such transcript "shall be filed in the proper office of the court, and shall thereafter become a record of the proceedings therein reported," and "shall be taken and held to be prima facie correct," it has been held a federal court sitting in that state will conform thereto. Cornette v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1912) 196 Fed. 59, 115 C. C. A. 81.

44. Trial of Issues

Whether all or a part of the issues in any action should be tried at one time is held by the state courts to be a question of justice and convenience, and in conformity to that rule a trial of a plea in bar will first be ordered so that the defendant will not be put to the costs, expense, and trouble of a trial on the merits until the determination of a trial issue. Norton v. Portsmouth, (C. C. N. H. 1897) 31 Fed. 326.

And in Rosenbach v. Dreyfuss, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 2 Fed. 23, it was held that a notice of fourteen days, required by state statute, for the trial of an issue of law, as a hearing upon a demurrer, should be followed in the federal courts. See Osborne v. Detroit, (E. D. Mich. 1886) 29 Fed. 385.

45. Venue

The granting or denial of a change of venue is a matter within the discretion of the court. Kennon v. Gilmour, (1859) 131 U. S. 22, 9 S. Ct. 696, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 110.

A state statute provides that a defendant, when sued in the wrong county, may on proper application have the cause transferred at costs of plaintiff to the county where defendant could rightfully have been sued. A defendant sued in the state court cannot, after removal of the cause into the federal court on its application, have the cause removed into another federal district. By electing to remove the cause into one federal court the defendant thereby deprived itself of whatever right it might have exercised in the state court of removal under the state statute. O'Donnell v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ia. 1892) 49 Fed. 690. See Lee County v. Rogers, (1868) 7 Wall. 175, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 162; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Atlanta, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ga. 1892) 49 Fed. 608; Scott v. Hoover, (S. D. Cal. 1900) 99 Fed. 247.

46. Verdicts

Form and effect of verdicts in actions at law are matters in which the federal courts are governed by the practice of the courts of the state in which they are held. Glenn v. Sumner, (1889) 132 U. S. 162, 10 S. Ct. 41, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 301. See also Fitzpatrick v. Flannagan, (1882) 106 U. S. 649, 1 S. Ct. 305, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 211; Mexican Nat. R. Co. v. Slater, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 593, 53 C. C. A. 239.

So where in an action under the federal Employers' Liability Act the general verdict and the special findings were taken pursuant to the state practice prescribed by certain sections of the Code permitting the trial judge to instruct the jury, if they render a general verdict, to find upon particular questions of fact to be stated in writing, and providing that "when a special finding of facts shall be inconsistent with the general verdict, the former shall control the latter, and the court shall give judgment accordingly," the court said: "Whether under the Conformity Act (R. S. sec. 914) the trial court was required to adhere to the state practice governing the effect of the general verdict and the special findings may not be free from doubt. . . . We find it unnecessary to decide the question of practice, and laying aside all technicalities will assume, in favor of plaintiff in error, that the verdict is to be interpreted according to the local rule; that is, by reading the special findings in the light of the issues and the evidence, but in the light also of the general verdict, so as to arrive at the true intent and meaning of the jury." Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (1916) 241 U. S. 497, 36 S. Ct. 883, 60 U. S. (L. ed.) 1125. But see Spokane, etc., R. Co. v. Campbell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 518, 133 C. C. A. 370, holding that federal courts will not be bound by the rules obtaining in local courts for interpreting verdicts.

But a federal court will not necessarily comply, in respect to the form of a verdict, with technical rules of procedure applicable in the local courts of a state. General Fireproofing Co. v. Wallace, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 650, 99 C. C. A. 204.

So where a company was charged by the verdict of the jury with the duty of responding in damages to the full amount reasonably necessary to be expended by plaintiff to repair and replace a defectively constructed building, it had contracted to erect, in precisely the same condition it would have been if that company had in all respects fully performed its contract, and the jury in its general verdict deducted from this sum the balance unpaid on the contract and at the general verdict in such amount, and thus made its general verdict conform to the special finding, and in so doing all parties were placed in the same position as though the contract had been fully carried out and performed by the defendant, it was held that the judgment was fair, just and right, and should be affirmed, and this notwithstanding an argument made as to the technical rules of procedure applicable in the local courts of the state. General Fireproofing Co. v. Wallace, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 650, 99 C. C. A. 204.

One good count.—A state statute providing that "whenever an entire verdict shall be given on several counts the same shall not be set aside or reversed on the ground of any defective count, if one or more of the counts in the declaration shall be sufficient to sustain the verdict," governs proceedings in cases tried in the federal courts within that state. Bond v. Duskin, (1884) 112 U. S. 604, 5 S. Ct. 296, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 535. See also Townsend v. Jenison, (1849) 7 How. 706, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 880.

Disposition of cause where verdict set aside.—So long as the practice in the United States courts in actions at law must conform to the practice in the state court of the state where the trial is had so far as may be, the disposition of cases where a verdict is set aside by the trial court for the reason it is not supported by the evidence must be made in accordance with the rules declared by the highest court of such state. In New York the practice and rule is well settled. Johnson v. Cadillac Motor Car Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1912) 197 Fed. 485.

47. Wills

A statutory proceeding to contest the validity of a will, which provides for the issue to be tried by a jury if either party demand such a trial, is a suit at law, and falls under this statute. Sawyer v. White, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 223, 58 C. C. A. 587.

Wherever, by the law obtaining in a state, customary or statutory, suits in equity may be maintained in the courts of such state to set aside the probate of a will, similar suits may be maintained by original process in a federal court, where the requisite diverse citizenship and other necessary conditions exist. Carrus v. O'Calligan, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 657, 60 C. C. A. 547.

48. Witnesses

The competency of persons as witnesses in the federal courts in any civil action, suit, or proceeding "shall be determined by the laws of the State or Territory in which the court is held." Act of June 29, 1906, ch. 3606, 34 Stat. L. 618, amending R. S. sec. 858, and set forth and annotated in title WITNESSES.

Exemption from service of process.—The privilege of suitors and witnesses from service of process in a suit in a federal court is extended upon any suit at law of a state, and, as it is a question of general jurisprudence, a definition of the common-law privilege, it is the duty of this court to decide the question by the exercise of its independent judgment. Roscheniatski v. Hale, (D. C. Neb. 1913) 201 Fed. 1017.

Indictment: names of witnesses on indictment.—State statutes which require that the names of witnesses shall be indorsed upon an indictment are not controlling in the United States court. U. S. v. Aviles, (S. D. Cal. 1915) 222 Fed. 474.

Contradiction by testimony on former trial.—Where by the practice in a state the testimony of a witness at a former trial may, without his attention having been called to the statements then made, be introduced for the purpose of contradicting his testimony, a federal court sitting in that state will be controlled thereby. American Agricultural Chemical Co. v. Hogan, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 416, 130 C. C. A. 52.

49. Writs and Process

a. Form and Contents be commenced by the issue of a summons in the name of the plaintiff’s attorney.

And a substantial compliance with the requirements of a state statute as to the form of summons shall be upheld when, to set it aside, would tend to defeat the ends of justice. (Schwaebacher v. Reilly, (1873) 2 Dill. 127, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,601, as to service by a martial or deputy.)

Where there is no provision of the federal statute governing the service of notice or subpoena, the statute of the state on the subject where the federal court is held will govern, even in an equity action, if reasonable and adapted to the purpose; and where the federal court has applied the state statute, finding it sufficient to confer jurisdiction, the state courts will not reach a contrary conclusion. (Hollister v. Vermont Bldg. Co., (1909) 141 Ia. 160, 110 N. W. 626).

When the fact of the presence of the defendant is not in dispute, and only the mode or manner of the service is in question, a service in accordance with the requirements of the state statutes is a good service. (Nickerson v. Warren City Tank., et al., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 843).

And the adoption of a general rule regulating the service of process, in substantial conformity with the state statute then in force, was held to be within the authority of the District Court of the United States, and that court had the right to maintain the rule notwithstanding changes in the state law as to the time within which the writ is returnable. (Shepard v. Adams, (1898) 168 U. S. 615, 18 S. Ct. 214, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 602. See also Ewing v. Burnham, (C. C. Vt. 1898) 74 Fed. 384).

A rule of court, adopted while the law of the state was in a condition of uncertainty, for the purpose of securing uniformity in the service of process, which required the marshal in all civil actions to deliver a copy of the summons to each one of the defendants, was held to be in force, as it was not in violation of this section, and includes the state mode of procedure. (Lowry v. Story, (W. D. N. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 760).

Service of summons.—The validity of the service of a summons is not determined by a federal court on general principles of jurisprudence, in the absence of any statute or established judicial rule in the state to render the federal conformity statutes applicable. (Kaufman v. Garner, (W. D. Ky. 1900) 173 Fed. 550).

It has also been held that this section applies only to matters of practice and procedure, and does not appertain to jurisdiction, or the mode of obtaining jurisdiction of the person in actions brought in the federal courts. (Wells v. Clark, (C. C. Mont. 1905) 136 Fed. 482).

So it has been said that the mode of serving process comes under the category of practice, and the state court custom may therefore be followed. (Am. v. Watertown, (1989) 120 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 948. But there is a wide difference between the method of serving a summons and the effect of such service when made. The first relates to the “form, manner, and order of conducting and carrying on suits." The effect of the formal act called "service" is not a question of practice. It turns on the courts of jurisdiction; and jurisdiction in turn must be tested by substantive law. Sewchulas r. Lehigh Valley Coal Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 422, 147 C. C. A. 358.

In this connection it has also been decided that in the federal court it is proper practice to try the question of the sufficiency of the service of a summons by motion to quash the return, supported by affidavit, and in the absence of statute a federal court is not required by the Act of Conformity to follow the state practice of trying this question. Higham r. Iowa State Travelers' Ass'n, (W. D. Mo. 1911) 183 Fed. 845.

Again, it is said that the question of the insufficiency of the service of summons involves no substantial right, and may be raised by a motion to quash, supported by affidavit. Wall v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 95 Fed. 308, 37 C. C. A. 129.

But see Rubel r. Beaver Falls Cutlery Co., (N. D. Ill. 1884) 22 Fed. 282, in which case the court said that the question whether the person on whom the summons was served as agent of defendant was or was not at the date of the service an agent of defendant on whom service of process against defendant could lawfully be made was a question of fact that could only be raised by plea in abatement, unless the grounds of the motion to quash appeared on the face of the record.

Application of doctrine.—So, as Congress has not laid down any rule with regard to the mode of serving process upon corporations, the state law and practice must be followed. Amy v. Watertown, (1889) 130 U. S. 301, 9 S. Ct. 530, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 946; Lemon v. Imperial Window Glass Co., (N. D. W. Va. 1912) 199 Fed. 927.

And where the state statute authorizes the plaintiff or the plaintiff's attorney to issue not a summons, but a notice, as a method of instituting a litigation, an action may be instituted by such a notice in a federal court in accordance with the state practice. Lea r. Merriman, (W. D. Va. 1904) 132 Fed. 510.

And where a summons is directed to the defendant as is permitted in New York state it need not be served by a United States marshal, but may, except in special instances, be served by any person other than a party to the action. U. S. v. Mitchell, (E. D. N. Y. 1915) 223 Fed. 805.

Again, where there is a code provision that the civil actions are commenced by the filing of a complaint, on which the clerk must indorse the day, month and year that it is filed, and that at any time within a year thereafter the plaintiff may have a summons issued, if the summons is issued within a year as specified in the act, the fact that it is not delivered to the marshal for service until after the expiration of the year is not material. Perris Irrigation Dist. v. Escher, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 562, 132 C. C. A. 74; Perris Irrigation Dist. v. Escher, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 566, 132 C. C. A. 78.

c. Service by Publication

d. On Foreign Corporations

In general.—It is the established rule that a mode of service prescribed by state laws for obtaining jurisdiction over foreign corporations, which is by the local courts recognized as valid, will obtain recognition in the federal courts, subject to the fundamental principle that no one shall be condemned unheard, or compelled to answer a complaint in a foreign jurisdiction except upon such notice of the proceeding as is 'fair and reasonable, and the federal courts must judge for themselves whether the mode of service prescribed by the laws of a particular state satisfies these requirements. McCord Lumber Co. r. Doyle, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1889) 97 Fed. 22, 38 C. C. A. 34. See also to same effect Toland r. Sprague, (1838) 12 Pet. 306, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1093; New York Life Ins. Co. v. Bangs, (1880) 103 U. S. 425, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 580; Pomroy r. New York, etc., R. Co., (1857) 4 Blatchf. 120, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,261; Main r. Chicago Second Nat. Bank, (1874) 5 Bisa. 26, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 8,976; Dalimeyer r. Farmers', etc., Fire Ins. Co., (1877) 4 Cent. L. J. 464, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,546; Leonard r. Lycoming Fire Ins. Co., (1877) 10 Chicago Leg. N. 22, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,258; Bentif r. London, etc., Finance Corp., (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 44 Fed. 667; Atlas Glass Go. r. Ball Bros. Glass Mfg. Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1899) 87 Fed. 418.

Courts of the United States determine for themselves the fact of the presence of the defendant within the jurisdiction, and in determining it they may or may not follow the rulings of the state courts. The statutes of the states creating a constructive presence within the jurisdiction for process service, such as acts providing for service upon the registered agents of foreign corporations, are held to include service of process by the courts of the United States. Nickerson r. Warren City Tank, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1915) 223 Fed. 843.
Therefore, while service of subpoena from a federal court in equity upon a nonresident defendant is not controlled by state statutes, yet, where there is no applicable provision of a federal statute, the procedure of the state statute, if deemed proper and reasonable, will be followed, as, for instance, when the state statute declares what persons shall represent the corporation in receiving service of process. Toledo Computing Scale Co. v. Computing Scale Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 919, 74 C. C. A. 89.

So the mode of service prescribed by the laws of a state for obtaining jurisdiction over foreign corporations, which is by the local courts recognized as valid, obtains similar recognition in the federal courts, in so far as the same affects property of foreign corporations within such state. Brown-Ketcham Iron Works v. George B. Switt Co. (1915) 53 Ind. App. 630, 100 N. E. 584, 880.

And where the officers of a domestic corporation, residents of another state, absent themselves from the state and provided no place of business therein, and the federal court in a suit to dissolve the corporation and appoint a receiver, in the absence of a federal statute, adopted the state statute as to service of notice on corporations and determined that it had acquired jurisdiction thereby, the judgment will be given effect in the state court and the receiver permitted to sue therein. Hollister v. Vermont Bldg. Co., (1909) 141 La. 160, 119 N. W. 626.

On the other hand, service of summons on the officer of a nonresident corporation may be set aside in a federal court though good under a state statute. Ostrander v. Deerfield Lumber Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1915) 208 Fed. 540.

The question also whether a federal court acquired jurisdiction over a foreign corporation defendant by the service made is one of general jurisprudence, to be determined by the federal law, and which cannot be affected by a state statute. New Haven Pulp, etc., Co. v. Downingtown Mfg. Co., (C. C. Conn. 1904) 130 Fed. 605.

So the question whether a summons can be served within a district, not whether it has been properly served, is not determined by the law of the state, but the state law of the United States. Colosimo v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1914) 210 Fed. 550.

Thus service upon the president of a foreign corporation temporarily in a state, but a citizen and resident of another state, cannot give jurisdiction over the corporation, organized and existing under the laws of such other state and carrying on business in that state only, having no place of business, officer, agent, or property in the state in which such service was made. This section applies only to cases of which the court has jurisdiction according to the Constitution and laws of the United States. Goldey v. Morning News, (1895) 156 U. S. 518, 15 S. Ct. 559, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 617.

And where an Ohio railroad corporation was sued in Georgia on a transitory cause of action arising in Kentucky, defendant having no tracks in Georgia and doing no business in that state, except that it had a commercial agent, whose only duty was to solicit freight and passenger business, without authority to issue bills of lading, sell passenger tickets, or make contracts, it was held that defendant was not doing business in Georgia so that service on such commercial agent would confer jurisdiction over the corporation so far as the federal courts were concerned, though the state courts had decided the contrary. West v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1900) 170 Fed. 349.

Cases removed.— If actions are started in a state court and removed into a federal court, the sufficiency of the service under the state law is still tested by the necessities required to give jurisdiction in an action instituted at the outset in the federal court. Goldey v. Morning News, (1895) 156 U. S. 518, 15 S. Ct. 559, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 517. But when an action is started in the United States court, the statutes creating jurisdiction and relating to the service of papers now embodied in Judicial Code, §§ 24 to 27 and 40 to 48, can in no way be superseded by the laws of the state. The provisions of R. S. sec. 914 do not enlarge the specific enforcements of the sections mentioned. On the contrary, they are merely applicable, so far as they may be used, to carry out those sections. Vitkus v. Clyde Steamship Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 232 Fed. 288.

And where a case is removed from a state court, and the defendant, a foreign corporation, appears specially, for the purpose of removal only, and objects to the sufficiency of the service, the federal court must determine such objection for itself, and will not necessarily be controlled by the state law. West v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Ga. 1909) 170 Fed. 349.

And in another case it is held that where a case against a foreign corporation has been removed from a state to a federal court, the latter court must determine for itself the validity of a service of process, whatever may be the law of a state, or its interpretation by the courts of a state, under which a valid service of process may be claimed. Cady v. Associated Colonies, (N. D. Cal. 1902) 119 Fed. 420. See also cases cited in notes to Judicial Code, §§ 38, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 460, under 5. Service on Foreign Corporations.

e. Return of Service

As to the effect of the return of an officer in executing mesne or final process, the settled law of the state, that the return of a sheriff showing that he has served the writ in the manner prescribed by the statute, for the purpose of giving the court jurisdiction, is conclusive against collateral attack, will be followed. Joseph v. New Albany Steam Forge, etc., Co., (C. C. Ind. 1892) 53 Fed. 180.

In Wall v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 95 Fed. 398, 37 C. C. A. 129, the court said: "Upon examination of a great many American cases, we believe the general rule in this country, with some dissenting cases like those in Illinois, to be this, that the sheriff's return stands in the first instance as the affidavit of the sheriff, but is subject to be disputed by affidavits on the part of the defendant showing to the satisfaction of the court, upon motion to quash, that the return is not true in point of fact, or, as in the case at bar, is insufficient in law." Citing Stout v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., (1881) 3 Mc Cary (U. S.) 1, 8 Fed. 794; Rowe v. Table Mountain Water Co., (1858) 10 Cal. 442; Wemple v. Clark, (1907) 6 Conn. 334; Bond v. Wilson, (1871) 8 Kan. 228, 12 Am. Rep. 466; Crosby v. Farmer, (1888) 39 Minn. 305, 40 N. W. 71; Walker v. Lutz, (1883) 14 Neb. 274, 16 N. W. 352; Wendell v. Mugridge, (1848) 19 N. H. 109; Van Rensselaer v. Chadwick, (1852) 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 297; Wallis v. Lott, (1857) 15 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 567; Carr v. Commercial Bank, (1862) 16 Wis. 50.

Return of state officer not conclusive.—Even though it is provided by state law that the sheriff's return in the state court concludes the parties, a federal court will not be controlled thereby in a case removed from the state to the federal court. Mechanical Appliance Co. v. Castleman, (1910) 215 U. S. 437, 30 S. Ct. 125, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 272.

Presumptions in aid of defective service. — A question as to whether presumptions will be made in aid of a defective return of substituted service is a question of general law, with reference to which decisions of the highest state courts are not conclusive on the federal courts. King v. Davis, (W. D. Va. 1903) 137 Fed. 198.

Amendment of return.—Whether a return of substituted service of process in federal courts can be amended is a question of the power of the court, with reference to which it is not bound by state decisions. King v. Davis, (W. D. Va. 1903) 137 Fed. 198.

Return day.—This section does not necessitate altering a rule of a federal Circuit Court as to the return day for process, adopted under the authority of R. S. sec. 918, infra, p. 77, in conformity with the state practice then existing, so as to conform to a change in such practice made by subsequent state legislation. Boston etc., R. Co. v. Crewe, (1905) 210 U. S. 155, 28 S. Ct. 657, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002; Kinney v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1910) 182 Fed. 1005, affirmed (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 477, 108 C. C. A. 455.

f. Indorsements

Indorsements upon the copy of summons in actions for penalties brought in the name of "The United States" shall correspond with the requirements of state statutes in like cases brought by the state in the name of "The People," etc. U. S. v. Rose, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 14 Fed. 681. See also Miller v. Gages, (1848) 4 McLean 438, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,571; U. S. v. O'Brien, (C. C. Mass. 1903) 120 Fed. 446, as to extension of time for entering a writ.

Sec. 915. [Attachments.] In common-law causes in the circuit and district courts the plaintiff shall be entitled to similar remedies, by attachment or other process, against the property of the defendant, which are now provided by the laws of the State in which such court is held for the courts thereof; and such circuit or district courts may, from time to time, by general rules, adopt such State laws as may be in force in the States where they are held in relation to attachments and other process: Provided, That similar preliminary affidavits or proofs, and similar security, as required by such State laws, shall be first furnished by the party seeking such attachment or other remedy. [R. S.]

Remedies on judgments, by execution or otherwise, see R. S. sec. 916, infra, p. 70.

"Circuit" courts, mentioned in the text section, were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

I. Operation in General

Purpose and effect of statute.—It was not the purpose of the provisions of this section and of R. S. sec. 933 (title ATTACHMENT, vol. 1, p. 486) in common-law causes, to give to the nonresident creditor any unfair advantage over the resident creditor.

Construction.—It is an elementary principle that statutes giving the ancillary right of attachment should be strictly construed, they should be confined to those causes of action which are clearly within the language of the statute. Dixon v. Corinne Runkel Stock Co., (E. D. N. C. 1914) 214 Fed. 418, wherein it was held that in a suit for the infringement of a copyright, the complainant is not entitled to an attachment, such suit not being a “common law cause” within the meaning of this section.

In using the term “common-law causes” in this section it must be assumed that Congress had in mind the distinction between a right of action given by the common law from one dependent upon a statute and intended that such distinction should be observed. It is not allowable to disregard it or by interpretation to explain it away. Dixon v. Corinne Runkel Stock Co., (E. D. N. C. 1914) 214 Fed. 418; Brown v. Fletcher, (S. D. N. Y. 1877) 18 Fed. 223.

Discretion of federal courts.—By this section and R. S. secs. 914, 916, and 918, it is sufficiently made to appear “that while it was the purpose of Congress to bring about a general uniformity in federal and state proceedings in civil cases, and to confer upon suitors in courts of the United States the advantage of remedies provided by state legislation, yet that it was also the intention to reach such uniformity often largely through the discretion of the federal courts exercised in the form of general rules adopted from time to time, and so regulating their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice and the prevention of delays in proceedings.” Shepard v. Adams, (1898) 105 U. S. 618, 21 S. Ct. 214, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 602.

Scope against national banks.—R. S. sec. 5242 (title NATIONAL BANKS) provides that no attachment shall be issued against a national banking association before final judgment. “It was suggested in argument that the prohibition extended only to the use of the remedy by state courts, and that the remedy itself still remained to be resorted to in the courts of the United States. But we do not so understand the law. In our opinion the effect of the Act of Congress is to deny the state remedy altogether so far as suits against national banks are concerned, and in this way it operates as well on the courts of the United States as on those of the states.” Pacific Nat. Bank v. Mixter, (1888) 124 U. S. 721, 8 S. Ct. 118, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 567. See also Hower v. Weiss Malting, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 356, 14 U. S. App. 210, 5 C. C. A. 129.

Arrest.—This section does not appear to apply to the case of an arrest. Its operation is confined to the remedy by attachment or other process—probably like process—only against the property of the defendant and not against his person. U. S. v. Griswold, (1877) 5 Savy. 25, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,266.

II. JURISDICTION

The right of a federal court to issue an attachment under this section is not a matter going to the jurisdiction of the court, but merely a question as to the right of the plaintiff to the extraordinary relief, and if the federal court err in granting such relief it would be simply a matter of error, and not one of jurisdiction. Schunk v. Moline, etc., Co., (1893) 147 U. S. 500, 13 S. Ct. 416, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 255.

Personal service or appearance.—Personal service upon the defendant, or his personal appearance in the action, is a prerequisite to the issuance of an order of attachment against his property. Big Vein Coal Co. v. Read, (1913) 226 U. S. 31, 32 S. Ct. 30, 56 L. ed. 1053. In cases where the defendant cannot be sued and jurisdiction acquired over him personally, the auxiliary remedy by attachment cannot be had, as attachment is not a means of acquiring jurisdiction. Ex p. Des Moines, etc., Co., 103 U. S. 786, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 610.

Foreign attachment.—"This Act does not confer upon the United States courts jurisdiction to entertain suits by the process of foreign attachment, and... the statute and any rule adopting the state laws do not give a Circuit or District Court power thus to acquire jurisdiction over a person not a resident of the district nor served with process therein." Central Trust Co. v. Chattanoogas, etc., R. Co., (C. C. S. D. (1895) 68 Fed. 685. See also Chittenden v. Darden, (1875) 2 Woods 437, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,688; Nazro v. Cragin, (1873) 3 Dill. 474, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 10,062; Anderson v. Shaffer, (S. D. Ohio 1881) 10 Fed. 266; Boston Electric Co. v. Electric Lighting Gas Co., (C. C. Mass. 1865) 23 Fed. 835; Harland v. United Lines Tel. Co., (C. C. Conn. 1889) 40 Fed. 308.

It is to be noted, in respect to this enactment, in the first place, that although its terms cover the case of a foreign attachment, properly so called, being process in rem against the goods and lands of a nonresident or absenting debtor, yet no such process can, in fact, issue unless the defendant can be personally served with summons in the district in which the suit is brought; for by section 739 R. S. [now Judicial Code, § 51, supra], this title, vol. 5, p. 4861, no suit can be brought against an inhabitant of the United States residing in any district than that of which he is an inhabitant or in which he is found at the time of serving the writ, except in the case of absent defendants under section 738 [now Judicial Code, § 57, supra], this title, vol. 5, p. 529, when suit is brought to enforce a lien upon personal property and the cases specified in sections 740, 741, and 742 [now Judicial Code, §§ 52, 54, 65, respectively, supra], this title, vol. 5, pp. 618, 633, 624], when defendants reside in separate districts, though in the same state, or the suit is of a local nature, and the subject, or the subject and the defendant, are in different districts contained in the same state. The attachment proceeding, then, covered by section 739 of the United States has altogether a different character from that proceeding in rem in common use in the states, the object of which is either to enforce the appearance of the absent defendant or to subject his property to the payment of his debts. In the federal courts there must be jurisdiction over the person of the defendant and of a subject-matter independent of the proceeding in attachment, and without which no attachment can be effectual." Erstein v. Rothschild, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 22 Fed. 61. See also Lovejoy v. Hartford F. Ins. Co., (N. D. Ill. 1882) 11 Fed. 63; cases cited in notes to Judicial Code, § 24, supra, this title, vol. 4, at p. 998, under sidehead The Conformity Acts. It is conceded that the person against whom this suit was brought in the Circuit Court of the United States for the district of Iowa was an inhabitant of the state of Massachusetts, and was not found in or served with process in Iowa. Clearly, then, he was not subject in the Circuit Court of the district of Iowa, and unless he could be sued no attachment could issue for that court against his property. Ex p. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., (1880) 103 U. S. 794, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 610. See also Toland v. Sprague, (1838) 12 Pet. 300, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1093.

But in Guillou v. Fontain, (1875) 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,861, the court said that the federal courts are invested with undoubted authority to proceed against nonresident persons by attachment of their property, as may be done by the laws of the state.

Suits removed from state courts.—In actions commenced in federal courts, this section is intended only to apply to the ancillary warrant of attachment when issued and levied upon the property of a nonresident defendant after he had been properly served with process in personam, or had made a general appearance and pleaded to the merits of the action. This rule does not apply to attachment suits commenced in the state courts and removed to the federal courts. Lackett v. Rumbaugh, (W. D. N. C. 1891) 45 Fed. 23. See also Crocker Nat. Bank v. Payer-stecher, (C. C. Mass. 1890) 44 Fed. 705, and cases cited in notes to Judicial Code, § 28, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 55.

Motion to quash.—A nonresident defendant over whom personal jurisdiction has not been obtained may appear specially in a suit in a federal court for the sole purpose of moving to quash the service of writs of attachment and garnishment upon its property in the district, on the ground that such property was not subject to attachment or garnishment. Davis v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (1910) 217 U. S. 157, 30 S. Ct. 463, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 708, 27 L. R. A. N. S. 285, 16 Ann. Cas. 907. In determining when and how the benefit of the remedy is lost, is to be looked for in the state law. Russia Cement Co. v. Le Page Co., (1899) 174 Mass. 349, 55 N. E. 70.

Successive attachments in federal and state courts.—This statute is ample to authorize and sanction the practice of permitting a constructive levy by attaching creditors under state process upon the property in possession of the marshal and their intervention in proceedings in the federal courts for the same district where, as between state courts of concurrent jurisdiction, a similar method of acquiring and adjusting conflicting rights is prescribed. Gumbel v. Pitkin, (1888) 124 U. S. 131, 8 S. Ct. 379, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 374. See also Bates v. Days, (W. D. Mo. 1883) 17 Fed. 167, (W. D. Mo. 1882) 11 Fed. 529. In matters of attachment the federal and state courts are courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, administering the same laws of the state. When the property is already in the custody of the law by virtue of a prior levy of a writ of attachment issued from a state court, to make a valid levy of a writ of attachment issued by a federal court sitting in that state, actual seizure is not necessary. Under such circumstances the property may be constructively seized by the marshal when the law of the state provides for successive levies as well as for the method of settling all priorities of the attachments of the several plaintiffs. Brooks v. Fry, (W. D. Ark. 1891) 45 Fed. 778.

Effect of matters arising under other statutes.—"Wherever attachments in the state courts . . . are affected after issuance by matters arising under other laws of the state, the Circuit Courts would be bound to give the same effect to such matters as would be given them in the courts of the state in similar cases, and therefore where an attachment would be stayed or dissolved by a subsequent cession under the insolvent laws prior to final judgment in the state courts, the same effect would necessarily follow in the Circuit Courts of the United States." Shwartz v. H. B. Clafin Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 60 Fed. 676, 13 U. S. App. 707, 9 C. C. A. 204. See also Mather v. Nesbit, (C. C. Minn. 1892) 13 Fed. 872; Neufeld v. Neufeld, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 27 Fed. 560.

Questions of priority.—The provisions of a state attachment law, providing a mode whereby questions of priority may be determined, are an important part of the state law upon the subject of attachment, and are binding in the federal courts. Bates v. Days, (W. D. Mo. 1883) 17 Fed. 167. See also Bankers', etc., Tel. Co. v. Chicago Carpet Co., (N. D. Ill. 1886) 28 Fed. 398.

Rights of other creditors.—Under a state statute regulating the process of

III. ADOPTION OF STATE LAWS
Presumption of adoption of state statutes.—The federal courts are not governed by any separate attachment law, but are required to administer the remedy in attachment provided in the laws of the state in which the courts are held. Perez v. Fernandez, (1906) 292 U. S. 80, 28 S. Ct. 561, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 942.

The effect of this section is to make the state statutes in that regard laws of the United States. Files v. Davis, (E. D. Ark. 1909) 118 Fed. 465; Loewe v. Union Sav. Bank, (D. C. Conn. 1915) 228 Fed. 294. "When parties seek attachments, garnishments, executions, provisional remedies of various kinds, in the courts of the United States, it is not the habit of counsel or of the court to search the statutes of a quarter of a century ago and to conform the proceedings of the federal courts to those then in force in the courts of the several states, but they adopt and use the remedies prescribed by their state statutes in force at the time they act. A general and uniform practice becomes a general and established rule of the court, and in the absence of convincing evidence to the contrary the presumption in the appellate court is that the remedial statutes in force in the states at the time when proceedings under them were taken in the federal courts had been adopted by those courts, either by written rule or by general practice." Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 490, 43 C. C. A. 658. See also Fullerton v. U. S. Bank, (1828) 1 Pet. 604, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 280; Russell v. Ashley, (W. D. N. C. 1847) 1 How. 54; 18 Fed. Cas. No. 12,150; Lowry v. Story, (W. D. N. C. 1887) 31 Fed. 769; Bank v. Farwell, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 570, 12 U. S. App. 409, 6 C. C. A. 24.

The method to be followed in making an attachment, in prosecuting it to effect, and in the exercise of this jurisdiction necessarily draws to itself everything properly incidental, even though it may bring into the court for the adjudication of their rights parties not otherwise subject to its jurisdiction. Gumbel v. Pitkin, (1888) 124 U. S. 131, 8 S. Ct. 379, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 374. See also Bates v. Days, (W. D. Mo. 1883) 17 Fed. 167, (W. D. Mo. 1882) 11 Fed. 529. In matters of attachment the federal and state courts are courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, administering the same laws of the state. When the property is already in the custody of the law by virtue of a prior levy of a writ of attachment issued from a state court, to make a valid levy of a writ of attachment issued by a federal court sitting in that state, actual seizure is not necessary. Under such circumstances the property may be constructively seized by the marshal when the law of the state provides for successive levies as well as for the method of settling all priorities of the attachments of the several plaintiffs. Brooks v. Fry, (W. D. Ark. 1891) 45 Fed. 778.

Effect of matters arising under other statutes.—"Wherever attachments in the state courts . . . are affected after issuance by matters arising under other laws of the state, the Circuit Courts would be bound to give the same effect to such matters as would be given them in the courts of the state in similar cases, and therefore where an attachment would be stayed or dissolved by a subsequent cession under the insolvent laws prior to final judgment in the state courts, the same effect would necessarily follow in the Circuit Courts of the United States." Shwartz v. H. B. Clafin Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 60 Fed. 676, 13 U. S. App. 707, 9 C. C. A. 204. See also Mather v. Nesbit, (C. C. Minn. 1892) 13 Fed. 872; Neufeld v. Neufeld, (S. D. Cal. 1899) 27 Fed. 560.

Questions of priority.—The provisions of a state attachment law, providing a mode whereby questions of priority may be determined, are an important part of the state law upon the subject of attachment, and are binding in the federal courts. Bates v. Days, (W. D. Mo. 1883) 17 Fed. 167. See also Bankers', etc., Tel. Co. v. Chicago Carpet Co., (N. D. Ill. 1886) 28 Fed. 398.

Rights of other creditors.—Under a state statute regulating the process of attachment, providing that after the institution of the suit and before final judgment any creditor of the defendant might file a bill to prove his claim, with the right to participate in the distribution of the proceeds of the attached property, it was held that in an action rightly instituted in the Circuit Court, in which the property of the common debtor was attached, all other creditors might appear in pursuance of the state law and share in the distribution, although citizens of the same state with the defendant, and although the amounts due them were less than the jurisdictional amounts. Krippendorf v. Hyde, (1884) 110 U. S. 278, 4 S. Ct. 27, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 145. See Rice v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 71 Fed. 151, 36 U. S. App. 266, 18 C. C. A. 15.

Where warrant of attachment may run.-A warrant of attachment issued from a federal court may run against property of the defendant in any court of the state. Tredwell v. Seymour, (E. D. N. Y. 1890) 41 Fed. 579.

Hearing motion in vacation.—As the federal courts do not derive their jurisdiction, nor its judges their powers, from the state legislation, a state statute which authorizes a judge to hear in vacation a motion to discharge attached property has no application, and can have none, to the federal court or its judges. Claffin v. Steinberg, (1871) 2 Dill. 324, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,777.

Rules adopting state laws need not be in writing.—This section does not require that the general rules adopting the state laws relating to remedies by attachment, passed subsequently to that Act, shall be in writing. Citizens' Bank v. Farwell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 570, 12 U. S. App. 409, 6 C. C. A. 24. See also U. S. v. Stevenson, (1889) 1 Abb. 405, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,395.

IV. DECISIONS OF STATE COURTS

In general.—Ordinarily the decisions of the highest state court as to the construction and effect of the attachment laws are in general binding upon the federal courts. In this connection, in the early case of Beach v. Viles, (1829) 2 Pet. 675, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 559, the court stated that the construction of such a statute by the state courts is entitled to great respect, and ought, in conformity to the uniform practice of this court, to govern its decisions. And see in general notes to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, at pp. 1217-1219.

And that this is likewise as to the question of the measure of damages in an action on such a bond, see L. Bucki, etc., Lumber Co. v. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 393, 48 C. C. A. 436, affirmed (1903) 189 U. S. 136, 23 S. Ct. 582, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 744.

Intervention.—Also it has been held that the federal courts should follow the state decisions as to the right of intervention in attachment proceedings. Rice v. Adler-Goldman Commission Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 71 Fed. 151, 36 U. S. App. 266, 18 C. C. A. 15.

Garnishment proceedings.—In case of garnishment proceedings it has been held that the federal court should follow a decision of the highest court of the state as to the applicability of a statute with reference to allowance to a garnishee. Tefft v. Stern, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 735, 43 U. S. App. 442, 21 C. C. A. 73, reaffirming (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 201, 43 U. S. App. 145, 21 C. C. A. 187. In this case it was held that the state court decision would be followed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, although it necessitated the reversal of an order of the federal Circuit Court rendered before the state court decision and while the question was an open one; on which point see, in general, cases cited in notes to R. S. sec. 721, supra, this title, vol. 5, at p. 1142.

And it has been held specifically that the federal courts are bound by the decisions of the state courts upon statutory questions as to the effect of an order directing a garnishee to pay a judgment creditor. Atlantic, etc., R. Co. v. Hopkins, (1876) 94 U. S. 11, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 48. The sufficiency of notice served upon a garnishee is to be determined by the reference to the state statute. Logan v. Goodwin,
V. ATTACHMENTS IN EQUITY

The fact that attachments in common-law suits are provided for by this section does not warrant the conclusion that there can be no attachment against property in a suit in equity in a federal court. Steam Stone Cutter Co. v. Jones, (C. C. Vt. 1882) 13 Fed. 507. See also Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Sears, (C. C. Vt. 1881) 9 Fed. 8.

In Bucyrus Co. v. McArthur, (M. D. Tenn. 1914) 219 Fed. 266, the court said: "Ancillary attachment of the defendant's property is a purely statutory remedy, in derogation of the common law. It is entirely unknown to the immemorial practice and usage of courts of equity, either in England or in the United States, and is essentially a legal remedy, which, in the absence of statutory authority, is not available in equity. There is, however, no statutory authority for the issuance of such an attachment in an equity cause in a federal court. Section 915 of the Revised Statutes, adopting in the federal courts the laws of the several states in relation to attachments against the property of defendants, is specifically limited to 'common-law causes;' and section 914 of the Revised Statutes, providing that the practice and procedure in federal courts shall conform to those of the state courts, specifically excludes 'equity causes.' Neither has the Supreme Court of the United States, in promulgating the Rules of Equity Practice in the District Courts, under the authority vested in it by section 917 of the Revised Statutes, provided for such ancillary writs of attachments. Nor is provision made therefor by any rule of this court; although it may well be that this could be done in accordance with the 79th Rule of Equity Practice (198 Fed. xii, 115 C. C. A. xii), and under the various statutory provisions cited in Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Sears, (C. C. Vt. 1881) 9 Fed. 8, and Steam Stone-Cutter Co. v. Jones, (C. C. Vt. 1882) 13 Fed. 507." This section does not embrace remedies in equity by an independent suit which may have been given by the statutes of a state, but is limited by the phrase "in like causes" to remedies provided in actions at law wherein judgments were recovered. Hudson v. Wood, (N. D. Ky. 1903) 119 Fed. 764.

VI. UNDERTAKING

In general.—A plaintiff seeking an attachment in a federal court against property in the state is required to furnish security in the same manner as to amount and the qualification and residence of the sureties that he would have to furnish if he were proceeding in the state court. Singer Mfg. Co. v. Mason, (1879) 5 Dell. (U. S.) 488, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,902. See also Feltis v. Cockrem, (1879) 101 U. S. 301, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 954.

Action on bond.—An action on the attachment bond may be maintained in a federal court upon the ground that jurisdiction in these subordinate and ancillary proceedings rests upon the jurisdiction acquired in the original action. Files v. Davis, (E. D. Ark. 1902) 118 Fed. 465.

Counsel fees as element of damages covered by indemnity bond.—In an action on a statutory bond given by the plaintiff in a delinquent suit unsuccessfully prosecuted in a federal court reasonable counsel fees incurred by the defendant in defending the suit are not recoverable as an element of the damages covered by the bond. National Surety Co. v. Fletcher, (1914) 186 Ala. 605, 65 So. 150, Ann. Cas. 1916D 872, wherein the court said: "It is a firmly established rule of the federal courts, in the absence of any special statute to the contrary, that a successful defendant cannot recover such counsel fees, even where the plaintiff has wrongfully invoked special process and given a bond of indemnity to the defendant. . . . The argument for the appellee is that this general rule does not apply where the damifying action, though brought in the federal court, is prosecuted under the authority of and in accordance with the provisions of state statutes, and not under a law or laws of the United States, that the delinquent writ and proceedings here involved were founded solely upon Alabama statutes, and that an indemnity bond given pursuant thereto has been held by the Alabama court to include counsel fees as an element of recoverable damages. Hence the (alleged) conclusion that such a bond must be so construed when filed in an action brought in the federal court. In Tulloch v. Mulhine, (1902) 184 U. S. 497, 22 S. Ct. 372, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 657, an injunction bond had been given in a suit in the federal court, and the obligee had brought an action for damages thereon in the state court, and on appeal the state Supreme Court had held that counsel fees were recoverable as an element of damage. (1897) 58 Kan. 622, 50 Pac. 897; (1900) 61 Kan. 650, 60 Pac. 749. On error to the Supreme Court of the United States it was held that the measure of liability on the bond was a federal question, as involving an assertion by plaintiff in error of 'an immunity from liability depending on an authority exercised under the United States;' and, applying the federal law that counsel fees are not a part of recoverable damages, the judgment of the Kansas court was reversed. The decision seems to be founded primarily on the theory that the bond in question was exacted under the authority of practice rule No. 90, which merely adopts the English rule of practice whereby convenient of application and other express provision has not been made. Some weight seems to have been given, also, to the general consideration that, if 'the bond given in a federal court is not to be construed with reference to the rules of law applicable to such bonds in such court, then there can be no certain general rule by which to determine the liability of the obligors upon the bond.' (1802) 184 U. S. 505, 22 S. Ct. 375, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 657. As finally stated by the opinion, the principle affirmed was 'that a bond given in pursuance of a law of the United States was governed, as to its construction, not by the local law of a particular state, but by the principles of law as determined by this court, and operative throughout the courts of the United States,' citing especially Bein v. Heath, (1851) 12 How. 168, 178, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 939. This principle being thus settled, it only remains to determine whether the delay here involved was executed and given under 'a law of the United States.' Section 916 of the United States Revised Statutes provides that judgment creditors in federal courts 'shall be entitled to similar remedies upon the same, by execution or otherwise, to reach the property of the judgment debtor, as are now provided in like causes by the laws of the state in which such court is held,' etc. Section 915, immediately preceding, provides that the plaintiff in common-law causes 'shall be entitled to similar remedies, by attachment or other process, against the property of the defendant, which are now provided by the laws of the state,' etc., with the proviso that 'similar preliminary affidavits or proofs, and similar security, as required by such state laws, shall be first furnished by the party instituting such attachment or other remedy.' In Cooke v. Avery, (1893) 147 U. S. 375, 13 S. Ct. 340, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 209, it was held that the lien of a federal court judgment, and the remedies thereon, though in accordance with the provisions of the Texas statutes, existed by virtue of section 916, and it was said that the disposition of the issue 'depended upon the laws of the United States and the rules of the Circuit Court, and their construction and application were directly involved.' See also Files v. Davis, (E. D. Ark. 1902) 118 Fed. 465; Leslie v. Brown, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1896) 90 Fed. 171, 61 U. S. App. 727, 32 C. C. A. 556; Sowles v. Witters, (C. C. Vt. 1891) 46 Fed. 497. So, under section 915, it cannot be seriously doubted that, in administering remedies similar to those provided for state courts, the federal court does so, not by authority of a state law, but solely by virtue of the federal statute, which adopts them and authorizes their use. The proviso that 'similar security as is required by state laws' shall be given before the issuance of the writ very clearly relates to the form and substance of the bond, and not to the elements of damage that may be recognized by the state courts as a part of their general jurisprudence. And we think it must be presumed that, when a federal court grants an extraordinary writ at the suit of a plaintiff, on the bonded condition that for a wrongful resort thereto he shall indemnify the defendant for such damages as he may suffer, the damages intended are only such as are recognized by the law of the forum."

VII. AMENDMENTS

Where no local statute or rule of local law is involved the power to amend is the same in attachment suits as in others. Tilton v. Coffield, (1876) 93 U. S. 163, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 858. See also Matthews v. Densmore, (1883) 109 U. S. 216, 3 S. Ct. 126, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 912. "It is the settled doctrine of the Supreme Court of Arkansas that the proceeding by attachment, like any other civil action, may be amended in matter of substance as well as form at every stage of the case, and that every error or defect in the proceedings which does not injuriously affect the substance of the cause of action or the attachment will be discharged." People's Sav. Bank, etc., Co. v. Batchelder Egg Case Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 51 Fed. 130, 4 U. S. App. 603, 2 C. C. A. 126. See also Wolf v. Cook, (E. D. Wis. 1889) 40 Fed. 432, as to amendment of the writ, and Singer Mfg. Co. v. Mason, (1879) 5 Dill. 488, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,903, as to amendment of the bond.

Sec. 916. [Execution in common-law causes.] The party recovering a judgment in any common-law cause in any circuit or district court, shall be entitled to similar remedies upon the same, by execution or otherwise, to reach the property of the judgment debtor, as are now provided in like causes by the laws of the State in which such court is held, or by any such laws hereafter enacted which may be adopted by general rules of such circuit or district court; and such courts may, from time to time, by general rules, adopt such State laws as may hereafter be in force in such State in relation to remedies upon judgments, as aforesaid, by execution or otherwise.

(R. S.)

I. Constitutionality, 71
II. Remedies under state laws, 71
III. Adoption of state laws, 74
IV. State laws as rules of decision, 75

I. CONSTITUTIONALITY

“It is the settled doctrine of this court, as established and explained by these authorities, that the power of Congress, under the Constitution, as well as that of the courts of the United States, acting under its authority, extends to the adoption of the laws of the several states, not only as to the nature and form of writs of execution for the enforcement of judgments, but also as to all proceedings thereupon.” Ex p. Boyd, (1881) 106 U. S. 547, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1209.

II. REMEDIES UNDER STATE LAWS

Scope of provision.—This statute adopts both the form and effect of executions as established by the state laws. Koning v. Bayard, (1829) 2 Pains 251, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,924.

Judgments at law.—Only “judgments at law” are in terms referred to in this section, and the remedies made available by it are such as are provided by the laws of the state “in like causes” by “execution or otherwise.” While this gives the court ample powers in actions at law, it is not meant to affect, in any manner, remedies in equity, which are to be governed by other rules. Hudson v. Wood, (W. D. Ky. 1903) 119 Fed. 764.

Nor judgments in criminal cases.—Clark v. Allen, (W. D. Va. 1802) 114 Fed. 37.

Common-law causes.—Where the state law provided that “in a writ of fieri facias on a judgment or decree against one liable to the commonwealth, real estate might be levied on,” the right to such levying being given only as against certain public officers, it was held that an execution from a federal court in Virginia may not be levied on real estate there though the judgment is in favor of the United States, since the phrase “in like causes” does not give the government the rights of the state, but, as applicable to Vir- ginia, which is not a code state, means “common-law causes.” Clark v. Allen, (W. D. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 609.

Enforcing judgment.—This section empowers a federal court to use a similar remedy to that provided by a state statute to enforce its judgments, but does not require it to follow the method prescribed by a state statute in serving a writ of scire facias to revive a judgment on a nonresident defendant if it deems such method insufficient. Collin County Nat. Bank v. Hughes, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 389, 83 C. C. A. 661.

Where a judgment creditor is only entitled to an execution by leave of court, his right is only established when he obtains an order of court directing that execution issue. General Electric Co. v. Hurd, (C. C. Ore. 1909) 171 Fed. 984.

Collateral regulations and restrictions.—“Writs and executions issuing from the courts of the United States in virtue of these provisions are not controlled or controllable in their general operation and effect by any collateral regulations and restrictions which the state laws have imposed upon the state courts to govern them in the actual use, suspension, or superseding of them. Such regulations and restrictions are exclusively addressed to the state tribunals, and have no efficacy in the courts of the United States unless adopted by them.” Boyle v. Zacharie, (1832) 6 Pet. 635, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 527. But see Georgia v. Atlantic R. Co., (1879) 3 Woods 434, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,361; Merchants’ Bank v. Evans, (1873) 51 Mo. 335.

State laws unconstitutional.—“Although such state laws may have been so adopted, yet they are inoperative and of no force if in conflict with the Constitution or an Act of Congress.” Bronson v. Kinzie, (1843) 1 How. 311, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 143.

Rights of mortgagees and mortgageor.—When a mortgage on real property is given to secure a debt, the existing state laws create and define the legal and equitable obligations of the mortgage contract. A law of the state passed afterward, doing nothing more than change the remedy upon such contracts, would be liable to no constitutional objection; but one which, upon foreclosure, gives to the mortgagee, and to the judgment creditor, an equitable estate in the premises, which neither of them would have been entitled to under the original contract, unquestionably impairs its obligations, and is prohibited by the Constitution. Bronson v. Kinzie, (1843) 1 How. 311, 11 U. S.
Restriction on power of sale.—The court cannot adopt a state law which provides that “when any property shall be levied on and appraised in the manner required by this Act, and the same shall be susceptible of a division, no greater quantity thereof than will be sufficient to pay the amount of the execution or executions thereon levied, together with the proper costs, at two-thirds of the valuation thereof, shall be offered for sale by the officer in whose hands such execution or executions may have been placed for collection,” as the appraisement therein directed, with the prohibition to sell at less than two-thirds of the valuation, is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States. McCracken v. Hayward, (1844) 2 How. (U. S.) 608, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 397. See U. S. Bank v. Halstead, (1825) 10 Wheat. 51, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 264.

Supremacy of federal law.—A state statute taking away the right to a writ of error, in the case of a forthcoming bond forfeited, can have no influence whatever in regulating writs of error to the Circuit Courts of the United States, as an Act of Congress authorizes a writ of error on final judgment; and a rule of court adopting the statute as a rule of practice would, therefore, be void. Amis v. Smith, (1842) 16 Pet. (U. S.) 303, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 973. See Wayman v. Southard, (1825) 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 253.

Supplementary proceedings.—An examination of a judgment debtor, supplementary to execution, upon the question as to his title to and possession of property applicable to the payment of a judgment against him, and of the fact and particulars of any disposition he may have made of it, may be had under this section. The power thus extends to the ademption of the laws of the several states, not only as to the nature and form of writs of execution for the enforcement of judgments, but also as to all proceedings thereupon. While such a proceeding belongs historically, as to its form, to the administration of Chancery Courts, yet so far as it is authorized by statute, and relates merely to the discovery of the judgment debtor's assets, it is a collateral and auxiliary remedy, and if the discovery results in ascertaining the existence of property, subject to levy under execution, then the remedy at law is perfectly restored. Ex p. Boyd, (1881) 105 U. S. 647, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1200. See also Quantity Manufactured Tobacco, (1879) 10 Ben. (U. S.) 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 1203. See Badger v. Yoder, (1858) McAll. 443, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2, 206.

A United States court, proceeding under the laws of the state providing for proceedings supplementary to execution, as authorized by this section, is not affected by a provision of such laws that a witness cannot be compelled to attend in such proceedings at a place without the county of his residence or place of business; but such court may issue subpoenas for witnesses within its district or to compel the attendance of witnesses from other districts who live within one hundred miles, as provided by R. S. sec. 876 (title WITNESSES). Meyer v. Consolidated Ice Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 400.

Garnishment.—Garnishment proceedings had to reach the property of the judgment debtor are covered by the provisions of this section, where such proceedings were authorized generally by state law. And a state law making it unlawful to issue any writ of execution against a particular city may be of force as to suits in the courts of the state, but it is not an exception which operates proprio vigore in the federal court. Canal, etc., St. R. Co. v. Hart, (1885) 114 U. S. 654, 5 S. Ct. 1127, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 226; Hart v. New Orleans, (E. D. La. 1882) 12 Fed. 292. See also New Orleans v. Morris, (1877) 3 Woods 115, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,183; Randolph v. Tandy, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 98 Fed. 939, 39 C. C. A. 351; Pearce v. Winter Iron-Works, (1858) 32 Ala. 68.

Mandamus.—A writ of mandamus to compel the respondents as justices of the County Court to make an assessment and levy a tax to satisfy a judgment in favor of the relator against the county, being an ancillary proceeding and partaking of the nature of an execution, may be issued, unless a writ of fi. in ai, in aid of which the writ of mandamus is issued, is barred by the state statute of limitations. Stewart v. Justices, (W. D. Mo. 1891) 47 Fed. 482. See also U. S. v. Keokuk, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 514, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 343; R. v. Richmond County, (1867) 6 Wall. (U. S.) 166, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 708; Moran v. Elizabeth. (C. C. N. J. 1881) 9 Fed. 72. But see President v. Elizabeth. (C. C. N. J. 1889) 40 Fed. 799.

Body Execution.—The plaintiff moved for an adjudication by the court that the cause of action arose from the wilful and malicious acts of the defendants, and that they ought to be confined in close jail, and for a certificate thereon upon the execution, according to the statutes of the state. The court said that it would be sufficient in its power entitling the party recovering a judgment in a common-law cause to similar remedies upon it to those of the said state "to reach the property of the judgment debtor," applies to the property and not to the person. Mathew v. Gilmings, (C. C. Vt. 1902) 119 Fed. 438. The remedy given to a judgment creditor by a state law, by the arrest and imprisoning of the defendant on a showing of fraudulent removal or concealment of his property, is one "to reach the property of a judgment debtor," within the meaning of this section, and is available in the federal courts. Ex. p. Crawford, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 769, 53 C. C. A. 479, affirming (M. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 761, wherein it was said that a state statute authorizing arrest of a judgment debtor on certain grounds after the return of an execution unsatisfied is to be regarded as a writ, which, although not specifically provided for by Act of Congress, is capable of being adopted as necessary for the full and complete exercise of the jurisdiction of the federal courts, within the meaning of this section. It stands in fact much the same as a capias ad satisfaciendum, of which it may be considered as only another form. Of course, it goes into the federal law at all, with all its essential incidents, and the method of procedure marked out with regard to it by the state statute has therefore to be substantially followed.

Penalties prescribed.—This statute does not intend to adopt the state law entirely; when the process and modes of proceeding are adopted, the provision does not carry with it the penalties that may be prescribed to enforce their performance. "The recovery of the penalty could with quite as much propriety have been on conviction by indictment as on a summary motion; and in neither mode can it be plausibly contended that the courts of the United States could inflict the penalty on its marshal; the motion and assessment of the fine being distinct from the process and mode of proceeding in the cause of which the execution was part, on which the false return was made. This being an offense against the state law, the courts of the state alone could punish its commission; the courts of the United States, having no power to enforce the penal laws of the individual states." Gwin v. Breedlove, (1844) 2 How. 29, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 167.

Proceeding to enforce forfeiture.—A proceeding to enforce a forfeiture of bonded property seized for violation of the internal-revenue laws is a "common-law cause" within the meaning of this statute, as such a proceeding is a suit to enforce legal as distinguished from equitable rights, though authorized wholly by statute and provided for by a statute, procedure not according to the forms of the common law. Quantity Manufactured Tobacco, (1879) 10 Ben. 447, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,499.

A claim to the benefits of the homestead rights is not a question upon the mode of proceeding upon an execution. It does not involve the inquiry how the levy upon such real estate should be made, and the duties of the marshal as to the mode of appraisal, advertisement, and sale, but goes directly to the rule of property. It relates not to the proceeding but to the property proceeded against. "The law of exemption has a direct operation upon property, and has as much force as the law which gives effect to a title in fee simple when obtained by deed. It confers a right which it is not in the power of Congress by legislation, nor within the province of the federal courts, by rules, to divest." Manufacturers', etc., Bank v. Bayless, (1859) Brun. Col. Cas. 8, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,050. See also Kerr v. South Park Com'r's, (1878) 8 Biss. 276, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,733; Naumburg v. Hyatt, (W. D. N. C. 1885) 24 Fed. 898.

State law excepting state government.—In the state of Virginia real estate cannot be levied on and sold under execution in favor of an individual, but may be levied on under fieri facias on judgments in favor of the state of Virginia. The language of this section, "similar remedies, by execution or otherwise, as are now provided by the laws of the state in like causes," cannot be construed as giving to the federal government the same rights as are given by the state law to the state government. Clark v. Allen, (W. D. Va. 1902) 117 Fed. 498. See Clark v. Allen, (W. D. Va. 1902) 114 Fed. 374.

Failure to docket judgment.—Failure to docket a judgment in accordance with a state law does not release the lien of the judgment as against a subsequent purchaser without notice. "The decisions of the United States courts have been in nothing more uniform, unvarying, and consistent than in holding that where rights once attach under laws of Congress adopting laws of the respective states, these rights are not divested by a non-compliance with conditions, restrictions, or limitations contained in those state laws, where a compliance with the latter would depend upon a resort in any way to state officials, or to the machinery of the state judiciary." U. S. v. Humphreys, (1879) 3 Hughes 201, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,422. See also Masingill v. Downs,
III. ADOPTION OF STATE LAWS

But in Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 490, 43 C. C. A. 665, the court said: "When parties seek attachments, garnishments, executions, provisional remedies of various kinds, in the courts of the United States, it is not the habit of counsel or of the court to search the statutes of a quarter of a century ago, and to conform the proceedings of the federal courts to those then in force in the courts of the several states, but they adopt and use remedies prescribed by their state statutes in force at the time they act. A general and uniform practice becomes a general and established rule of the court, and in the absence of convincing evidence to the contrary the presumption in the appellate court is that the remedial statutes in force in the states at the time when proceedings under them were taken in the federal courts had been adopted by those courts, either by written rule or by general practice."

Rule altering state law.—A court has no power to make a rule purporting to adopt a state law but altering it in some respects. It is legislation in effect by prescribing a new rule unknown to any Act of Congress or the state law professedly adopted. McCracken v. Hayward, (1844) 2 How. 608, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 397.

Construction of laws adopted.—"The laws of the state adopted by general rule of the court pursuant to the laws of the United States for the governing of the lien and guidance of the marshal in serving executions derived their force from the United States, and not from the state; and a suit arising upon the proper construction of those laws would seem to arise under the laws of the United States. The laws of the state were not extended over this subject, but were resorted to for expression of what the laws of the United States should be in this behalf." Sowles v. Witters, (C. C. Vt. 1891) 46 Fed. 497.

The construction by the highest court of the state of the laws of that state as reported to and made a part of the laws of the United States, "although not absolutely binding upon the meaning of the term as a part of the laws of the United States, is entitled to great and almost controlling weight." Sowles v. Witters, (C. C. Vt. 1893) 55 Fed. 169.

Subsequently enacted state laws.—This section adopted the remedies established by law in the several states at the time the section became a law, but not the subsequent state enactments regulating such remedies, they being left for adoption by rules as the federal court might deem advisable. General Electric Co. v. Hurd, (C. C. Ore. 1900) 171 99 Fed. 48.

Judgment prior to adoption of state law.—A state law, governing proceedings for the stay of executions and orders of sale, passed after the re-enactment of this section, did not govern proceedings for the stay of execution upon a judgment, or determine the liability of the sureties on the bond or undertaking given for such stay, where such judgment was rendered in the Circuit Court before the state law had been adopted by any rule of the federal court; and the act of the clerk extending that judgment against the sureties and a sale under execution of the property of one of the sureties were without authority and void. La master v. Keeler, (1887) 123 U. S. 376, 8 S. Ct. 197, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 238. See also Mayman v. Southard, (1825) 10 Wheat. 1, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 253; U. S. Bank v. Halstead, (1825) 10 Wheat. 51, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 264; Smith v. Cockrill, (1867) 6 Wall. 756, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 973; Chateau gay Ore, etc., Co., Petitioner, (1888) 128
IV. STATE LAWS AS RULES OF DECISION

Amendment of execution.—The federal courts are bound to follow the decisions of the highest state court as to the right to permit an amendment of an execution by affixing a seal after a sale therein, and as to the validity of a sale without a seal. McGoan v. Seals, (1899) 9 Wall. 23, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 545.

Redemption.—The federal courts will also follow the state decisions as to the right of redemption from an execution sold. Burham v. Fritz, (1882) 144 U. S. 410; (C. C. Ia. 1882) 13 Fed. 368.

But in Lauriat v. Stratton, (1880) 6 Sawy. 339, 11 Fed. 107, the court refused to follow a state decision as to the effect of a sale under a decree, to extinguish a tenant's right of redemption, for the reason that there was but a single decision, and that appeared to have been made under a misapprehension of the provisions of the statute.

A claim of title based on execution sales is a question of local law, and the determination by the Supreme Court of the state will be followed by the United States Circuit Court. Southern Pac. Co. v. Western Pac. R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1806) 144 Fed. 160.

But in Waples v. U. S., (1884) 110 U. S. 630, 4 S. Ct. 225, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 272, it is held that the title to property sold under judicial process is not warranted by the party obtaining the judgment, and that any different rule prevailing on that subject in a state by statute can change the position of the United States courts with respect to judicial sales in proceedings instituted by them.

Body execution—Effect of Bankruptcy Act.—Whether a state statute authorizing arrest of a judgment debtor on certain grounds after the return of an execution unsatisfied has been superseded by the federal Bankruptcy Law is a federal question, as to which state decisions are merely advisory. Johnson v. Crawford, (M. D. Pa. 1907) 154 Fed. 761.

Sec. 917. [Power of the supreme court to regulate the practice of circuit and district courts.] The Supreme Court shall have power to prescribe, from time to time, and in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States, the forms of writs and other process, the modes of framing and filing proceedings and pleadings, of taking and obtaining evidence, of obtaining discovery, of proceeding to obtain relief, of drawing up, entering, and enrolling decrees, and of proceeding before trustees, appointed by the court, and generally to regulate the whole practice, to be used, in suits in equity or admiralty, by the circuit and district courts.

See also the notes to R. S. sec. 913, supra, p. 18.

Purpose and effect of statute.—This statute was not designed to alter or enlarge the jurisdiction of the courts, but only to regulate the exercise of jurisdiction where it exists. New England Ins. Co. v. Detroit, etc., Steam Nav. Co. (1871) 13 Int. Rev. Rec. 94, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,154. See also In re Kirkland, (1873) 12 Am. L. Reg. 360, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,842.

Authority to make rules.—The Supreme Court has no authority to make any rule which would conflict with an Act of Congress. A rule providing that when an injunction is awarded in vacation it shall, unless previously dissolved by the judge granting the same, continue until the next term of the court, or until it is dissolved by some other order of the court, cannot be construed as giving an effect to an injunction granted by a district judge in vacation that would be in conflict with R. S. sec. 719 (now Judicial Code, § 264, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 954). Gray v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (1884) Woolw. 63, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,713. The provisions of this statute do not authorize the adoption of rules making judgments or decrees for the payment of money liens on land where no such charge is created by law, or to displace any such right where the same is conferred or recognized by an Act of Congress. Ward v. Chamberlain, (1862) 2 Black 430, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 319.

The rules established or altered by the Supreme Court are not rules of decision, but are merely rules of practice, prospective in their operation. The Selt, (1872) 3 Bia. 344, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,640. See also Barron v. Locke, (1850) 2 Fed. Cas. No. 1,054.

Existing statutory regulations.—This statute does not confer authority to repeal or modify any regulation of Congress existing on the subjects referred to. The Kentucky, (1860) 4 Blatchf. 448, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,717.

Restraining suits in state courts.—In In re Providence, etc., Steamship Co., (1872) 6 Ben. 124, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,451, it was held that under the Act of Aug. 23, 1842, the Supreme Court had authority to establish a rule authorizing a District Court to make an order restraining the prosecution of suits in state courts against the owners of vessels, when proceedings had been begun by the owners in the District Court to obtain the benefit of a limited liability. The Supreme Court had the power to make such a rule notwithstanding section 5 of the Act of March 2, 1793, brought forward into R. S. sec. 720 (re-enacted in Judicial Code, § 265, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 869), provided that a writ of injunction should not be granted to stay proceedings in any court of a state.

Deficiency judgment in foreclosure suit.—This section gives the Supreme Court the authority to adopt a rule giving to the federal courts jurisdiction to render a decree for any balance that may be found due to any complainant over and above the proceeds of the sale in a suit for the foreclosure of a mortgage. Grant v. Winona, etc., R. Co., (1902) 85 Minn. 422, 59 N. W. 60.

Admiralty jurisdiction.—The admiralty jurisdiction of the court is also a separate and distinct general jurisdiction, in which the practice and proceedings, under this section, are regulated by rules prescribed by the Supreme Court of the United States. Bruce v. Murray, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 128 Fed. 306, 59 C. C. A. 494.

Process of arrest in admiralty.—In Rudge v. Bemis, (1849) 2 Am. L. J. N. S. 337, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,557, it was held that the Supreme Court had authority to prescribe a rule permitting the arrest of the person of the defendant at the suit of a libelant, notwithstanding imprisonment for debt had been previously abolished in the state where the breach of bond occurred. Also Hanson v. Fowle, (1871) 1 Sawy. 497, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,041; Marshall v. Bazin, (1849) 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,125. And also Gaines v. Travis, (1849) Abb. Adm. 422, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,186, in which the court said that the Act of 1842 and a rule promulgated by the Supreme Court had the effect of repealing or modifying the Acts of 1839 and 1841 (R. S. sec. 990, title EXECUTION, vol. 3, p. 234), abolishing imprisonment for debt where by the laws of the state imprisonment for debt has been or shall be abolished. In Gardiner v. Isaacson, (1848) Abb. Am. 14, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 3,230, the court said that the Acts of 1839 and 1841 (R. S. sec. 990, title EXECUTION, vol. 3, p. 234), were limited to civil process issuing out of a court of law and did not apply to proceedings in maritime courts. But see Wall v. Hall, (1851) 1 Sprague 470, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,338. And see Lee v. Thompson, (1878) 3 Woods. 167, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,202, in which the court said: "After the abolition of imprisonment for debt this rule was amended, and now declares that in all cases of a final decree for the payment of money the libelant shall have a writ of execution in the nature of a fieri facias commanding the marshal or his deputy to levy and collect the amount thereof out of the goods and chattels, lands and tenements, or other real estate of the defendant or stipulators." The Kentucky, (1860) 4 Blatchf. 448, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,717.

—A District Court, by the process of attachment, may compel the appearance of an absent defendant, as the Supreme Court has authority to frame a rule providing for such process. The limitation of section 11 of the Act of Sept. 24, 1789, providing that no civil suit shall be brought against an inhabitant of the United States by any original process in any other district than that wherein he is an inhabitant, has no application to proceedings in admiralty. Atkins v. Fibre Disintegrating Co., (1873) 18 Wall. 272, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 841. See also The Bremen v. Card, (D. C. S. C. 1889) 38 Fed. 144; Cushing v. Laird, (1870) 4 Ben. 70, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,508; Bouysson v. Miller, (1802) Bee Adm. 186, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,700. But see New England Ins. Co. v. Detroit, etc., Steam Nav. Co., (1871) 15 Int. Rev. Rec. 94, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,154.

Bail.—Under this section the Supreme Court has power to regulate the manner of proceeding or “mode of process” in taking bail, upon writs of error from the Supreme Court to the District Court in civil or criminal cases. Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 700. But see U. S. v. Hudson, (W. D. Ark. 1894) 65 Fed. 68.

Cited.—This section is cited in the case of In re Louisville, etc., Packet Co., (E. D. Ky. 1915) 223 Fed. 185.

Sec. 918. [Practice in the several courts to be regulated by their own rules.] The several circuit and district courts may, from time to time, and in any manner not inconsistent with any law of the United States, or with any rule prescribed by the Supreme Court under the preceding section, make rules and orders directing the returning of writs and processes, the filing of pleadings, the taking of rules, the entering and making up of judgments by default, and other matters in vacation, and otherwise regulate their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice and the prevention of delays in proceedings. [R. S.]

This section is mentioned in the note to Judicial Code, § 79, supra, this title, vol. 5, at p. 562.

Effect and purpose of section.—The authority conferred by this section is a power held in trust for the benefit of litigants, and it is the duty of the court to exercise it in proper cases by adapting its procedure to the practical needs of justice. The Alert, (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 40 Fed. 536.

From this section and R. S. secs. 914, 915, and 916, supra, pp. 21, 64, and 70, it appears “that while it was the purpose of Congress to bring about a general uniformity in federal and state proceedings in civil cases, and to confer upon suitors in courts of the United States the advantage of remedies provided by state legislation, yet that it was also the intention to reach such uniformity often largely through the discretion of the federal courts, exercised in the form of general rules adopted from time to time, and so regulating their own practice as may be necessary or convenient for the advancement of justice and the prevention of delays in proceedings.” Shepard v. Adams, (1898) 168 U. S. 618, 16 S. Ct. 214, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 602. Concluded with R. S. sec. 914.—This section and R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, are to be construed together, and “the general provision of the one as to practice, pleading, and forms and modes of procedure applies to systems of judicial procedure as matters of separate study, and not to details of methods of doing the business of courts. . . . These are left to be provided for by rules of court under the other section, and the returning of writs is there specially mentioned as a subject of such rules, which are within the power of the court, and valid when made.” Ewing v. Burnham, (1896) 74 Fed. 384; Importers’, etc., Nat. Bank v. Lyons, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 134 Fed. 510. See Mutual Bldg. Fund, etc., Sav. Bank v. Bossieux, (1877) 1 Hughes 386, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,977.

As the text section was taken from old laws long previous to the Act of 1872, from which R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, was taken, the latter, so far as it applies, should be construed to overrule the provisions of this section, and the manner of entering and recording judgments will be controlled by R. S. sec. 914, above cited, as such matters are parts of the form and mode of proceeding in a cause. Monson v. Bernard, Jp., (C. C. N. J. 1888) 35 Fed. 400; Kinney v. Plymouth Rock Squab Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1914) 214 Fed. 766, wherein it was held that the Circuit Court having the text section adopted a rule conforming to to the early state practice, it was not bound to follow the rule to conform to subsequent alterations made in the state practice. See Wayman v. Southard, (1825) 10

Expediting trial of issues of law.—
Construing this section and R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, it is clear that where there is no state statute and no rule of court on the subject it is within the power of the court to adopt a rule providing that issues of law may be heard within five days, and that the parties are not compelled to wait until the next term of court. Osborn v.

Power to make rules.—Powers as ample as legislation can give are conferred by this section and R. S. sec. 913, supra, p. 18, on the District Court in cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction as to the "forms and modes of proceeding," rules such as alterations thereto, as the said courts shall in their discretion dem expedient," and "to regulate the practice as shall be fit and necessary for the advancement of justice," subject only to any existing provisions of law or the rules established by the Supreme Court.
The Hudson, (E. D. N. Y. 1883) 15 Fed.
161. See also Louisiana Ins. Co. v. Nickerson, (1874) 2 Lowell 310, 16 Fed. Cas.
No. 8,559.

This section and R. S. secs. 913, 917, supra, pp. 18, 75, "the forms of mesne process in equity, and the forms and modes of proceeding therein, are to be according to the usages of courts of equity, except as otherwise provided by statute or by rules of court made in pursuance of statute.
But any Circuit Court may alter and add to such forms and modes subject to the right of the Supreme Court to regulate the matter for such Circuit Court. The Supreme Court has power to prescribe the forms of writs and process and to regulate the whole practice in suits in equity in the Circuit Courts, but any Circuit Court may, in any manner not incosistent with any law of the United States or with any rule prescribed by the Supreme Court, regulate its own practice to advance justice." Steam Stone Cutter 567. See alsoorman v. Clarke, (1841)
2 McLean 568, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,516.

Rules adopted cannot change rules of law.
—By virtue of this section the court may make rules of practice, but it cannot create rules of law. It cannot divest or displace rights or liens which owe their existence not to its process, but to the general maritime law, and a District Court has no authority to promulgate a rule providing in part that "among admiralty claims of otherwise equal dignity the one first libel-ing shall be first paid, and petitioners shall be paid pro rata." Rates acquired under the statutes of the United States, or under the general maritime law, which these courts are created to administer, are rules of property, and it is beyond the potency of judicial power to alter them or take them away by rules of practice.
Saylor v. Taylor, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1896)
77 Fed. 475, 42 U. S. App. 206, 23 C. C.
A. 273.

Rules have force of law.—The equities rules prescribed by the Supreme Court and the rules promulgated by the Circuit Courts (subject to alteration by the Supreme Court) have the force and effect of law, unless they are inconsistent with the statutes of the United States. American Graphophone Co. v. National Phono-349.

Taking evidence.—This section does not give a Circuit Court the authority to make rules touching the mode of taking evidence. Randall v. Venable, (W. D.
Tex. 1883) 17 Fed. 162. See R. S. sec.
862, title EVIDENCE, vol. 3, p. 171.

Proof of execution of note.—Under this statute a Circuit Court may adopt a rule that in actions upon bond, bill, or note it shall not be necessary for the plaintiffs on trial to prove the execution unless the defendant shall have filed with his plea an affidavit that such instrument was not executed by him. Mills v. U. S. Bank, (1856) 11 Wheat. 451, 6 U. S. (L. ed.)
512.

Order requiring printing and filing of brie—An order of a Circuit Court requiring the parties in a pending case to file printed briefs was an order regulating the practice in the same, within the purview of this section, and the expense may be taxed. Neff v. Pennoyer, (1876) 3
See also Jordan v. Agawam Woollen Co., 7,516.

Appeals from courts of admiralty.—
When no statute provides for appeals from District Courts sitting as courts of admiralty these courts may by rule prescribe the times and modes of making them. Norton v. Rich, (1824) 3 Mason 443, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,352.

Redemption by mortgagor.—The mode or manner of payment belongs, so far as the federal court is concerned, to the domain of practice, the power to regulate which is harmonious with the laws of the United States and the rules of the Supreme Court, as might be necessary and convenient for the administration of justice, is expressly given by this statute to Ins. Co. v. Cushman, (1882) 108 U. S.

Suits in rem and in personam in admiralty.—If successive suits in admiralty upon the same demand may be maintained in personam, or in rem, or vice versa, until satisfaction is obtained, it is wholly a question of practice whether the two may be brought concurrently or whether the second suit should not be allowed until the remedy in the first shall be exhausted. That question must be determined with reference to the convenient administration of justice. The Normandie, (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 40 Fed. 590. See also The Zenobia, (1847) Abb. Adm. 48, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 19,208.

Setting aside proceedings for fraud.—A sale of a vessel in admiralty may be set aside where there has been fraud or misconduct in the purchaser, fraudulent negligence or misconduct in any other person connected with the sale, or surprise or misapprehension created by the conduct of the purchaser, or by some other person interested in the sale, or by the officer who conducts it. This section gives a wide power to entertain a proceeding to correct any fraud perpetrated through its process upon its suitors. The Columbia, (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 100 Fed. 890.

In a suit for partition, while the federal court will recognize all rights secured by the state laws to tenants in common, it will not conform to the form and mode of securing those rights prescribed by those statutes. "The mode or manner of ascertaining and securing the right belongs, so far as the federal court is concerned, to the domain of practice, and the power to regulate the practice in harmony with the laws of the United States and the rules of the Supreme Court is expressly given by statute to the Circuit Court." McClaskey v. Barr, (S. D. Ohio 1891) 48 Fed. 130.

Rule regulating special appearance.—A rule regulating special appearance of a party in a cause is within the power of the court to prescribe under this section and valid. Mahr v. Union Pac. R. Co., (E. D. Wash. 1905) 140 Fed. 921.

A rule requiring instructions to be presented to the court at the close of the evidence, and before argument, is within this section. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Hamble, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 644, 101 C. C. A. 270; Baltimore & O. R. Co. v. Wood, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1916) 228 Fed. 825, 143 C. C. A. 147.

Forty day harbor rule.—This section is cited in The Samuel Little, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 306, 137 C. C. A. 136, as authority for the inherent power of the court to establish the so-called forty-day rule fixing the period of time a maritime lien shall retain its preference or priority.

Sec. 919. [Suits for duties, impotts, taxes, penalties, or forfeitures.] All suits for the recovery of any duties, imposts, or taxes, or for the enforcement of any penalty or forfeiture provided by any act respecting imports or tonnage, or the registering and recording or enrolling and licensing of vessels, or the internal revenue, or direct taxes, and all suits arising under the postal laws, shall be brought in the name of the United States. [R. S.]

Suit to recover a penalty.—Under R. S. sec. 4465 (title STEAM VESSELS), imposing certain penalties and giving them " to any person suing for the same," the private party who proceeds to enforce the penalties has the right to sue in his own name. Hatch v. The Steam-Boat Boston, (W. D. Pa. 1884) 3 Fed. 607.

A suit to recover a penalty for the alleged violation of R. S. sec. 3982 (title POSTAL SERVICE), cannot be brought by a private prosecutor, but is maintainable only by and in the name of the United States. Williams v. Wells Fargo, etc., Express, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 302, 101 C. C. A. 328, 55 A. S. R. 1034, 21 Ann. Cas. 699.

Sec. 920. [Consolidation of revenue seizures.] Whenever two or more things belonging to the same person are seized for an alleged violation of the revenue laws, the whole shall be included in one suit; and if separate actions are prosecuted in such cases, the court shall consolidate them. [R. S.]

Sec. 921. [Orders to save costs, and consolidation of causes of a like nature.] When causes of a like nature or relative to the same question are pending in court of the United States, or of any Territory, the court may make such orders and rules concerning proceedings therein as may be conformable to the usages of courts for avoiding unnecessary costs or delay in the administration of justice, and may consolidate said causes when it appears reasonable to do so. [R. S.]

Reasonableness as determining question of consolidating.—In Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Moore, (1913) 231 U. S. 543, 34 S. Ct. 186, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 356, wherein it appeared that the case was consolidated by the court below against objection, and this action of the lower court was assigned as error, the Supreme Court said: "We doubt if it was reasonable to consolidate the cases. We need not, however, pass on that point, as we direct a new trial on other grounds."

Causes which may be consolidated.—"Causes of a like nature," between the same parties, may be consolidated, it appearing reasonable, under this section. Frank v. Geiger, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 126.

Separate actions by separate plaintiffs.—Where separate actions are brought by separate plaintiffs against the same defendants, pending in the same court, for personal injuries sustained in the same accident, depending upon the same evidence, with the only difference in the extent of the injuries to the respective plaintiffs, the causes are properly consolidated for trial. Denver City Tramway Co. v. Norton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 599, 73 C. C. A. 1.

Where the plaintiff in each of two actions was injured in the same accident, and the same evidence, except as to the extent of the injuries, was determinative of both cases, it was a proper exercise of the trial court's discretion to consolidate the cases for trial over defendant's objection relating only to the disparity between the injuries of the two plaintiffs. American Window Glass Co. v. Noe, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 158 Fed. 777, 86 C. C. A. 133.

A federal court has power in its discretion to consolidate for trial separate actions brought against a railroad company to recover for the death of persons who were killed at the same time and in the same manner. Diggs v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 584, 84 C. C. A. 330, 14 L. R. A. N. S. 1029.

A court of admiralty may properly permit a large number of passengers to join in a single libel in rem against a vessel to recover damages alleged to have been sustained by them severally by reason of the failure to keep the vessel in a cleanly condition during a voyage, and to supply suitable accommodations and a sufficient quantity of wholesome food and provi"dions. The Oregon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 609, 68 C. C. A. 603.

The consolidation of two or more actions in admiralty is based upon the fact that such actions are ordinarily in rem against the common res, a proceeding which necessitates a seizure of the libeled vessel to bring her within the custody and control of the court. The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 203.

Other authorities for the joinder of parties libelant where claims were asserted against a common res are: Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, (1852) 3 Ware 110, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,267; Rich v. Lambert, (1851) 12 How. 347, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017; The Prinz Georg, (E. D. L.a. 1884) 19 Fed. 653, affirmed (E. D. La. 1884) 23 Fed. 906.

Suits arising out of collision.—This statute gives the District Courts, sitting in admiralty, the necessary authority, in cases of collision, to combine the suits arising thereon into a single proceeding, and where both parties are found to be in fault, to make a single decree, in accordance with their rights and obligations resulting from the law. The North Star, (1882) 106 U. S. 17, 1 S. Ct. 11, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 91. See also Th. v. Eliza Line, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 308, as to the consolidation of libels for salvage, cargo freight, etc.
Suits against different defendants.—In Seawell v. Berry, (S. D. Ohio 1893) 55 Fed. 731, five cases, brought by the same plaintiff against different defendants, but involving substantially the same questions of fact and of law, were consolidated for trial, under this section.

Actions for libel brought against different public newspapers, when the principal issues for the jury in each of the cases are substantially identical, may be tried together notwithstanding that the elements with reference to the damages to be assessed in the several cases may appear at the trial to be different, and materially so. Butler v. Courier-Citizen Co., (C. C. Mass. 1904) 127 Fed. 1015.

Suits for infringement of design patents of like nature and between the same parties may be consolidated, and when consolidated, one recovery on the liability can be decreed. Frank v. Geiger, (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 121 Fed. 128.

Cross-actions.—A federal court may in its discretion consolidate cross-actions between the same parties for breach of the same contracts. American Trust, etc., Bank v. Zeigler Coal Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 34, 91 C. C. A. 72.

Treating injunction as a cross-bill.—A suit in equity in aid of an execution at law may be consolidated with a bill filed to enjoin the enforcement by execution of an attachment lien; the injunction suit may be treated as a cross-bill in the former suit. Lant v. Morgan, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1890) 75 Fed. 636, 43 U. S. App. 640, 21 C. C. A. 466.

Consolidation of distinct suits on petition of interveners.—In Central Trust Co. v. Virginia, etc., Steel, etc., Co., (W. D. Va. 1893) 55 Fed. 709, it was held that a cause would not be consolidated on the petition of interveners where it appeared that the interests involved in the several suits pertained to separate and distinct corporations, that the parties were different, that the complainant in one of the causes appeared as defendant in another of the causes, and that the complainant in two other causes brought suit against separate and distinct defendants in each of said causes.

Defendants brought into antagonism by consolidation.—Causes may be consolidated notwithstanding that the defendants may be brought into antagonism with each other. Keep v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Mo. 1880) 10 Fed. 464.

Consolidation on motion of defendant.—Whether a consolidation of separate causes would be warranted only on motion of the defendant, quere. Summerlin v. Frontier Silver Min., etc., Co., (W. D. Tex. 1890) 41 Fed. 249.

Effect of consolidation on cause of action.—Although defendants may lawfully be compelled at the discretion of the court to try the cases together, the causes of action remain distinct, and require separate verdicts and judgments; and no defendant can be deprived, without consent, of any right material to the defense, whether by way of challenge of jurors or of objection to evidence, to which the defendant would be entitled if the cases were tried separately. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Hillmon, (1902) 146 U. S. 265, 12 S. Ct. 909, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 707.

The record of each suit is that of an independent cause, except in so far as the evidence in one is, by order of court, treated as evidence in both. The consolidation does not change the rules of equity pleading, nor the forms of the parties, as those rules must still turn on the pleadings, proofs, and proceedings in their respective suits. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Continental Trust Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1890) 85 Fed. 497, 86 C. C. A. 155.

Forms of judgment.—Whether one judgment may be given for all or a separate judgment in each case will depend upon the special circumstances. If it is necessary to the due administration of the law and the protection of the rights of the parties that the integrity of original causes shall be so far preserved as to secure the proper result in each case, to the end that the party aggrieved may not be embarrassed thereby in seeking relief against the judgment, or for any other sufficient reason, the court will direct the proceedings accordingly. The statute is one for convenience in saving expense to the parties and the time of the court. U. S. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 33, 86 C. C. A. 223.

Discontinuance.—Leave may be granted to discontinued the suit without prejudice, as to part of the causes of action, after consolidation of several causes has been ordered. Young v. Grand Trunk R. Co., (E. D. Wis. 1881) 9 Fed. 348.

Sec. 922. [When the marshal or his deputy is a party in a cause.] When the marshal or his deputy is a party in any cause, the writs and precepts therein shall be directed to such disinterested person as the court or any justice or judge thereof may appoint, and the person so appointed may execute and return them. [R. S.]

Scope of section.—The provisions of this section appear to extend only to process issued in causes in court and are not applicable to a writ of attachment for a contempt. Ez p. Benedict, (1862) 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,202.

Purpose of section.—The object of this enactment is to make sure that a marshal or deputy interested cannot by a false return deprive the opposing party of his day in court. Barnes r. Western Union Tel. Co., (E. D. Ga. 1903) 120 Fed. 555.

Deputy defined.—The word "deputy," as used in this rule, clearly means a "deputy marshal," an officer known to the law as such, who equally with the marshal may do all that is to be done under the process. It cannot mean a person specially deputed to execute a process or arrest a vessel. The E. W. Gorgas, (1879) 10 Ben. 460, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,585.

Duties of appointee.—The person so appointed would by the rule be required to do all that the marshal would otherwise be required to do under a process to arrest a ship, not only to arrest the ship, but to keep it in custody, give the notice required by the monition, and make a return of the process to the court in his own name. The E. W. Gorgas, (1879) 10 Ben. 460, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,585.

R. S. secs. 935-937 relate to garnishment, and are given in GARNISHMENT, vol. 3, p. 417.

R. S. secs. 938 and 939 relate to bailing and sale of property seized under customs and shipping laws, and are given in FINES, PENALTIES, AND FORFEITURES, vol. 3, p. 325.

R. S. sec. 940 provides for the bailing in vacation of property seized, and is given in FINES, PENALTIES, AND FORFEITURES, vol. 3, p. 327.

Sec. 941. [Delivery bond in admiralty proceedings — permanent bond by vessel owner.] When a warrant of arrest or other process in rem is issued in any cause of admiralty jurisdiction, except in cases of seizures for forfeiture under any law of the United States, the marshal shall stay the execution of such process, or discharge the property arrested if the process has been levied, on receiving from the claimant of the property a bond or stipulation in double the amount claimed by the libelant, with sufficient surety, to be approved by the judge of the court where the cause is pending, or, in his absence, by the collector of the port, conditioned to answer the decree of the court in such cause. Such bond or stipulation shall be returned to the court, and judgment thereon, against both the principal and sureties, may be recovered at the time of rendering the decree in the original cause. And the owner of any vessel may cause to be executed and delivered to the marshal a bond or stipulation, with sufficient surety, to be approved by the judge of the court in which he is marshal, conditioned to answer the decree of said court in all or any cases that shall thereafter be brought in said court against the said vessel, and thereupon the execution of all such process against said vessel shall be stayed so long as the amount secured by such bond or stipulation shall be at least double the aggregate amount claimed by the libelants in such suits which shall be begun and pending against said vessel; and like judgments and remedies may be had on said bond or stipulation as if a special bond or stipulation had been filed in each of said suits. The court may make such orders as may be necessary to carry this section into effect, and especially for the giving of proper notice of any such suit. Such bond or stipulation shall be indorsed by the clerk with a minute of the suits wherein process is so stayed, and further security may at any time be required by the court. If a special bond or stipulation in the particular cause shall be given under this section, the liability as to said cause on the general bond or stipulation shall cease. [R. S.]

The above provisions were substituted by Act of March 3, 1890, ch. 441, 30 Stat. L. 1354, for the section as originally enacted in the Revised Statutes. The amendment consisted in the addition of all matter after the words "at the time of rendering the decree in the original cause."

H. R. Rep. No. 1891, Fifty-fifth Congress, third session, accompanying this bill, states that its object "is to prevent the blackmailing of vessels by seizing them just as they are leaving port on their way, at some lonely place or unusual time, sometimes on a Saturday afternoon or evening, in order to force the payment of unjust claims," and permits the filing of a permanent bond to answer any action that may be brought.—Compiler's note, 2 Supp. R. S., p. 1104.

The only change from the Act of March 3, 1847, ch. 55, 9 Stat: L. 181, made by the revision of this statute was removing the limitation of the amount of costs. The Madgie, (S. D. Ala. 1887) 31 Fed. 926.

R. S. sec. 945 relates to taking bail and affidavits by United States commissioners, and is given in JUDICIAL OFFICERS, in vol. 4, p. 772.

I. CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION GENERALLY

The object of the law in permitting the release of the vessel to the owner is to enable him to save himself from the indirect consequences of the seizure, which may be deeply injurious to him, through no fault of his, without any benefit to the cause of justice or to the proceedings in court. The Haytian Republic, (D. C. Ore. 1893) 57 Fed. 508.
Scope of section.—All seizures are embraced in terms of this section without regard to the cause of action, and the owners are empowered to retain possession on giving security in all such cases. The Poconoket, (E. D. Pa. 1894) 61 Fed. 106. The Act, however, relates exclusively to the conditions to be complied with to entitle a claimant to avoid an arrest of the property, or to obtain its discharge after it shall have been arrested, and not to conditions necessary to entitle a party to intervene, pendente lite, to participate in the distribution of proceeds, or to protect any interest he may have in the subject matter of the litigation. Home Ins. Co. v. The Concord, (1870) 17 Pittab. Leg. J. 148, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,659.

And this statute does not assume to interfere with the powers of a court of admiralty to regulate the execution of its process and the stipulations it is authorized to take conformable to general principles of procedure in those courts or the particular equities of each case. Peru v. The North America, (1853) 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,017a.

Nor does it extend to delivery on bail, on seizures under other Acts. The Brig Struggle, (1813) 1 GALL. 476, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,550.

And the release on bond of a vessel charged with liability to forfeiture under R. S. sec. 5283 (now Penal Laws, sec. 11, in Penal Laws) before answering or hearing, and against the objection of the United States, is not contemplated by this section. The Three Friends, (1897) 166 U. S. 1, 17 S. Ct. 495, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 897.

II. GIVING OF BOND OR STIPULATION IN GENERAL

Authority to take stipulation.—The clerk is not authorized to take such stipulation, but it may be taken by a judge in court, or at chambers, or before a United States commissioner. The Jeanie Laddies, (D. C. Ore. 1883) 17 Fed. 91.

Time of giving.—At any time before default, property in custody may be bonded in pursuance of this section without any other condition than is prescribed therein. The Sloop Martha C. Burnite, (1878) 10 Ben. 196, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,147.

In the English admiralty, a settled practice is adopted to enable stipulations to be given without acquiring custody of the property proceeded against. So the provision for bonds to the marshal looks to enabling a proceeding in rem to be prosecuted without a seizure of the vessel. The Ferryboat Roalyn, (1877) 9 Ben. 119, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 12,068.

Notice to marshal.—Where a stipulation has been given in court, notice by supersedeas should be immediately issued to the marshal; if taken before a commissioner, similar notice should be given by an order to the same effect. The Jeanie Laddies, (D. C. Ore. 1883) 17 Fed. 91.

Stay of process.—This statute makes it the duty of the marshal to stay the execution of the process upon receiving the statutory bond and compels him to receive a bond when tendered in pursuance of the Act, in lieu of a seizure of the vessel. The City of Washington, (1876) 13 Blatchf. 410, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,772.

The provision of this statute, that in case the vessel is libeled for a forfeiture no bond can be accepted, is only a limit upon the power of the marshal to stay admiralty process and does not affect the action of the court. The Three Friends, (S. D. Fla. 1897) 78 Fed. 173.

Effect as to parties of giving bond.—A discharge of a vessel under a bond given to a marshal for double the amount of the claim does not convert the suit in rem, to which all the world are considered parties, into a proceeding in personam, to which no one is or can become a party except the original libellant and the parties in the stipulation. The Oregon, (D. C. Ore. 1891) 45 Fed. 63.

Where, in a suit in rem against a vessel, she was discharged on the usual stipulation for value, and afterward during the pendency of the case in this court on appeal, the respective proctors consented in writing to a return of the vessel into the custody of the marshal and to her sale by that officer, and she was sold, and an order was obtained from the circuit judge directing the clerk to enter an order according to such consent, it was held, on a motion made to vacate such order by a person who claimed to have had an interest in the vessel, and who was not a party to the suit, that the judge had no jurisdiction or power to make the order. The White Squall, (1857) 4 Blatchf. 103, 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,570.

Where a bond is given to the marshal which provides for only double the amount of the particular claim in suit, it is not fixed with any reference to the amount of other claims or the value of the vessel, and it cannot be deemed given for the benefit of all claims up to the full value of the vessel. Bailey v. Sundberg, (S. D. N. Y. 1891) 44 Fed. 807.

Effect of failure to give bond.—Where a seizure occurs the owner may protect himself against the loss of the use of the vessel by giving security and retaining the vessel, but if he does not give such security and suffers injury, his injury is self-inflicted. The Poconoket, (E. D. Pa. 1894) 61 Fed. 106.

Effect of death of libellant.—Where an action in rem has been brought against a steamship to recover damages for personal injury sustained by the neglect of the vessel's servants while the libellant was at work, it has been held that, in case of the death of the libellant, a bond given by the claimant of the vessel will not be canceled. The court said: "It seems to me that this right and remedy that has been chosen to enforce it are inseparable, and that the administrator does no more than take the place of the decedent in order to carry on the suit as the latter would have carried it on if he had not died. The seizure of the ship and the claimant's bond are intended to provide security that the right shall be satisfied; and, since the right is preserved by the statute, I do not know upon what ground the security is to be taken away."

Vessel in commission.—Where a schooner is in commission, it will not, in a suit between the owners for partition, be seized and held by the marshal under expense until the final decree of the court, if the respondent gives a satisfactory bond that he will deliver the vessel to the marshal upon decree of court. The Emma B., (D. C. N. J. 1905) 140 Fed. 770.

III. BOND AS WAIVER

Waiver of seizure.—The execution of a delivery bond under this Act is a waiver of the objection that a seizure of the vessel should precede the filing of the libel and that no seizure has been made. The Lewellen, (1888) 4 Biss. 156, 167, 15 Fed. Cas. Nos. 8,307, 8,308.

And it is a common practice adopted for convenience and the saving of expense, to give a stipulation to secure the debt upon simple notice of the filing of a libel. A stipulation under such circumstances is valid, although in fact the vessel sought to be proceeded against is not and never was in custody. Munks v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1895) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641; The Berkeley, (E. D. S. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 920.

IV. BOND AS SUBSTITUTE FOR PROPERTY

General doctrine.—According to the general rule, a vessel cannot be arrested a second time, for the same cause of action, after she has been released on a bond given to secure the demand of the libellant, except where the release has been obtained by fraud or mistake, and a proviso in an order dismissing a suit without prejudice can have no other effect than to prevent the decree of dismissal from being set up in bar of subsequent suits in personam against the master or owners of the vessel. The Cleveland, (D. C. Wash. 1899) 98 Fed. 631. See also to same effect Allison v. The Steamer Lavelle Young, (1903) 2 Alaska 104.

The court said: "The claimant availed himself of the benefit of the decision allowing the decree and sale to stand, and must accept its burden. He secured the release of the vessel by giving the bond as security for the claim of the libelants. It was the plain meaning of the decision that the decree and sale should not prejudice their lien, and that a bond sufficient to secure it should be given as a condition of the release of the vessel; in other words, that to the extent the bond was a substitute for the vessel it should stand for the vessel unaffected by the decree and sale. The claimant cannot now be heard to allege the contrary." The New York, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 810, 51 C. C. A. 482.

V. AMOUNT OF BOND

In general.—Where a claimant desires to secure the possession of a vessel libeled he may apply to the court for an appraisement, or if the parties agree upon a sum as the value, the court may adopt that sum and accept a stipulation for that amount. The Ann Caroline, (1884) 2 Wall. 538, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 833.

And the fact that a bond is larger than required does not affect its validity as to the obligation to pay at least the amount required by statute. The Haytian Republic, (D. C. Ore. 1893) 57 Fed. 508.

Reduction of amount of bond.—Where the amount of a bond is determined between the parties themselves, it will not be reduced by the court, but where the stipulation is executed under this section it will be reduced if the facts justify so doing. The Monarch, (D. C. S. C. 1887) 30 Fed. 283.

So where a stipulation appears to have been hastily given, without an appraisal of the vessel, and there is no suggestion that the claimant of the vessel was in any way personally liable except through his efforts to protect the vessel against the claim, it has been held that, where justice will be done the claimant and no injustice done to the libelants, the amount of the stipulation may be reduced. The court said: "No special equities, however, were brought to the attention of the court; but, where there are equities, there is every reason why an admiralty court should use, on enlarged principles, the discretion uniformly availed of even by common-law courts to reduce bail demanded before it is taken, or excessive bail after it is taken, or to relieve against excessive attachments after they are made. There is no practical or equitable reason why that discretionary power should not be extended to cases of this class. When the equities are clear, the power of the admiralty court to apply them is so manifest that authorities need hardly be cited on this proposition." The Iris, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 100 Fed. 104. 40 C. C. A. 301.
VI. VALIDITY OF BOND
Where attachment void.—Where the attachment is void the bond necessarily fails, and the parties will not be held to it. International Grain Ceiling Co. v. Dill, (1878) 10 Ben. 92, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,053.

Where the warrant of arrest was issued without authority, the entering into a stipulation by the respondent can have no greater effect than a general appearance would have had and does not waive any irregularity of the proceedings, nor does it deprive him of any right of defense he had when the process was served, but the original process being void, it continued so notwithstanding the stipulation, and all the subsequent proceedings depending upon this process are coram non judice. The Berkeley, (E. D. S. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 920.

Condition not conforming to statute.—A bond, voluntarily given upon the delivery of property upon bail on application of the claimant, is good, although the condition does not exactly conform to this section. The Brig Struggle, (1813) 1 Gall. 476, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,550.

A bond in the general form of a common-law bond, given for the release of a vessel, comes clearly within the provisions of this statute, although given before the vessel was actually seized. Munks v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1895) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641.

Absence of condition in bond.—The conditions upon which the obligation in a bond becomes absolute are contained in the statute, and the fact that a bond, obviously intended to be given in pursuance of this section, contains no condition, does not invalidate it. The Haytian Republic, (D. C. Ore. 1893) 57 Fed. 508.

Power of court where bond defective.—Even if defective bonds were void the court would, by attachment, enforce a redelivery of the property by the claimant. The Brig Struggle, (1813) 1 Gall. 476, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,550.

In U. S. v. Four Part Pieces Woollen Cloth, (1825) 1 Paine 435, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,149, proceedings by libel were instituted upon a seizure of goods and a bond given for their apprised value on the delivery of the goods to the claimant. Afterwards the libel was, by amendment, changed to an information, and the goods were condemned. On an application for an attachment against the obligors in the bond, it was held that, although the case was not regularly within this section, yet a compliance with the stipulations in the bond might be enforced by attachment against the obligors.

Estoppel to contest validity.—Where the claimant voluntarily accepts a delivery on bail, it is an estoppel of his right to contest the validity of the security. The Brig Struggle, (1813) 1 Gall. 476, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,550.

VII. LIABILITY GENERALLY OF CLAIMANT
One who voluntarily appears claiming to be the owner of a vessel, gives bond therefor, and takes possession of the vessel, thus makes himself a party to the proceeding and is bound by a default decree. In a case where a stranger pursued such a course it was said: “Briggs was not a party to the original libel proceedings,—he was not known to the court,—but for some reason he gave bond, claiming to be the owner of the launch, which claim he never, as far as the record shows, attempted to prove; but he took possession of the vessel, and presumably used it, for it is alleged in the bond that it was necessary for him in his business. The condition of the bond was for the restoration of the property as the court should direct, together with damages for the use and detention, ‘and to perform any other judgment which the court may render in said cause, and pay all costs and damages which may be awarded against him by said court,’ etc. Briggs thus made himself a party to the proceeding as effectually as if process had been regularly issued against and served on him.... The original bond having been adjudged sufficient for the detention of the launch, and appellant having paid the cost in the district court, the judgment here is that the decree appealed from be affirmed, and that appellee recover his costs in this court expended. This cause is remanded to the court below, with instructions that a decree be entered against appellant, and the sureties on his bond, for such damages as may be proper on account of the detention of the said vessel by said George S. Briggs.” Briggs v. Taylor, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1898) 54 Fed. 681, 42 U. S. App. 681, 28 C. C. A. 518.

VIII. SURETIES
1. Sufficiency of Sureties
In general.—Where claimants in actions in rem substitute personal security for the property in the hands of the court by way of a stipulation for value, they assume to maintain their stipulation good in the matter of the sureties. The Hartford, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 11 Fed. 89.

Discretion of court.—It is within the discretion of the court to determine what shall be sufficient surety and to require one or more sureties according to the circumstances of the case. The Hartford, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 11 Fed. 89.

Additional security.—A court in admiralty has the power to require additional security where that previously given has become insufficient or worthless, and may also abate exorbitant security. The Hartford, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 11 Fed. 89.

And it is said that the only remedy in a case where the sureties become insolvent would seem to be in an application to the court for an order requiring new security to be given. Home Ins. Co. v. The Concord, (1870) 17 Pittal. Law J. 148, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,659.

So where the security has become insolvent the court may require new sureties to be given on the penalty for contempt or the denial of the right further to appear and contest the suit. The Old Concord, (1870) Brown Adm. 270, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,482.

And where the sureties on a stipulation have become insolvent it is proper to grant a motion that the claimant furnish a better and sufficient security and, if not furnished, that the answer be stricken out. The Fred M. Lawrence, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 1017, 36 C. C. A. 631.

2. Sureties as Parties to Suit

Such a bond is not a mere personal security given to the plaintiff, but a security given to the court. It is a pledge or substitute for the property proceeded against, and the sureties are not parties to the suit, or entitled to interfere in any way with the management of the suit. Lane v. Townsend, (1832) 1 Ware 286, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,054; The New York, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 561, 44 C. C. A. 38.

So the sureties upon a stipulation bond for the release of a vessel are in no such sense parties to the controversy as to require that they should be joined in an appeal taken by the owner of the vessel whose sureties they were, and unless some extraneous question arises involving the scope or obligation of the surety in such a bond, they are not necessary parties to an appeal taken by any of the parties. The Glide, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1897) 78 Fed. 152, 24 C. C. A. 46, (C. C. A. 1896) 72 Fed. 200, 18 C. C. A. 504; The New York, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 561, 44 C. C. A. 38.

And sureties on a stipulation in admiralty for the release of a libeled vessel do not become parties to the suit in such a sense as to require that they be joined in an appeal by the claimant from the decree entered therein, although such decree is joint in form against the claimant and the stipulators, unless some extraneous question has arisen in the suit involving their rights or obligations. Perrin v. Pacific Coast Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 140, 60 C. C. A. 206.

3. Liability of Sureties

In general—This section has always been held to mean that the entry of judgment against the stipulators is a matter of course, and that the stipulators have rendered themselves subject to such entry of judgment by the bare fact that they have so stipulated. Perriam v. Pacific Coast Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 146, 66 C. C. A. 206.

The surety on a stipulator upon the bond, with actual knowledge that it was given for the release of the vessel, is bound by the terms of the stipulation which he voluntarily signed, and thereby brought himself within the jurisdiction of the court, and is thereafter bound to "abide by and answer the decree of the court in such cause." Munks v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641.

The stipulators on a bond given under this section after the final judgment against them in the suit do not stand in the relation of sureties to the libelants for the claimant, but they are then principal debtors, and the contingent or secondary liability on the stipulations is merged in the judgment recorded against them, and a stay or countermand of the execution against the principal does not discharge them. The Col. Howard V. Hayden, (1850) 17 Betts C. C. M. 70, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,026.

Necessity of demand.—Under a stipulation given by a claimant in admiralty conditioned that, if the stipulators fail to pay the amount of any decree against them execution against the principal may issue against both claimant and his surety, both are principals and no demand is necessary upon the claimant in order to justify a demand on the surety. The Mts. Desert, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 196 Fed. 395.

Extent of liability.—The sureties on a bond given under this section are not liable to pay a greater sum than the penalty of the bond, and a decree authorizing the recovery of a greater sum should be modified. The Ann Caroline, (1864) 2 Wall. 528, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 833; The Madgie, (S. D. Ala. 1887) 31 Fed. 926.

"Stipulators, like sureties, where the stipulation is for a definite sum, are bound to make good the liability or default of the principal to the amount of the stipulation; but they cannot be held to any greater sum, unless they themselves have been guilty of default, in which case they may be held liable for costs and interest, by the way of damages, to the extent that the same have arisen from the breach of their duty to comply with the terms of their stipulation." The Wanata, (1877) 95 U. S. 600, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 461.

So the stipulators cannot be bound on their bond beyond its terms fairly understood, and where they had become sureties for the performance by a wife of any decree against her they could not be called upon to pay a decree against the husband.
Effect of waiver of libelant of further security on appeal.—Where a stipulation for value, given by the claimant of a libeled vessel, was conditioned for the payment of interest, and was broken by final decree of the trial court, “or by any appellate court if an appeal intervene, with interest,” the waiving by libelant of further security on an appeal does not release the surety on the stipulation from the further payment of interest thereon, in accordance with its terms, or of the costs of the appellate court. The Mt. Desert, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 186 Fed. 395.

Examination concerning sureties’ property.—There is no statute of the United States which authorizes or requires sureties in stipulations or appeal bonds, in a suit in rem, in admiralty, to appear before the admiralty court after a final decree in the suit for examination concerning their property according to the laws and practice of the courts of equity. The Blanche Page, (1879) 16 Blatchf. 1, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,524.

Right to sequestrate sureties’ property.—A court of admiralty of the United States has no power to enforce such a decree against such sureties by the sequestration of their property according to the practice of the courts of equity. The Blanche Page, (1879) 16 Blatchf. 1, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,524.

Discharge when vessel cannot be held.—Where a vessel cannot be held, the sureties in the bond executed for her release are also necessarily discharged. The Monte A., (1882) 12 Fed. 331; The Berkeley, (E. D. S. C. 1893) 58 Fed. 920.

4. Sureties’ Right to Subrogation

In general.—Probably there may be a subrogation in favor of the sureties to the claim of the libelant against their principal; but this can be done only after payment of the decree, and must be confined and limited strictly to the rights of the libelant against the claimant personally. The vessel is not affected. The bond releases the vessel for all purposes of the suit. The Vigilant, (N. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 226.

But when a libel is filed, and a vessel is seized, and the owner gives a bond, with surety, that the claim shall be paid, the bond takes the place of the vessel, the owner and surety are in place of the vessel so far at least as the claim is concerned; and the surety, having promised to pay it in case the owner does not, cannot, by taking an assignment thereof, keep it alive as a lien on the vessel as against a prior mortgage. The bond being given and the vessel released, the mortgagee has the right to assume that the claim for which she was libeled has been or will be paid by the owner or his surety.

And where the evidence does not establish the fact that a surety company accepted insurance companies, whose obligations it had taken as collateral security for its underwritings, as a substitute for the owners of a libeled vessel, it is entitled to have the decree marked to its use, and to issue execution thereon to recover the sum from its principal, upon whom rested the primary obligation of payment of the award. The White Seal, (E. D. Pa. 1909) 166 Fed. 640.

Limitation of right.—A petition by the sureties on a release bond, that they may be subrogated to the rights of the libelant to the amount they have properly paid upon a decree rendered against such bond, will be granted, but the subrogation must be limited strictly to the rights of the libelant against the claimant personally, and the vessel is not affected. The Maddie, (S. D. Ala. 1887) 31 Fed. 926.

“The surety, therefore, can only be regarded in the light of an ordinary creditor of his principal upon whose personal credit he relied when he bound himself for the payment of the bond. His right to be paid out of the proceeds of the boat which has been sold under his execution must be regarded as subordinate to the claims of the interveners who have established their liens.” The Willamette Valley, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 76 Fed. 533.

And all liens upon a vessel of every description, whether impressed by the general maritime law or local statute or created by bonds or mortgages, are completely and finally extinguished by a sale of the vessel pursuant to the decree of a court in admiralty in a suit in rem, and a surety has no claim of right to be subrogated when he has merely a lien on the owner of a vessel to extinguish liens by becoming a surety, and who did not pay any debt until after all liens for previously existing debts have been completely destroyed by an admiralty sale. The Willamette Valley, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 76 Fed. 533; The Evangell, (D. C. Wash. 1899) 94 Fed. 680.

IX. Enforcement of Judgment

The jurisdiction of the court upon the giving of such a stipulation to proceed with the cause to a decree and to enforce the stipulation according to its terms, has never been questioned. Bumette, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1895) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641.

The form of the stipulation in admiralty was originally adopted to avoid a question of jurisdiction. A consent that execution might issue is incorporated in it, and the instrument itself subjects the stipulators to the process of the court. The Ferryboat Roslyn, (1877) 9 Ben. 119, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 15,068.
Whenever a stipulation is taken in the admiralty for the property subjected to legal process and condemnation, the stipulation is deemed a mere substitute for the thing itself and the stipulators are held liable to the exercise of all those authorities on the part of the court which the tribunal could properly exercise if the thing itself were still in the custody of the court. The Palmyra, (1827) 12 Wheat. 1, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 531; The Steamer Webb, (1871) 14 Wall. 406, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 774; The Wanata, (1877) 95 U. S. 600, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 461; U. S. r. Ames, (1878) 99 U. S. 36, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 286; Munks v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1885) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641.

Such a stipulation stands in the place of the vessel, and its obligation is discharged by compliance with the order or decree of the court against the owner or claimant and the liability may be enforced by "judgment thereon against both the principal and sureties" at the time of the rendering of the decree in the original cause. The Belgenland, (1883) 108 U. S. 153, 2 S. Ct. 664, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 685; The New York, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 104 Fed. 541, 44 C. C. A. 38; The Columbus, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 660, 48 C. C. A. 596.

And the fact that the decree of a court was in excess of the penalty named in the bond does not deprive the court of jurisdiction, and the judgment is a nullity for such excess only. Munks v. Jackson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1890) 66 Fed. 571, 29 U. S. App. 482, 13 C. C. A. 641.

Sec. 948. [Amendment of process.] Any circuit or district court may at any time, in its discretion, and upon such terms as it may deem just, allow an amendment of any process returnable to or before it, where the defect has not prejudiced, and the amendment will not injure the party against whom such process issues. [R. S.]

"Circuit" courts, mentioned in this section, were abolished by Judicial Code, sec. 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1062.

More comprehensive provisions for amendments are made in R. S. sec. 954 infra, p. 98. And see the notes thereto.

I. Extent of power generally, 90
II. Matters in respect to which amendments allowed, 91
III. Amendments denied, 92

I. EXTENT OF POWER GENERALLY

For amendments to writs of error, see R. S. sec. 1065, infra, p. 106.

Amendments of process and pleadings, see also R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, and notes thereto, supra, at pp. 32, 33.

The power granted under this section is to amend a defect or a want of form in a process. Dwight v. Merritt, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 614.

X. FEES AND COSTS

The fact that a stipulation for costs had previously been given in a case in which a vessel was released on a release bond under this section is immaterial, as the condition of the release bond itself is to "abide by and answer the decree of the court," and the costs are a part of the decree.

The Madrig, (S. D. Ala. 1887) 31 Fed. 926.

And where the claimant of a libeled vessel has prevailed on the trial, and the libel is dismissed, he is entitled to tax as a part of his costs the premium paid by him to a surety company for a bond to obtain the release of the vessel, where it is reasonable in amount. The John D. Dailey, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 158 Fed. 642.

So costs and interest in favor of the libellant may be allowed against the claimant of a vessel, though the damages and interest are assessed at a sum in excess of the amount of the stipulation. The Southwark, (E. D. Pa. 1904) 129 Fed. 171.

But it is the practice in suits in rem, in admiralty, when the bond for the release of the vessel or goods arrested is given to the marshal under this section, to require the delivery of the property without any payment to the marshal of his fees or costs, since the statute does not attach any such requirement to the obligation to discharge the vessel or property from arrest. The government is simply protected by the bond. The Georganna, (S. D. N. Y. 1887) 31 Fed. 463; U. S. v. Eight Cases Paper, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 98 Fed. 416.

The power to amend thus conferred is unconditional and positive, and cannot be limited by arbitrary qualifications. Erstein v. Rothschild, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 22 Fed. 61.

Discretion as to allowance.—The granting or refusing leave to amend pleadings is ordinarily a matter of discretion, not reviewable on appeal or error in the federal courts; but where it is shown that the court refused to exercise its discretion because of supposed lack of authority, the ruling is reviewable for error. Hernandez v. American Bridge Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 530, 92 C. C. A. 330.
Effect of state practice.—The practice in state courts, while it may enlarge the power of amendment of a federal court, cannot diminish those which are conferred upon the federal courts by the Acts of Congress. Norton v. Dover, (C. C. N. H. 1892) 14 Fed. 106.

II. Matters in Respect to Which Amendments Allowed

Ad damnum.—Increasing the ad damnum of a summons is permissible under this section. Davis v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1857) 32 Fed. 563.

Attachment proceedings.—It is proper to allow a defective affidavit to a writ of attachment to be amended. Erstein v. Rothschild, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 22 Fed. 61.

And a similar course has been pursued in the case of a defective affidavit for garnishment although forbidden by the laws of the state in which the proceeding was held. Booth v. Denike, (W. D. Tex. 1894) 65 Fed. 43.

And amending the distinctive and special proceedings in attachment authorized in favor of the United States against defaulting and delinquent postmasters, contractors, and other officers, agents, and employees of the post office as regulated by R. S. sec. 924 (Attachment, vol. I, p. 483) has been allowed. Erstein v. Rothschild, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 22 Fed. 61.

And the adding of a seal to a writ of attachment issued by the state court in a case properly removed from the state to a federal court has been permitted. Wolf v. Cook, (E. D. Wisc. 1899) 40 Fed. 432.

Citizenship.—Where, in a petition for removal, counsel through misinformation erroneously stated the citizenship of the plaintiff, the federal court may permit an amendment after removal accurately stating the fact so as to show that the court had jurisdiction. Wilbur v. Red Jacket Consol. Coal, etc., Co., (S. D. W. Va. 1907) 153 Fed. 662. See also to same effect Kinney v. Columbia Sav., etc., Ass'n, (1903) 191 U. S. 78, 24 S. Ct. 30, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 103. This subject is more fully considered in notes to Judicial Code, sec. 37, supra, this title, vol. 5, at p. 418, b. As to Citizenship.

And an amendment may be made changing the date of a summons where necessary to validate the writ. Gilbert v. South Carolina, etc., Exposition Co., (C. C. S. C. 1901) 113 Fed. 523.

Where a writ of summons, dated July 16, 1903, and returnable "on the first Tuesday of October next," for want of opportunity was not served on the defendant until May 10, 1909, and through oversight the return day was not changed, the plaintiff was held to be entitled, under the liberal amendment statutes of New Hampshire, to amend the same by inserting the appropriate return date of service. Stone v. Spear, (C. C. N. H. 1910) 175 Fed. 584.

Designation of district.—Where a declaration in an action in a federal court, a copy of which was served upon defendants with the summons, was properly entitled, in the district and division of the district in which defendants resided, but through mistake the summons required them to appear in another division of the district, it was held that such fact was not ground for abatement of the suit; but that the court had power in its discretion to permit an amendment of the summons, and its re-service in the amended form. Caraway v. Kentucky Refining Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 189, 90 C. C. A. 59.

Description of cause of action and of parties.—The statutes extend the power of the court to allow an amendment with a view to shall correct the description of the cause of action and of the parties at any stage of the case and in respect to any proceeding in it, whether in process or pleadings, and the power should be exercised in every case where right and justice require it, and the refusal of it will prevent an injured party from obtaining redress, subject, however, to the proviso that the amendment shall work no injury to the other party. Hernan v. American Bridge Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 167 Fed. 930, 93 C. C. A. 350.

Misnomer.—Changing the name of the plaintiff in a summons so as to conform to the complaint has been allowed. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. James, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1891) 48 Fed. 148, 1 C. C. A. 53.

And the plaintiff may in some cases be permitted to amend the record by substituting the name of the real defendant intended. Clemmens v. Washington Park Steamboat Co., (E. D. Pa. 1909) 171 Fed. 168.

In Bainum v. American Bridge Co., (W. D. Pa. 1905) 141 Fed. 179, it appears that the plaintiff's statement, in an action for personal injury against a foreign corporation, alleged to be a corporation of New Jersey, specifically set out the facts, clearly identifying the defendant, the work in which it was engaged, and the time and place of the injury. There were in fact two corporations, closely connected and having the same name, except that one was "of New Jersey" and the other "of New York." Both had the same resident agent, on whom the process was served, and the same attorneys, who entered their joint answer, and prepared the case for trial, when it was discovered that the New York corporation was in fact the one doing the work; and it was held that the court had power, under the text R. S. sec. 948 and R. S. sec. 954, infra, p. 98, to permit the plaintiff to amend by substituting the name of the real defendant intended, and that such power would be exercised, especially where objection was not made until such time had elapsed as would bar a new action.

Removal proceedings.—A petition and bond for removal are in the nature of process. They constitute the process by which the case is transferred from the state to the federal court and may be amended, where diversity of citizenship is not clearly shown, to make them sufficient in that respect. Kinney v. Columbia Sav., etc., Ass'n, (1903) 101 U. S. 78, 24 S. Ct. 30, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 103.

A federal court, into which a cause has been removed, has power to permit such amendments of process or pleadings as justice requires and as are permissible under the state statutes, provided they do not offend the federal statutes or decisions on the subject. Stone v. Searce, (C. C. N. H. 1910) 175 Fed. 584.

And affirmative averments have been amended in petitions for removal of causes to a federal court by the insertion of the necessary averments or even by an entire change of the petition by alleging another ground for removal than that contained in the petition. Woolridge v. McKenna, (W. D. Tenn. 1881) 8 Fed. 650.

For further consideration of the subject of amendments in removal proceedings, see notes to Judicial Code, sec. 37, supra, this title, vol. 5, at pp. 416-421.

Returns of officers.—The general rule seems to be that the court has the discretion to allow a return to be amended in all cases, with or without notice, but that such amended return cannot affect the rights of third persons acquired in good faith prior thereto; and whenever an amendment is so made, it cannot be questioned collaterally by the parties to the suit or those claiming under them as privies. Richards v. Ladd, (C. C. Ore. 1879) 6 Savy. C. C. 40, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,804.

So courts have the power to permit officers to amend their returns to both mesne and final process, and the power is exercised liberally in the interest of justice, especially when the rights of third parties are not to be affected by the amendment.

In the exercise of a sound discretion they have allowed officers to amend their returns according to the real facts, after the lapse of several years, and when there is no doubt about the facts such amendments have been allowed after the officer's term has expired. Phenix Ins. Co. v. Wulf, (C. C. Ind. 1880) 1 Fed. 775.

Signature.—Where the purported signature of a deputy affixed to a writ is not his own, but has been affixed by another under an attempted but ineffectual delegation of authority, the writ is not void but voidable merely, for it may be amended by substituting the true for the purported signature of the deputy. Bryan v. Ker, (1911) 222 U. S. 107, 32 S. Ct. 26, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 114.

Statements in summons.—Correcting an erroneous statement in a summons, where the complaint was served with the summons and the defendant knew exactly the nature of the wrong with which he was charged, and could not be misled or injured, has been held proper. Chamberlain v. Bittersohn, (C. C. S. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 42.

III. AMENDMENTS DENTED

Where no process, regular or irregular, has been issued by the proper authority the court obtains no jurisdiction of the case and there is nothing to amend by.

Middleton Paper Co. v. Rock River Paper Co., (W. D. Wis. 1884) 19 Fed. 252.

If a summons is void, or if it misleads or tends to mislead the defendant or to put him off his guard, or if an amendment would work a surprise on him, or if there be nothing in the record to amend by, the summons may not be amended. Chamberlain v. Bittersohn, (C. C. S. C. 1891) 48 Fed. 42.

Nor may a summons not signed by the clerk and not under the seal of the court be amended. Peaslee v. Haberstro, (1879) 1 Blatchf. 472, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 10,884; Dwight v. Merritt, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 614.

Sec. 949. [Priority of cases in which a state is a party.] When a State is a party, or the execution of the revenue laws of a State is enjoined or stayed, in any suit in a court of the United States, such State or the party claiming under the revenue laws of a State, the execution whereof is enjoined or stayed, shall be entitled, on showing sufficient reason, to have the cause heard at any time after it is docketed, in preference to any civil cause pending in such court between private parties. [R. S.]

JUDICIARY

See also the provisions for speedy hearing of applications for preliminary injunctions in certain cases, Judicial Code, § 266, as amended, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 983, and section 17 of the Clayton Act of Oct. 15, 1914, ch. 323, infra, this title, p. 139.

Precedence on the docket of the Supreme Court of cases on writ of error to revise the judgment of a state court in any criminal case, see Judicial Code, § 253, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 920.

Discretion of court.—This statute is not imperative. It does not provide that all the cases named in the section shall have preference over others on the docket, but only such as upon a showing the court is of the opinion should be heard out of their order. Hoge v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 1, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 781.

And the court will not, in preference to cases pending between private parties, set down for argument a case in which the execution of the revenue laws of the state has been enjoined, unless it sufficiently appears that the operations of the government of the state will be embarrassed by delay. Hoge v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 1, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 781.

Implied power to enjoin.—This section shows that the federal court may enjoin and stay the revenue officers of the states. Board of Liquidation v. McComb, (1875) 92 U. S. 531, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 623; Parsons v. Marcy, (E. D. Va. 1885) 23 Fed. 113.

A motion to advance cannot under this Act be made, except in behalf of a state or by a party claiming under its laws. Ward v. Maryland, (1870) 12 Wall. 162, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 260.

Sufficient reason is not shown for granting a preference where the only dispute is as to the liability of the property of a single owner to taxation, and the value of the property and the amount of the revenue to be derived therefrom does not appear. Hoge v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 1, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 781.

State as nominal plaintiff.—Although a suit be nominally by a state as the plaintiff, yet where the real plaintiffs are individuals (as, for instance, in quo warranto proceedings, where the state is plaintiff ex relatione) the court will not advance it even by consent of counsel on both sides. Miller v. The State, (1870) 12 Wall. 159, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 259.

A suit against a tax collector for alleged wrongs done the plaintiff in the collection of taxes due a state is not a suit to which the state is a party, and where no injunction is issued restraining the execution by the collector of any of his official duties such suit is not entitled to a hearing in preference to others under the provisions of this section. Carter v. Greenhow, (1883) 109 U. S. 64, 3 S. Ct. 8, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 860.

And cases in which the revenue laws of the state have been enjoined or stayed are to be advanced only on motion of the state or the party claiming under such laws, or when it is shown that the operations of the government of a state will be embarrassed by delay. Central R. Co. v. Bourbon County, (1886) 116 U. S. 538, 6 S. Ct. 601, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 725.

The ordinances of municipal corporations levying taxes cannot be classed as revenue laws of a state.—Congress seems to have intended to give to the state the right to preference in hearing when itself a party to a cause pending in this court, and a like preference when the execution of the revenue laws of a state is enjoined or suspended, to any party claiming under such laws. This preference is given, plainly enough, because of the presumed importance of such cases to the administration and internal welfare of the states, and because of their dignity as equal members of the Union. The reasons for preference do not apply to municipal corporations, more than to railroad and many other corporations. Davenport City v. Dows, (1872) 15 Wall. 380, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 96.

Sec. 950. [Notice of case for trial.] In all civil actions in the courts of the United States either party may notice the same for trial. [R. S.]

R. S. sec. 951 relates to claims for credits in suits by United States against individuals, and is given in CLAIMS, vol. 2, p. 211.

R. S. sec. 952 relates to claim for a credit in suits under postal laws and is given in CLAIMS, vol. 2, p. 215.

A fourteen days' notice for trial required by statute practice has been adopted in the trial of causes in a federal court sitting in that state, such notice being regarded as a matter of practice, within the meaning of R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21. Rosenbach v. Dreyfuss, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 2 Fed. 23.

Sec. 953. [Bill of exceptions.] That a bill of exceptions allowed in any cause shall be deemed sufficiently authenticated if signed by the judge of the court in which the cause was tried, or by the presiding judge thereof if more than one judge sat at the trial of the cause, without any seal of the court or judge annexed thereto. And in case the judge before whom the cause has heretofore been or may hereafter be tried is, by reason of death, sickness, or other disability, unable to hear and pass upon the motion for a new trial and allow and sign said bill of exceptions, then the judge who succeeds such trial judge, or any other judge of the court in which the cause was tried, holding such court thereafter, if the evidence in such cause has been or is taken in stenographic notes, or if the said judge is satisfied by any other means that he can pass upon such motion and allow a true bill of exceptions, shall pass upon said motion and allow and sign such bill of exceptions; and his ruling upon such motion and allowance and signing of such bill of exceptions shall be as valid as if such ruling and allowance and signing of such bill of exceptions had been made by the judge before whom such cause was tried; but in case said judge is satisfied that owing to the fact that he did not preside at the trial, or for any other cause, that he can not fairly pass upon said motion, and allow and sign said bill of exceptions, then he may in his discretion grant a new trial to the party moving therefor. [R. S.]

This section was amended so as to read as above by the Act of June 5, 1900, ch. 717, § 1, 31 Stat. L. 270, entitled "An Act relating to the allowance of exceptions."

Originally this section was as follows:

"SEC. 953. A bill of exceptions allowed in any cause shall be deemed sufficiently authenticated if signed by the judge of the court in which the cause was tried, or by the presiding judge thereof, if more than one judge sat on the trial of the cause, without any seal of court or judge being annexed thereto."

A general power to grant new trials, in cases where there has been a trial by jury, is conferred upon federal courts by Judicial Code, sec. 269, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1047.

I. IN GENERAL

The District Court of the United States for Porto Rico is within the terms of this statute. Guardian Assur. Co. of London v. Quintana, (1913) 227 U. S. 100, 33 S. Ct. 236, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 437.

The clerk is without authority to certify up anything, except that made of record by the orders of the court. Rupert v. U. S. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 87, 104 C. C. A. 255.

This section adds nothing to the powers of the appellate court with reference to bills of exceptions when once allowed. It is thoroughly settled that the appellate tribunal has no power to remodel a bill of exceptions. Murphy v. Milford, etc., St. R. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1913) 210 Fed. 135, 126 C. C. A. 840.

For a summary of the rules to be observed in the preparation and presentation of bills of exception see Scaife v. Western North Carolina Land Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1898) 87 Fed. 308, 59 U. S. App. 28, 30 C. C. A. 661, and cases there cited.

II. WHAT CONSTITUTES BILL OF EXCEPTIONS

Where a statement is made and signed by the judge as to the facts in the case and the rulings on them, it may be sufficient evidence of their truth. But this does not amount to a bill of exceptions so that a writ of error lies unless it appears that the party objected at the trial to the rulings and wished the exceptions noted and reduced to a bill. It must appear further that the exceptions were persisted in. U. S.

In Herbert v. Butler, (1877) 97 U. S. 319, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 958, the court said: "Is there a bill of exceptions? The document relied on by the plaintiff in error as constituting such a bill, and certified from the court below as part of the record, is appended to the record of the pleadings and judgment, and commences as follows: 'The following case and exceptions is agreed on by the attorneys for Jasper K. Herbert, plaintiff, and Benjamin F. Butler, defendant.' Then follows the title of the cause, a record of the proceedings had, and the evidence given at the trial, including the rulings of the judge and the exceptions thereto; and the case thus presented closes with the judge's certificate, as follows: 'Settled as within, pursuant to the above consent. Sept. 10, 1875. (Signed) Charles L. Benedict.' If this paper had been entitled a 'bill of exceptions,' instead of a 'case and exceptions,' there could not be any doubt that it would be a sufficient bill. It has all the requisites of a bill, except the mere name. A seal is not required, being expressly dispensed with by the act of 1872 (17 Stat. 197; Rev. Stat. sec. 953); and we had before decided that a seal is not essential in the courts of the United States. Generes v. Campbell, (1871) 11 Wall. 193, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 110. It has the sanction and signature of the judge, and, though settled after the trial, it was agreed upon by the parties; and hence it is free from objections which have prevailed in other cases. Generes v. Bonnemer, (1869) 7 Wall. 564, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 227; Graham v. Bayne, (1855) 18 How. 60, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 265. We think it is a sufficient bill of exceptions."

III. SIGNATURE

1. In General

The section provides that when more than one judge sits at a trial, and one or more of the sitting judges may authenticate the bill of exceptions. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 188, 5 U. S. App. 443, 5 C. C. A. 461.

In Warren v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 718, 106 C. C. A. 156, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 800, the court said: "What purports to be a bill of exceptions in the record is not authenticated by the certificate of the trial judge, and the proceedings at the trial are therefore not open to review."

In Malony v. Adair, (1899) 175 U. S. 281, 20 S. Ct. 115, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 163, before the passage of the amendment, it was held that under the original section of the Revised Statutes a bill of exceptions not signed by the judge who tried the case, but by his successor in office, was not sufficiently authenticated.

2. Agreement of Counsel

A bill of exceptions unauthenticated by the trial judge cannot be given validity by the consent of the counsel, stipulating as to its correctness. Malony v. Adair, (1899) 175 U. S. 281, 20 S. Ct. 115, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 163.

If the trial judge is able officially to sign the bill of exceptions, it is not competent for the counsel to dispense with his action and rely upon an agreed statement of the facts and the law of the case as tried, nor can they agree that another than the trial judge may perform his function in that regard. Malony v. Adair, (1899) 175 U. S. 281, 20 S. Ct. 115, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 163.

"A bill of exceptions can be signed only by the judge who actually tried the case, and . . . the signature of the trial judge cannot be waived by counsel consenting that the bill as presented is correct." German Ins. Co. v. Manning, (S. D. Ind. 1900) 100 Fed. 581.

3. Time of Signing

This section neither in terms nor by implication limits the time within which exceptions shall be filed or allowed, nor does it aid in determining that question. New York, etc., R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 188, 5 U. S. App. 443, 5 C. C. A. 461.

Nor has it any reference to an application to extend the time to make, file, and serve a bill of exceptions. Talbot v. Press Pub. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 80 Fed. 567.

Generally speaking, however, a bill of exceptions should be signed at the term in

After the term has expired, without the court’s control over the case being reserved by standing rule or special order, and especially after a writ of error has been entered in the Supreme Court, all authority of the court below to allow a bill of exceptions then first presented, or to alter or amend a bill of exceptions already allowed and filed, is at an end. Michigan Ins. Bank v. Eldred, (1891) 143 U. S. 293, 12 S. Ct. 450, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 162.

A bill of exceptions cannot be considered by an appellate court unless it was duly presented to and allowed by the trial judge during the term at which the trial was had, or within the time as extended by an order made during such term, or where there is a rule of court on the subject during the time so fixed, or an extension granted before its expiration. Oxford, etc., R. Co. v. Union Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 723, 82 C. C. A. 609.

But in Pacific Bank v. Hannah, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1898) 90 Fed. 723, 32 C. C. A. 523, the court said: “A motion has been made to dismiss the writ of error on the ground that the bill of exceptions, although filed within the time at which judgment was rendered, was not presented to, and allowed by, the judge of the court below until after the expiration of the term. We think that the fact that the bill of exceptions was filed within the term at which judgment was rendered is sufficient to preserve the rights of a party in presenting the bill of exceptions for allowance and settlement.”

By agreement of the parties made during the term, a bill of exceptions may be signed after the expiration of the term. Waldron v. Waldron, (1895) 156 U. S. 361, 15 S. Ct. 383, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 453. See to the same effect Schmidt v. Standard Steel Car Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 202 Fed. 1023, 129 C. C. A. 664, wherein the court said: “The parties having stipulated reasonably for settlement of the bill of exceptions, we are satisfied that the trial judge should have signed it, even though the term had expired.”

Where a bill of exceptions was not signed by the trial judge, but was signed by the district judge then presiding at that circuit after the trial judge had left the circuit, the bill was not sufficiently authenticated, but as the counsel presenting the bill had done all that he could and the district judge should have extended the time for signing the bill instead of signing it himself, it was permitted that the trial judge might sign the bill nunc pro tunc at a subsequent term held by him in the same district. Western Dredging, etc., Co. v. Heldenmaier, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 179, 53 C. C. A. 625.

The allowance of an appeal from a decree, together with the approval of a superseded bond and the issuance of a citation may be followed by the settling and signing of a bill of exceptions where the bill was presented for settlement before such allowance and during the term at which the decree was rendered. Cook v. Klonos, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 164 Fed. 529, 90 C. C. A. 403, modified on a different question in (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 108 Fed. 700, 94 C. C. A. 144.

No bill of exceptions is sufficiently authenticated unless signed by a judge who sat at the trial within the time required by law. The omission or failure to sign the same cannot be cured by a certificate of the judge that it was allowed, settled, and signed within such time. Oxford, etc., R. Co. v. Union Bank, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 723, 82 C. C. A. 609.

4. Where Signed

Where the United States district judge for the district of Porto Rico left the jurisdiction before signing a bill of exceptions, he should return to Porto Rico and sign it; but in case that cannot be done, the bill of exceptions should be prepared and agreed upon by counsel on both sides, and counsel should stipulate that it is correct and that the judge may allow and sign the same outside of his district. (1910) 29 Op. Att’y-Gen. 321.

5. How Signed

It cannot be regarded as a proper signature by a judge to a bill of exceptions or as a sufficient authentication where the signature is by the initials only of the judge. Price v. U. S., (1888) 125 U. S. 240, 8 S. Ct. 848, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 743, followed in U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1911) 222 U. S. 283, 32 S. Ct. 101, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 200, wherein the court said: “The paper in the record styled ‘Exceptions to the charge to jury,’ initialed ‘J. B. McP.,’ trial judge,’ and signed by the plaintiff, is not a bill of exceptions.”

Proper signature assumed.—Where a bill of exceptions is signed by the district judge for the Circuit Court, and where it does not appear that the circuit justice and circuit judge were present at the trial, it will be assumed that the trial was had before the district judge alone. Cooke v. Avery, (1893) 147 U. S. 375, 13 S. Ct. 340, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 200.

IV. SEALING

Sealing of the bill of exceptions is no longer necessary; but this does not render the other requisites any the less

V. Death

Where the judge of a federal court dies, leaving a pending motion for a new trial undecided, and there is no record from which his successor can fairly pass upon the motion and allow and sign a bill of exceptions, his only authority under the statute is to grant a new trial. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Abee, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 145 Fed. 593, 76 C. C. A. 283, 7 Ann. Cas. 491.

But on the death of a federal judge before whom a criminal cause was tried, before a motion for new trial has been passed on, his successor has power, under this section, to pass upon and overrule such motion where the evidence has been taken and preserved in stenographic notes, and, having such power, he has further power to proceed in the case and to render judgment on the verdict. Meldrum v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 177, 80 C. C. A. 545, 10 Ann. Cas. 324.

"In cases wherein a deceased party is deprived of the opportunity to secure a bill of exceptions without fault upon his part the remedy lies in granting him a new trial; ... the motion for a new trial may be entertained, although not filed until after the lapse of a year or more from the date of the judgment." German Ins. Co. v. Manning, (S. D. Ins. 1900) 100 Fed. 581.

In Guardian Assur. Co. v. Quintana, (1913) 227 U. S. 100, 33 S. Ct. 236, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 437, a motion to dismiss a writ of error for failure to file the record was denied without prejudice to renewal of the same for further lack of diligence, where the plaintiff in error opposed the motion because the bill of exceptions was yet unsettled in the hands of the court, and the facts showed that, while there had been a delay in the settlement of the bill, the trial judge had died since the trial, neither party had moved for settlement, and there had been doubt as to the applicability of this section to the case which was decided in the District Court of Porto Rico.

VI. Disability

Resignation.—"Disability" as used in this section means incapacity to do a legal act and includes a resignation. McIntyre v. Modern Woodmen of America, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 1, 121 C. C. A. 1.

In Sanborn v. Bay, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 194 Fed. 37, 114 C. C. A. 57, it appeared that the case was tried and judgment rendered on November 1, 1910, at the October term of the Circuit Court for the district of South Dakota, by Judge Carland, then district judge for that district. After Judge Carland's appointment as circuit judge and designation to serve a term in the Court of Commerce, Judge Willard, the district judge for the district of Minnesota, was by order of the senior circuit judge of that circuit designated and appointed to act as district judge for the district of South Dakota until the appointment and qualification of Judge Carland's successor. On March 24, 1911, at the instance of the plaintiff in error, Judge Willard, who was then presiding in the Circuit Court pursuant to his designation and appointment, allowed and signed a bill of exceptions in the case which both parties had agreed to as correct. In the Circuit Court of Appeals it was claimed that Judge Willard had no power to perform those acts and a motion was made to suppress the bill of exceptions and dismiss the writ of error. On this question the court said: "Was there any such disability on the part of Judge Carland as authorized his successor, Judge Willard, to sign and allow the bill of exceptions in question? When Judge Carland was appointed and confirmed Circuit Judge and accepted the position, he ceased to be District Judge of the court over which he presided when this case was tried. This seems to be conceded. The only question is: Did he by becoming a Circuit Judge retain the jurisdiction which before that time he had over the case? By the act approved June 18, 1910 (chapter 306, 36 Stat. pt. 1, p. 539) the Court of Commerce was created. The President was authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, 'to appoint five additional Circuit Judges ... who shall hold office during good behavior and who shall be from time to time designated and assigned by the Chief Justice of the United States for service in the Circuit Court for any district, or Circuit Court of Appeals for any Circuit or in the Commerce Court.' These judges were, in the first instance, to constitute the new Court of Commerce for terms from one to five years each respectively. They were not appointed to be Circuit Judges of any particular circuit. On the contrary, they were appointed to be Circuit Judges, subject to assignment from time to time by the Chief Justice for service either in some Circuit Court, some Circuit Court of Appeals, or in the Court of Commerce. It does not appear that Judge Carland has ever been assigned for service in the Circuit Court for the District of South Dakota, and certainly it does not appear that he had been so assigned prior to March 24, 1911, when Judge Willard allowed and signed the bill of exceptions in this case. We therefore conclude he then had no power to act judicially in any matter pending or requiring consideration in the court over which he formerly presided; and inasmuch as the allowance and signing of the bill of exceptions is a judicial act (Maloney v. Adair, (1899) 175 U. S. 281, 20 S. Ct. 115, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 183), he had no power to allow or sign it in this case. The remaining question is: Did this want of power or disqualification amount to a 'disability' within the meaning of the act of June 5, 1900, which enabled Judge Willard, his actual successor, to allow and sign the bill of exceptions in this case? The latter was authorized and empowered to do so only in case the judge who tried the case was 'by reason of death, sickness or other disability unable to allow and sign the same.' It is contended by defendant in error that the 'other disability' here referred to means a disability of like character to that arising from 'death or sickness' which immediately precede the words 'other disability,' and they cite the case of American Bonding, etc., Co. v. Takanashi, [C. C. A 9th Cir. 1901] 40 C. C. A. 257, 111 Fed. 126, in support of their contention. This case involved the question whether the casual or temporary absence of the trial judge from his circuit authorized a judge, assigned to aid or assist him, to allow and sign a bill of exceptions in a case tried before the regular judge himself. It was held in that case that such casual absence did not amount to the 'disability' contemplated by the amended act of June 5, 1900, and some expressions are found in the opinion sustaining the contention of the defendant in error in this case. While we might well agree with the conclusion reached in that particular case, we cannot think the act of 1900 was intended by Congress to limit the 'disqualification' referred to, to one occasioned by physical or mental ailment. This in our opinion would be too narrow a construction. It would not seem to accomplish the legislative purpose or afford the relief which Congress intended to afford by the language actually employed. Inability to perform duty occasioned by death or sickness was obviously not the only disability Congress had in mind. It employed a comprehensive term sufficient to cover all disqualifications, and we do not think the artificial rule noscitur a sociis invoked by the counsel was ever intended to be employed to thwart an obvious purpose. Nothing in fact could create a more effective 'disability' than an utter disqualification of the presiding judge to perform the act which Congress attempted to provide for. We accordingly hold that a voluntary resignation of his office (which is practically the situation in this case) by a trial judge is an effective disqualification within the meaning of the act of 1900.'

Absence from district.—The disability of a judge under this section means a physical or mental disability arising from either death, sickness, insanity, or disorder of a like character by reason of which the judge would be disabled from the performance of judicial function. The mere absence from the district or circuit in which the case was tried is not such a disability as to allow the signing of a bill of exceptions by a judge other than the trial judge. Western Dredging, etc., Co. v. Heldmaier, [C. C. A 7th Cir. 1901] 111 Fed. 125, 49 C. C. A. 284.

Effect.—An order for a new trial, when the application for it is made in due time, is the proper remedy for the incapacity of the judge who tried the case to settle and sign the bill of exceptions. Manning v. German Ins. Co., [C. C. A 8th Cir. 1901] 107 Fed. 52, 48 C. C. A. 144.

In Brent v. Chas. H. Lilly Co., [W. D. Wash. 1913] 202 Fed. 332, the court said: "There was a full stenographic report of the proceedings of the trial, the notes of which have now been extended. The defendant is therefore not entitled, on account of the resignation of the trial judge prior to the ruling on the motion for a new trial and settlement of the bill of exceptions, to a new trial and settlement as a matter of right."

VII. OBSERVANCE OF RULES OF COURT

A party who has not presented to a succeeding judge a bill of exceptions containing a transcript of the evidence, as required by a rule of court, because of his failure to pay the reporter's fees, is not entitled to a new trial as of course. Thorndyke v. Gunnison, [C. C. A 9th Cir. 1909] 174 Fed. 137, 98 C. C. A. 171.

Sec. 954. [Defects of form—amendments.] No summons, writ, declaration, return, process, judgment, or other proceedings in civil causes, in any court of the United States, shall be abated, arrested, quashed, or reversed for any defect or want of form; but such court shall proceed and give judgment according as the right of the cause and matter in law shall appear to it, without regarding any such defect, or want of form, except those which, in cases of demurrer, the party demurring specially sets down, together with his demurrer, as the cause thereof; and such court shall amend every such defect and want of form, other than those which the party demurring so expresses; and may at any time permit either of the parties to amend any defect in the process or pleadings, upon such conditions as it shall, in its discretion and by its rules, prescribe. [R. S.]

See the general provision for "amendment of any process," etc., in R. S. sec. 948, supra, p. 90.

Amendment of pleadings in suits at law or in equity, so as to obviate an objection that such suit was not brought on the right side of the court, is authorized by Judicial Code, § 274a, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1059.

Amendment in the District Court or in the Appellate Court of a defective averment of diverse citizenship in a suit brought in or removed to the District Court is authorized by Judicial Code, § 274c, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1061.

For amendments of writs of error, see R. S. sec. 1006, and cases thereunder, infra, p. 106.

I. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

Purpose of section.—The jurisdiction has been conferred by Acts of Congress upon the courts of the United States so to supervise the various steps in a cause as to prevent hardships and injustice, and that the merits of a cause may be fairly tried. Eberly v. Moore, (1860) 24 How. 147, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 612.

And of the corresponding section of the Judiciary Act of 1789 (1 Stat. 91) it has been said that it "was designed to free the administration of justice in the federal courts from all subtle, artificial and technical rules and modes of proceeding in any way calculated to hinder and delay the determination of causes in those courts upon their very merits." In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

Scope of section.—This section is not confined to civil cases at law, but extends to all civil cases, and includes equity cases, which are as well civil cases as law cases are. Daniel v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 839.

And it is sufficiently comprehensive to embrace causes of appellate as well as original jurisdiction. Kennedy v. Georgia State Bank, (1850) 5 How. 586, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 1909.

Under the authority thus given amendments have been allowed by a long line of decisions of the Supreme Court covering every step in a case from the summons to the verdict and judgment. McDonald v. Nebraska, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 171, 41 C. C. A. 278, and cases there cited; In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

And on a writ of error the declaration, pleas, and finding must be taken together, and if from these it appears that the judgment is according to the right of the cause and matter in law, then all defects of form are to be disregarded and the judgment must stand. Stockton v. Bishop, (1846) 4 How. 155, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 918.

But the power to amend "must not be confounded with the power to create. It presupposes an existing record, which is defective by reason of some clerical error or mistake, or of the omission of some entry which should have been made during the progress of the case, or of the loss of some document originally filed therein. The difference between creating and amending a record is analogous to that between the construction and repair of a piece of personal property. . . . The power to recreate a record, no evidence of which exists, has been the subject of

II. Construction and Application Generally

Relation to English law.—This section, which was section 32 of the Judiciary Act of 1789, was founded on the English statute of 32 Henry VIII., and is no broader. Philipps, etc., Constr. Co. v. Seymour, (1875) 91 U. S. 646, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 341. See also Duluth St. R. Co. v. Speaks, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 573, 123 C. C. A. 90. But compare Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Paine 468, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065.

The doctrine of the English courts in all cases of ordinary suits excluding fines and recoveries is that judgments and records are amendable only when the case is within the reach of some statute and where there is something to amend by. Albers v. Whitney, (1840) 1 Story 310, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 137.

Liberally construed.—Under the statutes of the United States there exists the right of liberal amendment. Northrop v. Mercantile Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. S. C. 1903) 119 Fed. 969.

And this section has been liberally construed by all the federal courts in favor of allowing amendments. Portland Gold Mining Co. v. Stratton’s Independence, (D. C. Colo. 1912) 196 Fed. 714. See also to same effect In re Royce Dry Goods Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 133 Fed. 100; Tenas Basin Levee Dist. v. Tenas Delta Land Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 736, 123 C. C. A. 40.

"This is a remedial statute, and must be construed liberally to accomplish its object. It not only enables the courts of the United States, but it enjoins it upon them as a duty, to disregard the niceties of form, which often stand in the way of justice, and to give judgment according as the right of the cause and matter in law shall appear to them." Jerman v. Turner, (1851) 12 How. 39, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 883.

"When a party gets his cause of action, or his defense, or his appeal, before a court of competent jurisdiction, he should not be turned out before trial of the merits of the controversy, except in obedience to a clear statutory mandate, or on a showing of gross carelessness or bad faith. The absolute dismissal of a plea or an appeal, for error in a matter of mere procedure, is in reality the infliction of the severest penalty for a minor fault, and is suggestive of the excessive punishments formerly inflicted for minor offenses in the administration of the criminal law. Conformity to rules of procedure is important, but usually it may be secured by imposing as a condition of amendment the payment of costs or other penalty, short of dismissal, on the party or his counsel, as circumstances may require, for negligence or inadvertence." Bedford v. Miller, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 368, 129 C. C. A. 44.

"Form" defined.—It is defect of form whenever the defendant must of necessity be guilty of a breach of law and have incurred the penalty for which the suit was brought, if the allegation of the declaration be true. This constitutes the difference between form and substance. Jacob v. U. S., (1821) 1 Brock. 520, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,167.

Action brought without authority.—This statute permits amendments to be made only in a case properly instituted, and only then in matters of form, but it does not allow the court, where an action was originally brought without authority or sanction in law, to so amend the original writ and declaration as to make new parties plaintiff and thereby sustain an action that was originally brought without authority or institute the same. Lusk v. Kimball, (W. D. Va. 1898) 87 Fed. 545.

Former equity rule No. 29 (see present equity rule 28) relating to amendments was held not to entitle the complainant as of right to amend his bill after a defendant thereto has been sustained. McKenny v. Supreme Lodge, etc., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 961, 104 C. C. A. 117.

Right to special demurrer.—This section expressly gives the right of filing a special demurrer in all actions in the courts of the United States. Cage v. Jeffries, (1839) Hemst. 409, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,987.

Debt in the detinum only is the proper form of action against an executor if he has not made himself personally responsible by a devastavit. And it is matter of form which can be taken advantage of by special demurrer only. Childress v. Emory, (1823) 8 Wheat. 642, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 705.

Effect of general demurrer.—The averment in an affidavit of defense that the facts alleged in the statement of the claim do not show a cause of action amounts to a general demurrer, and will not under this section be considered as in bar of the cause of action. American Alkali Co. v. Campbell, (E. D. Pa. 1902) 113 Fed. 398.

And in Brooks v. Pullman Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 445, 130 C. C. A. 81, the court held that a general demurrer to a declaration consisting of a narrative of facts and circumstances framed with little regard for the requirements of good pleading, mixed with conclusions of law and all so intermingled as to leave it difficult to connect that which is properly from that which is improperly alleged, could not be sustained. The proper way to raise these objections was by special demurrer.

III. Power of Court

Discretionary power of court.—The statute is not a grant of a new power but rather a declaratory definition of the power of

It grants the fullest power and discretion as to amendments to every federal court. In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 509.

It has uniformly been held in the federal courts that the allowance or refusal of leave to amend pleadings in actions at law is discretionary with the trial court, and that its action is not reviewable except in case of gross abuse of discretion. Truckee River General Electric Co. v. Benner, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 211 Fed. 79, 127 C. C. A. 507.

So it has been said: "The federal statute allowing amendments is liberal, and should be construed liberally to promote trials on the merits. When a demurrer is sustained to a bill, the usual order is that the plaintiff have leave to amend. It is a general rule in the federal courts that it is in the discretion of the court to allow or to refuse to allow an amendment. It is often held that this discretion will not be interfered with, except in cases of a plain abuse of it. Where it is possible to avoid it, the court should never allow justice to be defeated and wrong to triumph by a mere mistake or unskilfulness in pleading." Tenas Basin Levee Dist. v. Tenas Delta Land Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 736, 123 C. C. A. 40.

So all matters of amendments to the pleadings, particularly including trial amendments, are within the discretion of the trial court, and its action allowing or refusing amendments is not reviewable on writ of error. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. Phillips, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1900) 102 Fed. 23, 41 C. C. A. 263.

But notwithstanding the general rule that, in the absence of abuse, the discretion of the court as to allowing amendments will not be interfered with by an appellate court, such courts have, in some instances, interfered and reversed decrees and remedied cases, with direction that the rejected amendments be allowed. Tenas Basin Levee Dist. v. Tenas Delta Land Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 736, 123 C. C. A. 40.

And there is said to be an absolute abuse of discretion where the lower court's refusal to permit an amendment is in direct conflict with the explicit language of the mandate of the Supreme Court. U. S. v. Lehigh V. R. Co., (1911) 220 U. S. 257, 31 S. Ct. 387, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 458.

And it has been held that it was an abuse of discretion to allow an amendment during the trial, without imposing terms, by way of a continuance or otherwise, which would prevent the possibility of prejudice resulting to defendant. Great Northern R. Co. v. Herron, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 49, 68 C. C. A. 559.

Parties absent from record and beyond jurisdiction.—It is the duty of the court to exercise its discretion over amendments for the full protection of those who are absent from the record and beyond the jurisdiction of the court. Frank v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1904) 130 Fed. 224.

IV. REMOVED CASES

Power of court generally.—A federal court, into which a cause has been removed, has power to permit such amendments of process or pleadings as justice requires and as are permissible under the state statutes, provided they do not offend the federal statutes or decisions on the subject. Stone v. Speare, (C. C. N. H. 1910) 175 Fed. 584.

So in Kinney v. Columbia Sav., etc., Ass'n, (1903) 191 U. S. 78, 24 S. Ct. 30, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 103, it was said that a petition and bond for removal are in the nature of process; they constitute the process by which the case is transferred from the state to the federal court, and Congress has made ample provision for the amendment of process.

Defective averments in petitions for removal of causes to a federal court may be amended by the insertion of the necessary averments or even by an entire change of the petition by alleging another ground for removal than that contained in the petition. Woolridge v. McKenna, (W. D. Tenn. 1881) 8 Fed. 650.

Similarly, where an action was properly removed from a state court in which proceedings at law and in equity are had, and demurrer was filed on the ground that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action, as it lacked the address, statement of citizenship and proper prayer for relief, and because it was entered erroneously on the law docket of the federal court, this is not sufficient for a dismissal of the complaint, as the defects may be amended and the cause transferred to the equity calendar. Dancel v. United Shoe Machinery Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 120 Fed. 530.

So the removal of a case from a state to a federal court is not effectual to work destruction to a valid but defective process of a state court, and a writ of attachment defective by want of a seal issued by a state court may be amended by the federal court where such amendment would be authorized under the state statute. Wolf v. Cook, (E. D. Wis. 1889) 40 Fed. 432.

V. EFFECT OF STATE STATUTES

The courts of the United States are not implicitly bound by the practice and decisions of the state courts with regard to amendments. Tobey v. Claflin, (1858) 3 Sumn. 379, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,066.

Where Congress has legislated generally upon any such subject, the rules of the state practice in respect thereof are superseded, and the extent and limitations of the power of the United States are to be found in the congressional enactments, and not on the ground of the states. Lange v. Union Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 338, 62 C. C. A. 48.

"The right of the federal court to allow amendments under sec. 954 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is well settled. The right exists quite independently of any state statute, and may be exercised at any stage of the cause, even after submission to the circuit court to the verdict and judgment, and is as applicable to attachment suits as to any others." Bowden v. Burnham, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 59 Fed. 752, 19 U. S. App. 448, 8 C. C. A. 248.

In one case it was said of the Conformity Act (R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21) which it was claimed controlled: "It was not the intention of Congress to require by the passage of the act the adoption by the circuit court of any rule of pleading, practice, or procedure enacted by state statute or announced by the decision of a state court which would restrict the jurisdiction of the federal courts, or prevent the just administration of the law in the light of their own system of jurisprudence, as defined by their constitution as tribunals and the acts of Congress relative to that subject. On the other hand, that act expressly reserves to the judges of those courts the power, and hence imposes upon them the duty, to reject any statute, practice, or decision that would have such an effect. The application to this case of the rules here invoked, which counsel claim have been adopted by some of the courts of Missouri, would sacrifice the merits of the issues which this lawsuit presents to forms of procedure, would impede the administration of justice, and fly in the face of the Act of 1789 (Rev. St. § 954) to the effect that no judgment or other proceeding in a civil cause in any court of the United States shall be arrested or reversed for any defect or want of form." St. Charles v. Stookey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 772, 85 C. C. A. 494.

The general principle has been applied in respect to amendments in garnishment proceedings. Booth v. Denike, (W. D. Tex. 1894) 65 Fed. 43.

And it has been decided that the federal courts are not bound to follow the state courts in their construction of local statutes regulating the amendment of pleadings in suits at law. Manitowoc Malting Co. v. Fuechtwanger, (E. D. Wis. 1906) 168 Fed. 983.

This section does not perpetuate nor re-establish the system of special demurrer in states whose statutes have established different and inconsistent rules of pleading. Rosenbach v. Dreyfuss, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 1 Fed. 391.

State practice may be followed.—A federal court may follow the state practice as to amendments where not inconsistent with federal legislation on the subject.

Thus a state law providing that "after issue joined, the plaintiff may, with the leave of the court, amend his original petition; provided the amendment does not alter the substance of his demand by making it different from the one originally brought," may be followed by a federal court. Henderson v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (1887) 123 U. S. 61, 8 S. Ct. 60, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 92.

So where the state statute allows an amendment at any stage of a case as a matter of right, the federal court will not exercise the discretion to deny the right. Hodges v. Kimball, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 845, 34 C. C. A. 103.

And a state statute allowing amendments introducing new causes of action, and thereby changing the decision as to what it does or does not constitute a new cause of action, will be followed. Hodges v. Kimball, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 845, 34 C. C. A. 103.

Effect of other federal enactments.—This section is in no way limited by the provisions of R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, which provides that the federal practice shall conform as near as may be to that of the state courts. Kent v. Bay State Gas Co., (C. C. Del. 1899) 93 Fed. 887.

Although R. S. sec. 914 requires the District Courts of the United States in matters of practice, pleadings, and forms, in actions at law, to conform as nearly as may be to the state practice, R. S. sec. 954 contains the legislation of Congress on the subject of amendments to pleadings in the federal courts, and is paramount to the local state statute. Truckee River Power Electric Co. v. Benner, (C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 211 Fed. 72, 127 C. C. A. 503.

This section does not repeal R. S. sec. 914, providing that federal practice should conform as nearly as possible to the practice of the respective states, but it merely provides for a system of special demurrers in states in which R. S. sec. 914 had effected no change in the system of pleading inconsistent with this section. Rosenbach v. Dreyfus, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 1 Fed. 391.

But this section and R. S. secs. 914, 918 (supra, pp. 21, 77), are in pari materia and should be construed together. Van Doren v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1899) 23 Fed. 260, 35 C. C. A. 282.

VI. TIME WHEN AMENDMENTS ALLOWED

In general.—By the common law amendments were permitted if there was anything to be gained by them, but all amendments were required to be made at the term when the error occurred. But now they may be made at any time before judgment, and in some cases afterwards. Nelson v. Barker, (1844) 3 McLean 379, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 10,101; Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Paine 486, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065.

So in Comings v. The Ida Stockdale, (1874) 22 Pittsb. Leg. J. (Pa.) 9, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 3,052, it was held that an amendment in substance may be made while the proceedings are in fieri, and before judgment.

And "where the record of the case, up to the time of the motion, shows jurisdiction in the particular court, but there is a defect in the allegations of the pleadings with relation to the setting forth of the grounds of that particular jurisdiction, amendment will be allowed upon motion. This may occur either before or during the taking of evidence." Thompson v. Automatic Fire Protection Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1897) 151 Fed. 945.

Allowance subsequent to judgment.—In one of the earlier cases it is held that amendments must be made before final judgment. Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Paine 486, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065.

The general rule, however, seems to be that after the expiration of the term at which a judgment is rendered, there is no power in a court of law to amend a record in order to make it show that which did not appear at the trial. There would be to exercise a revisory or appellate power of the court's own decisions; but, upon proper showing, the power to correct a record by amending a judgment at a subsequent term is thoroughly well established. Bernard v. Abel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 649, 84 C. C. A. 361.

And it is said that "the power to amend its records, to correct mistakes of the clerk or other officer of the court, inadvertencies of counsel, or to supply defects or omissions in the record, even after the lapse of the term, is inherent in courts of justice." Gagnon v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 451, 24 S. Ct. 510, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 745.

And in this connection the Circuit Court of Appeals says: "The decisions of the Supreme Court are controlling authority in this court. A careful examination and review of them discloses the fact that the uniform rule of that court is that judgments at law cannot be vacated or substantially modified by the courts which rendered them, subsequent to the expiration of the terms at which they were entered, in the absence of motions or proceedings for that purpose during such terms; and the only exceptions to that rule are that clerical mistakes, such mistakes of fact not put in issue or passed upon as may be corrected by writ of error coram vobis or on motion in lieu of that writ, and mistakes in the dismissal of a case, may be corrected after the expiration of the terms." Manning v. German Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 32, 49 C. C. A. 144.

Courts have the power to amend their judgments, upon proper showing, within a reasonable time, when no such change of circumstances has occurred as would make an amendment unjust to third persons or to the parties themselves. It happens sometimes, for instance, that applied for verdicts are granted even after error has been brought. Such amendments have often been allowed upon the judge's notes of the evidence at the trial, or upon other evidence clearly establishing the justice of the proposed amendments. Bernard v. Abel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 649, 48 C. C. A. 361.

This power is one to make the record speak the truth. It is salutary, and enables courts to prevent injustice through mere mistake or inadvertence of the judge, or counsel, or the clerk. Bernard v. Abel, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 649, 48 C. C. A. 361.

But this power to amend "must not be confounded with the power to create. It presupposes an existing record, which is defective by reason of some clerical error or mistake, or the omission of some entry which should have been made during the progress of the case, or by the loss of some document originally filed therein." Gagnon v. U. S., (1904) 193 U. S. 451, 24 S. Ct. 510, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 745.

And generally a record cannot lawfully be amended after the term unless there are minutes of the clerk, notes of the judge, or other official evidence by which to amend. Brown v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1892) 30 Fed. 415, 116 C. C. 357.

On appeal—This section forbids a federal court on appeal to notice objections taken there for the first time on mere technical ground. Babbitt v. Burgess, (1873) 2 Dill. 109, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 693.

And the federal courts on appeal have power to allow any amendments of defects in form occurring in the courts below which could have been amended there, or to disregard them in giving judgment. Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Payne 486, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065.

Thus an appellate court has authority to allow amendments in revenue cases or proceedings in rem brought by appeal from the District Court. Anonymous, (1812) 1 Gall. 22, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 444.

So an appeal will not be dismissed on the ground that none was ever lawfully taken, because a receiver of the plaintiff became the surety in the appeal bond on an appeal taken in the name of the plaintiff, but the receiver will be substituted as the plaintiff under the power of amendment authorized by this section. Bowden v. Johnson, (1895) 107 U. S. 251, 2 S. Ct. 246, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 356.

Similarly where one of two defendants dies after the submission of a case to an appellate court, which subsequently affirms a decree in favor of the deceased, its failure to make a substitution for the deceased party is not a substantial error or defect, and it may be disregarded and corrected in a higher court on an appeal from the judgment of affirmance. Wil¬bite v. Skelton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 149 Fed. 67, 78 C. C. A. 635.

But this power does not extend to defects in substance. Such defects may, however, be amended in the lower court on terms. Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Payne 486, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065.

And it is a defect not curable by amendment where a petition for appeal was entitled William A. Freeborn & Co., and prayed for appeal in that name, and those constituting the company nowhere appeared in the proceedings on appeal, and the original action was filed in the name of William A. Freeborn, James F. Freeborn, and Henry P. Gard¬ner. The Protector, (1870) 11 Wall. 82, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 47 (two justices dissenting).

On a writ of error the declaration, plea and finding must be taken together; and if from these it appears that the judgment is according to the right of the cause and matter in law, then all defects in form are to be disregarded and the judgment must stand. Stockton v. Bishop, (1846) 4 How. 155, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 918.
VII. SUMMONS

A summons not signed by the clerk and not under the seal of the court is not amendable. Dwight v. Merritt, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 614.

In an action to recover penalties under the federal act relating to copyrights, a reference to the statute under which the penalties sued for were incurred must be inserted on the summons, and the omission of such indorsement is a defect of substance and is not amendable under this section. Brown v. Pond, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 5 Fed. 31.

Nor can this section be held to be broad enough to permit an amendment of process effectual for the purpose of giving jurisdiction over the person of the defendant, which the process as served was ineffectual to do, where he has not submitted himself to the jurisdiction. Brown v. Pond, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 5 Fed. 31.

But it has been held that a summons of a District Court bearing the test of the chief justice is defective, but under this section may be amended. U. S. v. Turner, (D. C. S. C. 1892) 50 Fed. 734.

And the court may, after a plea in abatement, allow a summons and declaration to be amended by striking out "administrator, etc.," and inserting "executor, etc." Randolph v. Barrett, (1842) 16 Pet. 138, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 914.

VIII. PLEADINGs

1. IN GENERAL

Power of court.—"Conformably to the spirit of this statute, the courts have always been and should be liberal in the allowance of any form of pleading to meet the ends of justice and prevent mere technical objections, to defeat justice." In re Royce Drey Goods Co., (W. D. Mo. 1904) 133 Fed. 100.

Under this section it is permissible to the court to permit an amendment of the pleadings so as to conform to the same kind of remedy which the court holds appropriate to the case and when amended to permit the cause to be transferred to the proper docket. U. S. Bank v. Lyon County, (N. D. Ia. 1892) 48 Fed. 632.

And every error or mistake in the pleadings which does not affect the substantial rights of the adverse party may be cured by amendment. McDonald v. Nebraska, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 171, 41 C. C. A. 278.

But "amendments to a pleading can only state facts in existence at the time that the original pleading was made. A plaintiff cannot, therefore, introduce by an amendment to his complaint facts occurring subsequent to the commencement of the action." Northrup v. Mercantile Trust, etc., Co., (C. C. S. C. 1903) 119 Fed. 969.

Signature to libel.—A libel defective because unsigned except by the proctors as proctors may be amended. Hardy v. Moore, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 843.

On writ of error.—The fact that no replication is put in as to two of three special pleas raising distinct defenses is not a matter for reversal by the Supreme Court, the case having been tried below as if the pleadings had been perfect and in form. Laber v. Cooper, (1868) 7 Wall. 565, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 151.

And defects of form in a writ or declaration not pointed out by demurrer are not good cause for reversing a judgment brought to the Supreme Court by writ of error. Ewing v. Howard, (1868) 7 Wall. 499, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 293.

Remanding cases for amendment.—On reversal for a defect in pleading a case is to be remanded to a court of original jurisdiction for further proceedings, and there the pleadings may be amended. Garland v. Davis, (1846) 4 How. 131, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 907.

2. Declaration, Complaint or Bill in Equity

a. IN GENERAL

So, where a complaint contains any allegation of a ground of recovery, although only inferential, it is within the discretion of the court to permit the defect to be cured by amendment. Great Northern R. Co. v. Herron, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 49, 85 C. C. A. 509.

And a federal court may, in the exercise of judicial discretion, permit an amendment, after trial, of the ad damnum clause of plaintiff's complaint, so as to raise the amount sued for to conform to the proof. Manitowoc Matting Co. v. Fuechswanger, (E. D. Wis. 1908) 169 Fed. 983.

And the fact that an amendment of a complaint was allowed by consent, on application by the plaintiff, after he had sold the cause of action and before the substitution of the purchaser, does not invalidate such amendment. Franklin v. Comrades' Stanford Co. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 737, 70 C. C. A. 171.

An amendment to a pleading which sets forth no new cause of action relates back to the filing of the pleading amended, and the case stands as though the amendment had been then filed. Armstrong Cork Co. v. Merchants' Refrigerating Co. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 184 Fed. 199, 107 C. C. A. 93.

Where no objection was made to the declaration until the close of the evidence, and everything that defendant claimed should have been alleged was proved, and the jury found the facts in favor of the plaintiff, a judgment on the verdict will not be set aside for defects in the declaration. Canadian Pac. R. Co. v. Elliott, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 137 Fed. 904, 70 C. C. A. 242. See also Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Voelker, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 522, 65 C. C. A. 226, 70 L. R. A. 264.

b. Bill in Equity Generally

A bill in equity containing a general prayer for relief which is sufficient to maintain it in its true character may be amended to conform its special prayer to its real purpose. Partee v. Thomas, (W. D. Tenn. 1882) 11 Fed. 769.

So a court of equity may allow an amendment of a bill after deciding against the bill and allowing a demurrer on argument. Hunt v. Roumaniere, (1821) 2 Mason 342, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,898.

And where a suit was brought in equity, and upon demurrer it was held that the complaint was not an adequate remedy at law, the cause may be transferred to the law docket with leave to amend the proceedings to conform therewith. U. S. Bank v. Lyon County, (N. D. Ia. 1892) 48 Fed. 632. And see now Judicial Code, sec. 274a, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1059.

c. Parties

Character or capacity in which plaintiff claims.—Where the plaintiff sued in the wrong capacity the pleadings may be amended on permission granted to prosecute the action in the right capacity. Van Doren v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1890) 93 Fed. 280, 35 C. C. A. 298. See to the same effect Regardan v. Balaklala Consol. Copper Co., (N. D. Cal. 1912) 193 Fed. 189; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Herr, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1912) 193 Fed. 950, 113 C. C. A. 578.

An amendment which, without modifying or changing the facts upon which an action is based, in effect merely indicates the capacity in which the plaintiff is to prosecute the action is clearly within the section. Missouri, etc., R. Co. v. Wulf, (1913) 226 U. S. 570, 33 S. Ct. 135, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 355. Ann. Cas. 1914B 134.

Thus, an omission to show in a declaration, in an action brought by a person as heir at law, how the plaintiff is heir, is not bad on general demurrer. Day v. Chism, (1825) 10 Wheat. 449, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 363.

And a plaintiff, suing as widow to recover for her husband's wrongful death, may be permitted to amend her declaration to change the relation in which she sue's from that of widow to that of ad-

Again, where the complaint in an action on a note alleged that the note was delivered to the plaintiff, it was held proper to amend it so as to read that the note was given to the plaintiff as agent. Pleitman v. McKinnon, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 99, 151 C. C. A. 174.

Residence of party.—An amendment of plaintiff's petition, after verdict and judgment thereon, with no further proceedings taken, by inserting the words "and is a citizen of said state and of the United States of America," after the allegation therein that "plaintiff resides in El Paso, in El Paso county, state of Texas," may be allowed. Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Duthie, (1903) 189 U. S. 76, 23 S. Ct. 610, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 715.

And it is permissible to allow the defendants after they had put in a plea in bar to plead in abatement that the plaintiffs were in reality citizens of the same state with themselves although alleging otherwise. Eberly v. Moore, (1860) 24 How. 147, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 612.

Adding additional party plaintiff.—Leave will not be granted to amend the writ, before the appearance of the defendant or the service of the writ and the filing of pleadings in the cause, by inserting the name of a third person as plaintiff suing for the use of the persons originally named as plaintiffs, where such third person is not before the court nor within the jurisdiction, and cannot be served with notice of the application, even though it is proposed to reserve to him the right to object to the order, such an order being, in form at least, an adjudication of the right so to use his name. Frank v. Union Cent. Life Ins. Co., (W. D. Tenn. 1904) 130 Fed. 224.

Substitution of real plaintiff.—A pleading may be amended by substituting the real plaintiff in the action for a nominal one in whose name the action was brought. McDonald v. Nebraska, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 171, 41 C. C. A. 278.

Substitution of real defendant.—In Clemmens v. Washington Park Steamboat Co., (E. D. Pa. 1909) 171 Fed. 105, it appeared that a ferry company, which was a corporation of New Jersey, operated a line of excursion boats from Philadelphia under the assumed name of the "Washington Park Steamboat Company." A passenger to whom it sold a ticket under such name was injured, and brought suit against the steamboat company. The attorney for the ferry company, who was also a director, accepted service for the defendant, and appeared and defended the case on the merits; the trial resulting in a judgment for the plaintiff. Neither plaintiff nor the court was informed of the true facts until after an attempt to collect the judgment failed, and plaintiff moved to amend the record by substituting the name of the ferry company as defendant. It was held that such company, which was the real defendant, having in fact appeared and defended the suit, and there being no such person as the defendant named, the court had power to permit such amendment, under R. S. sec. 948, (supra, p. 90) and the text R. S. sec. 954, authorizing amendments to cure defects of form.

But it has been held that where the name of a party is erroneously stated in a writ, and the misdemeanor is a mistake of fact not apparent upon the record, and not to be amended by any matter apparent in any part of the record, the court is not authorized to make an amendment to cure the defect. Albers v. Whitney, (1840) 1 Story 310, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 137.

Misdescription of defendant.—Where the petition misdescribed the defendant as a corporation of New York instead of New Jersey, it was held that the New Jersey corporation was in fact the defendant, as the petition disclosed, and that service having been properly made on its agent, the court had power under R. S. sec. 948 (supra, p. 90), and the text R. S. sec. 954, to permit plaintiff to amend by correctly stating its place of incorporation. Herran v. American Bridge Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 930, 93 C. C. A. 330. See also Bainum v. American Bridge Co., (W. D. Pa. 1905) 141 Fed. 179.

Striking out name of party.—An amendment may be allowed striking out the name of one of two or more plaintiffs. Tyson v. Belmont, (1849) 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,315a.

And a party will be allowed before trial to amend his writ and declaration by striking out the name of one of the defendants. Tobey v. Claflin, (1833) 3 Sumn. 379, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 14,086; Greetley v. Smith, (1844) 3 Story 76, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,747.

It is permissible under this section to strike out the name of one defendant where the action is against several, even though the cause of action alleged against the original defendants stated a joint liability only, but there is no authority which permits the striking out of a sole defendant and the substitution in his stead of another. Portland Gold Min. Co. v. Straton's Independence, (D. C. Colo. 1912) 166 Fed. 714.

d. Introducing New Cause of Action

An entirely new cause of action may be stated in a pleading by way of amendment. In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 509.

So amendment to a complaint stating an additional cause of action of the same nature, and arising out of the same course of transactions alleged in the original complaint, will be allowed before the answer to prevent a multiplicity of suits and in furtherance of justice. Oliver v. Raymond, (E. D. Wis. 1901) 108 Fed. 927.

And complainant in a suit in equity in a federal court will not be given leave to file a supplemental bill after final hearing and decision on the original bill and a prior supplemental bill, to set up facts to make a new and different case, all of which, so far as appears, were known to complainant months before the hearing and before the filing of the former supplemental bill, and some of them before the filing of the original bill. Healey Ice Mach. Co. v. Green, (E. D. N. C. 1911) 184 Fed. 615.

The rule that the filing of a notice of appearance or of a general pleading, such as an answer, is equivalent to a general appearance for all purposes of the case, is limited in its application by the scope of the action in which such appearance or pleading is filed; and such an appearance does not authorize an amendment of plaintiff's pleading, so as to state a new or different cause of action upon which the defendant could not originally have been sued in that jurisdiction. Western Wheeled Scraper Co. v. Gahagan, (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 152 Fed. 646.

An amendment of a declaration changing the beneficiary of the action is in effect the bringing of a new suit. Hall v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (N. D. Fla. 1907) 157 Fed. 464.

e. Introducing New Defense

The form of pleading may be changed so as to present a defense in a new aspect where the plea presented was by mistake or misapprehension of the defendant's attorney and it was not discovered before the trial, but defendant must under such circumstances pay all the costs which have accrued since the plea was interposed. Heye v. Lieman, (1846) 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,445a.

But a defendant will not be allowed as a matter of course to put in new pleas in a federal court as in state courts on the trial of a case. The practice of so doing is vexatious and will be allowed only when good reason is shown and generally only upon terms. Childs v. Lenig, (1849) 1 Wall. Jr. C. 305, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,680.

Where a motion is made by one defendant in equity to withdraw its answer and to file the same plea and answer as filed by a codefendant in support thereof, such motion will be granted if it is not made for the purpose of setting up a merely technical defense, nor after litigation has continued and evidence has been taken, and where it does not cause inconvenience or expense to the other side or does not introduce a new defense on a new state of facts or change the substance of the case made by the bill, and where a replication to the plea desired has been made. U. S. v. American Bell Telephone Co., (C. C. Mass. 1888) 59 Fed. 716.

f. Jurisdictional Averments

In general.—While the record still remains within control of the court it may allow an amendment to the plaintiff's pleading by inserting the necessary jurisdictional averments even after verdict and judgment or decree. Mexican Cent. R. Co. v. Duthie, (1903) 189 U. S. 76, 23 S. Ct. 610, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 715.

Thus, where a complaint at the time the attachment was issued did not contain the necessary jurisdictional averments, it may be amended on a motion to discharge the attachment where the amendment will bring on record a jurisdictional fact existing from the commencement of the suit. Bowden v. Burnham, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 59 Fed. 752, 19 U. S. App. 448, 8 C. C. A. 248; Nevada Co. v. Farnsworth, (C. C. Utah 1898) 80 Fed. 146.

But in a recent case it has been said by the Circuit Court of Appeals that the authority conferred by this section cannot be employed to supply a lack of jurisdiction. In re Griggs, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1916) 233 Fed. 243, 147 C. C. A. 249.

Amount in dispute.—So an amendment has been allowed to show that the amount requisite to give jurisdiction is involved. Thompson v. Automatic Fire Protection Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1907) 151 Fed. 945.

Diversity of citizenship.—The provisions of this section are broad enough to warrant the action of a trial judge in allowing amendments to the pleadings showing a diversity of citizenship on terms and proceeding to judgment. Maddox v. Thorn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 217, 23 U. S. App. 180, 8 C. C. A. 574.

The objection that diversity of citizenship was not alleged in the complaint is a defect that may be cured after verdict by amendments, under the provisions of this section. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Gilliland, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 193 Fed. 608, 113 C. C. A. 476.

So an amendment to show jurisdiction by reason of diversity of citizenship has been allowed after a motion in arrest of judgment on the ground that the record did not show the required citizenship. Maddox v. Thorn, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 217, 23 U. S. App. 189, 8 C. C. A. 574.

And where it appears on a writ of error that the record does not show the diversity of citizenship necessary to confer jurisdiction, while an amendment cannot be made in the Circuit Court of Appeals to cure such defect it may be made in the lower court when it gets back. Newcomb v. Burbank, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 334, 104 C. C. A. 164.

But in Smith v. Jackson, (1825) 1 Paine 486, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 13,065, it was held that an omission of the averment of citizenship is a defect in substance not cured by verdict and which cannot be amended after judgment.

g. Particular Actions or Proceedings

Application for injunction.—This section applies to defects appearing on an application for a preliminary injunction. American Steel, etc., Co. v. Wire Drawers', etc., Union, (N. D. Ohio 1898) 90 Fed. 598.

Bankruptcy proceedings.—The District Court has power to make amendments in petitions and proceedings in bankruptcy, but amendments that would introduce into the petition entirely new acts of bankruptcy will be disallowed. Reed v. Cowley, (1905) 1 Nat. Bankr. Reg. 518, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,644.

Specifications opposing the discharge of a bankrupt may be amended although they are entirely defective. In re Glass, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 119 Fed. 509.

"The rule in bankruptcy declares that 'the court may allow amendments to the petition and schedules on application of the petitioner.' Neither the act of Congress nor the rule in bankruptcy excepts jurisdictional averments from the power of the court to permit amendments, and the established rule is that jurisdictional as well as other averments may be inserted or reformed by amendment." In re Plymouth Cordage Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 1000, 68 C. C. A. 434.

And in a case involving the effect of a failure of a voluntary bankrupt to strictly observe a form promulgated by the Supreme Court it was said: "It is true that amongst the forms promulgated by the Supreme Court is 'Schedule B (5),' in which is contained the words: 'Property claimed to be exempted by the state laws, its valuation,' etc. But, waiving the question whether in this instance the property claimed and its valuation were not stated in substantial accordance with this direction, it is enough to say that we do not understand it to be anything more than a direction. It could not have been intended to be mandatory. These forms were not designed to effect any change in the law. They are 'forms,' and nothing more. As was said by the Supreme Court (General Order 38, 89 Fed. xiv, 32 C. C. A. xxxvii), they are to be 'observed and used with such alterations as may be necessary to suit the circumstances of any particular case'; and, under the circumstances of this case, we decline to hold that the failure of the bankrupt to precisely observe one of them was fatal to his claim, because we could not do so without subordinating substance to form, and refusing a legal right, merely on account of a defect in procedure, which has caused no injury to any one, and which, if requisite, might be cured by amendment." Burke v. Guarantee Title, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1905) 134 Fed. 562, 67 C. C. A. 486.

Contempt proceedings.—An application for an attachment for contempt by an as-essor of the internal revenue against a taxpayer for not producing books and giving evidence is not such a criminal proceeding that it may not be amended under this section. Ir re Chadwick. (1870) 1
Lowell 430, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2570.

Ejectment suit.—The court has jurisdiction to allow an amendment of the demise in a suit in ejectment laid in a declaration after judgment without notice, the parties being presumed to be before the court for that and all other things in the proceedings in the court in the case of Craig v. Craig. (1840) 14 Pet. 147, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 303.

Informations for seizure for forfeitures under the customs laws are civil proceedings in rem within the meaning of this section, so that defects in the information may be amended. Friedenstein v. U. S., (1888) 125 U. S. 224, 8 St. Ct. 838, 31

h. Other Particular Matters and Instances

Cause of action.—A complaint alleging a cause of action under the laws of one state may be amended by alleging it was given by the laws of another state. Will-liams v. William B. Scaife, etc., Co., (D.

Damage not alleged in assumpsit.—
Though a count in assumpsit contain no allegation of damage, it is not bad on error. Bank of Metropolitan v. Guttaenheim, (1840) 14 Pet. 19, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 335.

Error in lapse of action.—The fact that a declaration on a patent is not properly

Form of action.—The plaintiff may be allowed to leave to amend his action by changing the form from debt to covenant.

Indorsements to bill of exchange.—
Where the indorsee of a bill of exchange, whether an agent or owner, returns it after protest to the last indorser, the latter may accept it in his own name and, at the trial strike out the last indorsement although it be in full. And prior blank indorsements may be filled up at the trial so as to correspond with the declaration.

And where both these were omitted to be done the court might reverse the judgment, considering it an objection of form and cured by this section. U. S.
No. 14,517.

Statement of claim.—A statement of a claim may be amended where the amendment is entirely consistent with the original allegation, as where, in the statement that the plaintiff was the owner of the land, the amendment merely sets out the nature of the plaintiff's title. Leeds v.
Evans, (E. D. Pa. 1900) 90 Fed. 28.

So the statement of a claim of a corporation for calls on shares of its stock may be amended by inserting therein an allegation that the balance remaining due upon its shares of stock after the first instalment had been paid has not since been paid. American Alkali Co. v. Campbell,

But a statement of a claim cannot be so amended as to alter or vary the cause of action, as by adding new parties or presenting a new subject matter, after the statute of limitations has become a bar.
28.

Variance.—Where the variance between the pleading and the facts which the pleader seeks to prove is so slight that it is obvious that the opposing party could not have been misled by it in the preparation of his case for trial, it is the duty of the court to disregard it or to permit an amendment to conform the pleading to the proof. Derham v. Donohue. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 385, 83 C. C. A. 637, 13 Ann. Cas. 372; United Kansas Portland Cement Co. v. Harvey. (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 316, 132 C. C. A. 460.

An allegation of variance between the avermements of a petition and the findings of the court, where there is no allegation that the findings were unwarranted by the proofs, or that the judgment does not conform to the law and justice of the case as presented by the findings, will not be sustained. Such case comes within this section. New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Lindsay,

Where the plaintiff's declaration, in an action against a corporation on a contract, purported to set out the contract verbatim, and recited that it was signed by the de-defendant's president and attested by its secretary and corporate seal; but, in copying the contract, there was nothing in the declaration to represent the seal, and when the contract was introduced in evidence it appeared that the corporate seal had been attached as recited in the contract, whereupon plaintiff was granted leave to amend the declaration to conform to the facts, it was held that the amendment was properly allowed in the furtherance of justice.
Mathieson Alkali Works v. Mathieson, (C.
C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 241, 80 C.
C. A. 129.

Waiver of breach of contract.—In an action of assumpsit, in which the declaration contained special counts upon a written contract, where the proof showed a breach of the contract by the plaintiff, but also a waiver of such breach by the defendant, which constituted in effect a modification of the contract by consent of parties, a judgment for plaintiff is not reversible because such waiver was not pleaded. Schaefer Piano Mfg. Co. v. National Fire Extinguisher Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 150, 78 C. C. A. 293.

1. Verification of Plea

Under this section the verification to a plea may be made sufficient by taking the oath in open court at the time of the trial. Edgefield Bank v. Farmers' Cooperative Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 52 Fed. 96, 2 U. S. App. 283, 2 C. C. A. 637.

j. Bill of Particulars

Under this section a federal court may allow a defective bill of particulars to be amended. Pott v. Arthur, (1878) 15 Blatchf. 314, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,319. But where a bill of particulars served by the plaintiff in a suit against a collector of customs to recover duties alleged to have been illegally exacted did not contain all the items required by R. S. sec. 3012 (since repealed), it was held that an amendment would not be allowed. Sherman v. Hedden, (S. D. N. Y. 1887) 32 Fed. 757.

And the court has power under this section to allow amendments to a bill of particulars in an action to recover an excess of customs duties after the thirty days provided by statute, but that discretion will be exercised only in extreme cases, and not to the extent of making the provisions of R. S. sec. 3012 of no effect. Pott v. Arthur, (1878) 15 Blatchf. 314, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,319; Richard v. Barney, (S. D. N. Y. 1887) 32 Fed. 581.

But an amendment to a bill of particulars in a suit to recover duties illegally exacted by collectors of customs will not be permitted when it introduce a new cause of action, or when it would be in violation of R. S. sec. 2931 since repealed, limiting the time for such suit. Neckerhoff v. Kootenay, (S. D. N. Y. 1887) 29 Fed. 781.

IX. Verdicts

Power of court generally.—A court is authorized under this section to give a judgment as the right appears without requiring any specification or writ of error to the verdict. U. S. v. Quantity Manufacturerized Tobacco, 1872 3 beam. 635, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 18,786.

And a verdict may be amended so that a new verdict may be given, not because the court has power to set aside the judgment, but because the court is authorized by statute to give a new judgment, and the court has power to set aside the original judgment, and to the same end the power of the court under the statute of frauds, even after error brought, if within a reasonable time, such amendments may be allowed, and it is a salutary practice thus to cure mere formal defects. Murphy v. Stewart, (1844) 2 How. 263, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 261.

The statute of limitations applies to defects in verdicts; and where the court can see from the verdict what was the substantial finding of the jury, and that it covered what was in issue, the judgment will not be reversed by reason of any defect in the form of the verdict. Parks v. Turner, (1851) 12 How. 39, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 883.

But where a verdict is responsive to no issue made by the pleadings and under the state practice the pleadings cannot be amended, the court, if it considers the case, will make such amendment. Phillips, etc., Constr. Co. v. Seymour, (1875) 91 U. S. 646, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 341.

Instance of amendments allowed.—A verdict and judgment upon one demurr, no notice being taken of the issues on the other, will not be reversed; it is a formal defect and cured by this section. Van Ness v. U. S. Bank, (1839) 13 Pet. 17, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 38.

Nor is it error to allow plaintiff to remit an excess of interest found in the verdict, and then affirm the verdict so amended. Paige v. Loring, (1873) 133 Fed. 275, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 10,672.

A verdict may also be amended by changing the term "issue" from the singular to the plural. Laborer v. Cooper, (1868) 7 Wall. 563, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 131.

And where a verdict clearly manifested the intention and finding of the jury upon the issue submitted to them, although expressed in bad English, the court rightfully gave judgment upon it. Snyder v. U. S., 1884 132 U. S. 216, 10 S. Ct. 118, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 69.

At the time when a verdict was rendered a motion was made in arrest of judgment for a misstatement of counts, and the judgment was ordered to be arrested, but no formal judgment that the plaintiff take nothing by his writ nor evidence whatever was entered. At the second term following the court, on motion to set aside the judgment, overruled the motion, and the court was also of opinion that it was not competent to be raised on the one event to set aside the judgment and ordered the verdict to be set aside on the other event to which it appeared the evidence was adduced, and entered a judgment was then taken for the plaintiff. It was held then the power of the court, and of the record was within the power of the court under the statute of frauds.

For summary of amendments of verdict, see note to Gay v. Joplin, (E. D. Mo. 1882) 13 Fed. 450.

X. JUDGMENTS

Order for judgment.—The absence of a formal order that a bill should be taken pro confesso against a defendant is a mere defect of form which the court is required to disregard by the above section. Linder v. Lewis, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 1 Fed. 378.

Judgments.—This section gives no authority to the courts of the United States to make any amendments in judgments except as to defects and want of form. Albers v. Whitney, (1840) 1 Story 310, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 137.

At common law no judgment was amended after the term at which it was entered. Albers v. Whitney, (1840) 1 Story 310, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 137.

Omission to enter judgment.—The omission of the clerk to enter on the record the judgment upon the demurrer, or to state its waiver if it was abandoned, would be merely a clerical mistake, and may be cured by this statute. Townsend v. Jenison, (1849) 7 How. 706, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 880.

An omission to enter a formal judgment on one of two pleas, which was demurred to, and which showed no defense, is cured by the statute of Jeofails. Morsell v. Hall, (1851) 13 How. 212, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 117.

Appointment of master.—The irregularity in case of consent of not specifying the consent in the decree for the appointment of a deputy clerk as a master as a special reason is a mere defect or want of form which may be supplied by amendment under this section. Fischer v. Hayes, (S. D. N. Y. 1884) 22 Fed. 92.

XI. FIERI FACIAS

A fieri facias issued in the names of two plaintiffs after one of them is dead is irregular and defective; but such defect may be amended under the authority given by this section if the matter be regularly brought before the court. Lane v. Beltzhoover, (1840) Taney 110, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 8,047.

XII. RETURNS

A return on a process served by a marshal may be amended to conform to the facts. Cushing v. Laird (1870) 4 Ben. 70, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,508.

The return on a summons may not be amended by a sheriff where the cause has been removed from the state court to the federal court. Tallman v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (S. D. Ohio 1891) 45 Fed. 156.

Return of fieri facias.—The marshal may amend his return of a fieri facias after the return day, according to the truth of the case, by stating the sale, etc., from his sales book. Linthicum v. Remington, (1839) 5 Cranch C. C. 546, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,377.

XIII. WRIT OF ERROR

See also R. S. sect. 1005, infra, p. 196.

A writ of error may be amended by the citation to correct a clerical error. McVeigh v. U. S., (1869) 8 Wall. 640, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 511.

And it has been held that such a writ may be amended by bringing a new party defendant. Teel v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 914, 123 C. C. A. 210, wherein the court said: "Since the enactment of the first Judicial Act of the United States, liberal statutory provisions have been maintained for curing defects of this character wherever proceedings on error or appeal have been instituted in due time, though defectively, and could be remedied without causing injustice; and numerous illustrations may be found of a tendency in the courts to apply such legislation in the spirit in which it was evidently enacted."

XIV. APPEAL AND SUPERSEDING BONDS

A defect in appeal bond may be cured at any time before a suit is finally acted upon. Deen v. Hemphill, (1831) Hemph. 184, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,736a.

In Ferguson v. Dent. (W. D. Tenn. 1888) 29 Fed. 1, the court questioned the authority of a Circuit Court after appeal to allow an amendment to a superseding bond, but permitted the amendment pro forma.

Sec. 955. [Death of parties.] When either of the parties, whether plaintiff, or petitioner, or defendant, in any suit in any court of the United States, dies before final judgment, the executor or administrator of such deceased party may, in case the cause of action survives by law, prosecute or defend any such suit to final judgment. The defendant shall answer accordingly; and the court shall hear and determine the cause and render judgment for or against the executor or administrator, as the case may require. And if such executor or administrator, having been duly served with a scire facias from the office of the clerk of the court where the suit is depending, twenty days beforehand, neglects or refuses to become party to the suit, the court may render judgment against the estate of the deceased party, in the same manner as if the executor or administrator had voluntarily made himself a party. The executor or administrator who becomes a party as aforesaid, shall, upon motion to the court, be entitled to a continuance of the suit until the next term of said court. [R. S.]

The entire Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 137, 15 Stat. L. 470, was repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085. Section 9 of said repealed Act of 1875 provided as follows:

"SEC. 9. That whenever either party to a final judgment or decree which has been or shall be rendered in any circuit court has died or shall die before the time allowed for taking an appeal or bringing a writ of error has expired, it shall not be necessary to revive the suit by any formal proceedings aforesaid. The representatives of such deceased party may file in the office of the clerk of such circuit court a duly certified copy of his appointment and thereupon may enter an appeal or bring writ of error as the party he represents might have done. If the party in whose favor such judgment or decree is rendered has died before appeal taken or writ of error brought, notice to his representative shall be served on the Supreme court, as provided in case of the death of a party after appeal taken or writ of error brought." [18 Stat. L. 475.]

Suits against public officer not to abate by his death, see the Act of Feb. 8, 1899, ch. 121, in title PUBLIC OFFICERS.

I. Survival of action, 112
II. Revival of action, 113

I. SURVIVAL OF ACTION

Purpose of section.—The enactment of this section was to provide against the abatement of actions which would otherwise abate at common law. In re Connoway, (1900) 178 U. S. 421, 20 S. Ct. 951, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1134.

At common law all personal actions abated on the death of the defendant, but by aid of this statute an action may be revived against the personal representative of a defendant who dies pending the suit against him. U. S. v. Bullard, (S. D. Ala. 1900) 103 Fed. 256.

Scope of section.—This statute embraces all cases of death before final judgment, and is more extensive than the English statutes, 17 Car. II., 8 & 9 William III. A death may happen before or after plea pleaded, before or after issue joined, before or after a verdict, or before or after interlocutory judgment, and in all these cases the proceedings are to be exactly as if the executor or administrator were a voluntary party to the suit. Hatch v. Eustis, (1812) 1 Gall. 160, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6.207.

This section and the one following authorize the executor or administrator to prosecute or defend in those cases only in which the cause of action survives by law, and do not undertake to define what those cases are. Martin v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., (1894) 151 U. S. 673, 14 S. Ct. 533, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 311.

Real actions.—It was early said by the Supreme Court in Macker v. Thomas, (1822) 7 Wheat. 630, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 515, that this section is confined to personal actions, as the power to prosecute or defend is given to the executor or admin-

Nature of survival.—The survivability "of the cause of action" is a right of property and not a matter of procedure as is the survivability of "a suit" pending at the time of the death. Warren v. Furnasheim, (W. D. Tenn. 1888) 35 Fed. 691, affirming Anderson v. Kissam, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 690.

II. REVIVAL OF ACTION

The survivability of "a suit" pending at the time of the death is a matter of procedure as distinguished from the survivability of the "cause of action," which is a right of property. Warren v. Furnasheim, (W. D. Tenn. 1888) 35 Fed. 691, affirming Anderson v. Kissam, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 690.

Proceedings for revivor essential.—Where, after the sustaining of a demurrer to a bill to set aside a divorce decree, with leave to amend, complainant elected to stand by his bill, after which defendant died, it was held that it was improper, without revivor, for the court, on suggestion of defendant's alleged surviving wife, who had not previously been a party to the proceedings, to render judgment of dismissal nunc pro tunc as of the day following the expiration of the time allowed the complainant to amend, and complainant's prayer for appeal having been allowed, to direct service of citation on defendant's administrator and such alleged surviving wife. McNeil v. McNell, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 298, 95 C. C. A. 486.

State law governs.—The plaintiff's right of revivor, on the death of the defendant, is governed by the law of the state where the suit is brought and prosecuted. Spaeth v. Sells, (S. D. Ohio 1909) 178 Fed. 797.

This section is governed by the statutes of limitations of the states in which the action is had. Barker v. Ladd, (1874) 3 Sawy. 44, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 990; Butler v. Poole, (W. D. Tenn. 1890) 44 Fed. 587.

Thus the right of a plaintiff, in an action at law for the infringement of a patent, to a scire facias to revive the action against the executor of a deceased defendant, as provided for by this section, is subject to the limitation imposed by the state statutes upon suits against executors, for the purpose of facilitating the settlement of estates. Green v. Barrett, (C. C. Mass. 1903) 123 Fed. 349.

The question of the revivor of actions for personal injuries, brought in a federal court or removed from a state court to a

If at the time the action is brought in a state court the statutes of the state allow a revivor of it on the death of the plaintiff before final judgment—even where the right to sue is lost when death occurs before any suit is brought—it is a case not distinctly nor necessarily covered by this section. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Joy, (1899) 173 U. S. 226, 19 S. Ct. 387, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 677. See further R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21.

Effect of state statutes.—A state statute cannot deprive a federal court of jurisdiction already vested in it and expressly continued by an Act of Congress; therefore it is not good cause of demurrer to a bill of revivor in a cause pending in a federal court that a state statute provided an action against an executor to be presented in one of its courts. Fitzpatrick v. Domingo, (E. D. La. 1882) 14 Fed. 216.

Revivor of judgments.—"We are not aware of any federal statute regulating the revivor of judgments, unless the process acts, giving the same remedies of execution as are known to the state laws, may be said to require us to follow the state practice in that regard." Devereaux v. Brownsville, (W. D. Tenn. 1887) 29 Fed. 742.

Competency of representative.—The section authorizing the continuance of a pending suit in the name of an executor or of an administrator refers to an executor or administrator who was competent to begin the action, and a person, whether executor or administrator, who has not taken out letters testamentary or of administration on the estate in the state in which the action is brought, is not competent to proceed to final judgment. Aspden v. Nixon, (1846) 4 How. 467, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 4059; Stacy v. Thrasher, (1848) 6 How. 44, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 337; Melius v. Thompson, (1858) 1 Cliff. 125, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9405; Kropff v. Foth, (C. C. N. J. 1833) 19 Fed. 200.

Proviso executor.—A suit cannot be instituted against executors in a federal court in a state other than the one in which they have taken out letters, where jurisdiction depends on diversity of citizenship, nor can a pending suit against the testator be revived against such executors unless ancillary letters are taken out in the state where the suit is pending. Lawrence v. Southern Pac. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 177 Fed. 547.

So, in C. F. Stromeyer Co. v. Aldrich, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 960, a motion by the plaintiff to revive against the executors of the defendant was denied. It appeared that the defendant, a citizen of Rhode Island, died after service of the summons and complaint upon him, and letters testamentary upon his estate were never served on the estate in Rhode Island. The plaintiff sought to revive the action against his executors, who were citizens and residents of Rhode Island, had no assets of the estate within the state of New York and had never been served with notice of the application. The court said: "If the executors had received letters from a surrogate of New York they could be brought in as parties, irrespective of any question of their citizenship. If the court, however, has no jurisdiction of the executors because they are not qualified to sue or be sued here, there can be no revivor. It is not shown that they are so qualified under the laws of Rhode Island and they would not be at common law."

A suit in a federal court may be dismissed on motion for want of jurisdiction on the death of a defendant who is an indispensable party, where such fact plainly appears from the pleadings, and the executors of the decedent cannot be brought in; but if there is doubt on the question, and it appears that the suit may be separable, it should not be so dismissed, nor when there is a possibility of revival against the executors, until after the lapse of a reasonable time. Lawrence v. Southern Pac. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1910) 177 Fed. 547.

Necessity of service of summons.—In those cases in which the filing of the complaint is the commencement of the suit, if a defendant dies, and no service of summons has been made upon him, but the complaint has been filed, his representative may be made a party by service facias, especially where he is not the sole defendant and the action survived as to the other defendant and service has been made upon him. In re Conway, (1800) 175 U. S. 421, 20 Law. 851, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 196.

Pleading.—A proceeding against a representative of the deceased is but a continuation of the original action, and the defendant upon seire facias can plead only what the intestate could have pleaded. M'Knight v. Craig, (1810) 6 Cranch 183, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 183.

Necessity of supplemental pleading.— The filing of a supplemental pleading showing the transfer of the original plaintiff's cause of action to a substituted plaintiff, an administrator, is not essential to recovery by such administrator. Equitable L. Assur. Soc. v. Trimble, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 86, 49 U. S. App. 565, 27 C. C. A. 404.

Time of appearance.— Under this Act the executor or administrator may come in voluntarily and instantaneously and be made a party on motion without a seire facias. Griswold v. Hill, (1825) 1 Paine 463, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,834.

Laches by representative.— No period of time is prescribed by this statute within which an executor or administrator must come in voluntarily and apply to be substituted; therefore no laches can be predicated of the delay of the party in the opposite party could, under the same statute, at any time, compel him to come within twenty days and be substituted. The Ship Norway, (1867) 1 Beem 493, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,367.

Continuance.— The executor or administrator may proceed to trial immediately if he pleases, if the cause is ready for trial, but he may have a continuance if he wishes, but no such indulgence is allowed by the Act to the opposite party, for his situation is not altered by the substitution of the representatives of the deceased party. Griswold v. Hill, (1825) 1 Paine 463, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5,834.

Appeal.— Inasmuch as a bill of revivor is not an original suit, but is merely a continuance of an original suit, it is not clear that an order or decree thereon would be a final appealable decision. When a bill of revivor is dismissed, as this would practically determine the original cause by leaving it in a situation in which no further proceedings could be had in it, doubtless an appeal would lie in favor of the party seeking a revival; but if the revival is allowed, the order or decree allowing it does not finally dispose of the cause, and can be reviewed if it becomes necessary by an appeal from the final decree therein. Mackaye v. Mallory, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 1, 45 U. S. App. 741, 24 C. C. A. 420, citing Buckingham v. McLean, (1851) 13 How. 150, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 90; Milwaukee, etc., R. Co. v. Souther, (1864) 2 Wall. 520, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 900.

In Fretz v. Stoner, (1874) 22 Wall. 198, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 769, upon an appeal from a final decree in a cause in which a bill of revivor had been brought, the court considered the defenses which had been interposed by the answer to the bill of revivor.

In Terry v. Sharon, (1889) 181 U. S. 407, 9 S. Ct. 705, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 94, the court held that an appeal by a defendant would lie from an order reviving a suit and admitting an executor in the place of the deceased complainant. But in that case the original suit had passed to a final decree and the defendant would have had no opportunity to review the order by appealing from that decree.

Under state statutes.—As to actions surviving under state statutes, see cases under R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21.

Sec. 956. [When one of several plaintiffs or defendants dies.] If there are two or more plaintiffs or defendants, in a suit where the cause of action survives to the surviving plaintiff or against the surviving defendant, and one or more of them dies, the writ or action shall not be thereby abated; but, such death being suggested upon the record, the action shall proceed at the suit of the surviving plaintiff against the surviving defendant. [R. S.]

See note to preceding R. S. sec. 955.
R. S. sec. 957 relates to judgments at return term against delinquents for public money, unless, etc., and is given in Claims, vol. 2, p. 215.

Survival of actions.— See the notes under R. S. sec. 955, supra, p. 111.

Compliance with section — Necessity of revivor.—A suggestion on the record, either by plaintiffs or defendants, that some of the plaintiffs are dead, constitutes a substantial compliance with this section and no revivor is necessary. Thomas v. Green County, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 339, 89 C. C. A. 405, affirmed (1909) 211 U. S. 598, 29 S. Ct. 168, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 313.

Waiter.— Where the right to proceed with the suit is absolute, the statement of the death is a matter of form which may be waived by a failure to make seasonable objection, or if objection be made, by stipulating to go to trial on the merits and taking the chances of a judgment. Thomas v. Green County, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1898) 159 Fed. 339, affirmed (1909) 211 U. S. 598, 29 S. Ct. 168, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 343. Action by joint owners of bonds—An action brought in a federal court by plaintiffs, as joint owners of bonds, does not abate by the death of one of the plaintiffs, but under this section the suit may proceed in the name of the survivors upon the suggestion of the death upon the record. Thomas v. Green County, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 969, 77 C. C. A. 487.

Action against partnership.—Where, in a cause of action that survives and is against a partnership, one of the partners dies, and his representatives, although notified, do not appear, an appeal from the final decree may proceed at the suit of the survivors. Moses v. Wooster, (1885) 115 U. S. 285, 6 S. Ct. 38, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 391, following M'Kinney v. Carroll, (1838) 12 Pet. 66, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1002.

Death of joint tortfeasor.—Where a suit for infringement of a trademark was instituted against two defendants, such infringement constitutes a tort for which both were liable, so that on the death of one the suit did not abate as to the other. Northwestern Consol. Milling Co. v. Callam, (E. D. Mich. 1910) 177 Fed. 786.

Sec. 958. [Suits under postal laws—judgment at return term, unless, etc.] In suits arising under the postal laws the court shall proceed to trial, and render judgment at the return term; but whenever service of process is not made at least twenty days before the return day of such term, the defendant is entitled to one continuance, if, on his statement, the court deems it expedient; and if he makes affidavit that he has a claim against the Post-Office Department, which has been submitted to and disallowed by the Sixth Auditor, specifying such claim in his affidavit, and that he could not be prepared for trial at such term for want of evidence, the court, if satisfied thereof, may grant a continuance until the next term. [R. S.]

Sec. 959. [Suits on debentures—judgment at return term unless, etc.] In all suits for the recovery of money upon debentures issued by the collectors of customs, under any act for the collection of duties, it shall be the duty of the court to grant judgment at the return term, unless the defendant, in open court, exhibits some plea, on oath, by which the court is satisfied that a continuance is necessary to the attainment of justice; in which case, and not otherwise, a continuance until the next term may be granted. [R. S.]

Sec. 960. [Suits on bonds for recovery of duties—judgment at return term, unless, etc.] When suit is brought on any bond for the recovery of duties due to the United States, it shall be the duty of the court to grant judgment at the return term, upon motion, unless the defendant, in open court, (the United States attorney being present,) makes oath that an error has been committed in the liquidation of the duties demanded upon such bond, specifying the errors alleged to have been committed, and that the same have been notified in writing to the collector of the district before the said return term; whereupon a continuance may be granted until the next term, and no longer, if the court is satisfied that such continuance is necessary for the attainment of justice. [R. S.]

The object of this section is to secure the prompt collection of duty indisputably ascertained. When there are errors in calculating the duties, and they are alleged on affidavits, a delay of one term is allowed. Ex p. U. S., (1834) 8 Pet. 700, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 1094.

Delay to obtain evidence.—Under this section the court is not forbidden to grant to the defendant such delay as may be necessary to obtain evidence when there is a real defense. Ex p. U. S., (1834) 8 Pet. 700, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 1094.

Construction generally of provision.—As to this provision it is said in one of the earlier cases: "In our opinion, upon the true interpretation of this provision, the legislature intended no more than to interdict the party from an imparlance, or any other, means or contrivances for mere delay. He should not by sham pleadings, or by other pretended defenses, be allowed to avail himself of a postponement of judgment to the injury of the government, and in fraud of his obligation to make a punctual payment of the duties when they had become due. But we perceive no reason to suppose, that the legislature meant to bar the party from any good defense against the suit, founded upon real and substantial merits. And certainly we ought not, in common justice, to presume such an intention without the most express declarations. To deprive a citizen of a right of trial by jury, in any case, is a sufficiently harsh exercise of prerogative, not to be raised by implication from any general language in a statute. But to presume that the government meant to shut out the party from all defenses against its claims, however well founded in law and justice, without a hearing, would be pressing the doctrine to a still more oppressive extent. We think the language of the sixty-fifth section neither requires nor justifies any such interpretation. It merely requires that judgment should be rendered at the return term, unless delay shall be indispensable for the attainment of justice: and there is no impossibility or impracticability in the court's making such rules in relation to the filing of the pleadings, and the joining of issues in this peculiar class of cases, as will enable the causes to be heard and tried upon the merits, and a verdict found at the return of the court. It is a matter of common practice in all classes of cases at least in one of the circuits, and no inconvenience or hardship has hitherto grown out of it. Special exceptions, founded upon extraordinary circumstances, are and may be disposed of upon special application for delay." Ex p. Davenport, (1832) 8 Pet. 661, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 537.

Delay to obtain evidence.—Under this section the court is not forbidden to grant to the defendant such delay as may be necessary to obtain evidence when there is a real defense. Ex p. U. S., (1834) 8 Pet. 700, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 1094.

Sec. 961. [Judgment for sum due in equity on bonds, etc.] In all suits brought to recover the forfeiture annexed to any articles of agreement, covenant, bond, or other specialty, where the forfeiture, breach, or non-performance appears by the default or confession of the defendant, or upon demurrer, the court shall render judgment for the plaintiff to recover so much as is due according to equity. And when the sum for which judgment should be rendered is uncertain, it shall, if either of the parties request it, be assessed by a jury. [R. S.]

R. S. secs. 962 and 963 relate to judgments for duties and interest on bonds for duties, and are given in Customs Duties, vol. 2, p. 1192.

R. S. sec. 964 relates to interest on balances due Post Office Department, and is given in title POSTAL SERVICE.

Relation to common law.—While the courts of the United States in actions at law undoubtedly possess the power conferred upon the courts of common law by the statute of 8 and 9 William III., and while recognition of such power was embodied in the original Judiciary Act of 1789, reproduced in this section, the duty of such courts to give effect to the plainly expressed will of the contracting parties is as imperatively necessary now as it was at common law after the adoption of the English statute. Sun Printing, etc., v. S. r. Moore. (1902) 183 U. S. 642, 22 S. Ct. 240, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 366.

Application generally.—The rule declared by this statute is to be applied generally in proper cases in the courts of the United States. The S. Oteri. (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1894) 67 Fed. 146, 30 U. S. App. 10, 14 C. C. A. 344..

This section, however, does not apply in cases heard on agreed facts or tried upon pleadings and proofs. Farrar v. U. S., (1831) 5 Pet. 373, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 159; In re Merchants' Bank. (1831) 12 How. 156, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 836.

And where there were joint and several bonds given for duties, and the United States had recovered a joint judgment against all the obligors, and then the surety died, it was held not to be allowable for the United States to proceed in equity against the executor of the decease surety for the purpose of holding the assets responsible. U. S. r. Price. (1850) 9 How. 53, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 56.

Hearing of defendants.—Where a breach of a bond appears upon demurrer the defendants are not entitled to a hearing in equity upon the making up of the judgment on the bond under this section. Greely v. U. S., (1852) 9 Wheat. 257, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 611.

Ascertaining amount due.—In cases where the sum is uncertain and a jury is requested by either party the court may either direct a writ of inquiry or may order a jury immediately to ascertain the sum justly due to the plaintiff. If the sum for which judgment should be rendered be not uncertain the court is to ascertain it; if uncertain, and a jury be not requested, still the court may in its discretion ascertain it or submit the matter to a jury. But under no circumstances can a final judgment be entered for the forfeiture or penalty of the bond in the cases mentioned in this section. Gurney v. How. (1860) 6 Blatchf. 499, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5873.

The word "contemplatory," judgment is rendered on a bond with a collateral condition, the jury, if required by either party, must ascertain the damages if they be uncertain; and if not so, the court must.

If the sum for which judgment should be rendered is certain, as where the suit is upon a bill of exchange or promissory note, the computation may be made by the court, or, what is more usual, by the clerk; and the same course may be pursued even when the sum for which judgment should be rendered is uncertain, if neither party request the court to call a jury for that purpose. Aurora v. West. (1866) 7 Wall. 92, 19 L. S. (L. ed.) 42.

But where the sum for which judgment ought to be rendered is uncertain because the sums named in the condition of the bond are expressed in foreign money, the sum for which judgment should be rendered may be assessed by a jury at the request of either party. Gurney v. Hoige. (1869) 6 Blatchf. 499, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 5875.

But when an importer's redelivery bond was conditioned that the penalty of the bond should be double the value of each importation and that the value of the importation should not affect the liability in cases of violation, it was decided by the United States Supreme Court that the recovery should be for the stipulated sum and was not limited to the damages actually sustained nor affected by the provisions of this section. U. S. r. Dieckrohff. (1906) 202 U. S. 302, 26 S. Ct. 604, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1041.

In a suit upon a bond given to secure the performance of a contract by a certain time, in which bond it was stipulated that the sum named should be regarded as liquidated damages, it has, however, been held that, notwithstanding such stipulation, it was error to direct a verdict for the full sum and that the amount designated should be regarded as a penalty both in view of this section and also in the recent adjudications on the subject. The court said: "This rule Congress has provided for the guidance of the federal courts in all cases where it is applicable. It is just, benign, and equitable, while the rule which the court has applied in the case at bar seems harsh, inequitable, and quite unnecessary. Aside from the above statute, which defines the attitude of the government towards these cases, and prescribes the rule it is willing to abide by, we think, under the more recent adjudications of the courts, both in this country and in England, the $20,000 mentioned in the bond in this case should be construed as a penalty, rather than as stipulated damages to be recovered upon any slight breach of the contract, when nominal damages or small actual damages to be assessed by the court, would in the conditions more justly and equitably. If the parties could at will change what is essentially a penalty, and properly intended to enforce the obligations of the contract, into stipu-
JUDICIARY

In another case where a bond was given for the care of a feeble-minded alien and it was claimed that the recovery thereon should be for the full amount of the obligation, the court said, after referring to R. S. sec. 961: "The rule is that, where the parties to a contract have agreed that a sum shall become payable on a single event, such sum may be regarded as liquidated damages, but where the sum is made payable to secure the performance of several stipulations of varying degrees of importance, it is clear the stipulated sum must be regarded as a penalty, and not as liquidated damages." A court does not, of course, hold the breach averred been in the performance of the only condition to be performed, the argument addressed to us would have force." U. S. v. Rubin, (E. D. Pa. 1915) 227 Fed. 938.

A written stipulation is not essential to a waiver of a jury to assess damages on a bond after default under this section. Brock v. Fuller Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 272, 82 C. C. A. 402, wherein it appears that plaintiff sued on a contractor's bond to secure performance of a written contract. On the trial, defendants' attorney stated that defendants might be defaulted, but that he "would like to be heard on the question of damages," and immediately thereafter suggested that the case be sent to an auditor. This was agreed to, and, though a jury was then present, an auditor was appointed, and no request was made for a jury trial at any time during the term, nor four months after default, and after defendants had learned that the auditor's report was unfavorable, when they applied for an assessment of damages by a jury, as authorized by this section, and it was held that the finding of the Circuit Court that the request for a jury trial was too late should not be disturbed. Liability of surety.—It is not intended by this section to enlarge the liability of a surety on official bonds. U. S. v. Hills, (1878) 4 Cliff. 618, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,369.

Sec. 750. [Final record, how made in equity and admiralty causes.] In equity and admiralty causes, only the process, pleadings, and decree, and such orders and memorandums as may be necessary to show the jurisdiction of the court and regularity of the proceedings, shall be entered upon the final record. [R. S.]

Construction generally.—"Apparently section 750 makes a provision which is generally applicable to equity and admiralty causes for the making of a final record which shall serve the purposes of the former practice of enrolling the decree in courts of chancery, and its proper construction should be made upon due regard to the former practice in respect to the matter therein provided for. . . . By the former practice there was not customarily any enrollment if nothing was determined in the case; that is to say, if no decree or order had been entered which adjudicated any right or advantage to one party or to the other upon the matter of the pleadings. The essential purpose of the practice of enrollment was to provide a permanent memorial upon which the rights of the parties as adjudicated could be thereafter more easily preserved and certainly shown." Consolidated Store-Service Co. v. Dettenthaler, (W. D. Mich. 1899) 93 Fed. 307.

Effect of later Acts.—The Act of Feb. 16, 1875, ch. 77, infra, p. 130, limiting the review in admiralty cases, has made no change in the law prescribing what should be included in the transcript sent up on appeal. The Adriatic, (1890) 103 U. S. 730, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 605.

Not prohibitive of sending up other papers on appeal.—The record here mentioned is the technical record on appeal. This section does not prohibit other papers or documents being sent up to the appellate court. Southern Bldg., etc., v. Carey, (W. D. Tenn. 1892) 117 Fed. 325.

What included in transcript.—Prior to the abolishment of the Circuit Court, it was said as to a transcript sent from the District to the Circuit Court, in an admiralty appeal: "The 'transcript' sent up from the District Court, when filed in the Circuit Court, becomes and is a part of the proceedings in the Circuit Court; and as it contains the 'libel,' the 'process,' and the 'pleadings' in the cause, without which the final record in the Circuit Court would not 'show the jurisdiction of the court, and the regularity of the proceedings,' it would seem such pleadings and process must be recorded, by the express provisions of sec-to the limitation imposed by the form of prior appeal, if there has been any; and the nature of any portions omitted, even under a joint stipulation, should be indicated, so that the appellate court, which has its own interests and rights in the conduct of the transcript, may be advised concerning them. But as to the proofs, entries, and papers on the necessary on the hearing of the appeal, required by Rev. Stat. § 808, the decisions cited refer to the absence of a joint stipulation, to the selection made by the appellant. The good faith and discretion of the solicitor are necessarily the ordinary and sufficient guide in determining this matter, though, as the clerk is made by the statute the examining officer, some duty rests on him by implication, and he might well refuse to certify a transcript with such palpable and substantial omission or, in his opinion, to justify his assuming the responsibility of refusal.

In that event the appellant, assuming himself aggrieved, has his remedy by applying to the appellate court for a mandate, and perhaps by seeking summary instructions to the clerk from the judge appointed from. If the party appealed against issues the certificate of the clerk incorrect, or the transcript incomplete, his remedy is not by motion to dismiss, unless in extreme cases, but he may have ample relief by other methods, which have been usually permitted by the supreme court," Nashman, et al. R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., etc. R. Corp. C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904. 61 Fed. 255. 20 U. S. App. 50. 9 C. C. A. 445.

Sec. 722. [Proceedings, civil and criminal, in vindication of civil rights.] The jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters conferred on the district and circuit courts by the provisions of this title, and of Title "Civil Rights," and of Title "Crimes," for the protection of all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and for their vindication, shall be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, so far as such laws are applicable to carry the same into effect; but in all cases where they are not adapted to the object, or are deficient in the provisions necessary to furnish suitable remedies and punish offenses against law, the common law, as modified and changed by the constitution and statutes of the State wherein the court having jurisdiction of such civil or criminal cause is held, so far as the same is not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be extended to and govern the said courts in the trial and disposition of the cause, and if it is of a criminal nature, in the infliction of punishment on the party found guilty.

There is no ambiguity whatever in this section; nor can there be any question as to its general application. U. S. v. Mitchell, (C. C. Ore. 1905) 136 Fed. 886.

But it was said by Clifford, J., in Tennessee v. Davis, (1879) 100 U. S. 237, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 648, that "examined in the most favorable light, the provision is a mere jumble of federal law, common law, and state law, consisting of incongruous and irreconcilable regulations, which in legal effect amounts to no more than a direction to a judge sitting in such a criminal trial to conduct the same as well as he can in view of the three systems of criminal jurisprudence, without any suggestion whatever as to what he shall do in such an extraordinary emergency if he should meet a question not regulated by any one of the three systems."

Reference to former text. This section has reference not to the extent or scope of jurisdiction nor to the rules of decision, but to the forms of process and remedy. In re Stupp, (1875) 12 Blatchf. 501, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,563.

Application of state laws. Under R. S. sec. 722 (the above text) and 800 (now Judicial Code, § 275, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1063) the court has the right, in every case in which there is no express provision of the federal statute, to apply laws of the state in which the court is held. U. S. v. Mitchell, (C. C. Ore. 1905) 136 Fed. 890.

Jurisdiction and procedure in habeas corpus. It was held that the jurisdiction conferred on the Circuit Court in regard to habeas corpus was to be exercised and enforced in conformity with the laws of the United States, and in extradition cases in conformity with the laws in regard to the proceedings in extradition, and with the laws in regard to the appellate jurisdiction of that court, as well as in conformity with the laws in regard to writs of habeas corpus. In re Stupp, (1875) 12 Blatchf. 501, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,563.

Challenges to grand jurors. Where the matter presented to the court is one affecting the regularity of the organization of the grand jury, there being no federal statute regulating challenges to grand jurors, the federal courts are authorized under this section to conform their rulings to the practice which obtains in the state court. U. S. v. Eagan, (E. D. Mo. 1887) 30 Fed. 608.

Sec. 566. [Trial of issues of fact.] The trial of issues of fact in the district courts, in all causes except cases in equity and cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and except as otherwise provided in proceeding in bankruptcy, shall be by jury. In causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction relating to any matter of contract or tort arising upon or concerning any vessel of twenty tons burden or upward, enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade, and at the time employed in the business of commerce and navigation between places in different States and Territories upon the lakes and navigable waters connecting the lakes, the trial of issues of fact shall be by jury when either party requires it. [R. S.]

As explained in cases cited below in this note, this section is now qualified by the provision in R. S. sec. 649, infra, p. 130, authorizing waiver of a jury by stipulation in writing.

I. INTRODUCTORY

II. TRIAL BY JURY

Present rule stated.—At the present time a trial of issues of fact without a jury may be had in the District Court, but the adoption of the Judicial Code which abolished the Circuit Courts, in effect merged with the District Courts all the machinery for disposing of business which the Circuit Courts possessed, so that the former rule that a trial in the District Court without a jury was not judicial in its nature but merely as an arbitration, no longer applies. Nashville Interurban Ry. v. Barnum, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 634, 129 C. C. A. 170, wherein the court said: "Although we form the Judicial Code abolished the Circuit Courts and turned their business over to the District Courts, it seems to us that what Congress intended was a merger of the Circuit Courts into the District Courts, and that in transferring to the District Courts the business of the Circuit Courts, there was given to the District Courts, under the section of the Judicial Code above quoted, all the machinery for disposing of business which the Circuit Courts possessed. We are unable to understand that section in any other way. It is also illuminative of this intent that Congress did not repeal the particular section which provided for trial by the Circuit Courts under writs of injunction. If the intention had been that thereafter all cases tried in the District Courts, whether original or transferred, should be tried only under the old District Court system, the section became obsolete and was without any reason for its retention. We are therefore forced to the conclusion that the present case must be treated by us precisely as it would have been treated had the trial taken place in the old Circuit Court under the practice which Congress had once approved for that court and which it has never disapproved. We must therefore accord to findings of fact, in a case tried to the court without a jury, there being a stipulation in writing waiving the jury, the same effect as we would give to a verdict, as said by Mr. Justice Miller in Bassett v. U. S., (1869) 19 Wall. 38, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 648]."

It must be borne in mind as regards trial without a jury that the Constitution of the United States provides that crimes as distinguished from petty offenses can only be tried by a jury. Frank v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 192 Fed. 884, 113 C. C. A. 186.

III. ADMIRALT

In general.—It was said by Brown, D. J., in The Empire, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 19 Fed. 558, referring to the clause in the text giving a right to trial by jury in certain admiralty cases, that "this somewhat unfortunate clause was introduced by the revisers into the statutes from a hasty dictum of Mr. Justice Nelson, in the case of The Eagle, (1888) 5 Wall. 15, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 365, . . . but whatever be the origin of the case in point, there is no doubt that it is the law of the land and must be respected as such. There has been great difficulty, however, in determining in what cases and in what manner it is to be given effect. It creates what appears to be a very unjust discrimination in favor of the particular classes of vessels and causes of action enumerated in the act. Why it should be given in actions of contract and tort, and denied in those of salvage, general average, and prize, and why it should be limited to American vessels plying between domestic ports and denied to all foreign vessels, and to American vessels engaged in foreign trade, it is impossible to conceive." To the same effect see Gillet v. Pierce, (1875) Brown Adm. 553, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,437.

Unless given by statute, there is no right in admiralty to a trial by jury; and the party demanding a jury must bring himself by his pleadings within the provisions of the Act. Gillet v. Pierce, (1875) Brown Adm. 553, 10 Fed. Cas. No. 5,437.

The first provision in respect to trial by jury in admiralty cases is found in the Act of Feb. 26, 1845, part of which was retained in R. S. sec. 506. This act originally purported to give the District Courts jurisdiction of matters of contract and tort, arising in, upon or concerning steamboats and other vessels of twenty tons burden and upwards, enrolled and licensed in the coasting trade and employed in the business of commerce and navigation between ports and places in divers states and territories, upon the lakes and navigable waters connecting the same, as is now possessed by the said courts in cases of like steamboats and other vessels employed in navigation and commerce upon the high seas. At the time this statute was adopted the admiralty jurisdiction was held to extend only to tide waters, so that it could not have been sustained if the admiralty jurisdiction had not been enlarged to apply to all waters navigable in fact, since the constitutional grant of admiralty could not have been extended by Congress. The Propeller Genesee Chief v. Fitzhugh, 12 How. 443, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 1058; The Eagle, 9 Wall. 15, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 365. By the latter case the portion of the Act of 1845 above quoted was held to have become inoperative as a grant of jurisdiction, because that jurisdiction was granted by the Constitution, and because the constitutional grant would otherwise be narrowed by that statute; but that the portion of the statute providing for a jury trial on request of either party was still in force. This part of the statute was preserved in R. S. sec. 666.

Territory affected.—The provisions for a jury trial "in causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction" apply only to the Great Lakes and water connected therewith, and then only to such issues of fact as arise in cases of contract or tort, the statute having no reference to foreign vessels or those trading between ports of the same state. The Western States, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 354, 86 C. C. A. 354, certiorari denied 210 U. S. 433, 28 S. Ct. 762, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136.

The provisions of this section giving to either party the right to a jury trial in admiralty cases do not include the case of a libel against a vessel plying between ports within the judicial district and not engaged in commerce and navigation between places in different states. The City of Toledo, (N. D. Ohio 1896) 73 Fed. 220.

Nor are they applicable in a case of a vessel employed in navigating the rivers Monongahela and Ohio, particularly where employed in navigating between places in the same state. Bigg v. The Venture, (W. D. Pa. 1884) 21 Fed. 880.

In a case of contract or tort involving two vessels where either vessel is within the description of the statute, either party is entitled to demand a trial by jury. This was the holding in a case of a libel for damages received by a vessel within the description of the statute through the negligence of a tug, a foreign vessel, while being towed from Chicago to Buffalo. The Erie Belle. (E. D. Mich. 1888) 20 Fed. 63.

Effect of verdict.—The verdict of a jury in these cases should be regarded only as advisory and will be ignored by the court where not consonant with any theory upon which the case was tried. The Empire. (E. D. Mich. 1884) 19 Fed. 558.

The provision . . . giving to either party the right to a trial by jury has not changed the powers of the admiralty judge, who is still responsible for whatever judgment is rendered in the admiralty proceedings. . . . The court may refer the questions to a jury, whose verdict will be only advisory.” Rieks, D. in the City of Toledo. (N. D. Ohio 1866) 73 Fed. 226.

In The Western States, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 159 Fed. 354, 86 C. C. A. 354, certiorari denied 210 U. S. 433, 28 S. Ct. 763, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1136, a passenger filed a libel against a steamboat in rem, charging the owners with negligence in performing the contract for libellant’s transportation, and the issue was tried by a jury under this section. It was held that the verdict was not merely advisory, and that the power of the court can go no further than to grant a new trial, but that the district judge properly set aside a verdict for $16,000 on the ground that it was the result of passion and prejudice, or a misunderstanding of his charge, and entered a decree for libellant for $5,000.

Joinder of parties.—Where a trial by jury is demanded under this section in a suit for damages brought by a good many passengers on a vessel, against the vessel for being served with unwholesome food, the libelants will not be allowed to join in one suit, owing to the perplexity and confusion which would attend a trial in which there was a large number of libelants. The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 227 Fed. 203.

Sec. 648. [Issues of fact, when to be tried by jury.] The trial of issues of fact in the circuit courts shall be by jury, except in cases of equity and of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, and except as otherwise provided in proceedings in bankruptcy, and by the next section. [R. S.]

See R. S. sec. 568, supra, p. 121, and note thereto.

I APPLICATION OF SECTION TO DISTRICT COURTS

There are now no Circuit Courts, but the section is at present applicable to District Courts by virtue of section 201 of the Judicial Code, supra, this title, vol. 3, p. 1083. And see R. S. sec. 568, supra, p. 121.
Bankruptcy proceedings are equitable in character, and a trial of an issue by jury is not a matter of right. In re Rude, (D. C. Ky. 1909) 101 Fed. 805.

5. Illustrations

Contempt.—In a proceeding as for contempt, the party is not of right entitled to a trial by jury. King v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., (1877) 7 Biss. 529, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,500.

Action by assignee of right to receive money.—An action by an assignee of the right to receive a sum of money, concededly in the defendant’s hands, is completely cognizable and enforceable in law, and the defendant has a right to a jury trial under this section. Brown v. Fletcher, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 296 Fed. 461, 124 C. C. A. 367.

Proceedings for sale of intestate’s real estate.—In proceedings for the sale of an intestate’s real estate for assets, an issue as to compensation for improvements being raised, the suit is one at common law, and is for the suit. Hamilton Bank v. Dudley, (1829) 2 Pet. 492, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 496.

Seizure of land used for insurrectionary purposes.—A proceeding for the seizure of land used for insurrectionary purposes is a case of common-law jurisdiction as to trial by jury. Armstrong’s Foundry, (1867) 6 Wall. 766, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 882.

6. Effect of State Statutes

Partition.—Partition was cognizable either at law or in equity before the adoption of the Constitution. It has been a matter for centuries a well-recognized branch of equity jurisprudence. When, therefore, a statutory proceeding for partition cannot be heard in a United States court on the law side, without affording a jury trial, and thereby doing violence to the forms of procedure provided in the state statutes, it seems to us to be the duty of the court to decline to take jurisdiction of it as a court of law, and to direct that it be brought in equity, where no jury need be had, and where every remedy provided by the statute may be amply administered.” Klever v. Seawall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 65 Fed. 333, 22 U. S. App. 715, 12 C. C. A. 681.

Condemnation of land.—A proceeding for condemnation of land for public uses is, in substance and effect, an action at law, and should be tried by an ordinary jury, notwithstanding state statutes provide other remedies. R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, does not apply. Chappell v. U. S., (1868) 160 U. S. 499, 16 S. Ct. 397, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 510.
The provision of a state statute providing for the assessment of damages for condemning land for a railroad is not repugnant to the section, as it is not a tax of a state in a court of common law. E. & N. R. Ry. v. City of Espanola, 135 N. M. 329. The act of 1893, ch. 347, § 2, in title "Public Property," entitled "Land and Leases," that provided for the condemnation of lands for public use, shall confer under as nearly as may be to those "in the courts of record of the State," or not to be construed as creating an exception to the general rule of trial by an ordinary jury in a court of record, and as requiring, by way of preliminary or of substitute, a trial by a different jury, not in a court of record, nor in the presence of any judge. In the condemnation of Hawaiian lands, by the statute of Hawaii itself, an issue of fact, in respect to the value of land sought to be taken by the United States, in the exercise of the power of eminent domain, shall be tried by a jury. U. S. v. Honolulu Plantation Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 581, 59 C. C. A. 279.

The question of following the state practice in matters of reference to referees and auditors has quite frequently been under review by the federal courts, and the general trend of the decisions is to the effect that such statute will not be followed, that in said courts trial by jury is the prescribed method for the ascertainment of facts, unless the state statute contemplated by the Act, expressly contemplated by the Act, expressly given by the Act, expressly given by the Act, expressly given by the Act, expressly given by the Act.

An action of book debt on record can be tried in a federal court or a jury, unless the parties by their submission waive trial by jury. The mode of trial can be taken from the procedural and substantive law, and the mode of trial provided by said courts or by those laws, and the substantive by the provisions of R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, assimilating the forms and mode of procedure in federal courts of the United States to those existing in like causes in the state courts. See: State v. Winstead, 22 Vt. 1904, 22 Fed. 454.

9. Hawaii

By force of this section and provisions in the Hawaiian statutes, a statute Congress has not itself provided a particular mode of trial in proceedings for the condemnation of lands for public use. It was held that an issue of fact as to the value of land in such a proceeding by the United States in the District Court of the United States District of Hawaii, was to be determined by trial by jury. U. S. v. Honolulu Plantation Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 581, 59 C. C. A. 279.

III. TRIAL BY REFEREE OR AUDITOR

In general. Under this section and R. S. sec. 649, infra, p. 120, a federal court has no authority to refer a suit at common law to a referee for trial without the consent of both parties to the suit, nor is such authority conferred by R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, which provides that federal practice shall conform as near as may be to the state practice. Howe Mach. Co. v. Edwards, (1878) 15 Blatchf. 408, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6744; U. S. v. Rathbone, (1829) 2 Paine 578; 27 Fed. Cas. No. 16,121.

Since the federal statutes provide that in actions at law the trial of issues of fact shall be by jury, except where they are tried by reference or are otherwise submitted, the presence of a written stipulation, it is well settled by the great weight of authority, that, except by consent of parties, a federal court has no authority to refer the issues in an action at law to a referee and thus substitute a trial by referee for the statutory modes of trial by jury or court, in a matter of accounting or otherwise, and that even although such procedure be authorized by a state statute, the authority to make such reference is not, in such case, conferred upon the federal court by the provision of the conformity statute, R. S. sec. 914 (see supra, p. 21). U. S. v. Wells. (E. D. Tenn. 1913) 203 Fed. 148.

In Vermuele v. Reilly, (S. D. N. Y. 1912) 186 Fed. 228, a motion by the plaintiff for a reference was overruled on the ground that the action being a common-law action to recover damages the defendant was entitled to a jury trial.

Findings of fact by a consent referee are not reviewable on a writ of error further than to ascertain if they are sufficient.

As to following state practice in matter of reference, see supra, this note, p. 129, under sidehead Reference.

Chapter 6: Book account.—An action of book account is an action at law, and cannot be referred to an auditor following the provisions of a state statute. Sulzer v. Watson, (C. C. Vt. 1889) 90 Fed. 414.

IV. What Is Trial by Jury

"Trial by jury, in the primary and usual sense of the term at the common law and in the American constitutions, is not merely a trial by a jury of twelve men before an officer vested with authority to cause them to be summoned and impannelled, to administer oaths to them and to the constable in charge, and to enter judgment and to issue execution on their verdict; but it is a trial by a jury of twelve men in the presence and under the superintendence of a judge empowered to instruct them on the law and to advise them on the facts, and (except on acquittal of a criminal charge) to set aside their verdict if, in his opinion, it is against the law or the evidence. Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Putnam, (1886) 118 U. S. 545, 7 S. Ct. 1, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 257; U. S. v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., (1887) 123 U. S. 113, 8 S. Ct. 77, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 138; Sparf v. U. S., (1895) 156 U. S. 51, 15 S. Ct. 273, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 348; Thompson v. Utah, (1896) 170 U. S. 343, 18 S. Ct. 629, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1061; Capital Traction Co. v. Hof, (1899) 174 U. S. 1, 19 S. Ct. 580, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 873.

Upon a mistrial a second trial cannot be had by a new jury out of the existing panel, but there must be a second venire. Wilson v. Barnum, (1849) 1 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 347, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 17,787.

V. Province of Court and Jury

In general.—It is the right of the parties to have a jury pass upon all the material issues of fact, and this right cannot be taken from them by the court. Hodges v. Easton, (1882) 106 U. S. 408, 1 S. Ct. 107, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 109.

Questions of fact are for the jury, questions of law for the court. Georgia v. Brailsford, (1794) 3 Dall. 1, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 14.

Reasonable time, where the proofs are conflicting, is a mixed question of law and fact. In such cases the court should instruct upon the several hypotheses of fact insisted upon by the parties. Wiggins v. Burkham, (1869) 10 Wall. 129, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 884.

It is the province of the jury to decide in what order they shall consider the evidence and the manner in which they shall weigh it. Crane v. Morris, (1832) 6 Pet. 598, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 639.

The application of written instruments to external objects described therein is the peculiar province of the jury. Richardson v. Boston, (1869) 19 How. 263, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 339.

The question what is meant by a certain term used among merchants is one of fact, and properly submitted to the jury. Law v. Cross, (1861) 1 Black 533, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 185.

The court cannot submit a part of the facts to the jury, and itself determine the remainder, even when the remaining facts are recited in the judgment as "conceded or not disputed at the trial." Hodges v. Easton, (1882) 106 U. S. 408, 1 S. Ct. 107, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 109.

Whenever evidence in its nature prima facie or presumptive is offered, its character, as such, ought not to be disregarded by the jury, and the court has no right to direct the jury to disregard it. Crane v. Morris, (1832) 6 Pet. 598, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 514.

In U. S. v. Whoson, (1812) 1 Gall. 9, 28 Fed. Cas. No. 16,750, a verdict and judgment for the defendant having been rendered in the federal court in an action of debt for a penalty, the United States appealed and were held not to be entitled to try with a new jury in the appellate court facts which had been tried and determined by the jury in the court below.

Plea to jurisdiction.—A plea to the jurisdiction, with a replication raising an issue of fact, should be submitted to the jury, subject to the right of the court to direct a verdict on the issue when proper. Virginia v. Felts, (W. D. Va. 1904) 153 Fed. 85, where the conflicting authorities are cited.

Motion to quash service.—On a motion to quash service on a foreign corporation defendant, it was held not to be entitled to a jury trial of the issues whether it was doing business within the state, and whether the person on whom service was made was its representative. Peper Automobile Co. v. American Motor Car Sales Co., (E. D. Mo. 1910) 180 Fed. 245, citing numerous cases.
VI. CHARGE AND PRAYERS FOR INSTRUCTION

The court may refuse to give an extended series of instructions, though some may be correct, if the law arising upon the evidence is given by the court with such force as to guide correctly the jury. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Whitton, (1871) 13 Wall. 270, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 671.

No court is bound, at the mere instance of a party, to repeat over to the jury the same substantial proposition of law, in every variety of form which the ingenuity of counsel may suggest. Kelly v. Jackson, (1832) 6 Pet. 622, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 523.

The court must instruct the jury upon any point relevant to the issue, if requested. Douglass v. M'Allister, (1806) 3 Cranch 298, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 445.

The court need not give instructions in the terms asked, but it is sufficient if so much thereof is given as is applicable to the evidence. Clymer v. Dawkins, (1845) 3 How. 674, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 778; Pitta v. Whitman, (1843) 2 Story 609, 19 Fed. Cas. No. 11,186.

Once having instructed the jury on a particular aspect of the case, however material, cannot be assigned for error, unless the attention of the court was called to it with a request to instruct upon it. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Snyder, (1876) 93 U. S. 391, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 887.

If the charge is merely ambiguous, the party dissatisfied with it should have requested to have it made clear before the jury left the bar. Schuykill, etc., Imp. Co. v. Munson, (1871) 14 Wall. 442, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 867.

Judgment will not be set aside because the charge may be open to verbal criticisms, which could not, when taken with the rest of the charge, have made a reverse. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Whittion, (1871) 13 Wall. 270, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 571.

If a series of propositions is embodied in instructions, and the instructions are excepted to in mass, if any one of the propositions is correct, the exception must be overruled. Boggoer v. New York Life Ins. Co., (1880) 103 U. S. 90, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 310.

An assignment of error that the court below erred in the general charge, in lieu of instructions asked, without specifying errors, is insufficient. Lucas v. Brooks, (1873) 18 Wall. 436, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 779.

VII. POWER TO DIRECT VERDICT

The court can only direct a verdict when the state of the evidence is such as to leave no room for doubt that it was the duty of the jury to find accordingly. Pence v. Langdon, (1878) 99 U. S. 578, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 420.

If there be some evidence in favor of a party, yet if it is insufficient to sustain a verdict, so that one based thereon would be set aside, the court may direct the

If the court is satisfied that, conceding all the inferences which the jury could justly draw from the testimony, the evidence is insufficient to warrant a verdict for the plaintiff, the court should say so to the jury, and not go through the idle ceremony of submitting when it is clear that a verdict for the plaintiff would be set aside. Pleasant v. Fant, (1874) 22 Wall. 116, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 789; Coolidge v. McConel, (1874) 2 Sav. 571, 6 Fed. Cas. No. 3,186; Kelley v. Belcher Silver Min. Co., (1875) 3 Sawy. 500, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,761; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, (1868) 3 Cliff. 205, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,449.

The court cannot direct a verdict against a plaintiff, in reality passing upon the nature and effect of the whole evidence introduced by the plaintiff, part of which was necessarily of a presumptive nature, and capable of being urged with more or less effect to the jury. Crane v. Morris, (1832) 6 Pet. 606, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 614.

Where the facts are undisputed, if different deductions or inferences may, by different minds, be reasonably made or drawn, as in a question of negligence, the decision is for the jury. Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Stout, (1875) 17 Wall. 657, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 745.

When the evidence, weak or strong, tends to maintain the issue, it should be submitted to the jury. Richardson v. Boston, (1856) 19 How. 263, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 639; Drakely v. Gregg, (1868) 8 Wall. 242, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 400; Hickman v. Jones, (1869) 9 Wall. 107, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 551.

The case should not be submitted to the jury where there is no more than a scintilla of evidence to support it, but only where there is none upon which a jury can properly proceed to find a verdict for the party producing it, upon whom the burden of proof rests. Pleasant v. Fant, (1874) 22 Wall. 116, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 780; Marion County v. Clark. S. (1876) 14 Wall. 278, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 59; Giblin v. McMullen, (1868) L. R. 2 P. C. 317.

It is not necessary, to warrant the court in submitting a case to the jury, that the state of the evidence should necessarily lead to the conclusion that the plaintiff is entitled to recover. Schuchardt v. Allen, (1863) 1 Wall. 359, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 642.

A direction of a verdict, for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court, upon the question whether the facts proved are sufficient to render defendants liable, is error, in that it violates the right of trial by jury in the absence of a waiver. Baylis v. Travellers Ins. Co., (1868) 113 U. S. 318, 5 S. Ct. 494, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 989.

Where the judge recites from memory the evidence given on a former trial and directs a verdict thereon, there is error. Barney v. Schneider, (1869) 9 Wall. 248, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 648.

Where there are several defendants in an action ex delitto an application to direct a verdict of acquittal as to one may be made. Castle v. Bullard, (1859) 23 How. 172, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 424.

VIII. POWER TO GRANT NON SUIT

After the case is opened for trial the plaintiff is not entitled to take a nonsuit, dismissial, or mere discontinuance as of right, but can only do so by consent of the opposite party, or if for sufficient reason the court gives leave. Folger v. The Robert G. Shaw, (1847) 2 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 531, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,899.

Where there are several defendants and the charge is joint and several, at common law there cannot be a nonsuit as to one and a verdict as to others, though one may be found guilty and another not. Castle v. Bullard, (1859) 23 How. 172, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 424.

IX. VERDICT AND ITS EFFECT

The plaintiff may remit an excess of interest found in the verdict, and the court may amend the verdict accordingly. Paige v. Loring, (1873) Holmes 275, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,568 to the court.

Where issues are submitted, a verdict finding the "issue" for the plaintiff is not responsive, but the court may amend by changing from the singular to the

In the case of a verdict "for the defendants, subject to the opinion of the court on the points reserved," the facts and the opinion of the court upon the points reserved should be entered upon the record so that the merits might be reviewed. Smith v. Delaware Ins. Co., (1813) 7 Cranch 434, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 396.

A finding of a jury which contradicts a fact admitted in the pleadings is to be disregarded. McFerran v. Taylor, (1806) 3 Cranch 370, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 436.

A verdict certain as to a common intent upon a writ of right for the recovery of lands is sufficient to sustain a judgment. Litter v. Green, (1817) 2 Wheat. 306, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 246.

A special verdict ought always to be settled under the correction of the judge, and filed as of the term when the trial took place. Suydam v. Williamson, (1857) 20 How. 427, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 978.

Sec. 649. [Issues of fact tried by the court.] Issues of fact in civil cases in any circuit court may be tried and determined by the court, without the intervention of a jury, whenever the parties, or their attorneys of record, file with the clerk a stipulation in writing waiving a jury. The finding of the court upon the facts, which may be either general or special, shall have the same effect as the verdict of a jury. [B. S.]

See R. S. sec. 566, supra, p. 121, and note thereto, and R. S. sec. 648, supra, p. 124, and note thereto.

See also R. S. sec. 700, infra, p. 205, where the notes of cases on this section are given.

This section 649 was not among the sections named as repealed in Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1065.

"Section 566 of the Revised Statutes [supra, p. 121] requiring that actions at law in the District Courts be tried by jury, has no application to the District Courts as now organized." Wm. Edwards Co. v. La Dow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 378, 144 C. C. A. 529.

Sec. 1. [Findings of facts and law in admiralty cases — trial by jury — review by supreme court.] That the circuit courts of the United States, in deciding causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction on the instance-side of the court, shall find the facts and the conclusions of law upon which it renders its judgments or decrees, and shall state the facts and conclusions of law separately. And in finding the facts, as before provided, said court may, upon the consent of the parties, submit said questions of fact in issue, and subject to such general rules in the premises as shall be made and provided from time to time, impanel a jury of not less than five and not more than twelve persons, to whom shall be submitted the issues of fact in such case, under the direction of the court, as it cases at common law. And the finding of such jury, unless set aside for a lawful cause, shall be entered of record, and stand as the finding of the court, upon which judgment shall be entered according to law. The review of the judgments and decrees entered upon such findings by the Supreme Court, upon appeal, shall be limited to a determination of the questions of law arising upon the record, and to such rulings of the circuit court, excepted to at the time, as may be presented by a bill of exceptions, prepared as in actions at law. [18 Stat. L. 315.]

This section is from the Act of Feb. 16, 1875, ch. 77, entitled "An Act to facilitate the disposition of cases in the Supreme Court of the United States, and for other purposes."

Section 2 of the same Act provided for trial by jury of issues of fact in patent causes in equity, and is given in title PATENTS.

Section 3 of the same Act increased the jurisdictional amount necessary for review by the Supreme Court of judgments and decrees of the Circuit Courts from $2,000 to $5,000, and was expressly repealed by section 14 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 829.

"Circuit" Courts mentioned in the text section 1 were abolished and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1082, 1083.

When the text section was enacted the "admiralty and maritime jurisdiction" of Circuit Courts, mentioned in this section, was the appellate jurisdiction — with trial anew upon the same and additional proofs — conferred by R. S. secs. 631, 632, both of which sections were repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1083. All jurisdiction exercising the jurisdiction of Circuit Courts was withdrawn by section 4 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, infra, p. 143, and distributed by that Act to the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court, as now provided in Judicial Code, §§ 128 and 235, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 607, 794, and thus the text section relating wholly to the Circuit Court seems to have been impliedly repealed.

"With practically substantial unanimity it has been held by the Circuit Courts of Appeals that the [text section] has no application to those courts." The Nyack, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1912) 199 Fed. 383, 118 C. C. A. 67. See also the cases cited below in this note. Jury trial of issues of fact in the District Courts in certain cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction is regulated by R. S. sec. 566, supra, p. 191.

Repealed by implication.—This section must be regarded as repealed by necessary implication by the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 826, which distributed all appeals between the Supreme Court (section 5) and the Circuit Court of Appeals (section 6). Munson Steamship Line v. Miramar Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 960, 93 C. C. A. 360. Sections 5 and 6 above cited are set forth in note to Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, JUDICIARY, vol. 5, p. 796.

All jurisdiction of the Circuit Court in admiralty having been taken away by the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 826 (supra, p. 143), creating the Circuit Court of Appeals, the Act of 1875, relating wholly to the Circuit Court, was impliedly repealed. No circuit judge could thereafter make findings or do any act in an admiralty case. The Nyack, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1912) 199 Fed. 383, 118 C. C. A. 67.

But in Pioneer Fuel Co. v. McBrier, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 84 Fed. 405, 55 U. S. App. 181, 28 C. C. A. 468, Mr. Justice Brewer, questioning whether the Act of 1875 had been entirely superseded, said:

"By section 14 of the Act of 1891, section 3 of the Act of 1875 was expressly repealed, and it is worthy of consideration whether the appellate courts of the Circuit having been called to the Act of 1875, as shown by the repeal of the third section, it can fairly be assumed that it intended to repeal by implication either of the other sections."

Purpose and scope of act.—Prior to this Act neither special findings of facts nor exceptions were a necessary part of the record upon an appeal in an admiralty cause, and the hearing in the Supreme Court and in the Circuit Court was a trial de novo. It was the purpose of that Act to relieve the Supreme Court from the necessity of deciding questions of fact in admiralty causes, and the provisions whereby findings of facts and conclusions of law were required to be separately stated by the Circuit Courts had no application to cases which could not, because the amount in controversy was insufficient, be reviewed by the Supreme Court. The Havilah, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1891) 48 Fed. 684, 1 U. S. App. 1, 1 C. C. A. 77.

Findings of fact.—Where the amount involved in an admiralty suit was not sufficient to permit a review by the Supreme Court of the judgment of the Circuit Court, a general finding of fact and law by the latter court was sufficient under this Act. One Thousand Two Hundred and Sixty-Five Vitriflue Pipes, (1877) 14 Blatchf. 274, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,536; Richards v. Hansen, (C. C. Mass. 1879) 1 Fed. 54.

"There is no practice under this statute

In The John H. Pearson, (1887) 121 U. S. 469, 7 S. Ct. (t. 1008, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 970, the question arose as to what was meant by the term "northern passage" from Gibraltar to New York, and it was held that the court below should have ascertained from the evidence what passages there were which vessels were accustomed to take and then determine which of them the vessel was allowed by its contract to choose as the northern; and the decree was reversed and the case remanded for further proceedings upon this ground.

Trial by jury.—Prior to this Act a court of admiralty had strictly no power to try issues of fact by a jury; but it might, either on its own motion or at the instance of the parties, submit any question of fact to commissioners or referees for their opinion and advice. Their decision, however, would not, like the verdict of a jury, be conclusive of the facts, which would finally have to be submitted to the decision of the court. Lee v. Thompson, (1878) 3 Woods 167, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8292.

Appeal from territorial courts.—An appeal from a District Court of a territory in an admiralty case was governed by the provisions of this Act. The Eclipse, (1890) 133 U. S. 599, 10 S. Ct. 873, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 269. Alaska.—The Supreme Court held in In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 453, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 232, and The Sylvia Handy, (1892) 143 U. S. 513, 12 S. Ct. 464, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 246, that this Act applied to appeals taken from decrees of the District Court of the United States for the district of Alaska sitting in admiralty, and the court was limited upon the appeal to a determination of the questions of law arising upon the record, and to such rulings of the court excepted to at the time and not presented by a bill of exceptions prepared as in actions at law.

"(2) That it is only the ultimate facts which the court is bound to find; and that this court will not take notice of a refusal to find the mere incidental facts, which only amount to evidence from which the ultimate fact is to be obtained. The John H. Pearson, (1887) 121 U. S. 469, [7 S. Ct. 1008, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 970]; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, (1887) 121 U. S. 67, [7 S. Ct. 821, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 858]; The Francis Wright, (1881) 105 U. S. 381, [26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100].

"(3) If the court below neglects or refuses to make a finding one way or the other as to the existence of a material fact which has been established by an uncontradicted evidence, or if it finds such a fact when not supported by any evidence whatever, and an exception be taken, the question may be brought up for review in that particular. In the one case the refusal to find would be equivalent to finding that the fact was immaterial, and in the other that there was some evidence to prove what is found, when in truth there was none. Both of these are questions of law and proper subjects for review in an appellate court. The E. A. Packer, (1891) 140 U. S. 360, [11 S. Ct. 794, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 453]; The Francis Wright, (1881) 105 U. S. 381, [26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100]."

"It does not, however, necessarily follow that this court is bound to determine the case upon the precise facts found by the Circuit Court. If, in its opinion, the findings are of a juxta, contradictory, or incomplete, or fail to establish a satisfactory basis for a decision. The Circuit Court is bound to pass upon and find every material and ultimate fact necessary to a proper determination of the question of liability, and in case of refusal to make such finding an exception may be taken thereto, which can be considered by the court upon appeal." The E. A. Packer, (1891) 140 U. S. 360, 11 S. Ct. 794, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 453.

In The Connamara, (1883) 108 U. S. 352, 2 S. Ct. 754, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 761, it was said by Mr. Justice Gray, delivering the opinion of the court: "Before the Act of 1876 this court, upon an appeal in a case of salvage, gave the same weight and no more to the decree of the court below that a court of common law would allow to the verdict of a jury, and might reverse that decree for manifest error in matter of fact even if no violation of just principles which should govern the subject was shown. (Post v. Jones, (1858) 19 How. 160, 180, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 618.) Since the Act of 1876, in cases of salvage and admiralty proceedings it may be necessary to establish this ground of complaint, which might under some circumstances include the whole, should be incorporated in the bill of exceptions." The City of New York, (1893) 147 U. S. 72, 13 S. Ct. 211, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 84.

Appeals to Circuit Courts of Appeals.—In the seventh circuit it was held that "an admiralty appeal by the libelant in the Circuit Court of Appeals, under the reason that the amount awarded appears to be too large, unless the excess is so great that upon any reasonable view of the facts found the award cannot be justified by the rules of law applicable to the case." Cited and followed in Irvine v. The Hesper, (1887) 122 U. S. 256, 7 S. Ct. 1177, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175; The Tornado, (1883) 109 U. S. 110, 3 S. Ct. 78, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 874; The Trefusis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 98 Fed. 314, 39 C. C. A. 96.

The finding of a commissioner appointed in an admiralty cause, on a question of fact depending largely on the credit to be given to the various witnesses testifying before him, confirmed by the court, has every reasonable presumption in its favor; and an appellate court is not justified in setting aside or modifying the decree based thereon, unless there clearly appears to have been error or mistake in the finding or the conclusion drawn therefrom. Cahill's Appeal, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 124 Fed. 690 C. C. A. 618; The North Star, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 168, 80 C. C. A. 536; United Steamship Co. v. Haskins, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 962, 104 C. C. A. 426.

Congress has "the constitutional power to confine the jurisdiction of this court on appeals in admiralty to questions of law arising on the record." The Francis Wright, (1881) 105 U. S. 381, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100.

Bill of exceptions.—A bill of exceptions to present for review rulings of the court must be based on exceptions taken to the rulings at the time the rulings are made. No other exceptions can be embraced in a bill of exceptions. If no exceptions to rulings are taken before the decree is entered, that is, during the trial, there can be no bill of exceptions. Richardson r. Ship Havre, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 748.

"In the case of The Francis Wright, (1881) 105 U. S. 381, [26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100], the court held that the bill of exceptions ought to show the ground relied on to sustain the objections, so that it might appear that the court below was properly informed as to the point to be decided and that the facts sought to be incorporated were conclusively proved by uncontradicted evidence, and if the exception were as to facts found it should be stated that it was because there was no evidence to support them, and then so much of the testimony as was necessary to establish this ground of complaint, which might under some circumstances include the whole, should be incorporated in the bill of exceptions." The City of New York, (1893) 147 U. S. 72, 13 S. Ct. 211, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 84.
Act of 1891, is to be heard and determined under substantially the same rules and limitations that regulated the determination of admiralty appeals in the Circuit Courts prior to the passage of that Act. This court may properly consider and determine every issue raised by the pleadings, and, without regard to the decree below, direct such a decree to be entered thereon as is consistent with law." The court may dismiss the libel though the respondents did not themselves appeal. Gilchrist v. Chicago Ins. Co. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1889) 104 Fed. 566, 44 C. C. A. 43.

And in a later case in the same circuit the court said: "With practically substantial unanimity it has been held by the Circuit Courts of Appeals that the statute has no application to those courts. The provision was intended to relieve the Supreme Court of the labor of looking into the facts found by the Circuit Court on appeals to that court from the District Court in admiralty cases." And again in that circuit it was held that the Circuit Court of Appeals in reviewing a decree in admiralty is governed by the provisions of the law in force at the time of the passage of the Act applicable to appeals by the Supreme Court and under the Act of Feb. 28, 1887. The authority cited is limited to questions of law. The Treviño v. C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1888 96 Fed. 574, 29 C. C. A. 171.

In the eighth circuit it was held that the Circuit Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction as to a cause of action being brought in federal court by a foreign corporation against a foreign corporation. United States v. Can. 8th Cir. 1884 27 Fed. 74, 6 C. C. A. 458.

In the ninth circuit it was held that the Circuit Court of Appeals has jurisdiction over a cause of action in an action by a foreign plaintiff against a foreign defendant. McAllister v. United States. 9th Cir. 1890 68 Fed. 245, 25 C. C. A. 120.

The authority cited is limited to questions of law. The Treviño v. C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1888 96 Fed. 574, 29 C. C. A. 171.

"It must be remembered also in this connection," said Brewer, J. in Pioneer Fuel Co. v. M. R. R. C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1887 (54 Fed. 453), 55 U. S. App. 251, 25 C. C. A. 400, "that the Circuit Court of Appeals cannot, in respect to admiralty cases at least, offer the relief to the Circuit Court in admiralty cases to which is offered to the Supreme Court in Admiralty cases. The Circuit Court of Appeals has jurisdiction of admiralty cases; but the Supreme Court has jurisdiction of cases of error from the Supreme Court of the United States."

"A no further jurisdiction is this Court as contemplated by the Act of 1875. The trial here is, therefore, upon the law and facts." Similar holdings were made in the first, second, fourth, sixth, eighth, and ninth circuits. See The Havilah (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1891) 48 Fed. 684, 1 U. S. App. 1, 1 C. C. Where the issues presented by a libel and cross-libel and the answers thereto in an admiralty cause are tried as a single controversy in the District Court, the effect is the same as if the two suits had been formally consolidated, and an appeal from the final decree brings up all questions. Costs as subject to review.—The awarding or withholding of costs in admiralty is a matter in the discretion of the court, which is not subject to review where that is the sole question involved: The Eva D. Rose, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 166 Fed. 101, 92 C. C. A. 85.

An Act To confer jurisdiction upon the circuit courts in certain cases.

[Sec. 1.] [Jurisdiction of circuit court of suit for partition, where United States is joint tenant, etc.] [Superseded.] That the several circuit courts of the United States shall have jurisdiction of suits in equity brought by any tenant in common or joint tenant for the partition of lands in cases where the United States is one of such tenants in common or joint tenants, such suit to be brought in the circuit court of the district in which such land is situated. [30 Stat. L. 416.]

"Circuit" Courts were abolished and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1082, 1083.

The section 1 here noted was embraced in and superseded by Judicial Code, § 24, paragraph Twenty-fifth, supra, this title, vol. 4, p. 843, and repealed by force of the last paragraph of Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085.

See generally as to the venue of suits in District Courts, Judicial Code, §§ 51-56, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 486-524.

Sec. 2. [Procedure — service of process — appearance — pleading — purchase by United States.] That when such suit is brought by any person owning an undivided interest in such land, other than the United States, against the United States alone or against the United States and any other of such owners, service shall be made on the United States by causing a copy of the bill filed to be served upon the district attorney of the district wherein the suit is brought, and by mailing a copy of the same by registered letter to the Attorney-General of the United States; and the complainant in such bill shall file with the clerk of the court in which such bill is filed an affidavit of such service and of the mailing of such letter. It shall be the duty of the district attorney upon whom service of the bill is made as aforesaid to appear and defend the interests of the Government, and within sixty days after service upon him as hereinabove prescribed, unless the time shall be enlarged by order of the court made in the case, to file a plea, answer, or demurrer on the part of the Government, and the cause shall proceed as other cases for partition by courts of equity, and in making such partition the court shall be governed by the same principles of equity that control courts of equity in partition proceedings between private persons. Whenever in such suit the court shall order a sale of the property or any part thereof the Attorney-General of the United States
An Act To expedite the hearing and determination of suits in equity pending or hereafter brought under the Act of July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," "An Act to regulate commerce," approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, or any other Acts having a like purpose that may be hereafter enacted.

[Sec. 1.] [Anti-trust cases given precedence in district court — hearing by three or more judges — division of opinion — additional judge and reargument.] That in any suit in equity pending or hereafter brought in any circuit court of the United States under the Act entitled "An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies," approved July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, "An Act to regulate commerce," approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, or any other Acts having a like purpose that hereafter may be enacted, wherein the United States is complainant, the Attorney-General may file with the clerk of such court a certificate that, in his opinion, the case is of general public importance, a copy of which shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to each of the circuit judges of the circuit in which the case is pending. Thereupon such case shall be given precedence over others and in every suit expedited, and be assigned for hearing at the earliest practicable day, before not less than three of the circuit judges of said court, if there be three or more; and if there be not more than two circuit judges, then before them and such district judge as they may select; or, in case the full court shall not at any time be made up by reason of the necessary absence or disqualification of one or more of the said circuit judges, the justice of the Supreme Court assigned to that circuit or the other circuit judge or judges may designate a district judge or judges within the circuit who shall be competent to sit in said court at the hearing of said suit. In the event the judges sitting in such case shall be equally divided in opinion as to the decision or disposition of said cause, or in the event that a majority of said judges shall be unable to agree upon the judgment, order, or decree finally disposing of said case in said court which should be entered in said cause, then they shall immediately certify that fact to the Chief Justice of the United States, who shall at once designate and appoint some circuit judge to sit with said judges and to assist in determining said cause. Such notice of the Chief Justice shall be immediately transmitted to the clerk of the circuit court in which said cause is pending, and shall be entered upon the records of said court. Thereupon said cause shall at once be set down for reargument and the parties thereto notified in writing by the clerk of said court of the action of the court and the date fixed for the reargument thereof. The provisions of this section shall apply to all causes and proceedings in all courts now pending, or which may hereafter be brought. [32
Stat. L. 823, as amended by 36 Stat. L. 854.]}

This and the following section 2 constitute the Act known as the “Expediting Act.”
This section was amended to read as given in the text by an Act of June 25, 1910, ch.
428, 36 Stat. L. 854. As originally enacted this section was as follows:

“[Sec. 1.] That in any suit in equity pending or hereafter brought in any circuit court of the United States under the Act entitled ‘An Act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies,’ approved July second, eighteen hundred and ninety, ‘An Act to regulate commerce,’ approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, or any other Acts having a like purpose that hereafter may be enacted, wherein the United States is complainant, the Attorney-General may file with the clerk of such court a certificate that, in his opinion, the case is of general public importance, a copy of which shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to each of the circuit judges of the circuit in which the case is pending. Thereupon such case shall be given precedence over others and in every way expedited, and be assigned for hearing at the earliest practicable day, before not less than three of the circuit judges of the circuit; and if there be not more than two of the circuit judges, then before them and such district judge as they may select. In the event the judges sitting in such case shall be divided in opinion, the case shall be certified to the Supreme Court for review in like manner as it taken there by appeal as hereinafter provided.”

“Circuit” Courts mentioned in this section were abolished and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289 and 291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1092, 1083.

The Act of July 2, 1890, ch. 647, to which the text refers, was the Sherman Anti-Trust Act, so-called, which is given in title TRADE COMBINATIONS AND TRUSTS.

The Act of Feb. 4, 1887, ch. 104, to which the text refers, was the Interstate Commerce Act, which, as amended by the Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 382, the Act of Feb. 10, 1891, ch. 128, and the Act of Feb. 8, 1895, ch. 61, is given in INTERSTATE COM-MERCE, vol. 4, p. 337.

By the express terms of section 3 of the Act of Feb. 19, 1903, ch. 708, known as the Elkins Act, given in INTERSTATE COMMERCE, vol. 4, p. 566, the provisions of the Act of Feb. 11, 1903, above cited, were made to apply “to any case prosecuted under the direction of the Attorney-General in the name of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Constitutionality.—In U. S. v. New York, etc., R. Co., (C. C. Mass. 1908) 165 Frd. 742, it was held that this section as originally enacted was not unconstitutional. In that case it was contended that the statute was so framed that it was limited to a particular class of cases, and operative only at the request of the United States and could never be called on by a respondent, and never by either party in any action pending in a court of the United States. The court said: “There can be no question that this makes an apparent discrimination, yet we are unable to perceive that it is injurious to respondents, or any other possible respondents, in any legal sense of the word. The interests involved under the Sherman Anti-trust Act and its amendments are liable to include exceedingly extensive pecuniary values; and the possible remedies given thereby,
which combine, with the rest, the powers, express or implied, of issuing injunctions, and of appointing receivers, and declaring forfeitures, all relating to vast properties, are of so radical a character that a hasty or inapt administration of the statute by a single judge might inevitably embarrass industries as wide as the continent, and even practically destroy them, before an appellate tribunal could be reached. Therefore, we say the statute under which the Attorney-General filed his certificate is not injurious, because on the whole, when availed of, it operates for the protection of the interests of respondents more than for those of the United States.”

Purpose of Act.—A careful reading of the entire Act shows clearly that the intention of Congress, in addition to expediting the hearing of the cases enuerated, was to have them, owing to their great importance, tried by at least three judges, instead of one as had been the usual practice in the Circuit Court since the enactment of the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 617, 26 Stat. L. 826, creating the United States Circuit Courts of Appeal.
U. S. v. St. Louis Terminal Ass'n, (E. D.
Mo. 1912) 197 Fed. 446.

Effect of provision.—Fairly construed, this section permits such cases to proceed in the usual way, except for being expedited, until assigned for final hearing before three judges; and the provision (in the text section before its amendment) that “in the event the judges sitting in such case shall be divided in opinion the case shall be certified to the Supreme Court for review in like manner as if taken there by appeal as hereinafter provided," is effective only where, by reason of such division of opinion, a final decree cannot be entered, since, if entered, an appeal therefore would lie under section 2. Southern Pac. Terminal Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (S. D. Tex. 1908) 166 Fed. 134.

Not repealed by Judicial Code.—The special provisions of the Expediting Act requiring in a particular class of cases the organization of a court constituted in a particular manner were not repealed by the Judicial Code. Rev. p. U. S., (1913) 226 U. S. 420, 33 S. Ct. 170, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 281, wherein the court said: "This is the only question, because if that act was not repealed by the Code, then its provisions amount to an assignment by operation of law of the circuit judges to sit as judges of the District Court for the purpose of discharging the duties imposed by the act. When the issue is thus narrowed solution is readily reached by the application of the elementary rule that a special and particular statutory provision affording a remedy for particular and specific cases is not repealed by a general law unless the repeal be express or the implication to that end be irresistible. Petri v. F. E. Creelman Lumber Co., (1905) 196 U. S. 457, 497, [26 S. Ct. 133, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 281. That the new District Court created by the Judicial Code was vested with the duty of hearing and disposing of the cases provided for in the Expedition Act as the successor of the formerly existing Circuit Court, as we have already stated, is undoubted. The mere fact that the Expedition Act in terms refers to the organization of a Circuit Court would be, as a general rule, under the circumstances, of no importance, and becomes absolutely without significance in view of the express provision of chapter XIII, section 291, of the Judicial Code, saying: 'Wherever, in any law not embraced within this act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the Circuit Courts, such reference shall, upon the taking effect of this act, be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the District Courts.'"

Prior practice.—This section as originally enacted did not authorize the sending up of the whole case, and therefore the court would not consider, as we think, here, a final judgment, order, or decree determinative of the merits was rendered. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Interstate Commerce Commission, (1909) 215 U. S. 216, 30 S. Ct. 86, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 164.

Assigned for "hearing."—The word "hearing," as ordinarily used in an equity case, clearly means a trial or a disposition of some matter arising in the case which requires judicial determination by the court, whether interlocutory or final. U. S. v. St. Louis Terminal Ass'n, (E. D. Mo. 1912) 117 Fed. 446. Right of single judge to direct decree.—In U. S. v. St. Louis Terminal Ass'n, (E. D. Mo. 1912) 197 Fed. 446, there was a decree of the Supreme Court dismissing the bill and remanding the case for a decree. On the hearing in the trial court after remand on the question of the right of a single judge to direct the decree, it was held that the entry of a final decree in conformity with specific directions of the Supreme Court did not come within the provision of this section requiring a hearing before at least three circuit judges, although a certificate of expedition was filed in the trial court when the suit was originally instituted. "The directions contained in the mandate of the Supreme Court in this cause leave nothing for determination by or to the discretion of the judge of this court. He is specifically directed to enter a certain decree, and in entering that decree he is, in effect, performing a ministerial duty which may be enforced by mandamus." But in Ez p. U. S., (1913) 226 U. S. 420, 33 S. Ct. 170, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 281, on petition for a writ of prohibition, this holding was overruled, the Supreme Court, per Mr. Chief Justice White, saying: "We think the court below erred in concluding that the United States was not entitled to a District Court organized in the mode pointed out in the Expedition Act, unless it be, as stated by the lower court in its opinion, the subject in hand was of such a character, as not to be within the scope of the Expedition Act. Coming to consider that question without going into any elaboration, we are of opinion that error was committed in so holding. While it is true that the mandate of this court gave certain specific directions as to the scope and character of the decree to be entered, it afforded an opportunity to the defendant to submit a plan in order to carry out the decree and gave to the United States an opportunity to be heard in opposition to that plan and left to the court an important and serious duty to be discharged in any event, and especially in case of controversy on the subject. These considerations, we think, brought the subject within the scope of the Expedition Act and justified the request of the United States that the case be considered and a decree entered by a court composed as provided in that act."
any of said Acts, wherein the United States is complainant, including cases submitted but not yet decided, an appeal from the final decree of the circuit court will lie only to the Supreme Court and must be taken within sixty days from the entry thereof: Provided, That in any case where an appeal may have been taken from the final decree of a circuit court to the circuit court of appeals before this Act takes effect, the case shall proceed to a final decree therein, and an appeal may be taken from such decree to the Supreme Court in the manner now provided by law. [32 Stat. L. 823.]

See note to the preceding section 1 of this Act.
The general time limit for appeal to the Supreme Court is three months, as provided in section 6 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, 30 Stat. L. 727, quoted in note to R. S. sec. 1008, infra, p. 158.

Order requiring production of evidence in aid of proceedings before Interstate Commerce Commission.—In Interstate Commerce Commission v. Baird, (1904) 194 U. S. 25, 24 S. Ct. 563, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 860, it was held that an appeal from an order made in the Circuit Court of the United States in the matter of the petition of the Interstate Commerce Commission for orders requiring the testimony of witnesses and the production of certain papers, books and documents, was authorized.

Sec. 1031. [When peremptory challenges exceed the number allowed by law.] If, in the trial of a capital offense, the party indicted peremptorily challenges jurors above the number allowed him by law, such excess of challenges shall be disallowed by the court, and the cause shall proceed for trial in the same manner as if they had not been made. [R. S.]

The number of challenges allowed by law is prescribed in Judicial Code, § 287, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1078.

IX. PROCEDURE IN INJUNCTION CASES

Sec. 17. [Preliminary injunctions and temporary restraining orders—notice.] That no preliminary injunction shall be issued without notice to the opposite party.

No temporary restraining order shall be granted without notice to the opposite party unless it shall clearly appear from specific facts shown by affidavit or by the verified bill that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the applicant before notice can be served and a hearing had thereon. Every such temporary restraining order shall be indorsed with the date and hour of issuance, shall be forthwith filed in the clerk's office and entered of record, shall define the injury and state why it is irreparable and why the order was granted without notice, and shall by its terms expire within such time after entry, not to exceed ten days, as the court or judge may fix, unless within the time so fixed the order is extended for a like period for good cause shown, and the reasons for such extension shall be entered of record. In case a temporary restraining order shall be granted without notice in the contingency specified, the matter of the issuance of a preliminary injunction shall be set down for a hearing at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence of all matters except older matters of the same character; and when the same comes up for hearing the party obtaining the temporary restraining order shall proceed with the application for a preliminary injunction, and if he does not do so the court shall dissolve the temporary restraining order. Upon two days' notice to the party obtaining such temporary restraining order the opposite party may appear and move the dissolution or modification of the order, and in that event the court or judge shall proceed to hear and determine the motion as expeditiously as the ends of justice may require.

Section two hundred and sixty-three of an Act entitled "An Act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March third, nineteen hundred and eleven, is hereby repealed.

Nothing in this section contained shall be deemed to alter, repeal, or amend section two hundred and sixty-six of an Act entitled "An Act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March third, nineteen hundred and eleven. [38 Stat. L. 737.]

This section and the following sections to and including section 26, infra, p. 143, constitute the last sections of the Act of Oct. 15, 1914, ch. 323, commonly known as the "Clayton Act," entitled "A Act To supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes." Sections 1-16 of the Act are given in title TRADE COMBINATIONS AND TRUSTS.

Judicial Code, § 283, repealed by this section, was a re-enactment of R. S. sec. 718, and is given, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 951.

Judicial Code, § 286, mentioned at the end of this section, is given supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 983.

As to the effect of unconstitutionality of any part of the Act, see section 26, infra,
p. 143.

SEC. 18. [Restraining orders, etc.—security as condition precedent.]
That except as otherwise provided in section 16 of this Act, no restraining order or interlocutory order of injunction shall issue, except upon the giving of security by the applicant in such sum as the court or judge may deem proper, conditioned upon the payment of such costs and damages as may be incurred or suffered by any party who may be found to have been wrongfully enjoined or restrained thereby. [38 Stat. L. 738.]

See the note to the preceding section 17 of this Act.

Not retroactive.—This section was held not to be retroactive and not to apply to temporary restraining orders granted under section 283 of the Judicial Code (see supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 951) prior to the above enactment. Western Union Tel.
Co. v. U. S., etc., Trust Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 221 Fed. 545, 137 C. C. A. 113.

SEC. 19. [Restraining orders, etc.—contents—binding only upon whom.] That every order of injunction or restraining order shall set forth the reasons for the issuance of the same, shall be specific in terms, and shall describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the bill of complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained, and shall be binding only upon the parties to the suit, their officers, agents, servants, employees, and attorneys, or those in active concert or participating with them, and who shall, by personal service or otherwise, have received actual notice of the same. [38 Stat. L. 738.]

sec. 20. [Restraining orders, etc.—when not to issue.—what acts not to be prohibited.] That no restraining order or injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States, or a judge or the judges thereof, in any case between an employer and employees, or between employers and employees, or between employees, or between persons employed and persons seeking employment, involving, or growing out of, a dispute concerning terms or conditions of employment, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property, or to a property right, of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law, and such property or property right must be described with particularity in the application, which must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant or by his agent or attorney.

And no such restraining order or injunction shall prohibit any person or persons, whether singly or in concert, from terminating any relation of employment, or from ceasing to perform any work or labor, or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful means so to do; or from attending at any place where any such person or persons may lawfully be, for the purpose of peacefully obtaining or communicating information, or from peacefully persuading any person to work or to abstain from working; or from ceasing to patronize or to employ any party to such dispute; or from recommending, advising, or persuading others by peaceful and lawful means so to do; or from paying or giving to, or withholding from, any person engaged in such dispute, any strike benefits or other moneys or things of value; or from peaceably assembling in a lawful manner, and for lawful purposes; or from doing any act or thing which might lawfully be done in the absence of such dispute by any party thereto; nor shall any of the acts specified in this paragraph be considered or held to be violations of any law of the United States. [38 Stat. L. 738.]

See note to section 17, supra, p. 140.

This section does not prevent the granting of an injunction against the officers and members of a labor-union restraining them from unlawfully causing, inducing, or in any way forwarding acts of violence violating the rights of a complainant as an interstate commerce and United States mail carrier, where such injunction in no way abridges any of the rights secured by this provision. Alaska Steamship Co. v. International Longshoremen's Ass'n, (W. D. Wash. 1916) 236 Fed. 964.

X. PROCEDURE FOR CONTEMPT

sec. 21. [Contempt constituting criminal offense under federal or state law.] That any person who shall willfully disobey any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of any district court of the United States or any court of the District of Columbia by doing any act or thing therein, or thereby forbidden to be done by him, if the act or thing so done by him be of such character as to constitute also a criminal offense under any statute of the United States, or under the laws of any State in which the act was committed, shall be proceeded against for his said contempt as hereinafter provided. [38 Stat. L. 738.]

This and the following sections 22-26 are from the Clayton Act of Oct. 15, 1914, ch. 323. See the note to section 17 of this Act, supra, p. 140.

SEC. 22. [Procedure for contempt — rule to show cause — trial and judgment — bail.] That whenever it shall be made to appear to any district court or judge thereof, or to any judge therein sitting, by the return of a proper officer on lawful process, or upon the affidavit of some credible person, or by information filed by any district attorney, that there is reasonable ground to believe that any person has been guilty of such contempt, the court or judge thereof, or any judge therein sitting, may issue a rule requiring the said person so charged to show cause upon a day certain why he should not be punished therefor, which rule, together with a copy of the affidavit or information, shall be served upon the person charged, with sufficient promptness to enable him to prepare for and make return to the order at the time fixed therein. If upon or by such return, in the judgment of the court, the alleged contempt be not sufficiently purged, a trial shall be directed at a time and place fixed by the court: Provided, however, That if the accused, being a natural person, fail or refuse to make return to the rule to show cause, an attachment may issue against his person to compel an answer, and in case of his continued failure or refusal, or if for any reason it be impracticable to dispose of the matter on the return day, he may be required to give reasonable bail for his attendance at the trial and his submission to the final judgment of the court. Where the accused is a body corporate, an attachment for the sequesterion of its property may be issued upon like refusal or failure to answer.

In all cases within the purview of this Act, such trial may be by the court, or, upon demand of the accused, by a jury; in which latter event the court may impanel a jury from the jurors then in attendance, or the court or the judge thereof in chambers may cause a sufficient number of jurors to be selected and summoned, as provided by law, to attend at the time and place of trial, at which time a jury shall be selected and impaneled as upon a trial for misdemeanor; and such trial shall conform, as near as may be, to the practice in criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or upon information.

If the accused be found guilty, judgment shall be entered accordingly, prescribing the punishment, either by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. Such fine shall be paid to the United States or to the complainant or other party injured by the act constituting the contempt, or may, where more than one is so damaged, be divided or apportioned among them as the court may direct, but in no case shall the fine be paid to the United States exceed, in case the accused is a natural person, the sum of $1,000, nor shall such imprisonment exceed the term of six months: Provided, That in any case the court or a judge thereof may, for good cause shown, by affidavit or proof taken in open court or before such judge and filed with the papers in the case, dispense with the rule to show cause, and may issue an attachment for the arrest of the person charged with contempt; in which event such person, when arrested, shall be brought before such court or a judge thereof without unnecessary delay and shall be admitted to bail in a reasonable penalty for his appearance to answer to the charge or for trial for the contempt; and thereafter the proceedings shall be the same as provided herein in cases the rule had issued in the first instance. [38 Stat. L. 738.]

See note to the preceding section 21 of this Act.

SEC. 23. [Conviction of contempt reviewed on writ of error — stay and bail.] That the evidence taken upon the trial of any persons so accused may be preserved by bill of exceptions, and any judgment of conviction may be reviewed upon writ of error in all respects as now provided by law in criminal cases, and may be affirmed, reversed, or modified as justice may require. Upon the granting of such writ of error, execution of judgment shall be stayed, and the accused, if thereby sentenced to imprisonment, shall be admitted to bail in such reasonable sum as may be required by the court, or by any justice, or any judge of any district court of the United States or any court of the District of Columbia. [38 Stat. L. 739.]

See note to section 21 of this Act, supra, p. 141.

SEC. 24. [Certain contempts excluded from operation of Act.] That nothing herein contained shall be construed to relate to contempts committed in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, nor to contempts committed in disobedience of any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command entered in any suit or action brought or prosecuted in the name of, or on behalf of, the United States, but the same, and all other cases of contempt not specifically embraced within section twenty-one of this Act, may be punished in conformity to the usages at law and in equity now prevailing. [38 Stat. L. 739.]

See note to section 21 of this Act, supra, p. 141.

SEC. 25. [One year limitation for contempt proceeding — no bar to criminal prosecution — pending proceedings.] That no proceeding for contempt shall be instituted against any person unless begun within one year from the date of the act complained of; nor shall any such proceeding be a bar to any criminal prosecution for the same act or acts; but nothing herein contained shall affect any proceedings in contempt pending at the time of the passage of this Act. [38 Stat. L. 740.]

See note to section 21 of this Act, supra, p. 141.

SEC. 26. [Effect of partial unconstitutionality of Act.] If any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this Act shall, for any reason, be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder thereof, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered. [38 Stat. L. 740.]

See note to section 21 of this Act, supra, p. 141.

XI. APPELLATE JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

SEC. 4. [Appeals from district and circuit courts.] That no appeal, whether by writ of error or otherwise, shall hereafter be taken or allowed from any district court to the existing circuit courts, and no appellate jurisdiction shall hereafter be exercised or allowed by said existing circuit courts; but all appeals by writ of error [or] otherwise, from said district courts shall only be subject to review in the Supreme Court of the United States or in the circuit court of appeals hereby established, as is hereinafter provided, and the review, by appeal, by writ of error, or otherwise, from the existing circuit courts shall be had only in the Supreme Court of the United States or in the circuit courts of appeals hereby established according to the provisions of this act regulating the same. [26 Stat. L. 827.]

This section is from the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, no part of which Act was repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085, excepting repeals by force of the last paragraph in, and the third paragraph from the end of, said section 297.

"Circuit Courts," mentioned in the text section, were abolished, and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289–291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1082, 1083.

Sections 5 and 6 of the above cited Circuit Court of Appeals Act are given in full in the note to Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 796, with references to the several sections of the Judicial Code in which they are embraced; and the part of section 6 prescribing a time limit for appeal or writ of error for review by the Supreme Court of decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals is given infra, p. 157. Section 7 of said Act (as amended by the Revised Code, § 129, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 629. Section 10 of said Act relates to appellate procedure and is given infra, p. 234. Section 11 of said Act also related to appellate procedure; part of it is embraced in Judicial Code, § 132, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 643, and the remainder, divided into two parts, is given infra, pp. 161, 170. Section 14 of said Act repealed inconsistent provisions and is given in the note to Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, at p. 797.

New methods of procedure not provided.

— "The purpose of the Act of 1891 was to distribute between the Supreme Court and the newly formed Courts of Appeals the entirety of appellate jurisdiction from the Circuit and District Courts of the United States, and not to provide new methods of procedure." Pioneer Fuel Co. v. McBrier, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 84 Fed. 495, 55 U. S. App. 181, 28 C. C. A. 488.

In U. S. v. Rider, (1894) 163 U. S. 132, 16 S. Ct. 983, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 101, it was held by the Supreme Court that the Act of 1891 had superseded and repealed the earlier acts authorizing questions of law to be certificated from the Circuit Court to the Supreme Court. The effect of the Act is thus stated in the opinion: "Appellate jurisdiction was given in all criminal cases by writ of error either from this court or from the Circuit Courts of Appeals, and in all civil cases by appeal or error, without regard to the amount in controversy. The same effect was given to cases by writ of error to or from the Circuit Courts of Appeals in cases not made final as specified in section 6. . . . It is true that repeals by implication are not favored, but we cannot escape the conclusion that, tested by its scope, its obvious purpose and its terms, the Act of March 3, 1891, covers the whole subject-matter under consideration, and furnishes the exclusive rule in respect of appellate jurisdiction on appeal, writ of error, or certificate." Followed in Barden v. Hawarden First Nat. Bank, (1899) 175 U. S. 826, 20 S. Ct. 196, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 261.

Construction and applicability generally.

— This section referred to the jurisdiction of the courts created by the Act and to the changes in the distribution of the judicial power made necessary thereby. It was held to be inapplicable to the procedure or limit of time in which appeals or writs of error could be taken in a case brought to the Supreme Court from the Circuit or District Courts. Allen v.

Decision at chambers in habeas corpus.
—This section "may be held to authorize an appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals from a final decision of a district judge at chambers in a habeas corpus case, as well as from a final decision of a District Court." Webb v. York, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 753, 40 U. S. App. 114, 21 C. C. A. 65.

Bankruptcy cases.—Under this section the former appellate jurisdiction of the Circuit Court in bankruptcy cases was vested in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Duff v. Carrier, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 433, 3 U. S. App. 552, 5 C. C. A. 177.

Pecuniary limit.—R. S. sec. 361, which limited appeals from the District to the Circuit Court in equity and admiralty to cases where the sum in dispute exceeded fifty dollars, was held to be inapplicable to appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals, but was superseded by the Act establishing such courts, which created a new appellate jurisdiction without any pecuniary limitation. The Joseph B. Thomas, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 762, 78 C. C. A. 428. Conti v. North American Trading, etc., Co. v. Smith, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 7, 35 C. C. A. 183. Said section 651 was expressly repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085.

It was said by the Supreme Court, in The Paquete Habana, (1900) 175 U. S. 677, 20 S. Ct. 290, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 320, that "the Act of 1891 nowhere imposes a pecuniary limit upon the appellate jurisdiction, either of this court or of the Circuit Court of Appeals, from a District or Circuit Court of the United States. The only pecuniary limit imposed is one of $1,000 upon the appeal to this court of a case which has been once decided on appeal in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and in which the judgment of that court is not made final by section 6 of the Act. . . . The nature of the case and the amount in dispute is the test of the appellate jurisdiction of this court from the District and Circuit Courts." Followed in Giles v. Harris, (1903) 189 U. S. 475, 23 S. Ct. 639, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 909.

Where there was no allegation of the amount in controversy, but no objection was made thereto in the lower court, as it could have been remedied by amendment, the objection was held not available on error to the Supreme Court. Giles v. Harris, (1903) 189 U. S. 475, 23 S. Ct. 639, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 909.

Appeals under Interstate Commerce Law.—After July 1, 1891, following the passage of Act of March 3, 1891, no appeal could be taken directly to the Supreme Court under former section 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act from a decree of the Circuit Court dismissing a bill praying for a mandatory injunction against the defendants, requiring them to afford complainant "the same equal facilities as are afforded to any other connecting road, and for such other relief as may be deemed equitable." Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., (1896) 159 U. S. 688, 16 S. Ct. 199, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 311.

Sec. 2. [Review by Circuit Court of Appeals of decisions of Supreme Court of Hawaii and of Porto Rico.]

Writs of error and appeals from the final judgments and decrees of the supreme courts of the Territory of Hawaii and of Porto Rico, wherein the amount involved, exclusive of costs, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, exceeds the value of $5,000, may be taken and prosecuted in the circuit courts of appeals. [38 Stat. L. 804.]

This provision and the following section 4 were in the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, 38 Stat. L. 803. This provision followed a paragraph in section 2 of said Act which amended Judicial Code, § 248, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 900.

Section 5 of said Act of Jan. 29, 1915, is set forth, infra, p. 238, and in the note thereto the title of the Act and references to all the other sections thereof are given, including section 6, which excepts pending cases from the operation of the Act.

Provisions for review by the United States Supreme Court on appeal, writ of error, or certiorari, of the final judgments or decrees of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii and of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, are made in Judicial Code, § 248 (as amended), supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 900.

Porto Rico is attached to the first circuit and Hawaii is attached to the ninth circuit by Judicial Code, § 116, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 599.

As to appellate review of decisions of the United States District Court for Hawaii and Porto Rico, respectively, see Judicial Code, §§ 128 and 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 607, 794.

Time of taking appeal.—Additional rule 37 of the Circuit Court of Appeals, adopted Oct. 18, 1916, provides as follows: "Appeals and writs of error from and to the District Court of the United States for the District of Porto Rico, and from the Supreme Court of the District of Porto Rico whenever by law they can be taken, shall be taken within six calendar months from the time when the right to such an appeal or writ of error accrues, and not afterwards, by filing a claim for the appeal in the registry of the court appealed from, or by suing out a writ of error from the Court of Appeals, or from the court or judge in Porto Rico, as the case may be." Graham v. O'Farrell, (C. A. 1st Cir. 1916) 236 Fed. 719, 158 C. C. A. 49.

Further review by Supreme Court.—
As to the effect of this section upon the appellate jurisdiction of the United States Supreme Court to review final decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals in cases taken to the latter court under this section, see Inter-Island Steam Nav. Co. v. Ward, (1916) 242 U. S. 1, 37 S. Ct. 1, 1 U. S. Adv. Cas. 1916, page 1.

SEC. 4. [Finality of judgments of Circuit Court of Appeals in cases arising under Bankruptcy Act.] That the judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of appeals in all proceedings and cases arising under the bankruptcy Act and in all controversies arising in such proceedings and cases shall be final, save only that it shall be competent for the Supreme Court to require by certiorari, upon the petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case, or controversy be certified to it for review and determination, with the same power and authority as if taken to that court by appeal or writ of error; but certiorari shall not be allowed in any such proceeding, case, or controversy unless the petition therefor is presented to the Supreme Court within three months from the date of such judgment or decree. [39 Stat. L. 804.]

See the note to the preceding section 2 of this Act. The same rule is also given in Bankruptcy, vol. 2, supra, p. 833, and there annotated, the notes also giving cross-references to all the other sections of the Act. And see section 5 of said Act and the notes thereeto, infra, this title, p. 238.

The text section 4 was amended by section 3 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, 39 Stat. L. 727, in (1918 Supp. Fed. Stat. Ann. title JUDICIARY) Federal Statutes Annotated, Pamph. Supp. No. 8, for October, 1916, p. 133. The said amendment makes final the decisions of the Circuit Courts of Appeals in sundry other cases not relating to bankruptcy; but it makes no material change whatever in the text section 4, except that it contains no time limit for review by certiorari. This omission probably would not constitute an implied repeal of the three months' limitation in the text section. See article STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION, vol. 1 of this work, § 137, p. 158. Waiving that question, however, it is to be observed that section 6 of said Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, above cited in this paragraph, provides that "no writ of error, appeal, or writ of certiorari intended to bring up any cause for review by the Circuit Court shall be allowed or entertained unless duly applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree complained of: Provided, That writs of certiorari addressed to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands may be granted if application therefor be made within six months."

SEC. 6. [Writs of error on conviction of crimes punishable by death.] That hereafter in all cases of conviction of crime the punishment of which provided by law is death, tried before any court of the United States, the final judgment of such court against the respondent shall, upon the application of the respondent, be re-examined, reversed, or affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States upon a writ of error, under such rules and regulations as said court may prescribe. Every such writ of error shall be allowed as of right and without the requirement of any security for the prosecution of the same or for costs. Upon the allowance of every such writ of error, it shall be the duty of the clerk of the court to which the writ of error shall be directed to forthwith transmit to the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States a certified transcript of the record in such case, and it shall be the duty of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States to receive, file, and docket the same. Every such writ of error shall during its pendency operate as a stay of proceedings upon the judgment in respect of which it is sued out. Any such writ of error may be filed and docketed in said Supreme Court at any time in a term held prior to the term named in the citation as well as at the term so named; and all such writs of error shall be advanced to a speedy hearing on motion of either party. When any such judgment shall be either reversed or affirmed the cause shall be remanded to the court from whence it came for further proceedings in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court, and the court to which such cause is so remanded shall have power to cause such judgment of the Supreme Court to be carried into execution. No such writ of error shall be sued out or granted unless a petition therefor shall be filed with the clerk of the court in which the trial shall have been had during the same term or within such time, not exceeding sixty days next after the expiration of the term of the court at which the trial shall have been had, as the court may for cause allow by order entered of record. [25 Stat. L. 656.]

This section is from the Act of Feb. 6, 1889, ch. 113, entitled "An act to abolish circuit court powers of certain district courts of the United States, and to provide for writs of error in capital cases, and for other purposes." The other sections of said Act were superseded by various provisions in the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, and in the Judicial Code.

The Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, § 5, in the third paragraph thereof, authorized a review by the Supreme Court of an act of error direct to the District Court or Circuit Courts "in cases of conviction of a capital or otherwise infamous crime." And in section 6 of said Act all other appellate jurisdiction from federal courts was conferred on the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the decisions of the latter court were made final "in all cases arising . . . under the criminal laws." By the Act of Jan. 20, 1897, ch. 68, 29 Stat. L. 492, the words "or otherwise infamous" were struck out of said section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act; Judicial Code, § 128, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 607, omitted the entire provision above quoted from said section 5, and said Act of Jan. 20, 1897, ch. 68, was expressly repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085. Said section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act was carried into Judicial Code, § 128, prescribing the appellate jurisdiction of the Circuit Courts of Appeals, which jurisdiction now includes all criminal cases. Nevertheless a conviction in a criminal case, whether capital or other, may be taken on writ of error, by the defendant therein, direct to the Supreme Court from a District Court under Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 794, if the case is otherwise one of the cases enumerated in said section 238; see the notes to that section. And the Criminal Appeals Act of March 2, 1907, ch. 2564, infra, p. 149, authorizes review by the Supreme Court on direct writ of error to a District Court of certain interlocutory decisions in criminal cases.

But the provisions in the text section 6 relating to appellate procedure were preserved to some extent by force of the provisions in section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, ch. 517, infra, p. 170, providing that "all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this Act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals." R. S. secs. 651 and 693, providing for review by the Supreme Court of decisions of a District or Circuit Court in criminal cases on a certificate of division of opinion of the trial judges, were impliedly repealed by the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, and were expressly repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085.

"Sec. 1040. Whenever a judgment of death is rendered in any court of the United States, and the case is carried to the Supreme Court in pursuance of law, the court rendering such judgment shall, by its order, postpone the execution thereof from time to time and from term to term, until the mandate of the Supreme Court in the case is received and entered upon the records of such lower court. In case of affirmance by the Supreme Court, the court rendering the original judgment shall appoint a day for the execution thereof; and in case of reversal, such further proceeding shall be had in the lower court as the Supreme Court may direct."

Prior to the passage of this Act the Supreme Court had no general authority to review on error or appeal the judgments of the Circuit Courts in cases within their criminal jurisdiction. U. S. v. Rider, (1896) 163 U. S. 132, 16 S. Ct. 983, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 101.

Inapplicable where judgment could be otherwise reviewed.—"This section," said the court, in Cross v. U. S., (1892) 145 U. S. 571, 12 S. Ct. 842, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 821, "manifestly does not contemplate the allowance of a writ of error to any appellate tribunal but only to review the final judgment of the court before which the respondent was tried, where such judgment could not otherwise be reviewed by writ of error or appeal." Followed in Brown v. U. S., (1896) 171 U. S. 631, 19 S. Ct. 56, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 321, and New v. Oklahoma, (1904) 106 U. S. 252, 25 S. Ct. 68, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 182.

Neither under the Act of March 3, 1891, nor under the Act of Feb. 6, 1886, was the Supreme Court given jurisdiction to grant a writ of error to review the judgment of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, in criminal cases, nor did it have jurisdiction over the judgment of that court on habeas corpus. Cross v. Burke, (1892) 146 U. S. 82, 13 S. Ct. 29, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 896.

Final judgments.—An order entered on the record, upon a motion in arrest of judgment, that "By reason of the law and the evidence and the verdict of the jury in this case, it is ordered and adjudged that the defendants . . . be executed by being hung until each and either are dead, according to the forms, delays, and processes provided in the laws of the United States," is not such a final judgment as requires the writ of error to be taken within sixty days after the expiration of the term, where it does not appear that the defendants were present and had been asked what they had to say why sentence of death should not be pronounced upon them. Ball v. U. S., (1891) 140 U. S. 118, 11 S. Ct. 761, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 377.

When judgment becomes final.—A judgment of death or conviction for murder does not become final until the order designating the day of execution and that the death warrant is filed, and a writ of error prosecuted within sixty days from the entry of such order is in time. Ball v. U. S., (1891) 140 U. S. 118, 11 S. Ct. 761, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 377.

Admission to bail.—As to this provision it was said by the Supreme Court in 1894 that although the Act expressly recognized the power of that court "to make rules regulating the proceedings upon writs of error in capital cases, yet, as by its terms the writ was to be allowed as of right, without requiring any security, and was of itself to operate as a stay of proceedings, no rule upon the subject was considered necessary, and none was made. . . . It can not be doubted, however, that Congress intended that the allowance of the writ of error and stay of proceedings, while suspending the execution of the sentence, should neither have the effect of discharging the prisoner from custody nor of preventing his being admitted to bail, upon sufficient cause shown, pending the writ of error; and no special provision upon the subject of bail in a capital case after conviction having been made by act of Congress or rule of court, it would seem that it might be taken by the justice or judge who allowed the writ of error. But however it may be in a capital case, it is quite clear, in view of all the legislation on the subject of bail, that Congress must have intended that under the Act of 1891, in cases of crimes not capital, and therefore bailable of right before conviction, bail might be taken, upon writ of error, by order of the proper court, justice or judge. And we are of opinion that any justice of this court, having power, by the acts of Congress, to allow the writ of error, to issue the citation, to take the security required by law, and to grant a supersedeas, has the authority as in-
This was the Act of March 2, 1907, ch. 2564, commonly called the Criminal Appeals Act, entitled "An Act Providing for writs of error in certain instances in criminal cases."

"Circuit" courts mentioned in this Act were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

Prior to the passage of this Act writs of error from the Supreme Court direct to District or Circuit Courts were allowed only in cases of final decisions by the latter courts, as provided in section 5 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. L. 827, which section was embraced in and superseded by Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 794. See the notes to the last cited section. And review by the Circuit Courts of Appeals on writs of error in criminal cases was limited to "final decisions" of the District and Circuit Courts by section 6 of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act, which section, as far as material here, was embraced in and superseded by Judicial Code, § 128, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 607, providing also for finality of judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals "in all cases arising under ... the criminal laws."

This provision was not repealed by the Judicial Code of March 3, 1911, ch. 231, U. S. c. Winalow, (1913) 227 U. S. 202, 33 S. Ct. 253, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 481, and it was expressly confirmed in the paragraph of text next following herein, infra, p. 152.

III. Construction and sufficiency of indictment, 151

I. PURPOSE AND SCOPE OF ACT

Purpose of provision.—In U. S. v. Bitty, (1908) 208 U. S. 293, 28 S. Ct. 396, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 543, it was said: "If a court of original jurisdiction err in quashing, setting aside, or dismissing an indictment for an alleged offense against the United States, upon the ground that the statute on which it is based is unconstitutional, or upon the ground that the statute does not embrace the case made by the indictment, there is no mode in which the error can be corrected and the provisions of the statute enforced, except the case be brought here by the United States for review. Hence, that there might be no unnecessary delay in the administration of the criminal law, and that the courts of original jurisdiction may be instructed as to the validity and meaning of the particular criminal statute sought to be enforced — the above Act of 1907 was passed."

Scope of review.—The right of the United States to go directly to the Supreme Court because of a construction of a statute by the court below is derived solely from the above Act. This Act vests the Supreme Court with jurisdiction to review only the particular questions decided by the court below, and does not permit the opening of the whole case in the Supreme Court to authorise consideration of the validity of the indictment on any other grounds than those enumerated in the Act and passed on by the court below. U. S. v. Keitel, (1908) 211 U. S. 370, 29 S. Ct. 123, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 230.

And in reviewing a decision of the trial court in sustaining special pleas in bar of the prosecution, the court may not go beyond the ruling of the court below on such pleas. U. S. v. Mason, (1909) 213 U. S. 115, 29 S. Ct. 480, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 726, holding that the court will not consider the grounds of demurrer to the indictment.

Where a writ of error is taken on the ground that the statute on which the indictment was founded was wrongly construed, and also on the separate ground that a plea of the statute of limitations, in bar of the prosecution, was wrongly sustained, it is not necessary that the Supreme Court should pass on both questions where its decision in regard to one of them is in favor of the action of the lower court and is conclusive against the government's right further to prosecute the case. U. S. v. Biggs, (1908) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND APPLICATION

Validity.—This Act is directed to judgments rendered before the moment of jeopardy is reached, and therefore is not repugnant to the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution. Taylor v. U. S., (1907) 207 U. S. 120, 29 S. Ct. 53, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 120.

This Act is not unconstitutional on the ground that it authorizes the United States in the cases specified to bring the case directly from the District or Circuit Court to the Supreme Court, but does not allow the accused to bring it to the Supreme Court where a demurrer to the indictment or some count thereof is overruled. The accused has his remedy by review of the final judgment where a demurrer is erroneously overruled. The object of the Act was to prevent unnecessary delay in the administration of the criminal law, and to provide a method by which the courts of original jurisdiction may be instructed as to the validity and meaning of the particular criminal statute sought to be enforced. Such a provision is within the legitimate discretion of Congress to prescribe. U. S. v. Bitty, (1908) 208 U. S. 393, 28 S. Ct. 396, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 545, reversing on other grounds 15 D. N. Y. (1907) 155 Fed. 938.

Application generally of term "construction of the statute."—A judgment holding insufficient on demurrer certain counts of an indictment charging willful misapplication of the funds of a national bank, in violation of R. S. sec. 5209 (in title NATIONAL BANKS), because the facts alleged do not constitute a crime under that section as it should be construed, is reviewable as "based upon the . . . construction of the statute." U. S. v. Heine, (1910) 218 U. S. 632, 31 S. Ct. 98, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139, 21 Ann. Cas. 884.

For the same reason a judgment is reviewable which quashed certain counts of an indictment for violation of the same statute because they possessed the defects found in a prior indictment held not to charge a crime under the statute. U. S. v. Heine, (1910) 218 U. S. 547, 31 S. Ct. 102, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1145, 21 Ann. Cas. 884.

The "construction of the statute" is also involved, so as to sustain jurisdiction of a writ of error under this section, where an indictment against a national bank officer for making false reports to the Comptroller of the Currency was quashed because such officer was not an agent within the meaning of the federal statute defining the crime. U. S. v. Corbett, (1909) 215 U. S. 233, 30 S. Ct. 81, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 173.

Where the validity of departmental regulations is in issue, and this involves the construction of a federal statute, and a demurrer is sustained to an indictment by a United States District Court, because of such construction the Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review the case. U. S. v. Foster, (1914) 233 U. S. 618, 34 S. Ct. 666, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1074.

Existence of statute overlooked.—Within the meaning of the Criminal Appeals Act the statute on which, as matter of law, an indictment is founded, may be misconstrued not only by misinterpreting its language, but by overlooking its existence and failing to apply its provisions to an indict-

Effect of bringing up single ruling.—In U. S. v. Fortale, (1914) 235 U. S. 27, 35 S. Ct. 1, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 111, which was a writ of error to a District Court which had sustained a demurrer to an indictment, it appearing that a single ruling only was brought up which related to the construction of a statute, it was held that the court below erred in sustaining the demurrer so far as that ruling was based upon the construction of the statute in question, but as that was the only question brought up, the reversal of the judgment was without prejudice to further action of the court below consistent with the opinion.

III. CONSTRUCTION AND SUFFICIENCY OF INDICTMENT

Construction of indictment.—The action of the court below as to the mere construction of the indictment is not open to review on the writ of error authorized by the Criminal Appeals Act, U. S. v. Rogers, (1909) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305, and cases cited in the following paragraph.

This Act does not give authority to review the action of the court below as to the mere construction of an indictment, and in the exercise of the power to review under the Act the Supreme Court must accept the construction of the indictment made by the lower court and test in that aspect the lower court's construction of the statute on which the indictment was founded. Whether an exception to this rule exists where the construction given by the court below to the indictment was merely the result of a misconstruction of the statute on which it was founded, quere. U. S. v. Herr, (1908) 211 U. S. 406, 29 S. Ct. 135, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 255; U. S. v. Biggs, (1908) 211 U. S. 507, 29 S. Ct. 181, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 305; all following U. S. v. Keitel, (1908) 211 U. S. 370, 29 S. Ct. 123, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 230.

So in a recent case the United States Supreme Court says: "It is settled that under the Criminal Appeals Act we have no authority to revise the mere interpretation of an indictment and are confined to ascertaining whether the court in a case under review erroneously construed the statute," U. S. v. Carter, (1913) 231 U. S. 492, 34 S. Ct. 173, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 336.

But where an indictment is quashed on the ground that the facts charged therein are not within the statute under which the prosecution is brought, a contention that a writ of error will not lie under the above Act, because the indictment and not the statute was interpreted or construed, is without merit. U. S. v. Keitel, (1908) 211 U. S. 370, 29 S. Ct. 123, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 230.

And where the District Court holds that the acts charged in the indictment do not fall within the condemnation of the statute upon which the indictment is founded it necessarily construes the statute and a writ of error lies. U. S. v. Birdsal, (1914) 233 U. S. 223, 34 S. Ct. 512, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 930.

The sufficiency of an indictment upon general principles of criminal law is not open for review in the federal Supreme Court on a writ of error to a federal District Court under this Act. U. S. v. Stevenson, (1909) 215 U. S. 190, 30 S. Ct. 35, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 163.

But a judgment of a federal Circuit Court holding insufficient on demurrer certain counts of an indictment charging willful misapplication of the funds of a national bank, in violation of R. S. sec. 5209 (in title NATIONAL BANKS, infra, this volume), because the facts alleged did not constitute a crime under that section, as it should be construed, was held to be reviewable in the Supreme Court, under this Act, when based upon the construction of the statute upon which the indictment was founded. U. S. v. Heinze, (1910) 218 U. S. 532, 31 S. Ct. 98, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139, 21 Ann. Cas. 884.

And jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court of a writ of error sued out under this Act to review a judgment of a federal District Court quashing an indictment for a conspiracy illegally to acquire coal lands from the United States, because of the opinion that the federal statute did not prohibit the acts complained of, cannot be successfully challenged on the theory that the indictment, and not the statute, was construed. U. S. v. Keitel, (1909) 211 U. S. 370, 29 S. Ct. 123, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 230.
IV. DEMURRER TO INDICTMENT

And where on a motion to quash the service and return on the ground that the same were not authorized by law, the court, treating such motion as a demurrer to the indictment, found that the indictment could not be maintained and the decision was held to be one based on the construction of the statute, the Supreme Court said: "It is objected that this court has no jurisdiction of the present writ of error under the act of March 2, 1907, c. 2664, 34 Stat. 1246, and that the court below had no authority to treat the motion of Barrett as equivalent to a demurrer. Without following the defendant into the niceties by which it seeks to escape the jurisdiction of this court after having eluded that of the court below, it is enough to say that in our opinion, if we are to go behind the entry, the decision entered was one setting aside the indictment and was based upon the construction of the statute upon which the indictment is founded, within the meaning of the act of March 2, 1907." U. S. v. Adam's Express Co., (1913) 229 U. S. 381, 33 S. Ct. 878, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1237.

And a judgment of a federal District Court sustaining a demurrer to an indictment upon two grounds, one of which involves the construction of the federal statute on which the indictment is founded, and the other the sufficiency of such indictment upon general principles of criminal law, is reviewable in the federal Supreme Court on a writ of error, under this Act. U. S. v. Stevenson, (1908) 215 U. S. 180, 30 S. Ct. 35, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 153.

But the various grounds of demurrer to an indictment cannot be considered on a writ of error sued out by the government in a criminal case, under this Act, to review a judgment sustaining a special plea in bar, when the defendant has not been put in jeopardy; but the court has jurisdiction to review only the ruling of the court below on the sufficiency of such plea. U. S. v. Mason, (1909) 213 U. S. 115, 29 S. Ct. 490, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 725.

V. SPECIAL PLEAS IN BAR

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction to review a judgment purporting to dismiss an indictment upon the ground that the statute of limitations was a bar to the prosecution, although the plea filed and heard by consent and stipulation was denominated a plea in abatement. U. S. v. Barber, (1911) 219 U. S. 72, 31 S. Ct. 209, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

And the decision of a federal court sustaining a special plea in bar to an indictment is reviewable in the Supreme Court under this Act, although the decision may invoke the application, rather than the validity or construction, strictly speaking, of the statute upon which the indictment was founded. U. S. v. Celestine, (1909) 215 U. S. 278, 30 S. Ct. 93, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 195.

Sec. 6. [Effect of Act — pending cases — Criminal Appeals Act unaffected.] That this Act shall not affect cases now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States or cases in which writs of error or appeals have been allowed at the date of its approval. And nothing in this Act shall be deemed to repeal, amend, or modify the provisions of an Act entitled "An Act providing for writs of error in certain instances in criminal cases," approved March second, nineteen hundred and seven. [38 Stat. L. 804.]

This is the concluding section of the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22. Section 5 of said Act is given infra, this title, p. 238, and in the note thereto the title of the Act is given together with cross-references to all the other sections of said Act. In section 2 of said Act, Judicial Code, §§ 128 and 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 607, 794, were re-enacted in amended form, and the saving clause in the text section 6 was probably inserted to avoid any implication that the entire appellate jurisdiction was merged in said sections 128 and 238.
SEC. 2. [Appellate jurisdiction of supreme court of United States over Territorial courts, how exercised — proceedings on appeal.] That the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of the United States over the judgments and decrees of said Territorial courts in cases of trial by jury shall be exercised by writ of error, and in all other cases by appeal according to such rules and regulations as to form and modes of proceeding as the said Supreme Court have prescribed or may hereafter prescribe:

Provided, That on appeal, instead of the evidence at large, a statement of the facts of the case in the nature of a special verdict, and also the rulings of the court on the admission or rejection of evidence when excepted to, shall be made and certified by the court below, and transmitted to the Supreme Court together with the transcript of the proceedings and judgment or decree; but no appellate proceedings in said Supreme Court, heretofore taken upon any such judgment or decree, shall be invalidated by reason of being instituted by writ of error or by appeal: * * * [18 Stat. L. 27.]

The words "said Territorial courts" in the text section mean the "courts of the several Territories of the United States" mentioned in section 1. At the date of the Act, viz., April 7, 1874, there were no territorial courts outside of the continental United States; R. S. sec. 1957 conferred criminal and civil jurisdiction over Alaska upon the Federal District Courts in California, Oregon, and the District Courts of Washington, and it was not until the Act of May 17, 1884, ch. 53, 23 Stat. L. 24, that a court was established for the district Alaska.

The Territorial Practice Act above cited never had application to the Philippine Islands, appellate review of decisions of the Supreme Court thereof by the United States Supreme Court being formerly regulated by section 10 of the Act of July 1, 1902, ch. 1369, providing that appeals or writs of error shall be taken "in the same manner, under the same regulations, and by the same procedure, as the final judgments and decrees of the circuit courts of the United States." See De La Rama v. De La Rama, (1906) 201 U. S. 303, 26 S. Ct. 485, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 765.

Judicial Code, § 247, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 905, which specifies all of the jurisdiction that can now be exercised by the Supreme Court to review judgments and decrees of the District Court for Alaska provides that "such writs of error and appeal shall be taken within the same time, in the same manner, and under the same regulations as writs of error and appeals are taken from the district courts to the Supreme Court." By order promulgated by the United States Supreme Court, May 11, 1891 (139 U. S. 707, 11 S. Ct. IV, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 1123B), Alaska was assigned to the ninth judicial circuit, and it is included in that circuit by Judicial Code, § 116, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 599.

Judicial Code, § 134, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 685, authorizes appeals from the District Court for Alaska to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the ninth circuit, but does not prescribe the procedure therein.

Section 504 of the Act of April 7, 1874, ch. 51, 31 Stat. L. 415, constituting a Civil Code for Alaska, provided as follows: "All provisions of law now in force regulating the procedure and practice in cases brought by appeal or writ of error to the Supreme Court of the United States or to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the ninth circuit, except in so far as the same may be inconsistent with any provision of this Act, shall regulate the procedure and practice in cases brought to the courts, respectively, from the district court for the district of Alaska." The effect of this provision was held to be, in Shields v. Mongollon Exploration Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir.
1905) 137 Fed. 539, 70 C. C. A. 123, that the Territorial Practice Act, above cited in this note (including, of course, the text section 2), became inapplicable to appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals from the District Court for Alaska.

Judicial Code, § 240 (as amended by the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 29, § 2), supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 990, gives specified jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of writes of error and appeals from decisions of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii and of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, "to be taken and prosecuted ... within the same time, in the same manner, under the same regulations, and in the same class of cases, in which writs of error and appeals from the final judgments and decrees of the highest court of a state," etc., may be taken.

Prior to the enactment of said section 240 of the Judicial Code, it was provided in the Act of April 12, 1900, ch. 191, § 35, in title Porto Rico, "that writs of error and appeals from the final decisions of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico and the district court of the United States shall be allowed and may be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States in the same manner and under the same regulations and in the same cases as from the supreme courts of the Territories of the United States;" and under this provision appeals were governed by the appellate procedure prescribed in the text section of the Territorial Practice Act. Garzot v. de Rubio, (1908) 209 U. S. 263, 28

By order of the United States Supreme Court of April 15, 1901, cited in Ex p.
Wilders'Steamship Co., (1902) 183 U. S. 545, 22 S. Ct. 225, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 321, the Territory of Hawaii was assigned to the ninth judicial circuit, and it is included in Porto Rico was made a part of the first judicial circuit by the Act of Jan. 28, 1915,

The Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, § 2, amends Judicial Code, § 240, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 990, and then provides as follows: "Writs of error and appeals from the final judgments and decrees of the Supreme Courts of the Territory of Hawaii and of Porto Rico, wherein the amount involved, exclusive of costs, to be ascertained by the oath of either party or of other competent witnesses, exceeds the value of $5,000, may be taken and prosecuted in the circuit courts of appeals." See supra, p. 145.

Section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, infra, p. 170, provided that "all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this Act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals."

Section 15 of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, provided that "the circuit court of appeal in cases in which the judgments of the circuit courts of appeal are made final by this Act shall have the same appellate jurisdiction, by writ of error or appeal, to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the supreme courts of the several Territories as by this Act they may have to review the judgments, orders, and decrees of the district court and circuit courts; and for that purpose the several Territories shall, by orders of the Supreme Court, to be made from time to time, be assigned to particular circuits."

The Territories of Arizona and New Mexico having been admitted to the Union (see supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 554, 578), there are no remaining territories within the continental United States.

The foregoing survey of legislation shows it to be doubtful if the text section of the Territorial Practice Act has at present any scope whatever for operation, except possibly in appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the first circuit from decisions of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, as to which appeals see section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act, as above quoted, in connection with the Act of April 15, 1900, ch. 191, § 35 (in title Porto Rico), also above quoted.

In general.—This statute constituted the only right of review on appeals from 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000.

Territories affected by section — Oklahoma.—The manner of reviewing judgments, in civil cases, of the Supreme Court of the territory of Oklahoma, was specially provided for by the ninth section of the Act of May 2, 1890, 26 Stat.
L. 81, 85, ch. 182, providing a territorial government for Oklahoma, and was not governed by the Act of Congress of 1874.

Porto Rico.—In Garzet v. de Rubio, (1898) 209 U. S. 283, 25 S. Ct. 548, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 794, it was said:—While the suggestion that because there is no intermediate reviewing court between this and the District Court of the United States for Porto Rico, differing from what is generally the case in the territories of the United States, a wider scope of authority should exist in reviewing an appeal the decrees of the District Court of Porto Rico, may have cogency, it affords no ground for disregarding the plain command of the statute of 1874, which is here applicable, as expounded by many previous decisions of this court.” But see now the provisions above cited in that part of this note which is immediately under the text.

“Trial by jury.”—The provision of this Act permitting a writ of error “in cases of trial by jury” only evidently has regard to a trial by jury as in an action at common law in which there must be a trial by a jury, and where the court is not authorized to try and determine the fact for itself unless a jury is waived by the parties according to the statute; and has no application to a trial of special issues submitted to a jury in a case pending in the nature of a suit in equity, not as a matter of right or to settle the issues of fact, but at the discretion of the court, and simply to inform its conscience and to aid it in making up its own judgment upon the facts, and the real trial of the facts is by the court and not by a jury. In all proceedings in the territorial courts in the nature of suits in equity, therefore, as well as in those proceedings in the nature of actions at common law in which no trial by jury is had, either because a jury has been duly waived or because the issues tried are issues of law only, the appellate jurisdiction of the Supreme Court must be by appeal and not by writ of error. Davis v. Alvord, (1876) 94 U. S. 545, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 283; Stringfellow v. Cain, (1878) 90 U. S. 610, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 421; Davis v. Frederick, (1881) 104 U. S. 618, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 849; Hecht v. Boughton, (1881) 105 U. S. 236, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., (1881) 105 U. S. 263, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1021; Story v. Black, (1886) 119 U. S. 235, 7 S. Ct. 176, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 341; Idaho, etc., Land Imp. Co. v. Bradbury, (1899) 132 U. S. 509, 10 S. Ct. 171, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 493; Gregory Consol. Min. Co. v. Starr, (1891) 141 U. S. 222, 11 S. Ct. 914, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 715; Cameron v. U. S., (1893) 148 U. S. 301, 13 S. Ct. 503, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 458; Bonnifield v. Price, (1892) 154 U. S. 672, 14 S. Ct. 1194, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1029.

But, as said by the Supreme Court of the United States, “if the findings of the District Court are sustained by the Supreme Court and a general judgment of affirmance rendered, the findings of the District Court thus approved by the Supreme Court will furnish a sufficient statement of facts of the case for the purpose of an appeal to this court. The same will be true if there is a reversal for the reason that the facts as found are not sufficient to support the judgment. But if . . . the judgment is reversed because the evidence does not sustain the findings, other findings must be made before the case can be put in a condition for hearing in this court on appeal.” Stringfellow v. Cain, (1878) 99 U. S. 610, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 421. See to the same effect Gray v. Howe, (1882) 108 U. S. 12, 2 S. Ct. 136, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 634; Eilers v. Boastman, (1884) 111 U. S. 356, 4 S. Ct. 432, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 454; Wasatch Min. Co. v. Crescent Min. Co., (1899) 148 U. S. 293, 13 S. Ct. 600, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 454; Hawa c. Victoria Copper Min. Co., (1893) 160 U. S. 303, 16 S. Ct. 282, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 436; Salina Stock Co. v. Salina Irrigation Creek Co., (1898) 163 U. S. 109, 16 S. Ct. 1036, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

The findings of a territorial District Court, having been adopted and affirmed by the Supreme Court of the territory, serve the purpose of the statement of facts required. Egie Min., etc., Co. v. Hamilton, (1910) 218 U. S. 513, 31 S. Ct. 27, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1131.

Where the Supreme Court of a territory adopts the findings of fact of the lower court and also finds additional facts, the Supreme Court of the United States may consider both findings. Apache County v. Barth, (1900) 177 U. S. 539, 20 S. Ct. 718, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 878.

A so-called statement of facts which merely sets out the evidence is not such a statement as is required by this Act. Cohn v. Daley, (1899) 174 U. S. 539, 19 S. Ct. 809, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 1077.
In the case of Stringfellow v. Cain, (1878) 99 U. S. 610, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 421, the Supreme Court of the territory set aside the findings of the trial court and directed the district court to make a decree on the evidence at the same time making its own findings therefrom, and the Supreme Court of the United States refused to disturb the decree of the territorial Supreme Court, saying: "Without undertaking to decide what would be the proper practice in an ordinary civil action when judgment is reversed because a new trial was refused in the District Court, we are clearly of the opinion that in a suit like this, when all the evidence is before the Supreme Court that could be considered by the District Court if the case should be sent back, it is proper for the Supreme Court itself to state the facts established by the evidence and render the judgment which ought to have been rendered by the District Court."

"In the absence of any findings of the Supreme Court of the territory, and also being without anything in the nature of a bill of exceptions, we have nothing on which to base a reversal of the judgment in this case. The refusal of the Supreme Court to make findings is justified by its certificate that the facts were not before it." Armijo v. Armijo, (1901) 181 U. S. 558, 21 S. Ct. 707, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1000.

Questions for review in general.—On an appeal from a judgment of a territorial Supreme Court, affirming the judgment of the court of first instance, which, after hearing the evidence, found all the issues in a suit for specific performance in favor of the defendants, the Supreme Court of the United States will ordinarily, in reviewing the facts, confine itself to questions of the admissibility of evidence and whether there was any evidence to sustain the conclusion reached, where such is the practice in the territorial court. Halsell v. Renfrow, (1906) 202 U. S. 287, 26 S. Ct. 610, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1032, 6 Ann. Cas. 189.

The jurisdiction of the federal Supreme Court is limited to the inquiry whether the findings of fact made by the court below support its judgment, and to a review of exceptions which have been duly taken to rulings upon the admission or rejection of evidence. Eagle Min., etc., Co. v. Hamilton, (1910) 218 U. S. 613, 31 S. Ct. 27, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 1131.

"Our review is confined to determining the question whether the facts found by the court below sustain the judgment. And these facts are to be certified to us by the territorial Supreme Court, either by adopting the findings of the trial court, or by making separate findings of its own." Citizens' Nat. Bank of Rosewell v. Davison, (1913) 229 U. S. 212, 33 S. Ct. 625, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1153, Ann. Cas. 1915A 272.

"We are not at liberty," said the court in Nealin v. Wells, (1881) 104 U. S. 438, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 802, "to consider anything as embraced in the statement of facts required by the statute, except the special findings of the District Court adopted by the Supreme Court in its general judgment of affirmance. This excludes any consideration of exceptions taken in the District Court in the course of the trial and noted in the statement filed in that court as the basis of the motion for a new trial, and leaves as the sole question for determination here, whether the facts as found justify the decree sought to be reversed." Where the record presents no statement of facts to enable the appellate court to determine whether the facts found are sufficient to sustain the judgment, and no exceptions are taken to rulings in the admission or rejection of evidence, no question is presented for review. Salina Stock Co. v. Salina Irrigation Creek Co., (1896) 163 U. S. 109, 16 S. Ct. 1036, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

Re-examination of facts.—In De la Rama v. De la Rama, (1906) 201 U. S. 303, 26 S. Ct. 485, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 765, it was said: "Since that Act was passed we have always held that the jurisdiction of this court on an appeal from the Supreme Court of a territory did not extend to a re-examination of the facts, but was limited to determining whether the findings of fact supported the judgment, and to reviewing errors in the admission or rejection of testimony, when exceptions have been duly taken to the action of the court in this particular.” Citing Stringfellow v. Cain, (1878) 99 U. S. 610, 25
U. S. (L. ed.) 421; Eilers v. Boatman,

"The necessary effect of this enactment," said the court in Idaho, etc., Land Imp. Co. v. Bradbury, (1889) 132 U. S.
509, 10 S. Ct. 177, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 433, "is that no judgment or decree of the highest court of a territory can be reviewed by this court in matter of fact, but only in matter of law. As observed by Chief Justice Waite, "we are not to consider the testimony in any case. Upon a writ of error we are confined to the bill of exceptions or questions of law otherwise presented by the record; and upon an appeal, to the statements of facts and rulings certified by the court below. The facts set forth in the statement which must come up with the appeal are conclusive on us." Hecht v.
Boughton, (1891) 105 U. S. 235, 26 U. S.

Weight of evidence.—In either class of cases, whether equitable or legal, coming up to the Supreme Court of the United States by appeal from a territorial court after a hearing or trial on the facts, the evidence at large cannot be brought up.
The authority of the court is limited to determining whether the court's findings of fact support its judgment or decree, and whether there is any error in rulings duly excepted to on the admission or rejection of testimony. The authority of the court does not extend to a consideration of the weight of evidence or its sufficiency to support the conclusions of the court. Stringfellow v. Cain, (1878) 99 U. S. 610, 25
U. S. (L. ed.) 421; Cannon v. Pratt, [Sec. 6.] [Time limit for appeal or writ of error from Circuit Court of Appeals to Supreme Court.] * * *

[In all cases not hereinafter, in this section, made final there shall be of right an appeal or writ of error or review of the case by the Supreme Court of the United States where the matter in controversy shall exceed one thousand dollars besides costs.]
But no such appeal shall be taken or writ of error sued out unless within one year after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed. [26 Stat. L. 238.]

This was the conclusion of section 6 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517. The bracketed part was embraced in Judicial Code, § 241, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 877, and was superseded by force of the last paragraph of Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085. Sections 5 and 6 of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act are set forth in the note to Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 794. As to other sections of said Act see section 4 thereof supra, p. 145, and the note thereto. See R. S. sec. 1008, infra, p. 158, for the two years period of limitation prior to the enactment of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act.
The time limit of one year in the text section was reduced to three months by section 6 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, 39 Stat. L. 796, which section is set forth in the note to R. S. sec. 1008, infra, p. 158.
Sec. 1003. [Writes of error and appeals to supreme court, time for taking.] No judgment, decree, or order of a circuit or district court, in any civil action, at law or in equity, shall be reviewed in the Supreme Court on writ of error or appeal unless the writ of error is brought, or the appeal is taken, within two years after the entry of such judgment, decree, or order: Provided, That where a party entitled to prosecute a writ of error or to take an appeal is an infant, insane person, or imprisoned, such writ of error may be prosecuted, or such appeal may be taken, within two years after the judgment, decree, or order, exclusive of the term of such disability. [R. S.]

Citing cases noted next in this section were decided by Judicial Code, § 299, supra, that title, vol. 5, p. 55.

This section no longer in force.—This section here was not among the Revised Statutes sections expressly repealed in Judicial Code, § 297, supra, that title, vol. 5, p. 550. But the time limit for bringing up any case for review by the Supreme Court, except by writ of error or to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands, was reduced to three months by the Act of 1893, cited below in this note with comments thereon.

Section 6 of the Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 177, supra, p. 257, provides, in respect of appeals or writs of error to review final decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals, that "the such appeal shall be taken or writ of error used out under within the year after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed." Section 11 of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act, supra, p. 161, provides that "no appeal or writ of error by which any order, judgment, or decree may be reviewed in the Circuit Court of Appeals under the provisions of this Act shall be taken or used out except within the year after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed: Provided, however, That in all cases in which a lesser time is now by law limited for appeals or writs of error such limits of time shall apply to appeals or writs of error in such cases taken to or sued out from the Circuit Courts of Appeals.

The above noted provisions in sections 6 and 11 of said Circuit Court of Appeals Act were not inserted in or repealed by the Judicial Code, nor did said Circuit Court of Appeals Act provide any time limit for appeals to the Supreme Court direct from the Circuit Court. Hence the text section R. S. sec. 1003, supra, remained in force, and was eventually applied to review by the Supreme Court in the classes of cases described in Judicial Code, § 223, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 794. But the time limit of two years in the text section R. S. sec. 1003, supra, was reduced to three months by section 6 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 449, 39 Stat. L. 727 (1916) Supp., Fed. Stat. Ann., title 5 1/2, C. L. 1916, supra, Note, title 2, supra, which provides as follows: "That no writ of error, appeal or writ of certiorari addressed to bring up any cause for review by the Supreme Court shall be allowed or entertained unless the same shall be applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree under review: Provided, That writs of certiorari addressed to the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands may be granted if application therefor be made within six months." It is deemed that this last enactment operates to repeal the proviso in the text section R. S. sec. 1003 excluding terms of disability; for it is a strong general rule that "no act can engraft on a statute of limitations an exception which the statute itself contains." See cases cited in article STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION, vol. 1 of this work, §§ 26, p. 39, and see the conclusion of the opinion in Central Trust Co. v. Executors, 1915, 259 U. S. 11, 42 S. Ct. 60 U. S. (L. Ed.) 119, as quoted in the text in this work, supra, vol. 1, pp. 333-334. Moreover, if the limitation of three months in section 6 of the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, above quoted, had been intended by Congress to be subject to the exception of periods of disability, "it would have been easy to say so." See article STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION, vol. 1 of this work, § 27, p. 41. It should also be observed that the periods of limitation in the sections of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act, as above quoted, were subject to no such exception, thus evining the attitude of Congress upon this matter at the date when that Act was passed; and R. S. sec. 655, which excluded terms of disability from the operation of the period of limitation of appeal by Circuit Court of decisions of a District Court, was expressly repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085. Again, since the two years period in the enacting clause of R. S. sec. 1008 is also adopted in the proviso, it is unreasonable to suppose that Congress intended in the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, above quoted, to leave said two years period in the proviso in force, while reducing to three months the period of two years in the enacting clause.

Lastly, courts strive to avoid a construction of statutes which will require the adoption of one rule for a particular class of cases and a different rule for another class within the same reason as the first. See article STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION, vol. 1 of this work, § 76, p. 103. And there would be a senseless discrimination if disabilities suspended the running of the limitation for appeal or writ of error under this section 1008, but were ignored in the other statutes above cited prescribing a time limit for appellate proceedings.

For a more extended argument in support of the foregoing views see article in \textit{Law Notes} for April, 1917, pp. 5-8.

When writ of error is brought.—A writ of error is not brought in the legal meaning of the term until it is filed in the court which rendered the judgment. It is the filing of the writ that removes the record from the inferior to the appellate court and the period of limitation prescribed by this Act must be calculated accordingly. Brown v. Corin (1854) 11 How. 579; Rush v. Musina r. Cavazos, (1867) 6 Wall. 355, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 810; Scarborough v. Pargoud, (1883) 108 U. S. 567, 2 S. Ct. 877, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 824; U. S. v. Baxter, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 51 Fed. 624, 10 U. S. App. 241, 2 C. C. A. 410; Kentucky Coal, etc., Co. v. Howes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 163, 82 C. C. A. 337.

Though a decree has been entered "as of a prior date (the date of an order settling apparently the terms of a decree to be entered thereafter) the rights of the parties in respect to an appeal are determined by the date of the actual entry, or of the signing and filing of the final decree. Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, (1867) 6 Wall. 153, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

Where the bond was approved on September 5th, it was filed September 9th, and on that day the citation, returnable October 8th, was signed and issued, and on October 4th was served, an allowance of an appeal was perfected on September 9th. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 314, 34 U. S. App. 626, 19 C. C. A. 477.

Filing papers in lower court.—An appeal will be dismissed where the papers on appeal are not filed in the lower court within the two years required by this section. Fowler v. Hamill, (1891) 139 U. S. 540, 11 S. Ct. 663, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 266.

When the judge has done all that is necessary for him to do to perfect the transmission of the case to the appellate court, and the party seeking review has done all that is required of him, the mere omission of the clerk of the reviewing court to endorse the writ of error as filed cannot prevent the jurisdiction attaching to the appellate court. Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Phinney, (1900) 175 U. S. 327, 20 S. Ct. 906, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1088, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 76 Fed. 617, 48 U. S. App. 78, 22 C. C. A. 425.

The case must be docketed within the two years allowed by the above section or it will be dismissed, which is not a sufficient excuse for failure to docket that the attorney was not familiar with the practice of the Supreme Court. Green v. Elbert, (1891) 137 U. S. 618, 11 S. Ct. 186, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 792.

Nunc pro tunc appeal.—An appeal not taken within two years as required by this section cannot be entered nunc pro tunc so as to cure the defect. London Credit Co. v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., (1888) 128 U. S. 258, 9 S. Ct. 107, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 448.

Effect of acceptance of appeal bond.—Where two years have elapsed since a decree appealed from was rendered the accepting of an appeal bond does not have the effect of allowing the appeal. Killian v. Clark, (1884) 111 U. S. 784, 4 S. Ct. 700, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 599.

Time of application.—An appeal will be granted on application made after the entry of the decree.
piration of the term at which the decree was rendered; the objection that the court has no power to render the premises being one that should be determined by the Supreme Court. Noe v. U. S. (1857) Hoff Land Ca. 242, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,256.

"The writ of error and the appeal are the foundations of our jurisdiction, without which we have no right to revise the action of the inferior court; and the writ of error like all other common-law writs becomes functus officio unless some return is made to it during the term of the court to which it is returnable." Edmonson v. Bloomshire, (1868) 7 Wall. 310, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 91.

In The Doe Hermanos, (1825) 10 Wheat. 308, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 328, it was said, if an appeal bond is not given within the time allowed by law for an appeal, the court below may disallow the appeal, although prayed for and allowed within the prescribed time.

Sec. 1009. [Appeals in prize causes, within what time.] Appeals in prize causes shall be made within thirty days after the rendering of the decree appealed from, unless the court previously extends the time, for cause shown in the particular case: Provided, That the Supreme Court may, if in its judgment the purposes of justice require it, allow an appeal in any prize cause, if it appears that any notice of appeal, or of intention to appeal, was filed with the clerk of the district court within thirty days next after the rendition of the final decree therein. [R. S.]

Appeals "from the final sentences and decrees in prize causes" direct from the District Court to the Supreme Court are authorized by Judicial Code, § 238, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 794. Consequently, the terms of Judicial Code, § 128, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 607, exclude appellate jurisdiction of the Circuit Court of Appeals in prize causes.

SEC. 11. [Time within which appeals, etc., to circuit courts of appeals to be taken.] That no appeal or writ of error by which any order, judgment, or decree may be reviewed in the circuit court of appeals under the provisions of this act shall be taken or sued out except within six months after the entry of the order, judgment, or decree sought to be reviewed: Provided however, That in all cases in which a lesser time is now by law limited for appeals or writs of error such limits of time shall apply to appeals or writs of error in such cases taken to or sued out from the circuit courts of appeals. * * * [26 Stat. L. 839.]

This is part of section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517. Of the rest of the same section part is given infra, p. 170, and the other part constitutes Judicial Code, § 132, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 643. Section 10 of the same act also relates to appellate procedure and is given infra, p. 234. As to various other sections of said Act, see section 4 thereof, supra, p. 143, and the note thereto.

As to the time limit of three months for review by the Supreme Court of decisions of the Circuit Court of Appeals, see the note to section 4 of the Act of Jan. 28, 1915, ch. 22, supra, p. 146.

R. S. sec. 635 provided as follows: "No judgment, decree, or order of a district court shall be reviewed by a circuit court, on writ of error or appeal, unless the writ of error is sued out, or the appeal is taken, within one year after the entry of such judgment, decree, or order. Provided, That where a party entitled to prosecute a writ of error or to take an appeal is an infant, or non compos mentis, or imprisoned, such writ of error may be prosecuted, or such appeal may be taken, within one year, after the entry of the judgment, decree, or order, exclusive of the term of such disability." This section was expressly repealed by Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1085.

I. NECESSITY OF COMPLIANCE WITH STATUTE

1. In General

The limitation of time for appeal applies to suits on claims against the United States brought in the Circuit (now District) Court under the Tucker Act of March 3, 1887, ch. 359, 24 Stat. L. 505, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1117, and the court has no power to allow an appeal therein by the United States after the expiration of six months from the entry of the decree. Butt v. U. S., (N. D. W. Va. 1904) 126 Fed. 794.

To give the appellate court jurisdiction of a writ of error, the writ must be issued and filed with the court below within the time prescribed by the law, and this requirement cannot be waived by the parties. Stevens r. Clark. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1894) 62 Fed. 321, 18 U. S. App. 584, 10 C. C. A. 379.

A writ of error from the Circuit Court of Appeals to review a judgment issued from such court, and in granting the writ, therefore, the judge to whom it is presented must exercise the power of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and is bound by its limitations. Threadgill v. Platt, (N. D. Va. 1895) 71 Fed. 3.

"A formal petition for the allowance of a writ of error, in order to vest the appellate court with jurisdiction, is not necessary." Louisville Trust Co. v. Stockton, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 72 Fed. 1, 41 U. S. App. 434, 19 C. C. A. 408.

A failure to file an assignment of errors within the six months allowed for a writ of error under rule 11 of the eighth circuit is fatal to the review. U. S. v. Goodrich, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 21, 12 U. S. App. 108, 4 C. C. A. 160.

Where, although an appeal was allowed within the six months limited by the statute, no citation was issued to the persons who procured the order appealed from, and the record was not filed within the time required by rule 16 of the Circuit Court of Appeals, nor until a year after the appeal was allowed, the court had no power then to award a citation, and by a nunc pro tunc order allow the appeal to stand as of the date when the record was filed. Hudson r. Limestone Natural Gas Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 952, 75 C. C. A. 673.

Appeals in admiralty cases.—The time for taking an appeal in admiralty cases is governed by this section. A rule of the District Court requiring appeal in admiralty to be taken within ten days from the rendering of the decree, does not have the effect of "staying" the action, as supposed by the court. Robins Dry Dock, etc., Co. r. Chesbrough, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 121, 132 C. C. A. 365.

2. Extension of Time

An agreement between the parties extending the time within which to sue out a writ of error is ineffectual for that purpose. Clark r. Doerr, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 960, 75 C. C. A. 148, dismissing a writ of error.

The time for suing out the writ or praying an appeal cannot be enlarged by stipulation of the parties, nor by the order of the court. Stevens r. Clark, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1894) 62 Fed. 321, 18 U. S. App. 584, 10 C. C. A. 379.

A decree for specific performance terminating the litigation between the parties, but reserving the cause for any further direction that may become necessary, by the failure of either party to comply with the requirements of the decree, is a final decree, and its operation is not suspended by a motion to extend the time to comply therewith, and for an order of reference. Long r. Maxwell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1894) 59 Fed. 948, 8 U. S. App. 484, 8 C. C. A. 410.

3. Excuse for Delay

Delay in filing the bill of exceptions, due to judicial engagements of the trial judge, is no excuse for the failure to sue out a writ of error within the six months, although an assignment of errors should accompany the petition for the writ of error. Since such assignment may be formulated without the previous settlement of the bill of exceptions, and, besides, is not a jurisdictional matter. Old Co. r. U. S., (1010) 216 U. S. 541, 30 S. Ct. 221, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 318, affirming a dismissal of a writ of error.

II. When Time Begins to Run

The time to appeal does not commence to run until the entry of a judgment. The fact that the court refers in a bill of exceptions to its "decision" does not make it equivalent to a judgment. Marks r. Northern Pac. R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 76 Fed. 941, 44 U. S. App. 714, 22 C. C. A. 630. See also Bankruptcy, vol. 1, pp. 830, 831.

If a motion or a petition for rehearing is made and continued in season and entertained by the court, the time limited for a writ of error or appeal does not begin to run until the motion or petition is disposed of. Until then the judgment or decree does not take final effect for the purposes of the writ of error or appeal. Aspen Min., etc., Co. r. Billings, (1892) 150 U. S. 31, 14 S. Ct. 196, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 986; Voorhes r. John T. Noye Mfg. Co., (1894) 161 U. S. 135, 14 S. Ct. 295, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 101; Northern Pac. R. Co. r. Holmes, (1894) 161 U. S. 137, 14 S. Ct. 296, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 99; Kingman r. Western Mfg. Co., (1898) 170 U. S. 675, 18 S. Ct. 786, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1192. See also Bankruptcy, vol. 1, p. 830.

The six months' time does not begin to run until a motion for new trial filed in due time is finally disposed of. Alexander r. Stevens, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1893) 57 Fed. 828; Louisville Trust Co. r. Stockton, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 72 Fed. 1, 41 U. S. App. 434, 18 C. C. A. 408.

A decree for specific performance terminating the litigation between the parties, but reserving the cause for any further direction that may become necessary, by the failure of either party to comply with the requirements of the decree, is a final decree, and its operation is not suspended by a motion to extend the time to comply therewith, and for an order of reference. Long r. Maxwell, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1894) 59 Fed. 948, 8 U. S. App. 484, 8 C. C. A. 410.
III. Computation of Time

In the computation of the six months allowed by this section for taking out a writ of error from the Circuit Court of Appeals to the lower court, the time in which the plaintiff in error was attempting to pursue a mistaken remedy in the Supreme Court will be included. Darnell v. Illinois Cent. R. Co. (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1913) 206 Fed. 445, 154 C. C. A. 337.

IV. When Appeal is "Taken" or Writ of Error "Sued Out"

The filing in the office of the clerk of the lower court of a petition for an appeal with the assignment of errors within the statutory time is not sufficient. There must be an allowance of the appeal. Green v. Lynn, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1898) 87 Fed. 939, 50 U. S. App. 380, 31 C. C. A. 948.

In Baxter v. Phillipps, (S. D. Ala. 1914) 219 Fed. 309, the court said: "The statute does not say within six months after the day or date of the entry of the order, judgment, or decree on the records of the court. In re McCall, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 791, 792, 37 C. C. A. 430; Clark v. Doerr, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 76 Fed. 960, 75 C. C. A. 146. . . . The writ of error is not sued out or brought until the writ is actually filed with the clerk of the court which rendered the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed. It is the filing of the writ that removes the record from the inferior court to the appellate court, and the period of limitation prescribed by the act of Congress must be calculated accordingly. Kentucky Coal, etc., Co. v. Howes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 163, 85 C. C. A. 337. The United States Supreme Court has held that the day the judgment is filed and entered is the day on which the plaintiff in error had a right to his writ, and on that day the limitation for writs of error, as provided by the statute, began to run within which his right existed. Polley v. Black River Imp. Co., (1885) 113 U. S. 81, 83, 5 S. Ct. 396, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 739.

"When a writ of error from the Circuit Court of Appeals is allowed within the six months, but is not actually issued by the clerk until after the expiration thereof, it will be dismissed, for, in a legal sense, the writ of error is not brought until it is filed in the court below." Threadgill v. Platt, (N. D. Va. 1895) 71 Fed. 1, citing U. S. v. Baxter, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 51 Fed. 624, 2 C. C. A. 410.

A writ of error is not "brought," to use the verbiage of R. S. sec. 1008, supra, p. 158, within the legal meaning of the term until the writ is actually filed or lodged with the clerk of the court which rendered the judgment sought to be reviewed. Old Nick Williams Co. v. U. S., (1910) 215 U. S. 541, 30 S. Ct. 221, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 318; Kentucky Coal, etc., Co. v. Howes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 163, 82 C. C. A. 337, dismissing a writ of error because it was not thus brought within six months, and also holding that while a motion for a new trial, having been seasonably entered, prevents the judgment from becoming final until disposed of, the allowance of a bill of exceptions does not have that effect.

A writ of error is not "sued out" within the meaning of this section by the filing of the petition and bond therefor, and the allowance of the writ by the court below. The writ must be obtained and issued within the time named to give the court jurisdiction. "Whether the failure to obtain and issue the writ in time resulted from the negligence of the plaintiff in error, or was the fault of the clerk, appears to be immaterial." Wazahachie r. Coler, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 254, 34 C. C. A. 394.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to review a judgment on a writ of error not issued until more than six months after the entry of the judgment, notwithstanding it may have been allowed within that time. Rutan v. Johnson, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 109, 64 C. C. A. 443.

Sec. 997. [Removal of causes by writ of error.] There shall be annexed to and returned with any writ of error for the removal of a cause, at the day and place therein mentioned, an authenticated transcript of the record, an assignment of errors, and a prayer for reversal, with a citation to the adverse party. [R. S.]

I. ALLOWANCE OF APPEAL

Appeals subject to same rules, etc., as writs of error, see R. S. sec. 1012, next following, infra, p. 170.

Right to appeal.—An appeal to the Supreme Court in a proper case is a matter of right, and its allowance is in reality nothing more than the doing of those things which are necessary to give the appellant the means of invoking the jurisdiction. A writ of error is the process of the Supreme Court, and it is issued therefore only upon its authority, but an appeal can be taken without any action by such court. All that need be done to get an appeal is for the appellant to cite his adversary in the proper way before the Supreme Court and for him toocket the cause at the proper time. Such a citation as is required may be signed by a judge of the Circuit Court from which the appeal is taken or by a justice of the Supreme Court. Brown v. McConnell, (1888) 124 U. S. 488, 8 S. Ct. 559, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 495.

An appeal must be prayed for and allowed, whether the cause shall be generally be dismissed. U. S. v. Haynes, (1840) 2 McLean 155, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,335.

And it has been held that the prayer for the appeal and the order allowing it constitute a valid appeal, and that the bond is not essential to it. Edmonson v. Bloomshire, (1868) 7 Wall. 306, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 91.

In London Credit Co. v. Arkansas Cent. R. Co., (1888) 128 U. S. 258, 9 S. Ct. 107, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 448, it was ruled that an appeal could not be said to be "taken" until it was in some way presented to the court which made the decree appealed from, thereby putting an end to its jurisdiction over the cause and making it its duty to send it to the appellate court.

But where an appeal bond had been presented and approved, but no formal appeal prayed or allowed, it was held that the court might enter an order nunc pro tunc allowing the appeal. Nicholson v. Chicago, (1869) 5 Biss. 89, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,248.

And in Brandies v. Cochran, (1881) 105 U. S. (L. ed.) 996, it was decided that in the absence of a petition and allowance the filing of the appeal bond, duly approved by a justice of the Supreme Court, was sufficient evidence of the allowance of an appeal, and was a compliance with the law requiring an appeal to be filed in the clerk's office.

So where a bond is given and the record is filed in the proper time, this is sufficient to give the appellate court jurisdiction, although the citation is not served until afterwards. Mendenshall v. Hall, (1890) 134 U. S. 569, 10 S. Ct. 618, 33 U. (L. ed.) 1012.

Effect of allowance.—When an appeal to the Supreme Court is allowed the cause is not necessarily removed from the jurisdiction of the lower court so that the allowance could not be revoked there. Ex p. Roberts, (1872) 15 Wall. 394, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 341, overruling Nutt's Case, (1872) 8 Ct. C. 185.

So where the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia affirmed a decree and allowed an appeal therefrom which was not perfected and a motion whereof the adverse party had due notice was thereupon made and entered on the minutes to vacate the affirmance and grant a reargument it was held that not having been acted upon it was continued as unfinished business, and that under such circumstances it was competent for the court at the ensuing term to grant the motion, vacate the allowance of the appeal, and pass a decree of reversal. Goddard v. Ordway, (1879) 101 U. S. 745, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 1040.

Sufficiency of proceeding for appeal.—The filing of the original citation and original writ of supersedeas, together with certified copies of the assignment of error, and of the supersedeas bond in the lower court, is sufficient to give effect to the appeal. Tornanes v. Melsing, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 776, 45 C. C. A. 615.

And it has been held to be sufficient if the judge signs a bill of exceptions and a citation within the time prescribed, although the writ had been issued by a clerk without a petition filed or the allowance by a judge. Louisville Trust Co. v. Stockton, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 72 Fed. 1, 41 U. S. App. 679, 18 C. C. A. 498.

And in Brown v. McConnell, (1888) 124 U. S. 489, 8 S. Ct. 559, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 495, it was held that the signing of a citation U. S. punishable to the proper term of the Supreme Court, though without the acceptance of security, nevertheless constituted an allowance of appeal which would enable the court to take jurisdiction and to afford the appellants an opportunity to furnish the requisite security.
II. ALLOWANCE OF WRIT OF ERROR

Who may allow.—When there is a court composed of a chief justice and associate justices the writ can only be allowed by the chief justice of that court or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It is case of a writ of error in a court composed of a single judge or chancellor the writ may be allowed by that judge or chancellor or by a judge of the Supreme Court of the United States. Bartemeyer v. Iowa, (1871) 14 Wall. 26, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 792.

And where the constitution of a state provides that in the absence of the chief justice the judge having the next shortest term should preside in his stead, and where the record shows that the chief justice was absent, and that a writ of error was allowed by the judge having the next shortest term, the writ is properly allowed. Butler v. Gage, (1891) 138 U. S. 52, 11 S. Ct. 235, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 869.

And it has been decided that the clerk of the Superior Court of a territory may issue a writ of error to bring a record of that court to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the chief justice may sign the citation. Sheppard v. Wilson, (1845) 5 How. 210, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 120.

But a writ of error will not be granted by the federal Supreme Court to a state court unless at the request of one of the members of the court concurred in by his associates. In re Robertson, (1895) 156 U. S. 183, 15 S. Ct. 324, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 389.

And in an early case it was decided that writs of error to remove causes to the Supreme Court from inferior courts can regularly issue only from the clerk's office of the Supreme Court. West v. Barnes, (1791) 2 Dall. (Pa.) 401, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 433.

Indorsement by judge of allowance.—It is a sufficient allowance of a writ of error for a judge to indorse his allowance upon the petition only, although it would be better practice to indorse both petition and writ. Warner v. Texas, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 269, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241; Springfield Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1898) 86 Fed. 387, 56 U. S. App. 330, 29 C. C. A. 214.

A prayer and petition for a writ of error that the writ may be issued “for the correction of errors so complained of,” is a prayer for reversal within the requirements of this section. Springfield Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1898) 86 Fed. 387, 56 U. S. App. 330, 29 C. C. A. 214.

III. PRAYER FOR REVERSAL

The defect of the omission of a prayer for reversal is so far technical that the assignment of errors may be corrected by adding it. McCallan v. Pyeatt, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 269, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241; Springfield Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1898) 86 Fed. 387, 56 U. S. App. 330, 29 C. C. A. 214.

A prayer and petition for a writ of error that the writ may be issued “for the correction of errors so complained of,” is a prayer for reversal within the requirements of this section. Springfield Safe-Deposit, etc., Co. v. Attica, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1898) 86 Fed. 387, 56 U. S. App. 330, 29 C. C. A. 214.

IV. MANNER OF DIRECTING WRITS OF ERROR

V. SERVICE OF WRIT OF ERROR

A writ of error is served by lodging a copy thereof in the office of the clerk of the court where judgment was rendered. Wood v. Lide, (1807) 4 Cranch 180, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 588; Davidson v. Lanier, (1866) 4 Wall. 447, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 377.

If, however, it is served after its return day it does not give the court jurisdiction, but if served before the return day a return afterwards will be good. Wood v. Lide, (1807) 4 Cranch 180, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 588.

VI. RETURN TO WRIT OF ERROR

Time of return.—A writ of error must be returned to the term of court to which it is returnable. Blair v. Miller, (1800) 4 Dall. (Pa.) 21, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 724.

A writ of error must be returned and entered at the return term. If a term intervenes the objection is fatal and the error is not capable of being removed by any amendment. Hamilton v. Moore, (1797) 3 Dall. (Pa.) 371, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 642.

And a writ of error made returnable to a day different from the return day fixed by statute as the day on which the term commences will be dismissed. Puget Sound Agricultural Co. v. Pierce County, (1807) 8 Wall. 246, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 739.

Where the clerk of a Supreme Court of a state neglects or refuses to make a return of error the Supreme Court will lay a rule upon him to make return on or before the first day of the next term, and where there is another case upon the docket involving the same questions the court will direct it to be continued in order that the cases may be argued together. U. S. v. Booth, (1855) 18 How. 476, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 464.

Omission to state day of return in court.

Sufficiency of return.—A return to a writ of error from the Supreme Court to a state court, certified by the clerk of the court which pronounced the judgment and to which the writ is addressed, and authenticated by the seal of the court, is in conformity to law, and brings the record regularly before the Supreme Court.

VII. EFFECT OF WRIT OF ERROR

VIII. PARTIES

So in a writ of error to a joint judgment against several, all must join. The omission of one or more is an irregularity for which the writ will be dismissed. Hampton v. Rouse, (1871) 13 Wall. 187, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 593.

And a writ of error in the name of one "and others," the others not being named, will be dismissed. Deneale v. Archer, (1834) 8 Pet. 526, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 1033; Miller v. McKenzie, (1870) 10 Wall. 582, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 1043.

It is also ground for a dismissal of a writ of error that the parties plaintiff were described instead of named. Wilson v. Life, etc., Ins. Co., (1838) 12 Pet. 140, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1032.

But a defendant in equity whose interest is separate from that of the other defendants may appeal without the others. For- gary v. Conrad, (1848) 6 How. 201, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 404.

And the names of the appellees need not be individually stated in the order allowing an appeal where they are all given in the appeal bond. Richardson v. Green, (1889) 130 U. S. 104, 9 S. Ct. 443, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 872.

IX. RECORDS

In general,—The statutes concerning writs of error and appeals use the term "record" so as not to include the testimony merely on filing the case. Miller v. Tobin. (C. C. Ore. 1853) 18 Fed. 609.

Necessity of producing record.—Where the issue in the District Court is not tied to the record and the court below adjudges that the plaintiff has not produced the record, there can be no reversal of that judgment unless the record, if any be produced, is contained in the record brought up on the writ of error to the appellate court. U. S. v. Cook. (1819) 2 Mason 22, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,551.
Return of copy of record.—The return of a copy of the record of a state court duly certified by the clerk, and annexed to the writ of error, is a sufficient return. Martin v. Hunter, (1816) 1 Wheat. 304, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 97.

Where writ allowed but not issued.—Where a writ of error has been allowed by the chief justice of the state court, but no such writ has been issued, the clerk may refuse to send the transcript of the record to the United States Supreme Court. Ex p. Ralston, (1857) 119 U. S. 613, 7 S. Ct. 317, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 506.

Effect of absence of seal.—Where a writ of error was allowed in open court in the Circuit Court, but the writ had no seal and was not returned to the Supreme Court with the transcript of the record, and two terms afterwards a paper was filed in the clerk's office in form of a writ of error but without a seal, and having no authenticated transcript annexed, the cause was dismissed on motion. Overton v. Cheek, (1859) 22 How. 46, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 255.

Essential parts of record.—This section makes an assignment of errors, a prayer for reversal, and a citation to the adverse party, essential parts of the record upon which a review of the rulings of a trial court may be invoked in the appellate courts of the United States. When an appeal is prayed and allowed in open court the prayer for reversal and the citation may be waived. But the assignment of errors is indispensable to the perfection of the appeal. Webber v. Milhills, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 64, 59 C. C. A. 577; Loeckman v. Lang, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 279, 62 C. C. A. 550.

A demurrer to evidence makes the evidence a part of the record. So whereoyer of any instrument is prayed, or there is a demurrer to any part of the pleadings. Suydam v. Williamson, (1867) 20 How. 427, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 978.

X. AUTHENTICATION OF TRANSCRIPT

Sufficiency of authentication.—An authenticated transcript of the record must be filed in the Supreme Court to give that court jurisdiction of an appeal or writ of error, but where the certificate lacks only the clerk's signature, the question presented is not one of no authentication but of irregular authentication, and it is within the discretion of the court to allow the defect to be supplied. Idaho, etc., Land Imp. Co. v. Bradbury, (1835) 132 U. S. 509, 10 S. Ct. 177, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 433.

It is sufficient authentication of the transcript where the clerk certified "that the foregoing is a true, full, and complete transcript of the record, orders, and decrees from the files and records of my office." Pennsylvania Life Ins. Co. v. Jacksonville, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 131, 2 U. S. App. 606, 5 C. C. A. 65.

And a transcript to the record is sufficiently authenticated for the purpose of an appeal or a writ of error to this court if it is signed by the deputy in the name of and for the clerk of the court from which the appeal comes, or to which the writ of error is directed, and sealed with the seal of that court. Garneau v. Dozier, (1879) 100 U. S. 7, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 538.

XI. FILING OF ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS

In general.—This section does not require filing an assignment of errors before allowance of a writ of error or an appeal. This requirement rests upon a rule of the Circuit Court of Appeals, which is the same as a Supreme Court rule. There are two reasons for this rule. One is that the judge who denies the application for the allowance or issue of a writ of error is presented may be informed what the alleged errors are upon which the petitioner relies, so that he may intelligently decide the question whether or not the writ should be issued. The other is that opposing counsel and the appellate court may be informed by a statement which becomes a part of the record what questions of law are presented for their consideration and determination. Simpson v. Denver First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 257, 63 U. S. (C. A. 371.

And where no bill of exceptions has been filed and no writ of error or appeal allowed, the cause will be dismissed on motion, although the defendant has filed a supersedeas bond. Tuscaloosa Northern R. Co. v. Gude, (1891) 141 U. S. 244, 11 S. Ct. 1094, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 742.

And the assignment of errors on the appeal from a District Court to the Supreme Court of a territory cannot be accepted by the Supreme Court of the United States as the equivalent of the assignment required by the statute, and where the brief contains no specification of errors as is required by rule, no statement of the case presenting the questions involved or a proper reference to the pages of the record relied upon to support the points which are made, the court

Necessity of filing.—A filing of an assignement of errors is an essential condition to the granting of a writ of the allowance of an appeal, and its purpose is to apprise the opposite counsel and the court of the particular legal points re-

And where there is no assignement of errors sent up with the record and no specification of the errors relied upon as required by rule of the Supreme Court, and there is no such plain error not assigned or specified as calls upon the court to exercise its option to review the questions involved, the writ of error must be dis-

But an assignement of errors is not jurisdictional in the Supreme Court of the United States or in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the court may reverse for an obvious error even though not assigned.
World's Columbian Exposition Co. v. Re-

And although no assignement of error is annexed to the transcript as required by this section, the Supreme Court may at its option notice a plain error not assigned. School Dist. v. Hall, (1882) 106
U. S. 428, 1 S. Ct. 417, 27 U. S. (L. ed.)
257; U. S. v. Pena, (1890) 175 U. S. 600, 20 S. Ct. 165, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 251; And see Farrar v. Churchill, (1890) 135
U. S. 609, 16 S. Ct. 771, 34 U. S. (L. ed.)
246; Gregory Consol. Min. Co. v. Starr,
(1899) 131 U. S. 311, 10 S. Ct. 514, 36 U.
S. (L. ed.) 715; Camden v. Stuart,
(1892) 144 U. S. 104, 12 S. Ct. 585, 36 U.
S. (L. ed.) 363.

Again, where there is a bill of exceptions the writ of error does not operate only upon that part of the record. Wherever an error is apparent on the record, it is open to revision, whether it be made to appear by a bill of exceptions or in any other manner. Suydam v. Williamson,
But see O'Neill v. Vermont, (1892) 144
U. S. 323, 12 S. Ct. 693, 36 U. S. (L. ed.)
450, where a plain error not assigned or specified was not recognized.

And this section does not necessitate the settlement of a bill of exceptions prior to the filing of the writ and the assignment of errors. Old Nick Williams Co. v.

A writ of error will not be dismissed for want of jurisdiction by reason of a failure to annex thereto or return therewith an assignement of errors pursuant to the requirements of this section. Gumbel 616, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1128. See also to same effect Stevenson v. Barbour, (1891) 320.

Title required.—Although an assignement of errors filed in the District Court should bear the title of that court, yet where it bears the title of the Circuit Court of Appeals it will not invalidate the appeal in the latter court. Church Cooperage Co.
v. Pinkney, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 170
Fed. 266, 95 C. C. A. 462.

Where an assignement of errors is returned with a writ as required by this section, and no counsel has appeared for the plaintiffs in error, but the case is submitted by the defendants in error on briefs without any specifications of errors by the plaintiffs as required by rule, the judgment will be affirmed for want of a due prosecution of the writ of error. Dugger v.
Tavloe, (1897) 121 U. S. 266, 7 S. Ct.
925, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 948. And see Boston Hydraulic Gold Min. Co. v. Eagle Copper, etc., Min. Co., (1885) 115 U. S.
221, 6 S. Ct. 33, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 392.

Assignment of error not well founded.—
Where there is an assignement of error resting on an averment in the answer which is not well founded in fact the decree of the lower court will be affirmed. Cheney v.
Bacon, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed.
305, 4 U. S. App. 207, 1 C. C. A. 244.

Sufficiency of assignement of error.—
Where the sole ground alleged against the validity of a judgment was that the case was improperly removed from the state court, and there were two other assignments of error which were that the verdict was contrary to law and also that the judgment was contrary to law, it was held that the latter two assignements of error would not be considered, first because neither of them specifically pointed out the error complained of as required by the rules of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and secondly because counsel in their brief did not point out or discuss any particular error other than that relating to the removal of the case. Ireton v. Pennsylvania Co., (C. C.
A. 6th Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 84, 107 C. C.
A. 304, writ of certiorari denied (1912)
223 U. S. 728, 32 S. Ct. 529, 56 U. S.
(L. ed.) 833.

An assignement of errors cannot be supersed by a subsequent assignement of errors, certainly not by one filed without leave of court. Lloyd v. Chapman, (C. C.
A. 9th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 599, 35 C. C.
A. 474.

Appeals.—An appeal is subject to the same rules as a writ of error, and where no assignement of errors is filed the case may be dismissed on motion. Dufour v.
Lang, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1892) 54 Fed. 913,
2 U. S. App. 477, 4 C. C. A. 663.
The power of tribunals of appeal to affirm or reverse or modify does not depend upon the presence or absence of any specific assignment of error. This, however, does not mean that a court of error can review any matter not excepted to where such matter has no footing in the case other than by bill of exceptions. World's Columbian Exposition Co. v. Republic of Texas, (C. L.A. 7th Cir. 1888) 91 Fed. 64, 62 U. S. App. 704, 33 C. C. A. 333.

Waiver.—And it has been held that the failure to file an assignment of errors is not jurisdictional, and may be waived. Old Nick Williams Co. v. U. S., (1810) 215 U. S. 541, 30 S. Ct. 221, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 318.

XII. DOCKETING OF CAUSE

And an appeal will be dismissed where, at the term at which it was returnable, the transcript was by reason of laches of the appellant not filed, or the cause docketed in this court. The appellate at any time before the hearing may take advantage of the objection, or the court upon its own motion may dismiss the appeal. Grigby v. Purcell, (1878) 99 U. S. 505, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 354.

Nor is it sufficient excuse for failure to docket a case on appeal at the return term that the clerk had agreed to take the record and file it with the clerk of the Supreme Court, and that the appellant relied upon this. Foyolle v. Texas, et al, (1888) 124 U. S. 319, 8 S. Ct. 558, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 353.

But the docketing of a cause by the defendant in error in advance of the return day of a writ of error does not prevent the plaintiff in error from doing what was necessary while the writ was in life to give it full effect. Davies v. Corbin, (1864) 144 U. S. 28, 1 S. Ct. 687, 5 S. Ct. 696, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 1149.

A motion to dismiss an appeal for failure to docket at the proper term must be made during the term of the appellate court next after the time when the appeal was allowed. Edwards v. U. S., (1880) 102 U. S. 575, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 293; Richardson v. Green, (1889) 130 U. S. 104, 9 S. Ct. 445, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 872.

Waiver of objection as to docketing.—When a defendant in error moves for a new bond long after the docketing of the case in the Supreme Court, he waives the objection that the case was not docketed in time. Waldron v. Waldron, (1893) 156 U. S. 361, 15 S. Ct. 385, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 453.

XIII. APPEARANCE OF COUNSEL

The appearance of counsel for the party docketing the case may be entered upon the filing of the transcript. Green v. Elbert, (1891) 137 U. S. 610, 11 S. Ct. 188, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 792.

If the counsel on neither side appear when the cause is called the writ of error will be dismissed. Radford v. Craig, (1809) 6 Cranch 289, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 104.

XIV. WAIVER

In general.—Though a decree in equity is fully executed at the instance of the successful party, and the losing party receives money under it, this does not waive an appeal. Erwin v. Lowry, (1849) 7 How. 172, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 655.

And partial satisfaction of a judgment, whether obtained by a levy or voluntary payment, is not a bar to a writ of error by the plaintiff therein, where it appeared that the levy was made or the payment was received prior to the service of the writ. U. S. v. Dashiel, (1865) 3 Wall. 688, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 266.

Where the record of a judgment in a Circuit Court had been sent to the Supreme Court and an appearance entered there by the defendant in error, and the Supreme Court had reversed the judgment and remanded the cause for a new trial, it was held that the defendant in error could not object that the judgment in the cause was in force and unreversed upon the ground that no writ of error had been sued out, as it would be presumed that all formal objections and particularly one to the want of a writ were waived by consent of the parties. Evans v. Eaton, (1818) 3 Wash. 443, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,560.

Examination of transcript for "plain error."—The option reserved, under Supreme Court rules, of examining the transcript of record on writ of error or appeal in order that the court may be advised as to whether there has occurred any "plain error" which obviously demands correction, will be exercised where the defendants in error have made no objection to the failure to assign error, under R. S. secs. 997 (the text) and 1012 (next following), but have submitted the case upon the specifications of error in the brief of the plaintiffs in error. Columbia Heights Realty Co. v. Rudolph, (1910) 217 U. S. 547, 30 S. Ct. 581, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 877.
Sec. 1012. [Appeals to Supreme Court subject to same rules, etc., as writs of error.] Appeals from the circuit courts and district courts acting as circuit courts, and from district courts in prize causes, shall be subject to the same rules, regulations, and restrictions as are or may be prescribed in law in cases of writs of error. [R. S.]

L. 310.

"Circuit" Courts, mentioned in this section, were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082. But the text section 1012 was not incorporated in the Judicial Code, and section 291 of said Code, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1083, provides that, "Whenever, in any law not embraced within this Act, any reference is made to, or any power or duty is conferred or imposed upon, the circuit courts, such reference shall * * * be deemed and held to refer to, and to confer such power and impose such duty upon, the district courts."

"This provision applies to the time within which appeals may be brought as well as to other regulations concerning

(1888) 125 U. S. 258, 9 S. Ct. 107, 32 U.
S. (L. ed.) 448.

Application of section.—This section does not have the effect of making a finding and statement of facts by a Circuit Court in an equity cause conclusive on the appellate court. Hendryx v. Perkins, (C.
C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 268, 59 C.
C. A. 908.

In Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Expanded Metal
Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 568, 100 C. C. A. 114, it was said: "It is obvious that section 1012 applies the same rules, regulations, and restrictions to appeals as section 1000 [infra, p. 187] applies to writs of error."

This section has been cited in Columbia Heights Realty Co. v. Rudolph, (1910)
217 U. S. 547, 30 S. Ct. 581, 54 U. S.
(L. ed.) 877; Simpson v. Denver First
Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129

Pearce, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed.

[Sec. 11.] [Existing provisions relating to appellate procedure continued in force for circuit court of appeals.] * * * And all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error. [26 Stat. L. 829.]

This is part of section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517. The preceding part of the same section is given supra, p. 161, and the con-
Section 10 of the same Act also relates to appellate procedure and is given infra, p. 234.
As to various other sections of said Act see section 4 thereof, supra, p. 143, and the note thereto.

The above section is annotated, infra, p. 172, after the notes to section 3 of the Act of 1879 here following:
not to have been entirely repealed by force of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 617, 26 Stat. L. 826, which withdrew all appellate jurisdiction from Circuit Courts, nor by the repealing provisions in said Circuit Court of Appeals Act, § 14, which are set forth in notes to Judicial Code, § 233, supra, this title, vol. 5, at
p. 797. At any rate, said Act of 1879 is here set forth in full, because some of its provisions were awarded a degree of potency by the Supreme Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals in cases cited in the notes to sections 2 and 3 of said Act, infra, pp. 171, 172.
An act [sic] to give circuit courts appellate jurisdiction in certain criminal cases.

[Sec. 1.] [Appeal to criminal jurisdiction of circuit courts.] The circuit court for each judicial district shall have jurisdiction of writs of error in all criminal cases tried before the district court where the sentence is imprisonment or fine and imprisonment, or where, if a fine only, the fine shall exceed the sum of three hundred dollars; and in such case a respondent feeling himself aggrieved by a decision of a district court, may except to the opinion of the court, and tender his bill of exceptions, which shall be settled and allowed according to the truth, and signed by the judge, and it shall be a part of the record of the case. [20 Stat. L. 354.]

Notes to above section 1.—"Prior to the Act of March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. L. 354), giving to Circuit Courts appellate jurisdiction in certain criminal cases, there was no way by which questions of law arising in such cases, after conviction, could be taken from the District to the higher courts; and in cases not within that Act no way exists now." U. S. v. Haynes, (D. C. Mass. 1887) 29 Fed. 691.

Exceptions.—The "decision" of the court to which the defendant may except only includes such rulings or directions as would not, in the ordinary course of procedure, otherwise appear of record. Therefore it does not apply to the judgment of the court imposing punishment on the defendant. Nelson v. U. S., (C. C. Ore. 1887) 30 Fed. 112.

A bill of exceptions is not necessary to bring before the court a question of law raised by a motion in arrest of judgment for defects in the indictment. As a practical question, it would seem an unnecessary hardship to compel a defendant to resort to the complicated and costly remedy of a bill of exceptions and a writ of error, when, with the concurrence of the court and the district attorney, the case can go up in the simple and inexpensive form of a remission of the indictment. U. S. v. Haynes, (D. C. Mass. 1887) 29 Fed. 691.

Review on error.—On a writ of error allowed on a petition, and solely on the questions raised by the bill of exceptions, it is not competent, under this statute, to review any other questions. Brand v. U. S., (N. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 394.

It is only the decisions of the District Court which are excepted to in that court that can be reviewed under the writ of error. The questions to be considered on allowing the writ are only the questions decided by the court below, and which appear by the record to have been decided, and where also the decisions were excepted to below. Brand v. U. S., (N. D. N. Y. 1880) 4 Fed. 394.

Sec. 2. [Writ of error, bond and bail.] Within one year next after the end of the term at which such sentence shall be pronounced, and not after, the respondent may petition for a writ of error from the judgment of the district court in the cases named in the preceding section, which petition shall be presented to the circuit judge or circuit justice in term or vacation, who, on consideration of the importance and difficulty of the questions presented in the record, may allow such writ of error, and may order that such writ shall operate as a stay of proceedings under the sentence; but the allowance of such writ shall not so operate without such order. The judge or justice allowing such writ of error shall take a bond with sufficient sureties that the same shall be prosecuted to effect, and that the respondent shall abide the judgment of the circuit court thereon. And if the writ shall be allowed to operate as a stay of proceedings under the sentence, bail may in like manner be taken for the appearance of the respondent at the term of the circuit court to which such writ of error shall be returnable, and that he will not depart without leave of court. [20 Stat. L. 354.]

Notes to above section 2 — Bail on writ of error.—In Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 424, it was held that a judge of the federal District Court had power to admit to bail a defendant convicted in his court and sentenced for an offense then reviewable by the Supreme Court, a writ of error having been sued out from the Supreme Court. As conducing to that conclusion, the court referred to the provisions in the above section 2 of the Act of 1879 in connection with the text section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891.

Sec. 3. [Return of writ of error proceedings.] Such writ of error so allowed shall be returnable to the next regular term of the circuit court for the district, and shall be served on the district attorney of the United States for such district. The circuit court may advance all such writs of error on its docket in order that speedy justice may be done. And in case of an affirmance of the judgment of the district court, the circuit court shall proceed to pronounce final sentence and to award execution thereon;
but if such judgment shall be reversed, the circuit court may proceed with the trial of said cause de novo, or remand the same to the district court for further proceedings. [20 Stat. L. 534.]

Notes to above section 3 — Judgment on reversal in criminal case. — In Ballew v. U. S. (1895) 160 U. S. 187, 16 S. Ct. 263, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 388, the court quoted the text section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of 1891, and referred to other provisions in the federal statutes, including the above section of the Act of 1879, and said: "From this and from a review of the legislation on the subject of the powers conferred upon this court as a reviewing court, it follows as a necessary conclusion that general authority was given to it on writ of error to take such action as the ends of justice, not only in civil but in criminal cases, might require." Followed, with respect to the powers of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and likewise referring to the above cited provisions, in Hanley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 849, 59 C. C. A. 153. See also Whitworth v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 114 Fed. 302, 52 C. C. A. 214.

The section authorizes the Circuit Court to render its own judgment in case of an affirmance, which need not necessarily be the judgment of the District Court. U. S. v. Wynn, (E. D. Mo. 1882) 11 Fed. 57.

"One object of the statute was to give to the Circuit Court authority, not only over the rulings of the District Court during the trial, but also over the degree of punishment imposed upon the party, if, upon the whole record before the Circuit Court, it should appear in the judgment of the court that the penalty was not in conformity with law; as where a fine was imposed where the statute authorized imprisonment only, or imprisonment where it authorized a fine only, or otherwise was unlawful, or where it was too severe. In all these cases, I think the opinion of the District Court is subject to review by the Circuit Court, and may be changed," and the Circuit Court, while affirming the judgment of the District Court, may impose a different sentence. Bates v. U. S., (N. D. Ill. 1881) 10 Fed. 92.

Retrial in the Appellate Court. — On reversal of the judgment, the counsel agreeing that the cause might be retried in the Circuit Court, it was so ordered. Dear v. U. S., (N. D. Ill. 1881) 10 Fed. 269.

Notes to the text section 11 — Existing provisions of the law in force. — The sentence beginning "and all provisions of law now in force" operates to continue the then existing method by which appeals and writs of error were taken from the Circuit Courts to the Supreme Court and make it applicable to the Circuit Courts of Appeals. So stated by the committee on revision in note to Judicial Code, § 250, supra, vol. 5, p. 913.

Methods and systems of review. — The same rules that govern the Supreme Court in taking jurisdiction of an appeal or writ of error obtain in the Circuit Court of Appeals, and a decision awarding a peremptory writ of mandamus can only be reviewed in such court by writ of error. Muhlenberg County v. Dyer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 65 Fed. 634, 31 U. S. App. 109, 13 C. C. A. 64.

Appeals in admiralty cases. — See Act of Feb. 16, 1875, ch. 77, § 1, supra, p. 130, where the cases as to the effect of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act are given and the question of appeals in admiralty generally is treated.

Reversal and superseded. — "As to the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, including the citations, superseded, and bond or other security, in cases either civil or criminal, brought to this court from the Circuit Court or the District Court, Congress made no provision in this act, evidently considering those matters to be covered and regulated by the provisions of earlier statutes forming parts of one system." Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 424; Title Guarantee & Trust Co. v. U. S. (1912) 222 U. S. 401, 32 S. Ct. 168, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 248.

"From this broad power, this court or its judges may exercise, in aid of its appellate jurisdiction in criminal cases, the same powers in regard to the allowing of writs of error, or admission to bail pending a writ of error, which were formerly exercised in appellate criminal proceedings by the Supreme Court or its justices, by virtue of the provisions of statutory law in force, or by implication from the grant of jurisdiction over proceedings in error." McKnight v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 452, 457, 51 C. C. A. 285.

Under this section, in cases of crimes not capital at least, bail may be taken on writ of error by order of the proper court, justice, or judge. Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 424. See also Bail and Recognizances, vol. 1, p. 498.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has the power, and it is generally its duty to admit to bail after conviction of a crime, not capital, pending a writ of error. Me-

The words "all provisions for bonds or other securities" which were in force at the time of the Act of 1891, do not include as applicable to appeals from the Circuit Court of Appeals the provision of section 16 of the Interstate Commerce Act [Act of Feb. 4, 1887, as amended by the Act of March 2, 1889, ch. 382, § 5, title INTERSTATE COMMERCE, vol. 4, p. 490], that the appeal therein referred to shall not operate to stay or supersede, for the appeal treated of in section 16 is an appeal from the trial court and does not refer to an appeal from the Circuit Court of Appeals, and the scope of the provision was not enlarged by the Act of 1891. Louisville, etc., R. R. Co. v. Behlmer, (1898) 169 U. S. 644, 18 S. Ct. 502, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 889.

A single judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals upon granting a writ of error or an execution of an order as a supersedeas and prescribe its forms and terms, which must be obeyed if possible, irrespective of its validity, under penalty of a contempt. Tornanesse v. Melaing, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 105 Fed. 775, 46 C. C. A. 515.

The Circuit Court of Appeals has no power to grant a supersedeas where there has been a failure by the petitioner to take the steps prescribed by statute for giving to the writ of error itself the effect of staying execution, and where there is no fault or error of the court below; nor can the court below grant a supersedeas where the writ of error was not sued out until after sixty days from the date of the judgment. New England R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 367, 41 C. C. A. 404. See R. S. sec. 716 (now Judicial Code, § 292, supra, this title, vol. 6, p. 929), and R. S. sec. 1007, infra, p. 198.

Time of allowing supersedeas.—As nothing is contained in the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, regulating the time when an appeal from a Circuit Court of Appeals to the Supreme Court must be taken in order to operate as a supersedeas, the general provision of R. S. sec. 1007, infra p. 198, making the allowance of a writ and the lodgment of the same in the office of the clerk within sixty days after the date of a judgment, is applicable. Title Guaranty, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1912) 222 U. S. 401, 32 S. Ct. 168, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 248, petition for writ of certiorari denied (1912) 223 U. S. 720, 32 S. Ct. 923, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 629.

Modifying judgment.—By virtue of this provision, in connection with other sections of the federal statutes, a Circuit Court of Appeals has ample power, on reversal of the judgment in a criminal case because of the imposition of an excessive sentence, to modify the judgment by remitting the excess. Hanley v. U. S., (1903) 123 Fed. 849, 59 C. C. A. 153, C. C. A. 2d Cir.

Securities on appeal.—The provisions of R. S. sec. 1000, infra, p. 187, are applicable under this section to appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Presto, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 522, 35 C. C. A. 394.

Execution for costs.—This provision makes applicable to the Circuit Court of Appeals, R. S. sec. 701, infra, p. 224, so that in order to authorize the court to issue execution for costs awarded by the Circuit Court of Appeals on a writ of error, the mandate from the latter court should contain a special provision directing the same. American Trust, etc., Bank v. Zeigler Coal Co., (N. D. Ill. 1908) 165 Fed. 512.

Allowance of amendments.—"Writ of error from this court to Circuit and District Courts are sued out under the same practice and regulations as are those from the Supreme Court. . . . The power conferred upon the Supreme Court by R. S. sec. 1005, infra, p. 196, concerning the amendment of defective writs in matters of form, is likewise conferred upon this court with respect to writs of error issuing from this court. Cotter v. Alabama Great Southern R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 747, 22 U. S. App. 372, 10 C. C. A. 35.

Under this section and R. S. sec. 1005, infra, p. 196, the Circuit Court of Appeals is justified in allowing an amendment to correct a writ of error which, owing to the illness of counsel, does not set forth accurately the parties plaintiff, and in denying a motion to dismiss the writ, founded upon such mistake. Green County v. Thomas, (1900) 211 U. S. 568, 29 S. Ct. 168, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 345.

Amount in controversy.—R. S. sec. 691, as amended by Act of Feb. 16, 1875, § 3, being expressly repealed by section 14 of the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, their provisions as to the amount in controversy were not transferred to the Circuit Court of Appeals as "provisions of law in force." Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amato, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 881, 1 U. S. App. 113, 1 C. C. A. 468.

Issuance of writ of error.—A writ of error returnable to the Circuit Court of Appeals may be issued from the clerk's office of the Circuit Court in which the case was tried under R. S. sec. 1004, infra, p. 194. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amato, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 881, 1 U. S. App. 113, 1 C. C. A. 468.

 Sec. 698. [Transcripts on appeals.] Upon the appeal of any cause in equity, or of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, or of prize or no prize, a transcript of the record, as directed by law to be made, and copies of the proofs, and of such entries and papers on file as may be necessary on the hearing of the appeal, shall be transmitted to the Supreme Court: Provided, That either the court below or the Supreme Court may order any original document or other evidence to be sent up, in addition to the copy of the record, or in lieu of a copy of a part thereof. And on such appeals no new evidence shall be received in the Supreme Court, except in admiralty and prize causes. [R. S.]

The above section, having never been expressly repealed, is evidently made applicable to the Circuit Courts of Appeals by the Circuit Courts of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, § 11, supra, p. 170.

See R. S. sec. 750, supra, p. 119, as to contents of final record in such cases. As to sending up "any original document or other evidence," see also Act of Feb. 13, 1911, ch. 47, § 1, infra, p. 180.

I. Scope
Application to Circuit Court of Appeals.
—This section, with the practical construction put on it by Judge Story and by the Supreme Court rules in admiralty Nos. 49 and 50, so far as it required that the proofs in the court of the first instance be in some way reduced to writing in cases intended for a review of the facts on appeal, applies to appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals. "In any case in which all the proofs are not reduced to writing in the District Court and no equivalent is found in the record, we have no power except to decline to try the facts anew." ThePhiladelphia, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 423, 21 U. S. App. 90, 9 C. C. A. 64.

Nor is there any doubt that the closing paragraph of this section, prohibiting the reception of new evidence in the Supreme Court on appeal, except in admiralty and prize causes, and the implication which it contains, applies to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The Philadelphia, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 423, 21 U. S. App. 90, 9 C. C. A. 64.

II. Record
1. Filing

Time of filing record.—It is ordinarily said that it must be filed during the return term, and that if it is so filed it is seasonable notwithstanding the requirements of the rules of the Supreme Court (No. 9, par. 1), and that of the first circuit (No. 16, par. 1), unless the party appealed against seasonably moves as also Delay in filing — Motion to dismiss appeal. — In The Kawaiiani, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 879, 63 C. C. A. 347, a motion was made to dismiss the appeal. It was not contended that the appeal was not duly perfected but that the record was not filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals within the time prescribed by its rules. The appeal was perfected July 18, 1902, and the record was not filed until January 5, 1903; but it was filed before any motion was made to dismiss, the latter not having been made until June 9, 1903. Denying the motion to dismiss, the court said: "As said by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Altenberg v. Grant, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 868, 861, 54 U. S. App. 312, 28 C. C. A. 244: 'Bingham v. Morris, 7 Cranch 99, [3 U. S. (L. ed.) 281] shows that if the transcript of record is filed before the motion for dismissal, the motion will not be granted.' " And to the same effect see Gilman v. Fernam, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 940, 72 C. C. A. 666.

2. Contents

In general. — A rule of the Circuit Court of Appeals which provides that "whenever it shall be necessary or proper in the opinion of the presiding judge in any Circuit or District Court that original papers of any kind should be inspected in this court upon writ of error or appeal, such presiding judge may make such rules or order for the safekeeping, transportation and return of such original papers as to him may seem proper," fixes the limit within which the presiding judge may act in such matter and he is not authorized to make an order for incorporating original papers introduced in evidence in the record on appeal, instead of copies, merely for the purpose of saving expense to the parties, nor unless in his opinion an inspection of the originals by the appellate court, as distinguished from authenticated copies, is either necessary or would be useful or aidful in the determination of the appeal. Dorgan v. Mfg. Co. v. Brennan, (W. D. Ky. 1907) 156 Fed. 213, wherein the court said: " Though in this matter acting for the Circuit Court of Appeals under rule 14, we have not overlooked sections 698 [the above text], and 760 [ supra, p. —] of the Revised Statutes (under which we may say that our ruling would have been precisely the same), but we have preferred to be guided entirely by the rule of the court where the appeal is pending, particularly as it has fixed the limits within which the presiding judge may act for it after the case has passed from his court." Under this section the Supreme Court at the October term, 1899, passed the following rule: "The record in causes of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, where, under the requirements of law, the facts have been found in the court below, and our power to review is limited to the determination of questions of law arising on the record, shall be confined to the pleadings, the findings of fact and conclusions of law thereon, the bills of exceptions, the final judgment or decree, and such interlocutory orders and decrees as may be necessary to a proper review of the case." The Adriatic, (1899) 103 U. S. 731, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 605.

"In this section the distinction is recognized between that which constitutes the final record and that which may be made part of the record for the purposes of appeal." In re Cooper, (1892) 143 U. S. 472, 12 S. Ct. 463, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 292.

"Ordinarily the whole of the record, as the word is technically used, in suits at common law, and of the corresponding portions of proceedings in equity, the latter as designated by R. S. sec. 750, [ supra, p. 153], should be brought here, in order that this court may properly shape its judgments, excepting, of course, what precedes the mandate on a prior appeal or writ of error." Nashua, etc., R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 237, 21 U. S. App. 50, 9 C. C. A. 468.

A transcript of appeal in admiralty should contain all the evidence adduced upon both sides. When such evidence is not reduced to writing in the lower court, and there is no rule of the lower court, requiring it to be reduced to writing, it would seem that an appeal can be heard only upon the merits, where the evidence adduced appears by an agreed statement of facts, or where a statement is made by the court of the evidence adduced or of the facts proved. The Edward H. Blake, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 202, 34 C. C. A. 297.

Only the process, pleadings, orders, judgment of the court and such matters as are properly preserved in the bill of exceptions, can be deemed as constituting the record, unless made so by agreement of parties or order of court. Motions based on matters dehors the record are expressly held to be not a part of the record unless preserved in a bill of exceptions or otherwise saved. Eldorado Coal, etc., Co. v. Mariotti, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 51, 131 C. C. A. 339.
So, where in the printed record there appeared what purported to be a motion made by the plaintiff in error in the District Court to dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction for matters that appeared upon the face of the declaration and neither the motion nor any ruling thereon was preserved in the bill of exceptions, as a motion it was therefore not before the court on appeal. Eldorado Coal, etc., Co. v. Mariott, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 61, 121 C. C. A. 359.

On an appeal in admiralty, evidence which is not made a part of the bill of exceptions, although it may be appended, will not be considered. The Wyandotte, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 321, 35 C. C. A. 117.

Copies of proofs.—"While, therefore, we do not say that even since the Revised Statutes the Circuit Courts may not in their discretion, under the operation of the rules, permit the examination of witnesses orally in open court upon the hearing of cases in equity, we do say that now they are not by law required to do so; and that if such practice is adopted in any case the testimony presented in that form must be taken down, or its substance stated in writing and made part of the record, or it will be entirely disregarded here on appeal. So, too, if testimony is objected to and ruled out, it must still be sent here with the record, subject to the objection, or the ruling will not be considered by us. A case will not be sent back to have the rejected testimony taken even though we might, on examination, be of the opinion that the objection to it ought not to have been sustained. Ample provision having been made by the rules for taking the testimony and saving exceptions, parties, if they prefer to adopt some other mode of presenting their case, must be careful to see that it conforms in other respects to the established practice of the court." Bleese v. Garlington, (1875) 92 U. S. 1, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 521. See Equity Rule 46 promulgated by the Supreme Court, Nov. 4, 1915.

A Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schultz, (1879) 100 U. S. 844, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 605, the court directed the appellant to bring up proofs claimed to have been omitted, according to a statement thereof to be filed by the appellees, and for failure to do so it imposed the penalty of dismissal of the appeal. Yet it carefully reserved the power to make special order as to costs if in this way unnecessary papers were brought up.

A discretionary decision cannot be reviewed unless the record contains the testimony and documents upon which such decision is based. Walker v. Giles, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 637, 134 C. C. A. 395.

Examination of witnesses.—It is always desirable upon appeals in admiralty to have the record so prepared that it will show which witnesses were examined in the presence of the district judge and which were not. The Gypsum Prince, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1895) 67 Fed. 612, 35 U. S. App. 165, 14 C. C. A. 573.

Collision rules.—Alleged faults based upon the violation of collision rules will be disregarded where they are not incorporated in the record and there are no statements in the briefs of counsel which can be taken as admitting the existence of any particular rule. The Clara, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 1021, 14 U. S. App. 348, 5 C. C. A. 380.

Removed case.—Where a removed case is brought to the Circuit Court of Appeals, either on a writ of error or by appeal, the petition for removal is an essential part of the record, without which the court will not proceed to a final adjudication. Larned v. Jenkins, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 109 Fed. 100, 48 C. C. A. 252.

Partial record.—Where the evidence as to a particular question of fact is conflicting, but the record shows that during the trial the jury and the trial judge, by consent of all the parties, made an ocular inspection, what such inspection conveyed to the minds of the court cannot be known from the record and in such case the appellate court cannot have the entire record before it. Rebillard v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1914) 216 Fed. 503, 133 C. C. A. 9, L. R. A. 1915B 953.

3. Composition

Making up the record.—"Considering the duty which solicitors and attorneys practicing in the federal tribunals owe to the courts and to each other, it is to be expected that ordinarily the clerk will receive joint directions with reference to facilitating and simplifying the transcript on appeal. Without such joint directions the clerk ought to send up the whole of the record in the strict sense of the word as made by R. S. sec. 750 [supra, p. 119], having, of course, reference to the limitation imposed by the fact of prior appeals if there have been any; and the nature of any portions omitted, even under a joint stipulation, should be indicated so that the appellate court, which has its own interests and rights in the condition of the transcript, may be advised concerning them." Nashua, etc., R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1884) 61 Fed. 237, 1 U. S. App. 50, 9 C. C. A. 465, citing Keene v. Whittaker, (1839) 13 Pok. 459, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 246; Curtis v. Petitpain, (1855) 18 How. 109, 15 U. S. (L ed.) 280.

But as to the proofs, entries, and papers on file necessary on the hearing of the appeal required by this section, the decisions refer the clerk in the absence of a joint stipulation to the selection made by the appellant. The good faith and discretion of his solicitor are necessary to the ordinary and sufficient guide in determining this selection, though, as the clerk is made by this statute the certifying officer, some duty rests on him by implication, and he might well refuse to certify a transcript with such palpable and substantial omissions as, in his opinion, to justify his assuming the responsibility of refusal. In that event the appellant deeming himself aggrieved has his remedy by applying to the appellate court for a mandamus, and perhaps by seeking summary instructions to the clerk of the court appealed from. If the party appealed against deems the certificate of the clerk irregular, or the transcript incomplete, his remedy is not by motion to dismiss unless in extreme cases; but he may have ample relief by other methods. Nashua, etc., R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1884) 61 Fed. 245, 21 U. S. App. 50, 9 C. C. A. 468.

The power of the court to direct what papers shall constitute that record which shall be transmitted to the appellate court by the transcript will not be questioned whenever such action becomes necessary because of the fact that the disputed paper has not been admitted to the files in the regular way. This power is an essential grant of the section, if not already inherent in the court without the statute. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Carey, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 117 Fed. 334.

The Circuit Court of Appeals, in a case where the facts are unquestioned, will not authorize the withdrawal from the file of the court of a record on a previous appeal and cause it to be refiled in a second appeal. The court is not authorized to make the record for the hearing of the cause upon appeal, but the record must come to the court as a whole and be complete in itself. Merriman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1903) 120 Fed. 240, 56 C. C. A. 536.

The transcript of the record is understood to be transmitted from the lower court, as such, under its seal, to the Supreme Court, so that the clerk in making and certifying the transcript acts as an officer of and under the general direction and control of the lower court in the first instance, subject, of course, to the further order of the Supreme Court on proceedings on suggestion of diminution of the record. Therefore a direction of the lower court in a doubtful case, where the clerk is requested to insert in the transcript by one party what he is requested to leave out by the other, would seem to be proper. Hoe v. Kahler, (S. D. N. Y. 1856) 27 Fed. 145.

The practice of bringing into the record, by bill of exceptions, pleadings, or papers which the court has refused to allow a party to file, is not known to the federal courts in equity cases; but inasmuch as a consideration of such documents may be necessary to enable the appellate court to determine whether or not they were properly rejected, it would seem that in the absence of any statute or rule regulating the practice in that regard, the trial court may properly, by an order, direct the clerk to certify the pleadings or other document rejected to the appellate court for that purpose. Southern Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Carey, (W. D. Tenn. 1902) 117 Fed. 326.

The court of bankruptcy from which an appeal is taken has no jurisdiction to designate what records shall be certified on which the appellate court shall determine the appeal. In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 220.

Where the parties to an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals in bankruptcy are unable to agree as to the contents of the appeal record, it is the duty of the appellant to file a precipice with the clerk, pointing out specifically what records, in his judgment, should be certified, leaving appellant, if in his opinion the records certified are insufficient, to suggest a diminution of the record and ask for certiorari. In re A. L. Robertshaw Mfg. Co., (E. D. Pa. 1905) 135 Fed. 220. See this case as cited and quoted in Bankruptcy, vol. 1, p. 816.

Form of record.—Where, on an appeal, there is no question raised as to the credibility of any witness or as to the weight of his testimony, the testimony should not be included in the record in the form of the stenographer’s minutes, that is in the form of the questions and answers, but should be set forth in narrative form. The testimony should be presented in such form as to assist the court by concentrat- ing its attention to the parts material to the assignments of error. Radford v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 49, 63 C. C. A. 491.
4. Conclusion

Where the record is sent up, accompanied with a statement of facts but without the evidence, such statement is conclusive as to all the facts which it contains; and if the evidence is annexed, nevertheless the statement is conclusive as to all the facts contained in it. Wis cart v. Dauchy, (1796) 3 Dall. 321, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 619. And where the record is sent up with the evidence but no statement of facts, such evidence cannot be considered as a statement of facts. It would, therefore, seem to follow that there can be no error. Jennings v. Perse verance, (1796) 3 Dall. 336, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 625.

5. Defective Record

The Circuit Courts of Appeals will not dismiss an appeal on motion on the ground that the record filed is insufficient: that being a matter to be determined at the hearing on the merits, or to be corrected by certiorari for a diminution of the record. Merriman v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1903) 190 Fed. 520, 56 C. C. A. 536.

Under this section, it devolves on an appellant to see to it that a record is brought up to such court showing such of the proceedings of the trial court as are necessary for the proper presentation of the errors assigned, and for want of such a record the court has power to dismiss the appeal. This power, however, ought not generally to be exercised unless the omission arose from negligence or indifference, and instead, where good faith is shown, the appellate will be directed to designate such additional papers, documents, and proof used on the hearing below as he deems necessary for a proper presentation of the case, and the appellant will be ordered to file the same as a part of the record under penalty of a dismissal of the appeal. Kansas v. Meri

A certificate that certain portions of the record are omitted, and memoranda of others inserted by direction of the appellant's counsel, is sufficient to bar a motion for dismissal and throw on the parties the necessity of seeking some other method of relief if either thinks the record essentially defective. Nashua, etc., R. Corp. v. Boston, etc., R. Corp., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 237, 21 U. S. App. 59, 9 C. C. A. 468.

6. Amendments

Amendments.—A Circuit Court of Appeals is without power to dismiss an appeal on motion of the appellant and re-} mund the case to the court below with directions to permit the amendment of a pleading on a showing that facts were inadverently omitted therefrom, which was not known to appellant until after the appeal was taken. Stand v. Griffith, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 135 Fed. 739, 68 C. C. A. 377.

In Woodward v. Brown, (1839) 13 Pet. 1, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 31, on receipt of a supplemental certificate from the clerk of the court below, the Supreme Court allowed an amendment of a clerical error on motion of one party. The same was per-

7. Return of Record

Should a request of the court below be made for a return of the record in order that it might proceed further with the cause, the Supreme Court might, in a proper case and under proper restrictions, make the necessary order; but such an order cannot be made on application of the parties. The court below alone can make the request. Roemer v. Simon, (1875) 91 U. S. 149, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 267.

8. Transmission of Papers

Where an inspection of original documents was material to the decisions of a prize cause, the Supreme Court ordered the original paper to be sent up from the court below. The Elsinour, (1818) 1 Wheat. 439, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 130; Craig "Construing this statute in the light of those from which it was taken and the practice that had prevailed in the courts which it was undoubtedly intended to confirm, we think the power of the courts below and of this court over the transmission of original papers to this court on appeal is and should be confined to such as require actual inspection as originals, in order to give them their full effect in the determination of the suit. We will not undertake to control the discretion of the courts below in sending up papers which in their judgment require inspection, but where papers come up that ought not to be sent up we will look closely to the language of the order below to see whether they are included in its provisions." Craig v. Smith, (1879) 100 U. S. 226, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 577.

III. NEW EVIDENCE

1. Order for Additional Proof

Cases of prize are usually heard, in the first instance, upon the papers found on board the vessel, and the examinations taken in preparatioi; and it is in the discretion of the court thereupon to make or not to make an order permitting the introduction of additional testimony. The claimant may move for the order and show the grounds of the application by affidavit, or otherwise, at any time before the final decree is rendered. Such an order may be made in the Supreme Court. It is always in the discretion of the court, and that discretion is controlled by the circumstances of each case. The order is made with great caution, because of the temptation it holds out to fraud and perjury and is made only when the interests of justice clearly require it. The Sally Magee, (1865) 3 Wall. 461, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 197.

In The Georgia, (1868) 7 Wall. 32, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 122, a case in prize was heard on additional proofs, although the record did not show that an order had been made on behalf of either party to take further proofs. As both parties had taken proofs, at large, bearing upon the capture, without objection, the inference was unavoidable that there must have been an order for the same, or if not, that the depositions were taken by mutual consent.

2. Mode of Taking New Proof

3. Allowance of New Proof

On a motion for a commission to take further evidence, some excuse, satisfactory to the appellate court, should be shown for the failure to examine the witnesses in the court below, such as that the evidence was discovered when it was too late to procure such examination, or that the witnesses had been subpoenaed and failed to appear and could not be reached by attachments and the like. The Mabe, (1870) 77 U. S. 419, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 963; The Juniata, (1875) 91 U. S. 368, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 208; The Lurline, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 57 Fed. 396, 14 U. S. App. 150, 5 C. C. A. 165.

But even though a perfectly satisfactory excuse is not given by the appellant for not taking testimony in question in the lower court the court may nevertheless admit new testimony when in its opinion substantial justice requires the admission of such testimony and where all the prejudice resulting to the appellee because it was not taken in the court below can be corrected in disposing of the costs of the case. Red River Line v. Cheatham, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 517, 23 U. S. App. 19, 9 C. C. A. 124.

Appellate courts in admiralty treat an appeal as a new trial, in which new pleadings and new proofs are permitted, in furtherance of justice. But it is not a matter of course to allow parties who have withheld evidence available to them in the District Court to present such evidence on appeal. It has, however, been the practice in the second circuit to take said testimony, without excusing its nonproduction below, where neither side objected. Singlehurst v. La Compagnie Générale Transatlantique, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 50 Fed. 104, 1 U. S. App. 126, 1 C. C. A. 487.

Parties should endeavor to procure all the testimony material to the issues presented by the pleadings in the first instance. The practice of bolstering up a lost cause by additional testimony ought not to be encouraged. Pacific Steam Whaling Co. v. Grismore, (1902) 117 Fed. 68, 54 C. C. A. 454.

IV. CERTIFICATE OF CLERK

In Blitz v. Brown, (1868) 7 Wall. 693, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 250, where there was no certificate by the clerk, the writ of error was dismissed, and leave to cause the certificate to be supplied was denied; but in the later case of Hodges v. Vaughan, (1873) 19 Wall. 12, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 46, leave was granted the plaintiff in error to withdraw the transcript and supply the certificate.

In U. S. v. Gomez, (1883) 1 Wall. 690, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 677, a certificate from the clerk of the court below that the record was complete except the transcript sent up from the late Board of Land Commis-
Sec. 1013. [Where both parties appeal to the supreme court, one record sufficient.] Where appeal is duly taken by both parties from the judgment or decree of a circuit or district court to the Supreme Court, a transcript of the record filed in the Supreme Court by either appellant may be used on both appeals, and both shall be heard thereon in the same manner as if records had been filed by the appellants in both cases. [R. S.]

"Circuit" Courts mentioned in this section were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

Applicable to appeals to the Circuit Court of Appeals, see notes under the text of R. S. sec. 698, supra, p. 174.

Appeals by both parties.— Subject to the same rules and regulations as in case of writs of error, both parties may appeal in an equity, admiralty, or prize suit, from the final decree of the subordinate court, but the appeal when entered in the appellate court is also subject to the same restrictions as are prescribed in case of writs of error. Where each party appeals each may assign error, but where only one party appeals the other is bound by the decree in the court below. and he cannot assign error in the appellate court, nor can he be heard if the proceedings in the appellate court are correct, except in support of the decree from which the appeal of the other party is taken. The Maria Martin, (1870) 12 Wall. 31, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 251; Bush v. The Alonso, (1868) 2 Cliff. 548, 550, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2223.

One record for separate appeals.— Where four separate appeals were taken from the same decree and the record contained a waiver in one instrument by all parties to the action below of the issuing of citations on "all the appeals," and where further the record was made up as if in one appeal, it was held that all the parties to the action below appeared as parties to all the appeals under consideration. And although the appeal bond ran only to one of the parties to the appeal as obligee, such defect in the bond could not prevent the attaching of jurisdiction of all parties appearing and waiving process, since the giving and acceptance of an appeal bond is not jurisdictional. U. S. Trust Co. v. Western Contract Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1897) 81 Fed. 454, 54 U. S. App. 67, 26 C. C. A. 472.

V. DISPOSITION OF CASE

"After an appeal in equity to this court we cannot upon motion set aside a decree of the court below and grant a rehearing. We can only affirm, reverse, or modify the decree appealed from, and that upon the hearing of the cause. No new evidence can be received here." Roemer v. Simon, (1875) 91 U. S. 150, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 267.
and under the seal thereof, and shall furnish three copies of such printed transcript to the adverse party at least twenty days before such argument: Provided, That either the court below or the circuit court of appeals may order any original document or other evidence to be sent up in addition to the printed copies of the record or in lieu of printed copies of a part thereof; and no written or typewritten transcript of the record shall be required.

This and the following section 2 constituted the Act of Feb. 13, 1911, ch. 47, entitled "An Act To diminish the expense of proceedings on appeal and writ of error or certiorari."

The proviso as to sending up "any original document or other evidence" is a re-enactment of part of R. S. sec. 698, supra, p. 174.

For a table of fees of clerks for preparing the record, etc., see the order of the Supreme Court entered February 28, 1888, given in JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. 4, pp. 732, 733; and see the notes thereto.

Purpose of Act.—The object of this Act was to diminish the expense of proceedings on appeal or writ of error or certiorari. Meyers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 372, 134 C. C. A. 180, wherein it was held that where the defendant in error refused to stipulate that the record was correct, under this section and District Court rule 26, the time for filing the record would be extended until the defendant in error did so stipulate.

Scope of statute.—Petition to revise.—Although this act mentions only reviews by writ of error or appeal, a petition to revise under section 246 of the Bankruptcy Act (Bankruptcy, vol. 1, p. 791) is the equivalent of an appeal for the purposes of this statute. In re Burr Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 898, 132 C. C. A. 238.

Clerk's fees.—Fee for indexing.—In Colt's Patent Firearms Mfg. Co. v. New York Sporting Goods Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 825, 108 C. C. A. 489, it was held that as this section makes no provision for indexing, they should be prepared by the clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals, and since his fee for preparing and indexing the record under, the fee bill in force is fixed at a stated sum per page of the whole, and is indivisible, until such fee bill is changed or further legislation enacted parties would be required to pay the full fee thereby prescribed, to be held by the clerk until its return was authorized. In Rainey v. Grace, (1914) 231 U. S. 703, 34 S. Ct. 242, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 445; In re Burr Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 215 Fed. 898, 132 C. C. A. 238.

Judgment awarding preliminary injunction.—Where the court below upon motion and affidavits, and before the taking of any proofs, awarded a preliminary injunction, and the defendant appealed under section 129 of the Judicial Code, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 629, the case is not within this section. Smith v. Farbenfabriken of Elberfeld Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 191 Fed. 804, 117 C. C. A. 133, wherein the court said: "We are unable to see how such an order can be brought within the definition of the statute by any permissible liberality of construction. Such an order is not final from any point of view or for any purpose." But the court referred with approval to a former (apparently unreported) ruling by the same... court, that the statute applied to an appeal "from the usual decree in a patent cause, determining the validity of the patent and ordering an accounting," because "it is a decree made upon what is commonly called a final hearing, on pleadings and proofs; if on such hearing the decree is for the defendant, it is final in every sense; and, even if for complainant, it is not uncommonly thought of and spoken of as a final decree."

SEC. 2. [Appeals, etc., to Supreme Court — use of printed record in court below as part of transcript — use of uncertified copies of record — clerk’s fee — no written transcript of printed record required.] That in any cause or proceeding wherein the final judgment or decree is sought to be reviewed on appeal to or by writ or error or of certiorari from the Supreme Court of the United States, in which the record has been printed and used upon the hearing in the court below and which substantially conforms to the printed record in said Supreme Court, if there have been at the time of filing the record in the court below twenty-five copies of said printed record, in addition to those provided in the preceding section, lodged with the clerk of the court below, one copy thereof shall be used by the clerk of the court below in the preparation and as a part of the transcript of the record of the court below; and no fee shall be allowed the clerk of the court below in the preparation of the transcript for such part thereof as is included in said printed record so lodged with him. And the clerk of the court below in transmitting the transcript of record to the Supreme Court of the United States for review shall at the same time transmit the remaining uncertified copies of the printed record so lodged with him, which shall be used in the preparation and as a part of the printed record in the Supreme Court of the United States, and the clerk’s fee for preparing the record for the printer, indexing the same, supervising the printing and binding and distributing the copies shall be at such rate per folio thereof, exclusive of the printed record so furnished by the clerk of the court below, as the Supreme Court of the United States may from time to time by rule prescribe; and no written or typewritten transcript of so much of the record as shall have been printed as herein provided shall be required. [36 Stat. L. 301.]

See note to the preceding section 1 of this Act.
For a table of fees of the clerk of the Supreme Court for preparing the record, etc., see Supreme Court Rule 24.

Final decree.—The provision as to a clerk’s fee for supervision of the printing of the bond applies to a decree which while technically an interlocutory one is in character and scope a final one. Lovell-McConnell Mfg. Co. v. Automobile Supply Mfg. Co., (1914) 235 U. S. 383, 35 S. Ct. 132, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 282 (approving Smith v. Farbenfabriken, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 894, 117 C. C. A. 133), wherein the court said: "The Automobile Supply Company appealed to the court below from an interlocutory decree in favor of the complainant, the Lovell-McConnell Company, finding that the patents sued on had been infringed, and awarding an injunction, and directing an accounting for damages and profits. On such appeal the Automobile Supply Company furnished the clerk of the court below a complete printed record accompanied with a written index of the contents of the same, and, in consequence of a demand made by the clerk deposited under protest the sum of $696 as a fee due the clerk for supervising the printed record so furnished. When, after a hearing, the court reversed the decree of the trial court, the Automobile Supply Company called upon the clerk either to refund the money charged for supervision, or to include it in his statement of the costs to be entered on the mandate. The clerk, being doubtful as to his duty in the matter, refused to do either, and insisted that the propriety of the charge be tested to the end that he might act advisedly in the premises. The Automobile Supply Company thereupon moved to direct the clerk to include the supervision fee in the mandate, or to refund the amount of the deposit which had been made. The court held that the charge for supervision was lawful, and therefore properly taxable as costs, and directed the clerk to retain the money and include a charge for the same in the mandate. The application before us was then made by the Lovell-McConnell Company, the party cast and ultimately bound for the costs, both the parties, however, entering into the agreement as to the record and the submission on the merits which we at the outset stated. Considering the Act of Congress of Feb. 13, 1911, 36 Stat. L. 901, c. 47, in Rainey v. Grace, 231 U. S. 703, [34 S. Ct. 2424], 88 U. S. (L. ed.) 446, it was held that the provisions of the act were applicable to the circuit courts of appeals, and it was consequently decided that where a printed transcript of the record was filed in compliance with the statute with the clerk of the Court of Appeals, no supervision fee could be charged by such clerk. Of course, if that ruling is here applicable, the court below clearly erred in allowing the charge for supervision, and the only possible question, therefore, is whether the statute, although generally applicable to records filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals, is not so applicable in this case. It is insisted that it is not—and the court below so held—because, as the statute only provides for an appeal from a 'final judgment or decree,' it does not apply to a case like the one under consideration, where the appeal was from a decree interlocutory in character. But without affixing to the statute a latitudinarian meaning upon the theory that to do so is essential to give effect to its purpose and intent, and to bring every interlocutory decree within its reach, we are of opinion that to exclude an interlocutory decree of the character of the one here involved from the operations of the statute would be to frustrate its plain purpose by a too rigid and unreasonable adherence to its letter. We so conclude because, while in a technical sense the decree here in question was interlocutory, when its character and the scope of the subject-matter which the appeal brought under review and the relief under it which it was competent to afford are considered, we are of opinion it must follow that such decree was, within the intentment of this statute, a final decree, and therefore that error was committed in permitting the supervision charge. Indeed, this view was taken in a well considered opinion by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in a case decided before the ruling in the Rainey Case, supra (Smith v. Farbenfabriken von Elberfeld Co., [C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912] 107 Fed. 894, 117 C. C. A. 133 [quoted at the end of the last paragraph in the notes to supra, at p. 891], and we approve the reasoning by which the ruling in that case was sustained. It results that the Circuit Court of Appeals erred in its order approving the charging and retaining the fee for supervision, and such order is therefore reversed." See also In re Burr Mfg. Co., [C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914] 215 Fed. 898, [132 C. C. A. 238].

Sec. 998. [Citation.] When the writ is issued by a circuit court to a district court, the citation shall be signed by the judge of such district court, or by the judge of such circuit court, or by a justice of the Supreme Court, and the adverse party shall have at least twenty days' notice. [R. S.]

The appellate jurisdiction of the Circuit Court was taken away by Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, § 4, supra, p. 143. See the last part of section 11 of the same Act, superseded by, and embodied in, Judicial Code, § 132, supra, this title, vol. 6, p. 945, as to power of judges of the Circuit Courts of Appeals in the allowance of writs of error. Circuit Courts were abolished and the powers and duties of Circuit Courts imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

By whom signed.—A citation from a lower federal court must be signed by a judge thereof or by a justice of the Supreme Court, and a citation from a circuit court, that it is signed by the clerk. U. S. v. Hodges, (1845) 3 How. 534, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 714;

A district judge sitting as a judge of the Circuit Court had authority to allow an appeal and sign the citation even if the decree was rendered by the circuit judge. Rodd v. Hearty, (1872) 17 Wall. 354, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 627;

Amendment of return.—A return to a citation may be amended to show that the person served with it was a proper person for such service. McClellan v. Fayatte, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 259, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241.

Irregular citation.—Where the transcript has been filed and the appellees have entered a regular appearance by counsel they cannot complain that the citation is irregular. Freeman v. Clay, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1891) 48 Fed. 849, 2 U. S. App. 151, 1 C. C. A. 115.

Sec. 999. [Citation, Supreme Court.] When the writ is issued by the Supreme Court to a circuit court, the citation shall be signed by a judge of such circuit court, or by a justice of the Supreme Court, and the adverse party shall have at least thirty days' notice; and when it is issued by the Supreme Court to a State court, the citation shall be signed by the Chief Justice, or judge, or chancellor of such court, rendering the judgment or passing the decree complained of, or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and the adverse party shall have at least thirty days' notice. [R. S.]

Circuit Courts were abolished and the powers and duties of Circuit Courts imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1092, 1083.
Section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, supra, p. 170, makes all provisions then in force regulating the methods and systems of review, through appeals or writs of error, applicable in respect of Circuit Courts of Appeals.

I. PURPOSE

"The citation is intended as notice to the appellee that an appeal has been taken and will be duly prosecuted. . . . The purpose is notice, in that the appellee may appear and be heard." Dodge v. Knowles, (1885) 114 U. S. 430, 5 S. Ct. 1108, 1197, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 144. See to the same effect Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 316, 34 U. S. App. 626, 19 C. C. A. 477.

II. NECESSITY AND SUFFICIENCY

Appeal allowed in open court.—If an appeal is allowed in open court during the term in which a decree is rendered a citation is required as matter of procedure if the security is not furnished until after the term. Still, an appeal otherwise regular will not be dismissed absolutely for want of a citation if it appears by clear and unmistakable evidence outside of the record that the allowance was made in open court at the proper term, and that the appellee had actual notice of what had been done. The citation, if security is taken out of court or after the term, is only necessary to show that the appeal which was allowed in term had not been abandoned by the failure to furnish the security before the adjournment. If by accident it has been omitted, a motion to dismiss an appeal allowed in open court and at the proper term will never be granted until an opportunity to give the requisite notice has been furnished, and this whether the notice was made after the expiration of two years from the rendition of the decree or before. Dodge v. Knowles, (1885) 114 U. S. 436, 5 S. Ct. 1197, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 296, citing Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Blair, (1879) 100 U. S. 681, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 587.

If the appeal is allowed in open court security may be taken by the court and no citation is necessary, but if the security is not given until after the term is over a citation must be issued and served. Sage v. Central R. Co., (1877) 96 U. S. 715, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 644; Haskins v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (1883) 100 U. S. 106, 3 S. Ct. 72, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 873.

But where no citation was ever issued on a writ of error to the District Court, and the defendants in error do not appear, the writ will be dismissed, as notice of writ of error given in open court at the same term when judgment is rendered is not equivalent to the citation required by this Citation is essential to the validity of the writ, and without it the writ would be quashed. Lloyd v. Alexander, (1803) 1 Chanc. 365, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 137; Kitchen v. Randolph, (1876) 93 U. S. 86, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 810.

Sufficient notice of an appeal is given by filing the bond and the approval of it in open court. Goodwin v. Fox, (1897) 190 U. S. 775, 7 S. Ct. 779, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 815.

A citation is required when an appeal is taken and perfected in open court during the term at which the decree complained of is entered; alter, where at a subsequent term the appeal is allowed, although the solicitors of the appellee be present. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Blair, (1879) 100 U. S. 661, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 587.

The mere presence of counsel in court at the time of an allowance of an appeal, at another term than that of the decision appealed from, and notice of the motion or prayer for allowance, will not discharge with the necessity for a citation. Castro v. U. S., (1885) 3 Wall. 46, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 165; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Blair, (1879) 100 U. S. 661, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 587.

An appeal not taken in open court, but claimed in the clerk's office, is a nullity, without a citation returnable at the next term of the court. Villalobos v. U. S., (1848) 6 How. 81, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 352.

An order to an appellee to appear and argue the cause if he saw it was of itself the legal equivalent of a citation for all the purposes of an appeal. Dodge v. Knowles, (1885) 114 U. S. 430, 5 S. Ct. 1108, 1197, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 144.

Reversal of decree.—A decree will be reversed where it appears that the appellee was not cited and did not appear, and that the court heard the argument, made a decree, and sent a mandate under the mistaken belief that the citation had been regularly issued and served upon him. Ex p. Crenshaw, (1841) 15 Pet. 119, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 692.

III. BY WHOM SIGNED

Error to federal court.—Upon writs of error from the Supreme Court to the District Courts of the United States, as well as to the courts of the several states, any justice of the Supreme Court, not necessarily the justice assigned to the circuit in which the other court is held, may, in or out of court, allow the writ of error, sign the citation, take the requisite security for the prosecution of the writ and grant the supersedeas when the writ itself does not operate as a stay of proceedings. Hugdins v. Kemp, (1855) 18 How. 530, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 611; Sage v. Central R. Co., (1877) 96 U. S. 712, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 641; Peugh v. Davis, (1884) 110 U. S. 227, 4 S. Ct. 17, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 127; Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 15 S. Ct. 450, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 424.

In the case of Insurance Co. of Valley of Virginia v. Mordecai, (1858) 21 How. 105, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 94, Chief Justice Taney declared that the Act of Congress required the citation “to be issued by the judge or justice who allows the writ of error, and it cannot be legally issued by any other judge or court”; but the later cases indicate a more liberal construction of the statute which provides that the citation “shall be signed by a judge of such Circuit [now District] Court or a justice of the Supreme Court;” and while it is required by the next section that every judge or justice signing a citation on any writ of error shall take good and sufficient security for the prosecution of the writ or appeal, it does not follow that when, in a given instance, a bond has been approved by one of the judges of the Circuit, now District, Court, another judge of that court who might have granted the appeal and approved the bond may not sign the citation. His signing thereof without requiring security is equivalent to an express approval by him of the bond already approved by the other judge. See Farmers' Loan, etc., Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 314, 34 U. S. App. 626, 19 C. C. A. 477.

Error to state court.—The statute requires that the citation must be signed by the chief justice, or judge, or chancellor of the state court rendering or passing the judgment or decree complained of, or by a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. It has been the settled doctrine of this court that a writ of error to a state court must be allowed by one of the judges above mentioned, or it will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Bartemeyer v. Iowa, (1871) 14 Wall. 26, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 792.

The judgment of a state court in error will not be reviewed by the Supreme Court unless it appears upon the record that the writ has been allowed by a justice of the Supreme Court or of the state court. Gleason v. Florida, (1869) 9 Wall. 779, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 730; Northwestern Union Packet Co. v. Home Ins. Co., (1872) 154 U. S. 558, 12 S. Ct. 1168, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 463.

A writ of error allowed by an associate justice of the Court of Appeals of a state and a citation signed by him, the record containing nothing to warrant an inference that the associate judge was at the time acting as chief judge pro tem. of the court, will be dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Havnoro v. New York, (1868) 170 U. S. 408, 18 S. Ct. 631, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1087. And see Butler v. Gage, (1891) 138 U. S. 52, 11 S. Ct. 235, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 899.

A citation to a state court may not be signed by a district judge. Palmer v. Donner, (1869) 7 Wall. 541, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 99.

When the appeal is from the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to the Supreme Court of the United States a justice of the District Court may sign the citation. Richards v. Mackall, (1885) 113 U. S. 539, 5 S. Ct. 535, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1132.

A writ of error from the federal Supreme Court to the Supreme Court of the state of Nebraska sufficiently conformed to the requirements of this section where it was signed "John B. Barnes, presiding judge of the Supreme Court of Nebraska, in absence of Sedgwick, C. J., from this state," and the truth of this recital was not challenged. Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Wiese, (1903) 208 U. S. 234, 28 S. Ct. 294, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 466; Missouri Valley Land Co. v. Wrch, (1908) 208 U. S. 250, 28 S. Ct. 299, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 473.

One's remedy to review a state court judgment in the United States Supreme Court is not exhausted by a refusal of his application to a justice of the state court for a writ of error from the United States Supreme Court; but, on such refusal, an application must be made to a justice of the latter court before the remedy is exhausted. Ex p. Chadwick, (N. D. Cal. 1908) 159 Fed. 576.

IV. DESIGNATION OF PARTIES AND ADDRESS

The parties must be properly designated and described in citations and in the writs of error also or the writ will be dismissed. Peale v. Phipps, (1850) 8 How. 256, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 1070; Kail v. Wetmore, (1867) 6 Wall. 451, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 862.

The citation should be addressed to the actual parties to the suit at the time the appeal was allowed and prosecuted. Dav-enport v. Fletcher, (1853) 16 How. 142, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 879; Bigler v. Waller, (1870) 12 Wall. 142, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 260.

In Louisiana, errors in a citation by calling the defendant the wife of one not her husband and omitting to state that the plaintiff was a trustee are not material. Peale v. Phipps, (1850) 8 How. 256, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 1070.

V. SERVICE

In general.—The meaning of the statute is not that the citation shall be served thirty days before the return day, but that the defendant in error shall have at least thirty days' notice before he can be compelled to go to a hearing. National Bank v. Bank of Commerce, (1878) 99 U. S. 606, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 362, distinguishing vlah v. Mandeville, (1809) 5 Cranch 321, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 113.

The service of a citation by mail is not sufficient. Tripp v. Santa Rosa St. R. Co., (1892) 144 U. S. 126, 12 S. Ct. 655, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 372.

On the road made.—Service may be had upon his attorney or counsel with like effect as upon the party himself, but when counsel of record is dead notice cannot be served on his personal representative, nor even on his partner if not regularly appearing on the records as counsel in the cause. Bacon v. Hart, (1861) 1 Black 38, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 52.

No attorney or solicitor can withdraw his name after he has once entered it upon the record without the leave of the court; and while his name continues there the opposite party has a right to treat him as the authorized attorney or solicitor and service on him is valid. U. S. v. Curry, (1848) 6 How. 106, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 363.

In Fairfax v. Fairfax, (1809) 5 Cranch 18, 3 U. S. (L. ed.) 54, where the defendant below intermarried after the judgment and before the service of the writ of error, the service of citation upon the husband was held sufficient.

Non-service or irregular service.—An appeal although allowed out of term is not avoided by the non-service of a citation, but the court will impose such terms upon the appellants as, under the circumstances, may be legal and proper. Dayton v. Laub, (1876) 94 U. S. 112, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 33.

It is not sufficient ground to dismiss a writ of error that the citation was served and made returnable less than thirty days after the writ was granted. Seagrist v. Crabtree, (1888) 127 U. S. 778, 8 S. Ct. 1394, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 323; Andrews v. Thum, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 64 Fed. 149, 21 U. S. App. 459, 12 C. C. A. 77.

Where the defendant in error was served in another state by the marshal of that state with a citation of a writ of error, it is an irregularity in the service of the citation which could only have been taken advantage of by a motion to dismiss made promptly on the appearance limited to that special purpose. U. S. v. Yates, (1848) 6 How. 605, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 575; Buckingham v. McLean, (1851) 13 How. 150, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 90; Renaud v. Abbott, (1880) 116 U. S. 277, 6 S. Ct. 1194, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 629.

VI. RETURN

The appeal and citation when issued more than thirty days before the first day of the next term of the Supreme Court must be returnable on the first day of said term. The judge of the Circuit Court who is required to sign such citation has no discretion to fix any earlier return day. Ex p. Jugiro, (S. D. N. Y. 1891) 44 Fed. 754.

VII. PROOF OF ISSUANCE

Though no citation appears in the record it may be proved aloud that one was issued. Innerarity v. Byrne, (1847) 5 How. 295, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 159.

VIII. WAIVER

Notice is required by law, and where none is given, the failure to comply with the requirement is fatal, if not waived. The appeal or writ of error must be dismissed, but the defect may be waived in various ways, as by consent or appearance, or the fraud of the other party. Bacon v. Hart, (1861) 1 Black (U. S.) 38, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 52; Bigler v. Waller, (1870) 12 Wall. 142, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 280.

The citation is required for the benefit of the defendant in error, and he may waive it, and therefore any irregularity therein may be cured by an appearance in court. Buckingham v. McLean, (1851) 13 How. 150, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 90; Carroll v. Dorsey, (1857) 20 How. 204, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 603.

VI. RETURN

It is the practice of the Supreme Court for the clerk to enter at the first term to which any writ of error or appeal is returnable the appearance of the Attorney-General in every case to which the United States is a party by entering his name on the docket, and if the Attorney-General does not withdraw such appearance at the first term, it is conclusive upon him as to an appearance. Farrar v. U. S., (1830) 3 Pet. 459, 7 U. S. (L. ed.) 741.

An appellant cannot ask to have an appeal dismissed for want of a citation when the appellee is in court represented by counsel, and makes no objection to the want of one. Pierce v. Cox, (1869) 9 Wall. 786, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 786.

Sec. 1000. [Bond in error and on appeal.] Every justice or judge signing a citation on any writ of error, shall, except in cases brought up by the United States or by direction of any Department of the Government, take good and sufficient security that the plaintiff in error or the appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, and, if he fail to make his plea good, shall answer all damages and costs, where the writ is a supersedeas and stays execution, or all costs only where it is not a supersedeas as aforesaid. I. PURPOSE

The purpose of the statute was, in the event of an appeal or writ of error, that the appellee or defendant in error should, by reason of the stay of proceedings demanded by his opponent, be fully indemnified for all damages and costs sustained thereby if the appeal or writ of error should prove ineffectual; in other words, that he should sustain no loss in consequence of any ineffectual effort to reverse the decree or judgment by reason of his hand being stayed pending such effort. It was not, however, designed to give one a better security than he had by the decree or judgment. It was indemnity, not guaranty of payment that was sought for; indemnity for the delay, not additional security for the debt. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Pope, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 1, 20 C. C. A. 253.

II. NECESSITY OF SECURITY

1. In General

2. Appeal from Admiralty Court

An appeal from a decree of the District Court in Admiralty is not regular unless the appellant gives sufficient security to answer the costs in case of affirmation. Such security is necessary to the regularity of the appeal even though execution has been issued on the decree in the District Court in the absence of the security required to operate as a supersedeas. Hayford v. Griffith, (1853) 5 Blatchf. 34, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,293.

3. Suits by Poor Persons

4. Criminal Cases

Criminal as well as civil cases are affected by this section, where the judgment against the defendant awards costs, provided, however, that it is not applicable to a writ of error on a conviction of a crime punishable by death. American Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1917) 239 Fed. 680, 152 C. C. A. 514.

III. OMISSION TO TAKE SECURITY

Where the judge signing the citation omitted to take the bond, the case was ordered to stand dismissed unless within thirty days from the rising of the court such a bond should be given approved by any judge authorized to allow a writ of error and sign a citation on the judgment. Catlett v. Brodie, (1824) 9 Wheat. 555, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 159.

The failure to take such security is an irregularity, but it does not necessarily avoid the citation. The security is required, however, in the due prosecution of the appeal, and if the case is docketed here in time it will not ordinarily be dismissed because of the neglect or omission of the justice or judge to require the security until the appellant has been afforded a reasonable opportunity of curing the defect. Brown v. McConnect, (1888) 124 U. S. 489, 8 S. Ct. 559, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 496.

While the omission of the bond does not necessarily avoid an appeal, and the court in proper cases may permit the bond to be supplied, it will not do so where no application for such relief has been made after a lapse of nearly four years since the decree. Beardsley v. Arkansas, etc., R. Co., (1895) 159 U. S. 123, 15 S. Ct. 756, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Where through a mistake or accident no bond has been filed, the Supreme Court will not dismiss the appeal, if it is in all other respects quite regular, except on failure to comply with an order to give the

IV. BOND FOR CLERK'S FEE

The appellants must give fee bond before the clerk is obliged to file the transcript of record. Owings v. Tierman, (1836) 10 Pet. 447, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 489.

Where the ground of a dismissal of an appeal is that the appellants neglected to secure the clerk's fees, the dismissal will not be set aside. Selma, etc., R. Co. v. Louisiana Nat. Bank, (1876) 94 U. S. 253, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 32.

V. TO WHOM GIVEN

A bond on appeal must be given to a party to the judgment. Davenport v. Fletcher, (1853) 16 How. 142, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 879.

Where the suit is by the people, on relation, an appeal bond to the people or to the relator is sufficient, as it may be sued on by either. Spalding v. People, (1844) 2 How. 66, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 161.

VI. CONTENTS AND SUFFICIENCY OF BOND

1. Parties

A bond must state the proper number of plaintiffs in error or the writ will be dismissed. Kail v. Wetmore, (1867) 6 Wall. 451, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 582.

2. Name of Court

3. Nature of Action

4. Amount for Which Sureties Bound

An appeal bond in which the sureties are not each bound for the full amount, but each for a separate part thereof, may be accepted by the judge in his discretion. New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Albrow Co., (1884) 112 U. S. 506, 5 S. Ct. 289, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 809.

5. Conditions

Where an appeal has been taken to the Supreme Court the condition of the bond that the appellants "shall duly prosecute their said appeal with effect, and moreover pay the amount of costs and damages rendered and to be rendered in case the decree shall be affirmed in said court," meets all the requirements of this section. Gay v. Parpert, (1879) 101 U. S. 391, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 841.

A condition that the appellant "shall prosecute its writ of error to effect, and answer all damages and costs if it shall fail to make the plea good," is sufficient. Chatauegay Ore, etc., Co. v. Blake, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 804.

A condition to answer all costs and damages "in the event the decree is affirmed" is not sufficient. Peace River Phosphate Co. v. Edwards, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1895) 70 Fed. 728, 30 U. S. App. 513, 17 C. C. A. 358.

An appeal bond must provide that the appeal be prosecuted with effect, must name the obligees, and must not be for less than the proper amount, or the appeal will be dismissed. Swan v. Hill, (1894) 155 U. S. 394, 15 S. Ct. 178, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 197.

Where the funds are deposited in court, and the party appealing by his appeal renders them accessible, the bond may be made to provide for the payment of interest while the appeal is pending. Turner v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., (1879) 8 Biss. 527, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,260.

VII. EXECUTION AND APPROVAL

When executed.—A bond is not defective because it is executed before the judgment sought to be reviewed was in fact entered, the bond not having been delivered until after entry of judgment. Chatauegay Ore, etc., Co. v. Blake, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 804.

"The supersedeas bond, to be effectual and operate as such, must be approved by the judge who allows the appeal and signs the citation. The statute so reads, and the Supreme Court has so held. If not approved by him or a defective bond is filed, a judge of the appellate court probably may approve or take such action as will cure the defect." Gay v. Hudson River Electric Power Co., (N. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 812.

When this section speaks of signing a citation upon a writ of error and requires the judge signing it to take security that the appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, it means that the judge who allows an appeal or writ of error shall take such security. Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Wagner, (N. D. N. Y. 1888) 37 Fed. 69.

But it has been held that the required bond may be approved by any judge or justice who is authorized to sign the citation and to allow the writ of error or appeal. It is not essential to its validity that it be approved by the justice or judge who allows the writ of error or appeal or signs the citation. Brown v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 148, 55 C. C. A. 654.

It is sufficient if the bond is approved by a judge out of court even though there be an entry on the minutes and on the order book of the court requiring the bond to be approved by the court. Hudgins v. Kemp, (1855) 16 How. 550, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 611.

It is not ground for dismissal of an appeal that the bond was approved by the clerk instead of the judge, but under direction of the court, and the irregularity should be cured by filing a proper bond. Chicago Dollar Directory Co. v. Chicago Directory Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1895) 65 Fed. 465, 24 U. S. App. 525, 13 C. C. A. 8.

VIII. ACTIONS ON BONDS

Against whom.—All the parties to an appeal bond or each separately must be included in an action brought thereon, or a plea in abatement may be made by the defendant. Dowlin v. Standifer, (1838) Hempst. 290, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,041a.

When maintained.—After the affirmation of judgment by the Supreme Court and the filing of their decision in the lower court a suit may be maintained on the appeal bond without an order from the lower court that judgment be executed. Davis v. Patrick, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 57 Fed. 909, 12 U. S. App. 629, 6 C. C. A. 632.

A party who, on an appeal from a decree for the recovery of the possession of real property unless the balance of the purchase price should be paid before Jan. 1, 1899, secures an extension of the time for such payment until Nov. 1, 1899, has so prosecuted his appeal to effect, within the meaning of a supersedeas bond to secure the security party from loss in the use and possession of the premises, as to preclude any recovery on such bond for the use and occupation of the property between those dates. Crane v. Buckley, (1908) 203 U. S. 441, 27 S. Ct. 55, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 290.

Pleading by Surety.—In an action upon an appeal bond the breach assigned must be a single breach and deny each alternative of the conditions of a bond. Tucker v. Lee, (1829) 3 Cranch (C. C.) 684, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,221.

Avornment of damages.—Damages must be especially alleged in an action on an appeal bond which is conditioned under the above section. Tucker v. Lee, (1829) 3 Cranch (C. C.) 684, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,221.

And the bond is approved by a judge out of court even though there be an entry on the minutes and on the order book of the court requiring the bond to be approved by the court. Hudgins v. Kemp, (1855) 16 How. 550, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 611.

It is not ground for dismissal of an appeal that the bond was approved by the clerk instead of the judge, but under direction of the court, and the irregularity should be cured by filing a proper bond. Chicago Dollar Directory Co. v. Chicago Directory Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1895) 65 Fed. 465, 24 U. S. App. 525, 13 C. C. A. 8.

IX. LIABILITY OF SURETIES

When liable.—Before the surety can be forced to pay it must be legally shown that the principal is unable to pay. Hodge v. Plot, (1822) Hempst. 14, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 4,055a.

But it is not necessary in order to charge the sureties in an appeal bond that an execution on the judgment recovered in the appellate court should be issued against the principal. Babbitt v. Finn, (1879) 101 U. S. 7, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 820.

The sureties are not discharged in case the judgment of a Superior Court is removed into a higher court for re-examination and a new bond is given to prosecute the second appeal, if the judgment is affirmed in the court of last resort. Nothing will discharge the surety given to prosecute the appeal from the court of original jurisdiction, but the reversal of the judgment in some court having jurisdiction to correct the alleged error. Babbit v. Finn, (1879) 101 U. S. 7, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 820.

But a surety is discharged if the plaintiff in error gets the judgment reversed in the Circuit Court of Appeals and the defendant in error, although he might have done so, fails to carry the case to the Supreme Court. Anderson v. Messenger, (N. D. Ohio 1913) 208 Fed. 75.

A surety on an appeal bond is not discharged by the surrender of his principal or by his arrest on a ca. as. Dowlin v. Standifer, (1838) Hempst. 290, 7 Fed. Cas. No. 4,041a.

Where the appellant dies pending the appeal and two terms elapse before further proceeding, the sureties are not liable for he appellant's failure to prosecute his writ of appeal to effect. Jeffers v. Forrest, (1840) 5 Cranch (C. C.) 674, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,429.

Where a case is remanded by the Supreme Court with directions "that such execution and proceedings be had in said cause as according to right and justice and the laws of the United States ought to be had," such a mandate does not prevent the refusal of an execution by the Circuit (now District) Court against the sureties on an appeal bond given in the District Court. 26 p. Sawyer, (1874) 21 Wall. 255, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 617.

Amount of liability generally.—A bond conditioned to prosecute the appeal to effect does not make the sureties absolutely liable for the amount of the original judgment. Metropolitan Bank v. Swann, (1831) 4 Cranch (C. C.) 139, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 902.

The surety is liable to the full amount of the bond in satisfaction of the damages incurred by reason of the appeal without any deduction for property which has been taken on execution against the principal in partial satisfaction. Ives v. Merchants' Bank, (1851) 12 How. 159, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 936.

On failure to make an appeal good, the sureties in the appeal bond become liable to the extent of the penalty of the bond, and have no right to have a pro rata application of proceeds made under the original decree, towards the extinguishment of their liability. Sessions v. Pintard, (1854) Hemst. 676, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,674.

Interest.—The penalty of the bond fixes the extent of the sureties' liability, and in an action against them interest may be recovered from the time of the commencement of the action. Ives v. Merchants' Bank, (1851) 12 How. 159, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 936.

X. DAMAGES AND COSTS

In general.—The security which a judge signing a citation on a writ of error, which is to be a superseded, shall take is to be for the costs and such damages as the Supreme Court may award for the delay. Renner v. Columbia Bank, (1822) 2 Cranch (C. C.) 310, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,690.

Where an appeal bond is conditioned to answer all damages, the damages are those arising from the non-satisfaction of the affirmed judgment. Tucker v. Lee, (1829) 3 Cranch (C. C.) 684, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,221.

A bond conditioned under this section covers not merely the damages ensuing from the appeal, but also the amount of the judgment. Rosewicke v. Tarr, (C. C. Mass. 1892) 51 Fed. 368, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 53 Fed. 112, 5 U. S. App. 197, 3 C. C. A. 466.

There is no doubt that a superseded bond, conditioned according to the statute, for prosecuting the appeal, with effect and answering all damages and costs, covers not merely compensation for the delay arising from the appeal, but also the amount of the decree appealed from, so far as the latter directs the payment of money by the appellant to the appellee. American Surety Co. v. North Packing, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 810, 102 C. C. A. 268.

The measure of damages for the breach of the condition of a bond to "answer all damages and costs," which works a supersedeas, in a writ of error to reverse a personal judgment for money, or in an appeal from a decree which directs the payment of money from the appellant to the appellee, is the amount due to the appellee by the terms of the judgment or decree, just damages for delay, and costs. Wood v. Brown, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 203, 43 C. C. A. 474.

The measure of damages for such a breach, in an appeal from an order directing the issue of an execution under a decree in chancery for the payment of money, is the same as for the breach of the condition of such a bond in an appeal from the decree. It is the amount due to the appellee under the decree, just damages for delay, and costs. Wood v. Brown, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 203, 43 C. C. A. 474.

Use and possession of property.—The 'obligee in a bond which supersedes an order confirming a sale of real estate, and directs the immediate execution of a deed and delivery of possession thereof to the purchaser, is entitled, after that order has been affirmed on appeal, to recover as damages for the breach of the obligation of the bond the value of the use and possession. Brown v. Northwestern Mut. Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 148, 55 C. C. A. 654.

Usurpation of public office.—The measure of damages on an appeal bond for the usurpation of a public office is the amount of salary during the time the rightful incumbent was kept out of office. U. S. v. Addison, (1867) 6 Wall. 291, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 919.

Bond in injunction cases.—A superseded bond, given under this section and Supreme Court rule 29, does not suspend the operation of a prohibitory injunction granted by the decree appealed from, but, unless otherwise ordered by the trial judge in allowing the appeal, as authorized by equity rule 93, such injunction remains in full force pending the appeal, and its violation is punishable as a contempt. Hence damages sustained by the appellee by a violation of the injunction pending appeal are not the result of a superseded bond, and cannot be recovered in an action thereon. Green Bay, etc., Canal Co. v. Norrie, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 118 Fed. 923.

Foreclosure suit.—The appeal bond of a foreclosure suit in the ordinary form does not operate as security for the original decree, nor for the interest which accrued.
pending the appeal, nor, by consequence, for the balance of these amounts or either of them, after applying the proceeds of the mortgaged property, nor for the costs unpaid in the original suit which are a part of the decree, nor for the use and detention of the property pending the appeal, but only the depreciation of the property in market value pending the appeal, or its deterioration by waste, or want of repair, or the accumulation of taxes or burdens, and the nonpayment of the costs of the appeal. Kourtz v. Omaha Hotel Co., (1882) 107 U. S. 378, 2 S. Ct. 911, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 609.

On an appeal from a decree for the foreclosure of a mortgage the appeal bond is not intended as security for either the amount of the decree or the interest accruing pending the appeal, but for such damage as may rise from the delay incident to the appeal. Jerome v. McCarter, (1874) 21 Wall. 17, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 615; Kourtz v. Omaha Hotel Co., (1882) 107 U. S. 378, 2 S. Ct. 911, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 609.

On an appeal from a decree of foreclosure no new obligations are assumed in respect to the debt, and the damages which the appellant and his surety bind themselves to answer by a supersedeas are such only as follow from the delay in the sale of the property. Wayne County v. Kennicott, (1880) 103 U. S. 554, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 486.

In ejectment.—Where the judgment of the Circuit Court in an action of ejectment was against the defendant, in which nominal damages only were awarded, and defendant sued out a writ of error in order to bring the case before the Supreme Court, that court cannot grant a motion to enlarge the security in the appeal bond, for the purpose of covering apprehended damages which the plaintiff below thinks he may sustain by being kept out of his land. Roberts v. Cooper, (1856) 19 How. 373, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 697.

Costs.—The surety on a bond given on appeal from a Circuit Court to the Circuit Court of Appeals, conditioned in effect as required by this section and R. S. sec. 1012 (supra, p. 170) and rule 13 of the Circuit Court of Appeals, that the appellant should prosecute his appeal to effect and to answer all costs if he should fail to make his plea good, is liable not only for the costs in the appellate court, but also for those in the court below. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Expanded Metal Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 183 Fed. 588, 106 C. C. A. 114.

Rule 13 of the Fifth Circuit does not so affect this section as to prevent a bond standing as security for a superseded decree for the payment of money, at least in so far as that decree is not otherwise secured. Pease v. Rathburn-Jones Engineering Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 273, 142 C. C. A. 566.

XI. JUDGMENT

Where, on writ of error, the judgment is affirmed, the practice is to enter judgment on the bond provided for in this section on motion in the trial court, after the mandate goes down from the appellate court, and not in the appellate court. Clarkdale v. Williamson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1912) 104 Fed. 412, 114 C. C. A. 374.

Where the statutes of a state authorize a summary judgment against the sureties on an appeal or supersedeas bond, the District Courts of the United States in that state may render such judgment. Egan v. Chicago G. W. R. Co., (N. D. Ia. 1908) 163 Fed. 344.

Summary judgment may be rendered by the District Court where the amount on appeal is not sufficient to permit the case to go to the Supreme Court. The Blanche Page, (1879) 17 Blatchf. 221, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,525.

XII. BOND ON SECOND APPEAL

Sec. 1001. [No bond required of United States, etc.] Whenever a writ of error, appeal, or other process in law, admiralty, or equity, issues from or is brought up to the Supreme Court, or a circuit court, either by the United States or by direction of any Department of the Government, no bond, obligation, or security shall be required from the United States, or from any party acting under the direction aforesaid, either to prosecute said suit, or to answer in damages or costs. In case of an adverse decision, such costs as by law are taxable against the United States, or against the party acting by direction as aforesaid, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Department under whose directions the proceedings were instituted. [R. S.]

Circuit Courts were abolished and the powers and duties of Circuit Courts imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1082, 1083.

Section 11 of the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, supra, p. 170, makes applicable to the Circuit Courts of Appeals all provisions then in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, "including all provisions for bonds or other securities."

Reason for provision.—The interpretation of R. S. sec. 1000 (supra, p. 157) that when it speaks of signing a citation upon a writ of error, and requires the judge signing it to take security that the "apellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect," it means that the judge who allows an appeal or a writ of error shall take such security, denotes why it was deemed necessary to relieve the United States by this section from giving such security. Providence Washington Ins. Co. v. Wagner, (N. D. N. Y. 1888) 37 Fed. 59. Since a sovereign can be sued only by his own consent, he may prescribe the conditions on which he will be sued. Treat v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 760, 108 C. C. A. 98.

Effect of state statutes.—The adoption of state practice in the federal court under R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21, does not have the effect to abrogate this section so as to require the United States to give a bond for costs and damages in a suit in which one is required under state practice. U. S. v. Bryant, (1884) 111 U. S. 499, 4 S. Ct. 601, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 496.

Suits by and against receivers of national banks.—This section is applicable to an action brought by a receiver of a national bank. Pepper v. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. Conn. 1903) 125 Fed. 822.

But on motion therefor, defendants, sued by a nonresident receiver of a national bank, are entitled to require the plaintiff to give security for costs, where such security would be required by the laws of the state, under the conformity statute (R. S. sec. 914, supra, p. 21), unless the plaintiff by a certificate filed brings himself within the provisions of this section. Schofield v. Palmer, (N. D. Va. 1904) 134 Fed. 763.

No bond for the prosecution of a suit or to answer in damages or costs is required on writs of error or appeals issuing from or brought to the Supreme Court or the Circuit Court of Appeals by direction of the comptroller of the currency in suits by or against insolvent national banks, or the receivers thereof. Pacific Bank v. Mixter, (1885) 114 U. S. 693, 5 S. Ct. 944, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 221; Robinson v. Southern Nat. Bank, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 22, overruling Platt v. Adrianse, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 90 Fed. 772.

Receivers of federal courts appealing in good faith from the judgments of the state courts should not be required to give supersedeas bonds. Central Trust Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., (E. D. Ark. 1890) 41 Fed. 551.

Real party in interest.—A private party who is authorized to use the name of the United States in an action brought for the protection of private interests, should not be entitled to the benefits of this section, as he is the real party in interest. U. S. v. Choctaw, etc., R. Co., (1895) 3 Okl. 404, 41 Pac. 729.

Record on appeal.—If the appeal is intended to be taken by the United States, or at the direction of any department of the government as provided for in this section, it should be shown by the record. Stretton v. Shaheen, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 735, 100 C. C. A. 389.

Costs.—The only costs which this section seems to contemplate are the costs of the appellate court. Treat v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 760, 108 C. C. A. 98.

Where, in a proceeding to review a decision by the board of general appraisers assessing duties, the United States is the appellant and the decision is against the United States, the costs taxable by law against the latter are to be paid out of the proper fund according to the provisions of this section. U. S. v. Davis, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 147, 12 U. S. App. 47, 4 C. C. A. 251.

Territorial courts.—The provisions of this section do not apply to a case which is brought up from the District Court of a territory to the Supreme Court of the territory. U. S. v. Choctaw, etc., R. Co., (1895) 3 Okl. 404, 41 Pac. 729.
R. S. sec. 1002. This section read as follows:

"Sec. 1002. Writs of error shall be prosecuted from the final judgments of district courts acting as circuit courts to the Supreme Court in the same manner as from the final judgments of circuit courts."

This section was annulled by force of the Act of Feb. 6, 1889, ch. 113, § 5, which, as Sanborn, J., said, in In re Clerkship of Circuit Ct., (1899) 90 Fed. 352, repealed all the laws then in force which had conferred Circuit Court powers upon District Courts, "so that from the time of its approval, there was no district court in any state in the Union which could exercise the powers of a circuit court."

And Circuit Courts were abolished by Judicial Code, § 299, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

Sec. 1003. [Writs of error to state courts, manner of issue.] Writs of error from the Supreme Court to a State court in cases authorized by law, shall be issued in the same manner, and under the same regulations, and shall have the same effect as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a court of the United States. [R. S.]

Judicial Code, § 237 (as amended), supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 723, providing for jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to review, by writ of error, the judgments and decrees of state courts, also provides that "the writ shall have the same effect as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a court of the United States."

Allowance of writ.—Writs of error to state courts have never been allowed as of right. It has always been the practice to submit the record of the state court to a judge of the Supreme Court, whose duty it was to ascertain whether any question cognizable on appeal was made and decided in the proper court of the state, and whether the cause upon the face of the record, justified the allowance of the writ. Twitchell v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. 321, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 223.

The foundation of the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court over the judgments of state courts is in the writ of error; and no writ of error to a state court can issue without allowance, either by the proper judge of the state court or by a judge of the Supreme Court, after examination. Gleason v. Florida, (1869) 9 Wall. (U. S.) 779, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 730.

Direction of writ.—The writ must be directed either to that tribunal which can execute it, to that in which the record and judgment to be examined are deposited, or to that whose judgment is to be examined. The judgment to be examined must be that of the highest court of the state having cognizance of the case, but the record of that judgment may be brought from any court in which it may be legally deposited and in which it may be found by the writ. Gelston v. Hoyt, (1818) 3 Wheat. 246, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 381.

Form of writ.—It is not necessary that the writ of error express upon its face that it is issued upon a final judgment of the highest court in the state. The writ of error is the act of the court; its object is to cite the parties to the Supreme Court and to bring up the record, by which method the court ascertains whether the judgment is final. Buel v. Van Ness, (1823) 8 Wheat. 312, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 624.

Amendments.—For the amendment of writs of error as to particulars in form, see notes under R. S. sec. 1005, supra, p. 196.

Sec. 1004. [Writs of error returnable to Supreme Court — how issued.] Writs of error returnable to the Supreme Court or a circuit court of appeals may be issued as well by the clerks of the district courts, under the seal thereof, as by the clerk of the Supreme Court or of a circuit court of appeals. When so issued they shall be as nearly as each case may admit agreeable to the form of a writ of error issued by the clerk of the Supreme Court or the clerk of a circuit court of appeals. [R. S.]

This section was amended "so as to read as" above given by the Act of Jan. 22, 1912, ch. 12, 37 Stat. L. 54.

As originally enacted this section read as follows:

"Sec. 1004. Writs of error returnable to the Supreme Court may be issued as well by the clerks of the circuit courts, under the seals thereof, as by the clerk of the Supreme Court. When so issued they shall be, as nearly as each case may admit, agreeable to the form of a writ of error transmitted to the clerks of the several circuit courts by the clerk of the Supreme Court, in pursuance of section nine of the act of May eight, seventeen hundred and ninety-two, chapter thirty-six."

Act of May 8, 1792, ch. 36, 1 Stat. L. 278.

Circuit Courts were abolished and the powers and duties of Circuit Courts imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289-291, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1082, 1083.

Previous to the amendment, the statute made no provision for the issue of writs from the Supreme Court to the Circuit Court of Appeals, nor from the latter courts to the Circuit and District Courts, the statute having been passed before the Circuit Courts of Appeals were organized.

Construction.—The correct construction of the amendment is that the writ of error may be issued by the clerk of the court to which it is returnable or by the clerk of the court whose judgment is to be reviewed. In re Issuing Writs of Error, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 199 Fed. 115, 17 C. C. A. 603.

Error to Circuit Court.—Prior to the abolishment of the Circuit Court, a writ of error returnable to the Circuit Court of Appeals could be issued by the clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals whose judgment it was sought to review. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amato, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 381, 1 U. S. App. 113, 1 C. C. A. 468.

Error to state court.—The writ of error may be issued by the clerk of the Circuit (now District) Court in the state to whose court it is directed; and it need not purport on its face to be upon a final judgment of the highest court of the state in which a decision could be had. Buel v. Van Ness, (1828) 8 Wheat. 312, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 624.

Essentials of form.—A writ of error issued out of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to a United States District Court should run in the name of the President and be attested by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and by the clerk of the Circuit Court. Long v. Farmers' State Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 147 Fed. 360, 77 C. C. A. 538, 9 L. R. A. (N. S.) 555.

Indorsement of filing.—Failure by the clerk, inadvertently, to note the filing of the writ of error by an indorsement made on the writ itself, is not a ground for its dismissal. The substantial requirements of the law are satisfied when the record shows that the writ of error was actually lodged with the clerk. It is the lodgment of the writ with that officer, rather than the notation of the filing, which renders it operative. U. S. Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 296, 49 U. S. App. 67, 24 C. C. A. 597. See also Mutual Life Ins. Co. v. Pinney, (1910) 178 U. S. 327, 20 S. Ct. 906, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 1058, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 76 Fed. 617, 48 U. S. App. 28, 22 C. C. A. 425, which was disapproved in U. S. Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, supra, this paragraph.

Insufficient writ.—In Boudrant v. Watson, (1880) 103 U. S. 278, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 447, the writ of error in the case is set forth and was held not to have a single requisite of a writ of the Supreme Court nor even to have been colorably issued.

Service of writ.—Under this section writs of error may be issued either by the clerk of the Supreme Court or the clerks of the Circuit Courts. By section 11 of the Court of Appeals Act all of the existing provisions of law regulating methods of review are made applicable to the Circuit Courts of Appeal. Under this, writs of error returnable to this court may be issued from the office of the clerk of the Circuit Court of Appeals or of the clerk of the Circuit Court in which the judgment was rendered. Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Amato, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 381, 1 U. S. App. 113, 1 C. C. A. 468. The writ runs in the name of the President and bears the test of the Chief Justice. It is directed to the judges of the Circuit Court, and commands them to return, with the writ, into this court, a transcript of the record. Such a writ must be served, and it is so served when it is deposited with the clerk of the court in which the judgment was rendered. This deposit of the writ is its service, and the file mark, which is it the duty of the clerk to place thereon, is but evidence to show the facts of service and its date. Kentucky Coal, etc., Co. v. Howes, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 183, 82 C. C. A. 337.

Delay in return of writ.—In Altenberg v. Grant, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 980, 54 U. S. App. 312, 28 C. C. A. 244, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1898) 85 Fed. 345, 54 U. S. App. 669, 29 C. C. A. 156, an objection that the writ of error was returned and the record filed with the Circuit Court of Appeals one day after it was made returnable, was not regarded as of serious moment, requiring the dismissal of the writ.

Consolidated causes.—Where there was a consolidation of causes in the court below solely for convenience in trying them, and the verdict and judgments were separate, had no dependence upon one another and no relation except that they rested upon a similar and to some extent a common record, it was a technical irregularity to sue out only one writ of error to review the two separate judgments. But where the defendant in error made no objection on that account, it was held that the irregularity might be waived by the court. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Summers, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 719, 60 C. C. A. 457, petition for writ of certiorari denied (1903) 192 U. S. 607, 24 S. Ct. 851, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 585; Waters-Pierce Oil Co. v. Van Elderen, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 137 Fed. 537, 70 C. C. A. 235.

Sec. 1005. [Amendment of writ of error.] The Supreme Court may, at any time, in its discretion and upon such terms as it may deem just, allow an amendment of a writ of error, when there is a mistake in the title of the writ, or a seal to the writ is wanting, or when the writ is made returnable on a day other than the day of the commencement of the term next ensuing the issue of the writ, or when the statement of the title of the action or parties thereto in the writ is defective, if the defect can be remedied by reference to the accompanying record, and in all other particulars of form; Provided, The defect has not prejudiced, and the amendment will not injure, the defendant in error. [R. S.]

Purpose of section.—The theory of this Act is that a colorable writ shall operate as a writ of error, the court being given the power to amend it in so far as it is informal. Cotter v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 747, 22 U. S. App. 372, 16 C. C. A. 36.

Amendments prior to enactment of section.—Before the enactment of this section it was held that a writ of error did not give this court jurisdiction and could not be amended if the return day was wrongly stated, Virginia Valley Ins. Co. v. Mordecai, (1858) 21 How. 195, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 94; Porter v. Foley, (1858) 21 How. 393, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 154; or if the return day was not stated, Carroll v. Dorsey, (1857) 20 How. 204, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 803; or if the real parties were transposed, Hodge v. Williams, (1858) 22 How. 87, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 327; or either party described only as “the heirs” of a person named, Wilson v. Life, etc., Ins. Co., (1838) 12 Pet. 146, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1032; or either party described by the name of one person and others,” Devereux v. Altenberg, (1834) 8 Pet. 586, 8 U. S. (L. ed.) 1033; Davenport v. Fletcher, (1853) 16 How. 142, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 879; Miller v. McKenzie, (1870) 10 Wall. 582, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 1043; or by the name of a person “& Co.,” Mus- sina v. Cavazos, (1867) 6 Wall. 355, 361, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 810; The Protector, (1870) 11 Wall. 82, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 47; or if there was a defect in the title, Moulder v. Forrest, (1869) 154 U. S. 587; or where a transcript was not filed at the term next succeeding the issuing of the writ or the taking of the appeal, Carroll v. Dorsey, (1857) 20 How. 204, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 803.

When amendment allowed.—The power to amend a defective writ conferred by this section is very liberal, and it is not fatal that more than six months have passed since the final decree sought to be reviewed was pronounced, as an amendment may be allowed “at any time” in the discretion of the court. Cotter v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 747, 22 U. S. App. 372, 10 C. C. A. 35.

After a writ of error has been served and returned to the Supreme Court the record is no longer before the court below and cannot be amended in that court, although at an adjourned session of the same term it appears that the writ of error has been dismissed in the court above at the request of the party praying an amendment. U. S. v. Hoos, (1803) 1 Cranch (C. C.) 116, 26 Fed. Cas. No. 15,386.
"The naming of the defendant in the writ of error and naming and serving him in the citation is not necessary to the jurisdiction of the appellate court. The jurisdictional feature would appear to be that the writ of error to a judgment intended to be corrected should have actually been sued out within the time limited. If it is actually sued out within the time limited, although it may be defective, yet such defects, even to the extent of inserting a party omitted before, may under section 1005 be corrected, although the period within which a new writ of error could be sued out from the date of the original judgment has elapsed. When, however, the amendment is allowed, any necessary party to the appellate proceedings who was omitted from the writ of error and citation must be notified and brought before the court. As the judgment to be awarded by the appellate court may affect his interests, he is entitled as of right to notice and to be heard upon the appeal." Gilb r. Hopkins, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 208 Fed. 849, 117 C. C. A. 849. See also Cinchfield Fuel Co. v. Titus, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1915) 266 Fed. 574, 141 C. C. A. 330.

Discretion of court.—The amendment rests in the discretion of the court and will not be allowed if there is any danger of prejudice to the adverse party, or if there is any other good reason against it; as, for instance, that the main question presented by the record has often been decided by the Supreme Court. Pearson v. Yewdall, (1877) 95 U. S. 292, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 438.

The right to amend a writ of error, defective in the statement of the parties thereto, is not absolute under this section, but the court in its discretion may allow the requisite amendment to be made upon such terms as it may deem just. Pearson v. Yewdall, (1877) 95 U. S. 292, 24 U. S. L. ed.) 438.

Colorable writ.—A paper purporting to be a writ of error, in the name of the chief justice of the Supreme Court of the state, bearing the test of that chief justice, signed by the clerk and sealed by the seal of that court, but not in the name of the President or under the authority of the United States, is not a writ of error so colorably issued as to allow amendment. Bondurant v. Watson, (1880) 103 U. S. 278, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 447.

Attaching return to transcript.—The fact that a writ of error is not returned attached to a transcript nor made a part of the record does not render it void. Such defect may be amended. Cotter v. Alabama G. S. R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 747, 22 U. S. App. 372, 10 C. C. A. 36.

Cases of petition and allowance.—The absence of a formal petition for a writ of error and the lack of a formal allow-

Effect of notice required.—The fact that the time for notice required by K. S. sec. 999, supra, p. 184, could not elapse between the date of a writ of error and the return day presents no objection to the allowance of an amendment of the writ when it is made returnable on a day other than that of the commencement of the term next ensuing the issue of the writ. National Bank v. Bank of Commerce, (1878) 96 U. S. 806, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 362.

Amendment of error as to parties.—Where an appeal was taken by two of three defendants, against whom a joint decree for a sum of money was rendered, and the record fails to show that the third defendant, who made default in the court below, was in any manner joined in the appeal, or notified to join, or severed for failure or refusal to join, the defect is not one of form only, which the Circuit Court of Appeals may permit the appellants to cure by amendment, under this section, but is fatal to jurisdiction of the appeal. Copeland v. Waldron, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 217, 66 C. C. A. 271.

The right to amend a writ of error and citation by adding omitted plaintiffs depends primarily upon whether the record shows enough to authorize the amendment under this section. If it appears from the record that the omission was accidental, the amendment should be allowed. Thomas v. Green County, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 909, 77 C. C. A. 487. See also Martin v. Burford, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 554, 100 C. C. A. 169.

The inclusion as plaintiffs in error of persons who were not parties to the action does not vitiate the writ as to those who were parties, but is an error which may be corrected by dismissing the writ as to such persons, or by striking out their names. Thomas v. Green County, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 909, 77 C. C. A. 487.

Particular amendments allowed.—Under this section the court has allowed writs of error to be amended in the following instances:

One wanting a date to the testen. Courte v. Stead, (1800) 4 Dall. 22, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 724.

Appeal instead of writ of error.—In Kerr v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 159 Fed. 428, 86 C. C. A. 408, it was held that where a judgment on a scire facias on a forfeited recognizance was sought to be reviewed on appeal instead of on a writ of error, the objection could not be waived by appearance nor cured by amendment. But see now Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, § 4, 39 Stat. L. 726, set forth in note to Judicial Code, § 274b, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1061.

Sec. 1006. [Amendments in prize appeals.] The Supreme Court may, if, in its judgment, the purposes of justice require it, allow any amendment, either in form or substance, of any appeal in prize causes. [R. S.]

See a similar provision in R. S. sec. 4538 in title Paize.

Sec. 1007. [Supersedesas.] In any case where a writ of error may be a supersedesas, the defendant may obtain such supersedesas by serving the writ or [of] error, by lodging a copy thereof for the adverse party in the clerk’s office where the record remains, within sixty days, Sundays exclusive, after the rendering of the judgment complained of, and giving the security required by law on the issuing of the citation. But if he desires to stay process on the judgment, he may, having served his writ of error as aforesaid, give the security required by law within sixty days after the rendition of such judgment, or afterward with the permission of a justice or judge of the appellate court. And in such cases where a writ of error may be a supersedesas, executions shall not issue until the expiration of ten days. [R. S.]

The words "ten days" at the end of the section were inserted by Act of Feb. 8, 1875, ch. 80, 18 Stat. L. 318, in place of the words "the said term of sixty days," appearing in the section as originally enacted.

I. CONSTRUCTION GENERALLY

R. S. sec. 987 (in EXECUTION, vol. 3, p. 230) and the text section 1002 serve two distinct purposes and manifestly were not intended to modify or limit each other in respect of the separate and distinct relief contemplated by them. Sanborn v. Bay, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 194 Fed. 37, 114 C. C. A. 57.

The overruling of a motion for a new trial is the "remnder of the judgment complained of" within the meaning of R. S. sec. 1007, and where the writ of error, accompanied with the proper security, was sued out and duly served within sixty days thereafter, it was held that the supersedeas must stand. Sanborn v. Bay, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 194 Fed. 37, 114 C. C. A. 57.

II. POWER TO ALLOW SUPERSEDEAS

In general.—The Supreme Court has authority in a case properly before it on appeal to issue a writ of supersedeas when necessary to render its jurisdiction effectual. Ex p. Milwaukee R. Co., (1886) 5 Wall. 329, 18 U.S. (L. ed.) 329. And a writ of supersedeas from the Circuit Court of Appeals is not void because it is not directed to be issued by the court as a court, but by a judge of that court. In re McKenzie, (1901) 180 U. S. 526, 21 S. Ct. 468, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 657.

After expiration of sixty days.—A justice of the Supreme Court has no power to allow a supersedeas in cases where an appeal was not taken or a writ of error sued out and served within sixty days, Sundays exclusive, after the rendition of the decree or judgment complained of. Kitchens v. Randolph, (1876) 93 U. S. 87, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 810.

Neither has the District Court nor any judge thereof power to allow a supersedeas after the expiration of sixty days after judgment. New England R. Co. v. Hyde, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 397, 41 C. C. A. 404.

Nor has a judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals such power. Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 101 Fed. 654, 41 C. C. A. 573.

But where an appeal is allowed within sixty days without taking a bond the appellate court may allow a supersedeas after that time. Peugh v. Davis, (1864) 110 U. S. 227, 4 S. Ct. 17, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 127.

Nunc pro tunc order.—To make a nunc pro tunc order effectual for the purpose of a supersedeas it must appear that the delay was the act of the court and not of the parties, and that no injustice will be done. Sage v. Central R. Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 419, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 933.

Extent of operation of supersedeas.—Where a qualified acceptance of a bond on appeal shows that the judge who took it considered the security only sufficient for a stay of the execution of that part of the decree appealed from, which was for the payment of money, the appeal only operates as a supersedeas to that extent, and where the appeal was taken within the sixty days the justice of the Supreme Court assigned to the circuit has power to grant in his discretion on application a further stay of execution. A motion to the court for a supersedeas is not the proper remedy. Covington Stock-Yards Co. v. Keith, (1887) 121 U. S. 248, 7 S. Ct. 581, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 914.

A supersedeas is a matter of right, and its allowance does not rest in the discretion of court or judge. It is the effect, as a matter of law, of a compliance by the appellant with the provisions of the Acts of Congress. The only function of the judge is to determine whether the security professed for "damages and costs" is good and sufficient. McCourt v. Singers-Bigger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 150 Fed. 102, 80 C. C. A. 56.

III. APPLICABILITY GENERALLY OF SECTION

Supersedeas in criminal case.—A justice of the Supreme Court may issue a supersedeas upon a writ of error from that court in a criminal case, and as there is no security required in such a case the supersedeas may be obtained by merely serving the writ within the time prescribed without giving any security, provided the justice who signs the citation directs that the writ shall operate as a supersedeas. In re Claassen, (1891) 140 U. S. 209, 11 S. Ct. 736, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 409.

But while a writ of error to review a conviction for a noncapital crime, with a supersedeas to stay the execution of the sentence, is a matter of right, an appearance or bail is required to entitle the accused to go at large pending the writ of error. Hardeman v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 289, 106 C. C. A. 411.

Suit in rem in admiralty.—This section applies to a suit in rem in admiralty, and no summary judgment can be rendered by this court against the sureties in the appeal bond executed on the appeal to this court, until the expiration of ten years from the rendition thereof by this court. The New Orleans, (1879) 17 Blatchf. 216, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,181.

IV. WHEN WRIT OF ERROR MAY BE SUPERSEDED

In general.—A writ of error is not a supersedeas unless a copy of the writ be filed in the clerk’s office for the adverse party within the time set by statute. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Harris, (1869) 7 Wall. 574, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 100; Foster v. Kansas, (1884) 112 U. S. 201, 5 S. Ct. 87, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 629; Moore v. Dunlop, (1804) 1 Cranch C. C. 180, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,759; Ex p. Ben, (1800) 1 Cranch C. C. 532, 3 Fed. Cas. No. 1,285.

A writ of error does not operate as a supersedeas unless it is filed in the clerk’s office within the time fixed by the statute. The time is computed from the date of the judgment. It is well settled that after the expiration of the sixty days, neither a justice of the Circuit Court, nor a judge thereof, nor a judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals has the power to allow a supersedeas. Robinson v. Furbur, (S. D. Tex. 1911) 189 Fed. 918.

The security must also be sufficient, and when it is desired to make the appeal a supersedeas the security must be given within the prescribed time from the rendering of the decree. Catlett v. Brodie, (1824) 9 Wheat. 553, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 158; Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, (1867) 6 Wall. 156, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 762; Bigler v. Walker, (1870) 12 Wall. 142, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 269.

It is not necessary, however, provided everything has been done required by the statute, for a court or the judge to make an order that the writ of error or an appeal act as a supersedeas. They become so per se upon compliance with the statute. Butchers’ Ass’n v. Slaughter House Co., (1870) 1 Woods 50, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,234; Arnold v. Frost, (1877) 9 Ben. 267, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 558; Tiernan v. Booth, (N. D. Ill. 1880) 4 Fed. 620.

In Silagy v. Foote, (1857) 20 How. 290, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 625, it was said that whereas an appeal from a decree is taken within ten days from the rendition of the decree, it is in time to operate as a supersedeas; and so also if taken within ten days after the decree is settled and signed.

Where the chief justice of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky entered an order directing that the writ of error should operate as a supersedeas, and the appellant failed to serve the writ of error by lodging a copy thereof for the adverse party in the clerk’s office where the record remained as required by R. S. sec. 1007, it was held that the error, if any, could be taken advantage of only by motion or other proceeding in the Supreme Court of the United States, where the appeal was pending, Ohio River Contract Co. v. Gordon, (1916) 247 Ky. 404, 199 S. W. 451.

An appeal in chancery must be perfected by giving an appeal bond within the statutory time in order to act as a supersedeas. Adams v. Law, (1853) 16 How. 144, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 880.

V. SECURITY REQUIRED

Money judgment.—In cases where "the decree is for the recovery of money not otherwise secured," the practice of the court heretofore has been to require a bond, with one or more sureties, for double the amount of the decree and costs, and such practice should not be departed from, except in those cases where the appellee is made secure in other ways, and where such requirement, under some special circumstances, will operate as a hardship on the appellee. American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, (1874) 1 B. & A. Pat. Cas. 463, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 310.

Removed cases.—On a case removed to the federal court from a state court where the action is based upon a state statute the superseded bond on an appeal to the Supreme Court will be limited to the effect that it would have in the case of an appeal to the state court. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Southern Tel. Co., (1884) 112 U. S. 306, 5 S. Ct. 165, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 746.

Sufficiency of bond.—The bond required by this section must be sufficient to secure the whole judgment in case it should be affirmed, if the writ of error operate as a supersedeas. Catlett v. Brodie, (1824) 9 Wheat. 553, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 168; The Holland & Case, (C. C. Ore. 1886) 28 Fed. 117.

And where a final decree awards compensation to a master, the bond on appeal must include that sum or execution may issue therefor. Myers v. Dunbar, (1874) 12 Blatchf. 380, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,990.

The usual practice, however, of requiring the bond in double the amount ought not always to be insisted upon, as the law did not require that the security should be in any fixed proportion to the decree. It was only necessary that it should be sufficient. American Nicholson Pavement Co. v. Elizabeth, (1874) 1 B,

And on the death of the appellant additional security will not be required when it does not appear that the land in dispute is being neglected. Harwood v. Dieckhoff, (1886) 117 U. S. 200, 6 S. Ct. 669, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 857.

Where no security is taken at the time of entering an order allowing an appeal, or the appellant within the time limited by the statute files with the clerk a bond with sureties conditioned according to law and approved by a justice of the lower court, by whom on the same day a citation was signed, the power of the judge over the appeal and the security is thereupon, in the absence of fraud, exhausted, and the control of supersedeas as well as of the appeal is transferred to the Supreme Court. Draper v. Davis, (1880) 102 U. S. 370, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 121; Butchers’ Ass’n v. Slaughter House Co., (1870) 1 Woods 50, 4 Fed. Cas. No. 2,234.

But see Black v. Zacharie, (1845) 3 How. 483, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 699, where the lower court, the day after granting the supersedeas, revoked its order on the ground that the security was not sufficient, and it was held that the judge of the lower court being exclusive judges of what security should be taken, their decision was not subject to review by the Supreme Court, and the latter court would not issue a supersedeas.

Bond taken before writ of error allowed. — It is irregular to take, approve, and file a supersedeas bond, reciting the allowance of a writ of error before any such writ had in fact been allowed. But it is competent for the court to reapprove the bond on the issuance of the citation and such approval may be inferred or presumed. McLean v. Vyett, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 259, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241.

Suit to enforce bond. — A suit to enforce a supersedeas bond is one of which a District Court has jurisdiction by virtue of section 24 of the Judicial Code. American Surety Co. v. Shulz, (1915) 237 U. S. 158, 35 S. Ct. 525, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 892, the opinion in which case is extensively quoted in note to Judicial Code, § 24, supra, this title, JUDICIARY, vol. 4, p. 931, under heading 12. Suit on Federal Supersedeas Bond.

VI. SERVICE OF WRIT OF ERROR

This section, so far as it provides as to the manner of serving the writ, is permissive and not mandatory, and does not preclude service in any other manner. The filing of the original writ with the clerk, by lodging a copy with him, constitutes a service for the purpose of a supersedeas. McCarley v. McGhee, (N. D. Ala. 1901) 108 Fed. 494.

And where a decree is not for the payment of a specific sum of money the amount of the supersedeas bond is in the discretion of the court. U. S. v. New Orleans, (E. D. La. 1881) 8 Fed. 112; Longworth Co. v. Pope, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 1, 45 U. S. App. 25, 20 C. C. A. 253.

Parties to bond. — Where a bond does not show the individual names of an appellant’s firm, nor does it show that the firm was a party to the action, and it is accompanied by no citations or assignment of errors, the judgment will not be stayed. In re Woeriashoffer, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 915, 41 U. S. App. 411, 21 C. C. A. 175.

But where security is sufficient it is immaterial that the bond was signed by one of the plaintiffs only. McClellan v. Fryatt, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 259, 4 U. S. App. 98, 1 C. C. A. 241.

Omission of stipulation as to damages. — The omission from an appeal bond of the statutory stipulation as to damages required to effect a supersedeas does not necessarily entitle the party to whom the property is adjudged to a discharge of the receiver and possession of the property pending the appeal. The subsequent custody is a matter which the court will regulate upon the equitable circumstances of each case independently of the fact whether there has been a statutory supersedeas of the final decree or not. Ferguson v. Dent, (W. D. Tenn. 1886) 29 Fed. 1.

Control over security. — The amount of a supersedeas bond as well as the sufficiency of the security is within the discretion of the judge below and will not be interfered with by the Supreme Court. If, however, there be a subsequent change in the circumstances of the case, or of the parties or the sureties, so that the security does not continue to be good and sufficient, the Supreme Court may, on proper application, so adjudge and order as justice may require. Providence Rubber Co. v. Goodyear, (1884) 6 Wall. 153, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 762; Jerome v. McCar- ter, (1874) 21 Wall. 17, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 516; Martin v. Hazard Powder Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 302, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 585; Williams v. Claffin, (1850) 103 U. S. 772, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 606; Mexican Constr. Co. v. Reusens, (1868) 118 U. S. 49, 6 S. Ct. 945, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 77.

But additional security on a supersedeas bond will not be required when it does not appear that the decree appealed from is collectible under ordinary execution and is not fraudulently induced. From the papers that the suit was instituted to subject lands to the payment of a debt and that no personal decree of money
It is not necessary to make it a supersedeas that the writ of error be served as was required by the twenty-third section of the Judiciary Act or the supersedeas bond be filed within ten days (Sundays excepted) after the rendering of the judgment complained of. The supersedeas bond may be executed within sixty days after the rendition of the judgment, and the writ may be served at any time before or simultaneous with the filing of the bond. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Eyser, (1873) 19 Wall. 419, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 43.

The Judiciary Act of 1789, ch. 20, § 23, required the writ to be served in ten days instead of sixty, and under that Act it was held, in Hogan v. Ross, (1850) 11 How. 294, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 702, that the Supreme Court in the exercise of its appellate power is not authorized to award a supersedeas to stay the proceedings on the judgment of the inferior court, upon the ground that a writ of error is pending unless the writ was sued out within ten days after the judgment.

In the Slaughter-House Cases, (1869) 10 Wall. 271, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 915 (citing Gelston v. Hoyt, (1818) 3 Wheat. 246, 4 U. S. (L. ed.) 381; McGuire v. Massachusetts, (1865) 3 Wall. 386, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 164; Green v. Van Buskerk, (1865) 3 Wall. 448, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 245), it was said: "Exceptional cases arise where the judgment or decree given on appeal in the highest court of the state is required by law of the state to be returned to the subordinate court for execution, and in such cases it is held that the writ of error from this court may operate as a supersedeas if granted and served at any time within ten days from the return entry of the proceedings, in the court from which the record was removed, but in all other cases the writ of error must be issued and served within ten days from the date of the judgment or decree, in order that it may operate as a supersedeas and stay execution."

VII. COMPUTATION OF TIME

When time begins to run.—The time within which the writ of error must be served in order that it may operate as a supersedeas must be computed from the date of the judgment which is the subject of review. Wurts v. Hoagland, (1851) 105 U. S. 701, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139; Bunch v. Coddingame (1867) 5 Bunch. 252, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,203.

But a judgment or decree does not become final for the purposes of a writ of error or appeal until the motion for a rehearing which the court sees fit to entertain is disposed of. A supersedeas cannot be granted until the rehearing is taken or a writ of error is sued out, and this cannot be done until a motion for a new trial, if made, is denied. Sanborn v. Bay, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 194 Fed. 37, 114 C. C. A. 57.

The judgment of a federal court is not final, so that the jurisdiction of the appellate court may be invoked, while the judgment is still under the control of the trial court through the pendency of a motion for a new trial. Clarke v. Eureka County Bank, (C. C. Nev. 1894) 131 Fed. 146.

In an action at law, in which the judgment is reviewable only by writ of error, unless such writ is issued and served within sixty days, a judge of an appellate court has no power to grant a supersedeas, and the allowance of an appeal by the trial court is without effect. Robinson v. Furbur, (D. Tex. 1911) 180 Fed. 918.

So it has been held that the time to appeal does not commence to run pending a motion for a new trial or for a rehearing, or to rescind, or set aside a decree. Brockett v. Brockett, (1844) 2 How. 238, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 251; Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Bradley, (1868) 7 Wall. 575, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 274; Rutherford v. Pennsylvania Mut. Life Ins. Co., (D. Md. 1880) 1 Fed. 450; Brown v. Evans, (C. C. Nev. 1883) 18 Fed. 56.

And under R. S. secs. 1007 (the above text) and 1012 (supra, p. 170), a justice of the Circuit Court of Appeals may, on the application of appellant taking a second appeal after the dismissal of his first appeal, permit him to give a supersedeas bond after the expiration of the sixty days; the dismissal of the first appeal being due to the failure of the clerk of the trial court to send up the record in due season. Sutherland v. Pesoe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 787, 108 C. C. A. 657.

But a motion to set aside a decree, made by persons not parties to the suit but who are permitted to intervene only for the purpose of an appeal from the decree as originally rendered, will not operate to suspend the decree for the purpose of suing out a writ of error. Sage v. Central R. Co., (1876) 93 U. S. 412, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 933.

The exclusion of Sundays by the words of the statute applies not only to the lodging of the copy of the writ of error or the taking of the appeal, but also to the giving of security to operate as a supersedeas. Danville v. Brown, (1888) 126 U. S. 608, 9 S. Ct. 149, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 507.

Allowance of appeal relates back.—Where a party appeals from the decision of the lower court to the United States Supreme Court, the appeal is taken or a writ of error is sued out, and this appeal is to relate back to the time when the original application was made for an appeal to the judge of the lower court and Acceptance of security relates back.—Where the court allowing the appeal accepts the security to prosecute after the expiration of the time allowed by law for and it has been held that the time of the allowance of the appeal. The Dos Hermanos, (1825) 10 Wheat. 306, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 328.

Nunc pro tunc order.—In The Roanoke, (1855) 3 Blatchf. 390, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,876, it was held that the court had no power to permit such service to be made nunc pro tunc, as if made within such ten days, and that all the requirements of the statute necessary for the stay of execution must be complied with within ten days.

Extension of time.—The party cannot extend the time by agreement that all executions should be stayed for a certain time and that a writ of error be served within that time. Thompson v. Voss, (1802) 1 Cranch C. C. 108, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,979.

Ten days' stay of execution.—The provision that where a writ of error may operate as a supersedeas, execution shall not issue until the expiration of ten days after the rendition of the judgment, has references only to the judgments of the courts of the United States. Doyle v. Wisconsin, (1876) 94 U. S. 50, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 64. Sundays are to be excluded in the computation of the ten days. Danielson v. Northwestern Fuel Co., (C. C. Minn. 1893) 55 Fed. 49.

VIII. EFFECT OF SUPERSEDEAS
In general.—A writ of error and supersedeas bond suspends the execution of judgment until the case has been determined. U. S. v. Dunne, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1932) 173 Fed. 254, 97 C. C. A. 1234.
The supersedeas provided for in this section stays process for the execution of the judgment or decree brought under review by a writ of error or appeal to which it belongs. It operates on the judgment or decree, not on the questions involved considered apart from the particular suit in which they were decided. Spraul v. Louisiana, (1887) 123 U. S. 516, 8 S. Ct. 263, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 233.

Damages for violation of injunction.—A supersedeas bond, given under this section and Supreme Court rule 29, does not suspend the operation of a prohibitory injunction granted by the decree appealed from, but, unless otherwise ordered by the trial judge in allowing the appeal, as authorized by equity rule 93, such injunction remains in full force pending the appeal, and its violation is punishable as a contempt. Hence damages sustained by the appellee by a violation of the injunction pending appeal are not the result of the supersedeas bond, and cannot be recovered in an action thereon. Green Bay, etc., Canal Co. v. Norrie, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 118 Fed. 923.

IX. EFFECT OF APPEAL
In general.—Where in an admiralty cause an appeal is taken from the decree of the District Court, and security on appeal is given, the decree of the District Court is by such appeal rendered of no effect. Dutcher v. Woodhull, (1874) 7 Ben. 313, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4204.
On second appeal.—When a new and second appeal is allowed on a dismissal of the first appeal, for want of prosecution, but the court passed a supplemental decree for the execution of the original decree, the second appeal is not a supersedeas to all further proceedings in the lower court to execute the original decree. Carr v. Hoxie, (1839) 15 Pet. 460, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 247.

X. STAY OF PROCEEDINGS
In general.—The operation of a judgment is not suspended so as to allow an application for a new trial in any case beyond a period of forty-two days from the time of its rendition, as provided by R. S. sec. 987 (in Execution, vol. 3, p. 280). Cambuston v. U. S., (1877) 95 U. S. 236, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 448.
And the lower court will not order an execution against bond to be stayed pending a writ of error by the Supreme Court where the writ was not sued out in time to operate as a supersedeas. Poyles v. R. U. Law, (1827) 3 Cranch C. C. 118, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 5,024.

Effect of bond.—A bond given on an appeal from a decree dismissing a bill to restrain collection of a judgment does not operate to prevent the enforcement of the judgment. Knox County v. Harshman, (1889) 132 U. S. 14, 10 S. Ct. 8, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 249; Grundy v. Young, (1807) 1 Cranch C. C. 443, 11 Fed. Cas. No. 6,880;
And a superseded bond is ineffectual as to a judgment of ouster where the writ was executed on the same day but before the bond was filed. Boyle County v. Gorman, (1873) 19 Wall. 661, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 226.

Execution may be quashed.—Where the writ of error, bond, and citation have been given in due season to operate as a supersedeas, execution issued thereafter is wholly irregular and may be quashed either in the court below or by the court of review. Stockton v. Bishop, (1844) 2 How. 74, 11 U. S. (L. ed.) 184.

Where a judgment is practically separable in ejectment against defendants holding separate possession of specific parcels of land, it will not be enforced as to those of the defendants who joined with the others in suing out a writ of error, but who severally gave a superseded bond as required by law. Ex p. French, (1879) 100 U. S. 1, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 529.

The failure to supersede a judgment or stay the process upon it in no way affects the right to a review of the proceedings which resulted in it or to its reversal. Logan v. Goodwin, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 194 Fed. 490, 43 C. C. A. 668.

XI. SUPERSEDEDAS IMPROPERLY ORDERED
In general.—A superseded bond is a nullity where the writ of error has been allowed but not issued. Ex p. Ralston, (1837) 3 Pet. U. S. 613, 7 S. Ct. 317, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 606.

And the court will not sanction the disposition of its receiver by a writ issued by the clerk upon a discovery of a defect in the superseded bond, although the final decree if not superseded might authorize it. The proper practice is to apply to the courts to execute the decree. Ferguson v. Dent, (W. D. Tenn. 1886) 29 Fed. 1.

The proper remedy where a superseded bond has improperly ordered is a motion to discharge the superseded, and not to discharge the appeal, or that a superseded may be discharged and the appeal still maintained. Hudgins v. Kemp, (1855) 18 How. 530, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 511.

And where the writ of error was not sued out or served within the time required to make the bond operate as a supersedeas, a motion to vacate it will be denied as unnecessary. Western Air Line Constr. Co. v. McGillis, (1888) 127 U. S. 778, 8 S. Ct. 1389, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 324.

XII. VACATING SUPERSEDEDAS
A superseded bond will be vacated when the approval of the bond thereof was obtained by fraud and perjury. Florida Cent. R. Co. v. Schutte, (1879) 100 U. S. 644, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 605.

So in Title Guaranty, etc., Co. v. U. S., (1912) 222 U. S. 401, 32 S. Ct. 168, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 248, it is held that a motion to vacate a superseded must prevail, it appearing that although the writ of error was allowed and lodged in the office of the clerk more than six months after the entry of the judgment, the bond was approved to operate as a supersedeas. The court said: "Under these circumstances it is apparent that the order for supersedeas was improvidently granted. No other conclusion is possible in view of sec. 1007, Rev. Stat., making the allowance of a writ and the judgment of the same in the office of the clerk within sixty days after the date of a judgment an essential prerequisite to the granting of a supersedeas. It is, nevertheless, insisted, first, that this case is not within the rule, because as the Judiciary Act of 1891 (March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826) by the sixth section allows one year for the prosecution of error from this court to the judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals and in express terms fixes no period for the allowance of a supersedeas, therefore, as the supersedeas was allowed within the year, it was in time. This, however, ignores the provision of sec. 11 of the Act of 1891 [supra, p. 170] as follows: 'And all the provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the Circuit Courts of Appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error.' . . . Hudson v. Parker, (1895) 156 U. S. 277, 282, [15 S. Ct. 430, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 424]. Nor would a different result arise from the concession argumentatively that from a consideration of the context of section 11 of the Act of 1891 the passage which we have quoted should be restricted to writs of error from the Circuit Courts of Appeals to inferior courts and to appeals from such courts to the Circuit Courts of Appeals. Nothing is contained in the Act of 1891 regulating the time for an appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals to this court or a writ of error from this court to such courts must be taken in order to operate as a supersededas. The general provision of Rev. Stat. sec. 1007 under the hypothesis stated would therefore be applicable. It thus results that the mistake in allowing the supersededas in the case which is before us is equally demonstrated by the correct application of the Act of 1891 as well as by yielding to the erroneous construction of that act which is pressed in argument." But where a supersededas bond has been approved by the District Court, has been made a part of the record in the case and has been filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals and the case entirely transferred to that court, the District Court has no right to make any further order, such as one to vacate the supersededas. Kendrick v. Roberts, (N. D. Ga. 1914) 214 Fed. 268. Motions to vacate a supersededas, made before the record is printed, must be accompanied by a statement of the facts on which they rest, agreed to by the parties, or supported by printed copies of so much of the record as will enable the court to act understandingly, without reference to the transcript on file. Power v. Baker, (1884) 112 U. S. 710, 5 S. Ct. 361, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 825.

Sec. 700. [Cases tried by the circuit court without the intervention of a jury.] When an issue of fact in any civil cause in a circuit court is tried and determined by the court without the intervention of a jury, according to section six hundred and forty-nine, the rulings of the court in the progress of the trial of the cause, if excepted to at the time, and duly presented by a bill of exceptions, may be reviewed by the Supreme Court upon a writ of error or upon appeal; and when the finding is special the review may extend to the determination of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. I. R. S. secs. 649 and 700, in general
1. Purpose and Scope of the Sections
R. S. sec. 649, referred to in the text, reads as follows: "Sec. 649. Issues of fact in civil cases in any Circuit Court may be tried and determined by the court, without the intervention of a jury, whenever the parties, or their attorneys of record, file with the clerk a stipulation in writing waiving a jury. The finding of the court upon the facts, which may be either general or special, shall have the same effect as the verdict of a jury." See notes to that section, supra, p. 150.

The Act of March 3, 1866, from which R. S. secs. 649 and 700 were derived, was passed to "preserve to the parties submitting a cause to a trial before the court, both as to law and fact, the benefit of a review or re-examination of questions of law in the appellate court," as therefore obtained only in cases in which the facts were found by a jury or were admitted by the parties upon a case stated and submitted upon the questions of law. Flanders v. Tweed, (1869) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678.

Prior to the enactment of this Act it was held by the Supreme Court that when the case is submitted to the judge to find the facts without the intervention of a jury he acts as a referee by consent of the parties, and no bill of exceptions will lie to his admission or rejection of testimony, nor to his judgment on the law, Weems v. George, (1851) 13 How. 190, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 108; and that no exception can be taken where there is no jury, and where the question of law is decided in delivering the final judgment of the court, U. S. v. King, (1843) 7 How. 833-853, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 934. Section 4 of the Act of March 3, 1866, was passed to allow the parties where, a jury being waived, the cause was tried by the court, a review of such rulings of the court, in the progress of the trial, as were excepted to at the time, and duly presented by bill of exceptions, and also a review of the judgment of the court upon the question whether the facts specially found by the court were sufficient to support its judgment. In other respects the old law remains unchanged. Flanders v. Tweed, (1869) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678; Kearney v. Case, (1870) 12 Wall. 275, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 396; Martin v. Fairbanks, (1855) 112 U. S. 670, 5 S. Ct. 321, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 962; Key West v. Baer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 66 Fed. 440, 30 U. S. App. 140, 13 C. C. A. 572.

2. To What Courts and to What Cases Applicable

a. To What Courts

And this section was applicable to the Circuit Court of Appeals. Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 130 Fed. 951.

There was no authority either at common law or by statute under which the facts were in an action at law could be tried by the judge of a District Court of the United States without a jury; and where a case was so tried by stipulation, the judgment was not reviewable by the Circuit Court of Appeals. U. S. v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 306, 93 C. C. A. 58.

b. To What Cases

On a motion to revive a judgment at law where there is no right of trial by jury, and consequently a waiver of the jury is not necessary, the mode of preserving questions is the same as in a proceeding under this section, and where the court has made no special finding of the facts, the only questions for consideration are those arising upon the rulings of the court in the progress of the hearing on the motion. Crawford v. Foster, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 975, 53 U. S. App. 699, 28 C. C. A. 242.

This section is not applicable to default cases; and in an action of replevin brought in a federal court within the state of Illinois, in which the defendant makes default, the court is authorized to assess the damages without a jury under the Illinois Practice Act. Midland Contracting Co. v. Toledo Foundry, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 797, 83 C. C. A. 489.

3. Compliance with Statute Essential to Reriew

If the parties who consent to waive a jury desire to secure the right to a review in the Supreme Court of any question of law arising on the trial, they must comply with the statute. If this is not done, they stand as they did before the statute, concluded by the judgment of the court on all matters submitted to it. Flanders v. Tweed, (1869) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678; Kearney v. Case, (1870) 12 Wall. 275, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 395.

This section is not exclusive of other methods of submitting cases to the court, though if the requirements of the statute are not complied with the parties are concluded by the judgment. Kearney v. Case, (1870) 12 Wall. 275, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 395. And this is true as to exceptions taken at the trial and as to the effect of the facts found. Flanders v. Tweed, (1869) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678; Smith v. Weeks, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 53 Fed. 758, 5 U. S. App. 240, 3 C. C. A. 844; Merrill v. Floyd, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 53 Fed. 172, 5 U. S. App. 224, 3 C. C. A. 494.

Whenever cases are submitted for trial without a jury, it must plainly appear that the waiver was made as prescribed by the Act of Congress. Swift v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 489, 76 C. C. A. 253.

The trial of issues of fact by the court without a jury was unknown to the common law. Such questions were exclusively for the jury, and in case questions of fact were submitted to the judge without a jury, by agreement of the parties, it was held that, in determining such issues, the judge was not acting in any official capacity, but as an arbitrator. Campbell v. Boyreau, (1855) 21 How. 223, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 98. Manifestly, therefore, the judge has no power, without the consent of the parties, to determine issues of fact, and only by virtue of the provision of R. S. 449, supra, p. 130, does the judge’s decision upon a question of fact become a judicial act. U. S. v. Ramsey, (C. C. Idaho 1907) 158 Fed. 488.

Reference to referees.—An agreement in open court by the parties to an action at law in a federal court that the cause may be referred to a referee to make findings of fact is a waiver of the right to a jury trial on condition that the facts be found by a referee, and confers no power upon the judge to ignore such findings and himself determine the issues of fact, and as the judge has no power, unless by consent, to reject the findings of the referee, and in case they are set aside the cause stands for trial precisely the same as though it had never been referred. U. S. v. Ramsey, (C. C. Idaho 1907) 158 Fed. 488.

The master’s power, if any, in an action at law was brought in the Circuit Court, the trial judge under such sections has no power, even with the acquiescence of both parties, to order a trial before a special master authorized to hear and pass on the issues of fact, and report his findings to the court. Swift v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 489, 76 C. C. A. 253, wherein the court said: “Without, therefore, in any manner questioning the right of a party in an action at law to refer his cause to an arbitrator, either through the judge acting as arbitrator, or the selection of referees contemplated by state statute, or otherwise to be chosen, we hold that it is well recognized that neither by agreement of parties nor by the laws of the state can a federal court sitting in such state depart from the prescribed modes of procedure and rules embodied in the Act of Congress for its guidance. Graham v. Bayne, (1855) 18 How. 60, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 266; Kelsey v. Forsyth, (1858) 21 How. 85, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 22; Richmond v. Smith, (1879) 15 Wall. 429, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 200. And hence when it appears that the reference of the lower court was not in any sense intended as an arbitration, or a purpose to have the referee to whom it was referred try and determine the same as an arbitrator, but that plainly the purpose of the reference was to have him ascertain the facts, in lieu of the jury or the judge of the lower court, by written consent of the parties, thereby substituting his judgment as to the facts of the case for that of the jury or the lower court, and that the judgment of the lower court was the result merely of his findings as distinguished from rendering judgment upon its own findings in a proper case, we think it clear that such practice should not be sanctioned or adopted as a rule applicable to the trial of cases in this circuit. To do so would be, in effect, to create a new and additional method of disposition of common-law cases, neither provided for nor contemplated by the Acts of Congress on the subject.”

4. Effect of State Laws and Practice

And an agreement of parties or the laws of a state cannot authorize a federal

A state statute permitting the waiver of a jury trial in actions at law by oral consent in open court entered in the minutes, does not apply to federal courts in the trial of actions at law as a substitute for a written waiver of a jury required by the federal statute. Erkel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 623, 95 C. C. A. 151.

Whatever may be the practice as to references of common-law actions in the courts of the state, in a federal court the reference of such a case can be made only on consent of both parties. Elkin v. Denver Engineering Works Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 181 Fed. 684, 105 C. C. A. 1.

Ruling on questions of law.—The court cannot be required to rule on specific propositions of law presented by the parties in accordance with a state practice. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 124, 68 C. C. A. 150.

The statute does not contemplate separate conclusions of law such as are common in the state practice, and judgment should be directed on the findings of fact. Fowler v. Gowing, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 105 Fed. 891, 91 C. C. A. 569.

A. F. A. facts.—The state legislature in so far as the same presents the method for the ascertainment of the fact under consideration, contrary to and inconsistent with the legislation of Congress on the same subject, must and should give way to the plain provisions of the federal law. It is the duty of the trial courts to adhere rigidly to the enactments of Congress prescribed for their government, and the presumptions are all unfavorable to the waiver of the right of trial by jury. Swift v. Jones, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1908) 146 Fed. 409, 76 C. C. A. 253.

The making of special findings by a federal court on a waiver of a jury, and the effect thereof, is governed by the federal statutes and not by state statutes. Jones v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 135 Fed. 518, 68 C. C. A. 68.

II. WAIVING A JURY

1. Presumption Against Waiver

2. Waiver Without Written Stipulation

Where waiver of a jury trial is effected either by express oral consent or by personal attendance upon the trial without objection, but without the filing of a written stipulation, rulings of the court upon the trial are not reviewable, for such a submission to the decision of the court is not made in the pleadings. R. S. secs. 649 and 700. Wm. Edwards Co. v. La Dow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 230 Fed. 378, 144 C. C. A. 520.

Rulings of a Circuit Court in the progress of the trial of an action at law by the court without a jury cannot be reviewed by an appellate court, unless a written stipulation waiving a jury is signed and filed with the clerk in accordance with R. S. sec. 649, so as to bring the case within the provisions of R. S. sec. 700; in the absence of such a stipulation the only question which can be considered is whether the judgment rendered is sustained by the pleadings. Defiance v. Schmidt, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 159.

The foregoing rule is subject to an exception that was pointed out in Wayne County v. Kennicott, (1880) 103 U. S. 554, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 496, that when a case is presented to the trial court for decision on an agreed statement of the facts prepared and signed by counsel, an appellate court, on writ of error, may always determine whether the judgment rendered was such as should have been rendered on the agreed facts. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Sioux Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 69 Fed. 782, 32 U. S. App. 600, 18 C. C. A. 409.

3. Stipulation in Writing Essential

When the agreement waiving a jury is not in writing, the facts found cannot be noticed by the appellate court for any purpose. Ruah v. Newman, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 158, 12 U. S. App. 635, 7 C. C. A. 136; 1 App. Jur. 136 (1896); 1 C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 72 Fed. 124, 30 U. S. App. 713, 18 C. C. A. 469.

An oral waiver of trial by jury does not satisfy the statute. Illinois Surety Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1918) 229 Fed. 527, 143 C. C. A. 598, wherein the court said: "The statutes require that issues of fact in actions at law be tried by jury . . . unless the jury be waived by a stipulation in writing. When the facts may be tried by the court and its rulings may be reviewed as provided in the statute . . . this case having been tried without a jury, and there having been no written stipulation waiving a jury trial, it is well settled that none of the questions decided at the trial can be re-examined in this court on writ of error." To the same point see Erkel v. U. S., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 169 Fed. 623, 95 C. C. A. 151.

And exceptions taken to the admission or exclusion of evidence, or any exceptions to the findings of fact by the referee, or to his refusal to find facts as requested, cannot be reviewed. Roberts v. Benjamin, (1888) 124 U. S. 65, 8 S. Ct. 393, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 334.

There can be no reservation in such stipulation of a right to go to the jury. Smith v. Weeks, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 758, 5 U. S. App. 240, 3 C. C. A. 644.

The appellate court will scan the record closely to ascertain if the agreement to refer was in writing. Cudahy Packing Co. v. Sioux Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 69 Fed. 782, 32 U. S. App. 600, 18 C. C. A. 409.

A written stipulation is not essential to a waiver of a jury to assess damages on a bond after default, under R. S. sec. 961, supra, p. 117, declaring that when the sum for which judgment shall be rendered in such suit is uncertain, it shall, if either party request it, be assessed by a jury. Brock v. Fuller Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 272, 82 C. C. A. 402.

But the fact that the stipulation in writing was made may be shown by a statement in the finding of facts by the court, or in the bill of exceptions, or in the record of the judgment entry, Bond v. Dustin, (1884) 112 U. S. 604, 5 S. Ct.
4. What is a Sufficient Stipulation

Parties will be held to a reasonably strict conformity to the regulations of the statute. But in the very special circumstances of this case—the parties supposing that they had made up a case according to the state practice in Louisiana, and the case being an important one, and the court and parties evidently intending that it should be reviewed—the court reversed for mistrial and remanded the case. Flanders v. Tweed, (1869) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678.

The agreement in writing must be explicit and not "tentative," and cannot be aided by parol or by acts in pais. Merrill v. Floyd, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 53 Fed. 172, 5 U. S. App. 224, 3 C. C. A. 494.

Parties were allowed to file a stipulation in writing in the Supreme Court agreeing that the facts appearing from the special verdict and stated to have been proved, "shall be taken and considered as the facts in this case for all purposes, and as fully as if they had been specifically found by the Circuit Court." Geekie v. Kirby Carpenter Co., (1885) 106 U. S. 379, 1 S. Ct. 315, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 157.

No specific form is demanded if the intent of the agreement filed under it is plain. Smith v. Weeks, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 53 Fed. 768, 5 U. S. App. 240, 3 C. C. A. 644.

A request, made to the court by each party, to instruct the jury to render a verdict in his favor, is not equivalent to a submission of the case to the court without the intervention of a jury within the intention of the statute. Buttell v.
JUDICIARY

5. Withdrawal of Waiver

A liberal discretion may and should be exercised by the court in allowing either party to withdraw from such a waiver. Burnham v. North Chicago St. R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1888) 88 Fed. 627, 60 U. S. App. 225, 32 C. C. A. 64.

When an amendment, to avoid a variance between pleadings and proof, has been permitted, not affecting the nature or merits of the case, it is in the discretion of the trial court to determine whether any submission which has been made ought to be vacated. Bambergcr v. Terry, (1880) 103 U. S. 40, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 317.

6. Effect on New Trial

The statute should be strictly construed in favor of the preservation of the right of trial by jury, and therefore the stipulation to waive a jury has only relation to the first trial. When the case is remanded both parties are restored to their original right of trial by jury. Burnham v. North Chicago St. R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1895) 88 Fed. 627, 60 U. S. App. 225, 32 C. C. A. 64.

III. WHAT IS A SUBMISSION UNDER THE STATUTE

A written stipulation which clearly contemplates the trial to the court of an action at law, and requests a special finding, is a sufficient waiver of a jury to authorize determination, upon writ of error, of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. Anglo-American Land, etc., Co. v. Lombard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 721, 68 C. C. A. 59.

A recital in a judgment that both parties, announcing "ready for trial," formally waived a jury in open court, is sufficient to show waiver of jury by written stipulation, as required by R. S. sec. 649. Columbus Compress Co. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 487, 108 C. C. A. 465.

Where a question as to the construction of a contract evidenced solely by letters and telegrams is by agreement of the counsel submitted to the court, and the jury is instructed to find a verdict for one of the parties, the case is not a trial by the court under this section, but the construction of the contract is a question of law, and where properly excepted to, is reviewable. Goulding v. Ham mond, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 639, 13 U. S. App. 30, 4 C. C. A. 333.

A request by each party to instruct the jury to return a verdict in his favor is not equivalent to a submission of the case to the court under the above section, but is an admission by each that there is no disputed question of fact, and is a request that the court find the facts, and the parties are concluded. Buttell v. Magone, (1895) 157 U. S. 154, 15 S. Ct. 566, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 654. See also Minahan v. Grand Trunk Western R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 37, 70 C. C. A. 463; McCormick v. Waco Nat. City Bank, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 139, 73 C. C. A. 350, 6 Ann. Cas. 544.

The practice of referring suits pending in the courts of the United States to a referee or arbitrator, under a rule of court consented to by the parties, has been sanctioned in a number of instances. Where there has been such a reference only rulings and decisions in the matter of law, after the award, are reviewable on writ of error, and to present a question to an appellate court it is essential that the court trying exceptions to the award should ascertain the facts upon which the judgment or opinion excepted to was founded. York, etc., R. Co. v. Myers, (1855) 18 How. 246, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 380; Beckers v. Fowler, (1884) 2 Wall. 123, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 760; Shipman v. Ohio Coal Exch., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1895) 70 Fed. 662, 37 U. S. App. 471, 17 C. C. A. 313.

IV. FINDINGS AND REVIEW

1. IN GENERAL

When the record discloses no finding of facts, and the trial court had jurisdiction, there are no questions open for review. Lloyd v. Mc Williams, (1890) 137 U. S. 576, 11 S. Ct. 173, 34 U. S. (L. ed.) 788.

On a petition to revise in matter of law the proceedings of a District Court in bankruptcy, in order that it may appear by the record that the issues raised were presented below, and for other reasons, findings which involve distinct propositions of law, or something as a substitute therefor, are necessary, and they cannot be supplied by a mere opinion of the court. While in some cases involving issues of a substantial character justice may require a relaxation of the rule, or the consideration of issues not presented to the original tribunal, such course will not be followed where the questions raised relate merely to matters of form or administration, and no material detriment to the estate can result from the action complained of. In re Boston Dry Goods Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 226, 90 C. C. A. 118.

It is the duty of the court to make findings upon all the issues on the evidence submitted to it, and the appellate court cannot sustain the judgment unless it find such findings. Packer v. Whittier, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 511, 63 U. S. App. 37, 33 C. C. A. 658.

The circumstance that the witnesses do not contradict each other and there is no conflict in the testimony does not relieve the court from the strict rule to find the facts. Lehmann v. Dickson, (1883) 148 U. S. 71, 13 S. Ct. 481, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 373.

Where parties to a suit tried to the court without a jury desire a review of the law involved in the case, a special verdict raising the legal propositions must be procured, or propositions of law must be presented and ruled on by the trial judge. Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 130 Fed. 951.

In actions at law, where a trial by jury is waived, the duty of finding the facts is placed upon the trial court. Anglo-American Land, etc., Co. v. Lombard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 721, 68 C. C. A. 89.

If there need be no finding of a fact stated in an agreed statement of facts. Treat v. Farmers' Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 760, 108 C. C. A. 98.

2. General Findings

If the finding of the court is general and not special it is not reviewable by the Circuit Court of Appeals. J. W. Paxson Co. v. Chosen Freeholders, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1912) 201 Fed. 656, 120 C. C. A. 84, wherein the court said: "We are of opinion that the finding of the court was general and not special, and therefore, like the verdict of a jury, is not now reviewable by this court. No request was made for special findings, and unless some other request, or motion equivalent to a motion for peremptory instructions, or judgment non obstante veredicto was made, with proper exception to the refusal thereof, the findings of fact cannot be the subject of assignments of error. The finding of the court was equivalent to a general verdict, though accompanied by a reasoned opinion." Mason v. United States, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 219 Fed. 547, 135 C. C. A. 315, wherein the court said: "It plainly appears, however, that the only time the court ruled was when it entered the judgment, and if when the court entered the judgment it did so by reason of certain views it had in regard to the law and evidence, it was too late after judgment to raise the question as to whether these views were correct or not, unless counsel had placed the court upon record before the end of the trial in regard to the same. In form there were no findings made by the court either general or special, unless we consider the judgment entered a general finding, which seems to have been the view of the court and of counsel. Under the law this judgment, so far as it can be called a finding, was equivalent to the verdict of a jury and was not the subject of exception." Section 700 Rev. Stat. U. S. provides as to what rulings in a case tried to a court, without a jury, may be reviewed by the circuit court, with what might seem to be tiring repetition, established rules for the guidance of counsel as to how these questions may be preserved and reviewed. Experience teaches that it would serve no useful purpose to repeat these rulings.

In Sierra Land, etc., Co. v. Desert Power, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1916) 229 Fed. 982, 144 C. C. A. 264, the court made the general finding. "And the court, having fully considered the premises, finds the issue in favor of the defendant," and entered a judgment accordingly. It was held that the appellate court could not, on writ of error, inquire into the sufficiency of the testimony to support the finding where there was no application to the court for a declaratory judgment, and no finding that upon the whole case the finding should be for the plaintiff, and an exception to the refusal to grant the application, and that the appellate court was limited to a review of such rulings as were excepted to during the progress of the trial.

In Good Pine Lumber Co. v. Duke, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 714, 144 C. C. A. 124, where the record showed no agreed statement of facts and no special finding of facts by the judge, but a general finding, embodied in the judgment, and no finding that upon the whole case the finding should be for the plaintiff, the court said: "In this state of the record, only the rulings of the court during the progress of the case, duly presented by a bill of exceptions, can be here reviewed."

On writ of error to review a judgment in an action tried by consent of the parties to the court without a jury, where the judgment was based upon a general finding, no questions are open for review on error other than those arising upon the process, pleadings or judgment. Ladd, etc., Bank v. Lewis A. Hicks Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 310, 134 C. C. A. 190.

A general finding upon a trial by the court without a jury has by the statute the same effect as the verdict of a jury. The parties are concluded upon the facts by the determination of the court, and nothing is presented for review except as might have been reviewed had there been a trial by jury. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 124, 66 C. C. A. 190.

Where, notwithstanding defendant's application for special findings of facts, the court found generally that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, the facts cannot be reviewed on appeal. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Martin, (C. C. A. Fed Cir. 1903) 190 Fed. 742, 30 C. C. A. 27.

Findings, general or special, have the effect of a verdict of a jury. Norris v. Jackson, (1889) 9 Wall. 125, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 608; Reed v. Stapp, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1892) 52 Fed. 641, 9 U. S. App. 34, 3 C. C. A. 244.

Where an action at law is tried without a jury, under the statute, and only a general finding is made, and the ultimate facts are not agreed upon by the parties, there can be no review of the question whether the judgment is supported by the facts found; and, unless exceptions are taken to the rulings made during the trial, there is no question which can be reviewed by the appellate court. National Surety Co. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 34, 76 C. C. A. 19.

If the finding be general, only such rulings of the court in the progress of the trial can be reviewed as are presented by the bill of exceptions. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 124, 66 C. C. A. 190.

Where, notwithstanding defendant's application for special findings of facts, the court found generally that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, the facts cannot be reviewed on appeal. Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Martin, (C. C. A. Fed Cir. 1903) 190 Fed. 742, 30 C. C. A. 27.

Findings, general or special, have the effect of a verdict of a jury. Norris v. Jackson, (1889) 9 Wall. 125, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 608; Reed v. Stapp, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1892) 52 Fed. 641, 9 U. S. App. 34, 3 C. C. A. 244.

Where an action at law is tried without a jury, under the statute, and only a general finding is made, and the ultimate facts are not agreed upon by the parties, there can be no review of the question whether the judgment is supported by the facts found; and, unless exceptions are taken to the rulings made during the trial, there is no question which can be reviewed by the appellate court. National Surety Co. v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 34, 76 C. C. A. 19.

If the finding be general, only such rulings of the court in the progress of the trial can be reviewed as are presented by the bill of exceptions. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 124, 66 C. C. A. 190.

The sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment cannot be reviewed. West v. Houston Oil Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 343, 89 C. C. A. 169.

An assignment of error that the court "erred in rendering judgment in favor of the plaintiff and against the defendant presents no question which can be reviewed. Fitzgerald v. Bassford, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1906) 142 Fed. 134, 73 C. C. A. 352.

Where there is no formal special finding of facts, but there is a distinct ruling upon a matter of law, the ruling will be reviewed. Lehnen v. Dickson, (1893) 148 U. S. 71, 13 S. Ct. 481, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 373. See Clement v. Phoenix Ins. Co., (1899) 7 Blatchf. 51, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,882. When, by reason of the findings being general, the appellate court cannot determine whether any particular plea which may have been erroneously sustained was not relied on in giving judgment, the case will be remanded. Miller v. Houston City St. R. Co., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1893) 55 Fed. 366, 13 U. S. App. 57, 5 C. C. A. 134.

3. General and Special Findings

a. In General

But the finding must be either one or the other, general or special, and its effect is to be determined upon its character in that regard. Powers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 562, 56 C. C. A. 128.

Where the court rendered a general finding upon which no verdict was entered and thereafter signed a bill of exceptions and a paper purporting to be a special finding and there was no order vacating the general finding and substituting the special, such special finding is wholly without authority of law, and the general finding must stand. Corliss v. Pulaski County, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 289, 53 C. C. A. 567.

Parties have no right to require a federal court, in hearing a law case without a jury, to make a special finding. Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614; Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 961.

In Waialua Agricultural Co. v. Oahu R., etc., Co., (1906) 18 Hawaii 81, it was said that however desirable it may be to obtain special findings from the court, the statute does not require them to be made.
If a party desire to have the finding reviewed he must have the court find the facts specially. Coddington v. Richardson, (1870) 16 Wall. 516, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 520.

If the parties desire a review of the law involved in the case they must either get the court to make a special finding which raises the legal propositions, or they must present to the court their propositions of law and require a ruling on them. Norris v. Jackson, (1869) 9 Wall. 125, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 608; Springfield Fire, etc., Ins. Co. v. Sea, (1874) 21 Wall. 158, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 511.

In Berwind-White Coal Min. Co. v. Martin, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 313, 60 C. A. A. 27, it was said: "The defendant presented a number of requests for special findings of fact and conclusions of law, but the court, without passing upon them, found generally that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. There can be no question as to the entry of propriety of this course. The statute expressly provides that the finding of the court on the facts may be general or special, and you can no more compel the latter than you can require a special verdict from a jury. It is true that in Norris v. Jackson, (1869) 9 Wall. 125, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 608, it is said that, 'if the parties desire a review of the law involved in the case, they must ... get the court to find a special verdict which raises the legal questions;' but it is not to be understood from this that it can be exacted, all that is meant being that the court should be persuaded to do so. Neither is the alternative, which is there suggested, of presenting propositions of law, and requiring the court to rule upon them, of any greater obligation. The right to this has been asserted without success in a number of cases, and the practice must now be considered as settled to the contrary. Mercantile Mut. Ins. Co. v. Folsom, (1873) 18 Wall. 237, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 827; Cooper v. Oomohundro, (1873) 19 Wall. 65, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 47; St. Louis v. Western Union Tel. Co., (1897) 166 U. S. 388, 17 S. Ct. 608, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1044; Key West v. Baur, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1896) 66 Fed. 440, [30 U. S. App. 140], 13 C. C. A. 572; Consolidated Coal Co. v. Polar Wave Ice Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 106 Fed. 798, 45 C. C. A. 639."

But the court should make special findings of fact when it is doubtful, under the decisions, whether the defeated party could otherwise properly present to an appellate court the questions of law involved. Jolliffe v. Metropolitan Securities Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 164 Fed. 650.

Where a general finding is made and judgment is rendered thereon, it cannot be regarded as superseded by a supposed special finding, which was not entered of record, is only found in the bill of exceptions, and does not purport to qualify or take the place of the general finding. U. S. v. Cleage, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 161 Fed. 86, 88 C. C. A. 249.

b. Effect

Whether the finding be general or special, it shall have the same effect as the verdict of a jury; that is to say, it is conclusive as to the facts so found. In the case of a special verdict (finding) the question is presented as it would be if tried by a jury, whether the facts thus found require a judgment for plaintiff or defendant. Powers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 562, 55 C. C. A. 128; York v. Washburn, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 564, 64 C. C. A. 132.

The findings of fact have the same effect as the verdict of a jury, and the Supreme Court does not revise them but merely determines whether they support the judgment. U. S. v. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co., (1915) 236 U. S. 512, 35 S. Ct. 298, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 696.

"Sections 649 and 700 of the Revised Statutes . . . provide for general and spepecial findings in cases where a jury trial is waived; and, according to the settled practice, they admit of no appeal on any question except those which arise in the progress of the trial, as, for example, objections to admission of material evidence, or which would arise on general demurrer, or may be taken as questions of law arising on findings of ultimate facts." Continental, etc., Nat. Bank v. Cobbt, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 511, 118 C. C. A. 615. See also Chautauqua Institution v. Zimmerman, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1916) 293 Fed. 371, 147 C. C. A. 307.

But if upon rejection of evidence no testimony would remain necessary to support the judgment, the mistake would be one of law and the proper subject of a writ of error. See Arthur v. Hart, (1854) 17 How. 6, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 30.

The Supreme Court will not be bound by a conclusion of law based on a finding of facts which is inconsistent with a presumption of fact. French v. Edwards, (1874) 21 Wall. 147, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 534.

V. SPECIAL FINDINGS AND AGREED STATEMENTS OF FACTS

1. Part of Record

And also a general finding or verdict. Wasson v. Saline County, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 917, 34 U. S. App. 689, 20 C. C. A. 227.

2. Time of Making and Filing

To supply a defect in the record, the court may file a finding of facts at a subsequent term, nunc pro tunc. Ætna Fire Ins. Co. v. Boon, (1877) 95 U. S. 117, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 395.

And when the statement of facts is drawn up and filed by the judge after the term as of the day of the trial, it is but reasonable to presume that he had been requested at the time of the trial to do so. McGavock v. Woodrief, (1857) 20 How. 221, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 884.

But additional findings cannot afterward be made upon the request of a party. Lang v. Baxter, (C. C. Me. 1895) 60 Fed. 906.

The statement of facts by the judge, filed three months after rendition of judgment, is irregular. Flanders v. Tweed, (1868) 9 Wall. 425, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 678.

And a paper signed by the parties, filed with the clerk after writ of error sued out and made a part of the record, cannot be considered. Kearn v. Case, (1870) 12 Wall. 275, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 905; Bethell v. Mathews, (1871) 13 Wall. 1, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 556.

3. Manner of Making

A special finding should be a clear and concise statement of the ultimate facts, and not a statement, report, or recapitulation of evidence from which such facts may be found or inferred. The ultimate facts must be so stated that, without inferences, or comparisons, or balancing testimony, or weighing evidence, the case may be determined by the application of pertinent rules of law. If any ultimate fact material to the issues is to be inferred from the whole evidence, or from other facts proved or admitted, the inference must be drawn by the trial court, and the fact must be stated in the finding. Like the special verdict of a jury, a special finding can present only questions of law. Anglo-American Land, etc., Co. v. Lombard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 721, 38 C. C. A. 89.

A special finding should state the ultimate facts on which the law must determine the rights of the parties, and should not contain a statement of the evidence. American Nat. Bank v. Watkins, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 545, 35 C. C. A. 111.

A special finding of facts should be the equivalent of the special verdict of a jury, and should cover all the issues, so that in the event of proceedings in error, if the trial court's conclusions of law are deemed incorrect, and if the proceedings are otherwise without error, the appellate court may, under R. S. sec. 701, infra,
p. 224, direct such judgment as the special finding requires, without the necessity of awarding a new trial. Anglo-American Land, etc., Co. v. Lombard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 721, 68 C. C. A. 89.
A mere setting out of the testimony of a witness, with a statement that the court finds it to be true, is not a finding of fact which will support a judgment. Perkins v. Von Baumbach, (C. C. A. 8th Cir.
Where only probative facts are found, leaving the ultimate facts necessary to support the judgment to be inferred, the judgment must be reversed, and a new 6th Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 562, 56 C. C. A.
128.
Instead of writing and filing them the court might announce its findings in open court and have them entered on the record. Ætna Life Ins. Co. v. Hamilton County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 79 Fed.
Where a court has found what seem to it to be the ultimate facts in the case it will not make further special findings of facts and conclusions of law at the request of the parties. Lang v. Baxter, (C. C. Me. 1895) 69 Fed. 905.
When judgment has been rendered on a general finding, there is no authority for inserting special findings in the bill of exceptions signed at a succeeding term of court. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed.
124, 66 C. C. A. 190.
4. What Constitutes A special finding is not a mere report of the evidence, but a statement of the ut-imate facts on which the law of the case must determine the rights of the parties; a finding of the propositions of fact which the evidence establishes, and not the evidence on which those ultimate facts are supposed to rest. Powers v. U. S., (C. C.
A. 6th Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 562, 56 C. C.
A. 128.
The special finding, contemplated by the statute, corresponds to the special verdict of a jury, is equally specific and responsive to the issues, and is spread at large upon the record, as part thereof, in like manner as is such a verdict. U. S.
v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., (C. C. A.
8th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 126, 92 C. C. A.
578.
Special findings must be of ultimate facts, and not the evidence from which such facts might be inferred or the contrary but are not found. Graham v.

An agreed statement of facts as to certain matters, submitted with leave to refer to exhibits, and no finding or statement agreed as to the ultimate facts, cannot be considered as facts found or agreed, and in the absence of a bill of exceptions presents no question for review. Glenn v. Fant, (1890) 134 U. S.
969.
A special finding of fact, as was said by Mr. Justice Miller in Burr v. Des Moines
R., etc., Co., (1883) 1 Wall. 99, 17 U. S.
(L. ed.) 561, "is a statement of the ut-imate facts or propositions which the evidence is intended to establish, and not the evidence on which those ultimate facts are supposed to rest. The statement must be sufficient in itself without inferences or comparisons, or balancing of testimony, or weighing evidence, to justify the application of the legal principles which must determine the case. It must leave none of the functions of a jury to be discharged by this court, but must have all the suffiency, fullness, and perspicuity of a special verdict. If it requires of the court to weigh conflicting testimony or to balance admitted facts, and deduce from these propositions of fact on which alone a legal conclusion can rest, then it is not such a statement as this court can act upon."
No mere recital of testimony, either in the opinion of the court or in the bill of

An opinion of the trial judge setting forth the reasons for his decision in an action at law tried by a federal court without the intervention of a jury cannot be regarded as a special finding within the meaning of the statute. U. S. v. Sioux City Stock Yards Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 167 Fed. 126, 92 C. C. A. 578.

To found upon such an opinion, much being copied into the judgment entry, become a special finding of the ultimate facts, in the nature of a special verdict. York v. Washburn, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 564, 64 C. C. A. 132.

A special finding should be complete in itself, but may refer to documents in pleadings or otherwise in the record. Wesson v. Seline County, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1898) 73 Fed. 917, 34 U. S. App. 686, 20 C. C. A. 227.

The appellate court cannot consider a case referred unless the facts found by the referee, when confirmed by the court, are treated as the finding of the court. Boogher v. New York Life Ins. Co., (1880) 103 U. S. 90, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 310.

A paper not signed by counsel nor entered on the record, nor made part of the record of the case by bill of exceptions or in any other manner, cannot be considered as an agreed statement of facts. Benedict v. Moiney, etc., Co., (1863) 1 Wall. 99, 17 U. S. (L. ed.) 561.

5. Omissions

In Anglo-American Land, etc., Co. v. Lombard, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 721, 68 C. C. A. 89, it was said: "While the special finding under consideration does not meet the requirements of the Act of Congress, it does sufficiently respond to some of the issues raised by the pleadings, although not responding to others. In this situation the finding may be examined to ascertain whether the ultimate facts found and stated therein are decisive of the controversy, and determine what judgments should be rendered, irrespective of any response which could be made to the issues upon which the finding is silent. If, under a correct application of legal principles, the facts adequately found and stated determine the cases, the imperfection in the special finding becomes immaterial, and the present judgments must be affirmed, or other judgments must be directed in their stead, as the facts found and stated may require. But if the facts found do not, under the application of pertinent rules of law, determine the cases, the judgments must be reversed, and a new trial awarded. In the latter event, the Circuit Court will be precluded from again adjudging in favor of the defendants upon the facts declared by the judgment of reversal to be insufficient to sustain the present judgments, and it will be incumbent upon that court to proceed to the trial and proper determination of the other issues."

6. Effect

Special findings by a trial judge in an action at law in a federal court, where a jury has been waived pursuant to the provisions of R. S. sec. 649, supra, p. 150, have the same effect as special verdicts of a jury, and must embrace a finding on every material issue joined in the case, otherwise the result is a mistrial. Towle v. Boston First Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 566, 82 C. C. A. 580. See also San Fernando Copper Min., etc., Co. v. Humphreys, (5th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 296, 64 C. C. A. 544.

A special finding which states the ultimate fact is conclusive upon the appellate court, even though it contains, in addition, statements of evidence and inferences therefrom. American Nat. Bank v. Watkins, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 545, 56 C. C. A. 111.

A special finding is unassailable when it depends upon conflicting testimony or upon the credibility of witnesses, or so far as there is any testimony consistent with the finding, but is not conclusive if there be no testimony tending to support it. Davis v. Schwartz, (1895) 155 U. S. 631, 15 S. Ct. 237, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 289.

The conclusive effect of a special finding of fact cannot be made to depend on the character of the proof upon which it rests. If such a finding is regarded as conclusive, and not subject to review when it rests on oral testimony, it must be regarded as equally conclusive when it rests on written evidence or on evidence that is in part written and in part oral. Insurance Co. of North America v. International Trust Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 71 Fed. 88, 36 U. S. App. 291, 17 C. C. A. 616.

That a special finding does not follow the preponderance of the testimony cannot be reviewed. Sayward v. Dexter, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 72 Fed. 768, 44 U. S. App. 376, 19 C. C. A. 176; Dooley v. Pease, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1898) 88 Fed. 446; 60 U. S. App. 248, 31 C. C. A. 582.

7. Questions Reviewable

"A special finding made by the trial court under this statute becomes a part of the record, and the appellate court may without a bill of exceptions determine whether the finding is sufficient to support the judgment. We are now set-tled that the question of law whether the special finding of facts supports the judgment is open for determination by the appellate court, although no exception was taken to the judgment in the court below or any specific ruling made by the court below on the question of law involved." Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Barrett, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 118, 111 C. C. A. 158.

Where there are no exceptions to the rulings of the court, the only question for review upon a special finding is whether the facts found are sufficient to support the judgment, and not whether the evi-
tland v. Phenix Ins. Co., (1889) 9 Wall. 461, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 739; Jenni-

If the findings be special the review may extend to the determination of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. No other or different review is permitted. Streeter v. Chicago Sanitary Dist., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 133 Fed. 124, 66 C. C. A. 190; Southern R. Co. v. St. Louis Hay, etc. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 135 Fed. 728, 82 C. C. A. 614; Mason City, etc., R. Co. v. Boynton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 159 Fed. 599, 85 C. C. A. 421; Chicago Great Western R. Co. v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1910) 176 Fed. 237, 100 C. C. A. 41; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Frye-Brunh Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 15, 105 C. C. A. 217.

Decisions upon the admission and exclusion of evidence, upon questions of law, upon the question whether or not there is any substantial evidence to warrant the finding, and upon the question whether or not the finding supports the judgment, are the only rulings at the trial that may be reviewed. Barnsdall v. Wallemeyer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 415, 72 C. C. A. 515.

The true test for determining whether or not a question or ruling in a trial by the court without a jury is reviewable is the answer to the question whether or not it would have been open to review if the trial had been to a jury. The question whether or not at the close of a trial there is substantial evidence to sustain a finding in favor of a party to the action is a question of law which arises in the progress of the trial and may be submitted to the jury if it is review-able on an exception to a ruling upon a request for a peremptory instruction. In a trial by the court without a jury it is revievable upon a motion for a judgment, a request for a declaration of law, or any other action in the trial court which fairly presents this issue of law to that court for determination before the trial ends. The trial ends only when the finding is filed, or, if no finding is filed before, when the judgment is rendered. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Woodson County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 144, 76 C. C. A. 114.

Where a jury is waived, and an action at law is tried by a national court which makes a finding or renders a judgment, no question of fact and no question of mixed law and fact, except those questions of law which are treated by C. C. A. 800 Fed. 787, 111 U. S. App. 372, 28 C. C. A. 130.

Errors alleged in the findings of the court in a trial without a jury are not subject to revision by the Circuit Court of Appeals, that court being limited in that connection to the question whether there is any evidence on which such findings could be made. Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 130 Fed. 951. A special finding is not a bonâ fide purchaser of a note for value, but took the same subject to any defense affecting the consideration, is one of fact, and is not reviewable on appeal as a conclusion of law. American Nat. Bank v. Watkins, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 645, 56 C. C. A. 111.

The facts found should be sufficient to support the judgment, and this means the essential facts and not those probative facts from which the essential facts may be inferred. Powers v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1903) 119 Fed. 562, 56 C. C. A. 128.

An assignment that the court erred in making a particular finding of fact is not reviewable on appeal, if there is any evidence on which to base the finding. San Fernando Copper Min., etc., v. Humphrey, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 269, 54 C. C. A. 544.

When a fact was found upon no evidence, and duly excepted to, an error of law is presented. Merrill v. Floyd, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 50 Fed. 849, 5 U. S. App. 90, 2 C. C. A. 58; Wright v. Bragg, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 96 Fed. 729, 37 C. C. A. 574; King v. Smith, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 110 Fed. 95, 49 C. C. A. 46, 54 L. R. A. 708.

And the appellate court will review, if all the testimony be sent up, but not otherwise. Fales v. New York Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 25 Fed. 234, 30 C. C. A. 38.

In The Francis Wright, (1881) 105 U. S. 381, 387, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1100, it was said, by Chief Justice Waite, that "if the Circuit Court neglect or refuse on request to bring up the case on any or upon a question of fact, material to the determination of the cause, when evidence has been adduced on the subject, an exception to such refusal taken in time and properly presented by a bill of exceptions may be considered here on appeal. So, too, if the court against remonstrance finds a material fact which is not supported by any evidence whatever, and exception is taken, a bill of exceptions may be used to bring up for review the ruling in that particular. In the one case the refusal to find would be equivalent to a ruling that the fact was immaterial; and in the other, that there was some evidence to prove what is found when in truth there was none. Both these are questions of law, and proper subjects for review in an appellate court." It was indicated that the bill of exceptions "must be prepared as in actions at law," where it is used, "not to draw the whole matter into examination again," but only separate and distinct points of law. See also to same effect Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Allen, (1887) 121 U. S. 67, 7 S. Ct. 821, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 865; The John H. Pearson, (1887) 121 U. S. 469, 7 S. Ct. 1008, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 979; The E. A. Packer, (1891) 140 U. S. 580, 11 S. Ct. 784, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 453.

Upon a special finding, a party may insist upon a finding in his favor on the ground that there is a total lack of evidence to support a contrary finding, or, if he have the burden of the issue, on the ground that the evidence in his favor is adequate, unimpeached, and without conflict or uncertainty. Wright v. Bragg, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 96 Fed. 729, 37 C. C. A. 574.

8. Disposal of Case on Error

Evidence which should have been excluded on the trial as irrelevant will be excluded on review under the statute. Black v. Supreme Council, etc., (E. D. Pa. 1903) 120 Fed. 580.

All the facts of the case being ascertained by the special finding, as they would be by special verdict of a jury, there is no reason for awarding a new trial, but judgment will be directed as the special finding requires. Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, (1887) 120 U. S. 20, 7 S. Ct. 440, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 573; Reed v. Stapp, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1892) 92 Fed. 641, 9 U. S. App. 34, 3 C. C. A. 244; Evans v. Kister, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 828, 35 C. C. A. 28.

Where, in an action on an award pursuant to a fire policy, a reversal was required because of an error of the trial court in disposing of a question of law and there was no disputed question of fact in the case, the Court of Appeals will render final judgment instead of remanding the cause for a new trial. Fellman v. Royal Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 577, 106 C. C. A. 857.

VI. RULINGS AND EXCEPTIONS

1. Necessity

"When a party in the Circuit Court waives a jury, and agrees to submit his case to the court, it must be done in writing; and if he wishes to raise any question of law upon the merits in the court above he should request special findings of fact by the court framed like a special verdict of a jury, and then reserve his exceptions to those findings, if he deems them not to be sustained by any evidence; and if he wishes to except to the conclusions of law, drawn by the court from the facts found, he should have them separately stated and excepted to. In this way, and in this way only, is it possible for him to review completely the action of the court below upon the merits."—Per Taft, J., in Humphreys v. Cincinnati Third Nat. Bank, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 852, 43 U. S. App. 698, 21 C. C. A. 538, followed in Fales v. New York Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 98 Fed. 234, 39 C. C. A. 38.

In Phenix Securities Co. v. Dittinger, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 892, 140 C. C. A. 336, on writ of error to review a judgment for the plaintiff, there being no finding of facts, the court said: "Upon the assignment that there was no evidence to sustain the judgment, the question arises, as to what extent, may the decision of the court below be reviewed here upon the writ of error? ... The case at bar was submitted to the court for decision upon the pleadings and evidence at the close of the trial, and the question whether there was any evidence to sustain the judgment for the plaintiff was not presented to the court. Under these circumstances, upon a review of the case in this court, we are confined to the consideration of the question whether the complaint stated a cause of action, and whether any objection was taken and exception reserved to the admission of testimony in the course of the trial."

While it is true that "when the finding is special, the review may extend to the determination of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment," yet, in order to entitle a party to that review, he must have made the proper objection to the judgment as entered, or moved to modify it and reserved an objection to the action of the court. Press v. Davis, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 287, 9 U. S. App. 546, 4 C. C. A. 318; Barnard v. Randle, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 110 Fed. 906, 49 C. C. A. 177.

A defense not brought to the attention of nor ruled on by the court cannot be considered on appeal. Grattan v. C. and P. R. R., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 97 Fed. 145, 38 C. C. A. 84.

Where no special finding is made or asked and no exception is taken to any ruling of the court during the trial, no appeal will lie, German Alliance Ins. Co. v. Franklin County, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 783, 9 U. S. App. 676, 6 C. C. A. 118.

On a motion to revive a judgment where there is no special finding of facts and no exception has been saved as to the admission of evidence there is no question raised for review, except as arising upon the hearing of the petition. Crawford v. Foster, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1898) 84 Fed. 939, 56 U. S. App. 231, 28 C. C. A. 576.

2. Sufficiency

The rule, in trials by jury, that "if a series of propositions is embodied in instructions, and the jury excepted to a mass, if any one of the propositions is correct the exception must be overruled," should be applied to cases of this kind. Boogher v. New York Life Ins. Co., (1880) 103 U. S. 90, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 310.

In Philadelphia Casualty Co. v. Fechheimer, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 220 Fed. 401, 136 C. C. A. 25, the court held that a general exception to the court's order in overruling en bloc a number of exceptions was too indefinite to present any question for review by the appellate court.

3. Review

When the statute speaks of the "rulings of the court in the progress of the trial," it includes all rulings on questions of law which do not arise upon taking an appeal except the finding of facts is formally made. Clemente v. Phenix Ins. Co., (1889) 7 Blatchf. 51, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,882; Key v. West v. Baer, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1895) 66 Fed. 443, 30 U. S. App. 140, 13 C. C. A. 372; White v. German Alliance Ins. Co. (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 268, 43 C. C. A. 216. It does not include the gen-

A party may allege as error a material defect apparent upon the record proper, which would have been fatal upon a motion in arrest of judgment after verdict. American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Athens Woolen Mills, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 581, 34 C. C. A. 161.

4. Bill of Exceptions

Objections to the admission or exclusion of evidence, or to the court's rulings on propositions of law, in a case tried to the court without a jury, must appear by bill of exceptions in order to be reviewed. Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1894) 130 Fed. 951.

But where a case is tried to the court without a jury, a bill of exceptions cannot be used to bring up the entire testimony for review. Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1894) 130 Fed. 951.

In Dunsmuir v. Scott, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 200, 135 C. C. A. 104, the court said: "The rule is well settled that if a jury trial is waived, and a general finding is made by the court, review in an appellate court is limited to such rulings of the trial court in the progress of the trial as are presented by a bill of exceptions, and that the bill of exceptions cannot be used to bring up the oral testimony for review."

On writ of error to review a judgment of a Circuit Court in an action tried by stipulation to the court without a jury, as provided by the statute where there was a general finding, in the absence of a bill of exceptions, the record presents only the question whether the pleadings support the finding and judgment. Mexico Nat. R. Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 125 Fed. 1004, 60 C. C. A. 690; Mexico Nat. R. Co. v. O'Leary, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 363, 61 C. C. A. 582; Marinetta Sawmill Co. v. Scofield, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 562, 98 C. C. A. 344.

A bill of exceptions must be prepared and settled before the end of the term at which the judgment was rendered. Sweet v. Perkins, (F. D. Wis. 1885) 24 Fed. 777.

The Supreme Court will not consider a bill of exceptions filed by order of court at a subsequent term in the absence of consent of parties and notice to the adverse party, where no extension of time for that purpose had been applied for or granted. Muller v. Eilers, (1875) 91 U. S. 249, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 319.

Sec. 701. [Judgment or decree on review.] The Supreme Court may affirm, modify, or reverse any judgment, decree, or order of a circuit court, or district court acting as a circuit court, or of a district court in prize causes, lawfully brought before it for review, or may direct such judgment, decree, or order to be rendered, or such further proceedings to be had by the inferior court, as the justice of the case may require. The Supreme Court shall not issue execution in a cause removed before it from such courts, but shall send a special mandate to the inferior court to award execution thereupon. [R. S.]

The Circuit Courts of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, § 4, supra, p. 143, provided that "the review, by appeal, by writ of error, or otherwise, from the existing circuit courts shall be had only in the Supreme Court of the United States or in the circuit courts of appeals hereby established according to the provisions of this act regulating the same." And section 10 of said Circuit Courts of Appeals Act, supra, p. 234, provides for the removal of cases reviewed by the Supreme Court or by the Circuit Court of Appeals superseding pro tanto the provisions in the above text section. But section 11 of said Circuit Courts of Appeals Act, supra, p. 176, provides that "all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this Act in respect of the Circuit Courts of Appeals."

The foregoing sections of the Circuit Courts of Appeals Act were not in the list of repealed provisions in Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1065; and section 291 of said Judicial Code, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1083, provides that Applicable to Circuit Courts of Appeals.

In Farrar v. Wheeler, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 145 Fed. 482, 75 C. C. A. 386, it was said: "The series of statutes resulting in section 701 of the Revised Statutes was formally considered in Ballew v. U. S., (1895) 160 L. S. 187, 196, 16 S. Ct. 263, 40 U. S. (L. ed. 388, and sequence, and the flexible powers of the Supreme Court, which powers we hold by the Act establishing the Circuit Court of Appeals, was fully explained. At page 202 of 100 U. S., page 228 of 16 S. Ct., 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 388, the conclusion is as follows: 'From this, and from a review of the legislation on the subject of the powers conferred upon this court as a reviewing court, it follows as a necessary conclusion that general authority was given to it on a writ of error to take such action as the ends of justice, not only in civil but in criminal cases, might require.'"

Under this section the Circuit Court of Appeals is vested with power to modify as well as with power to affirm or reverse any judgment of the District Court, and in a case tried without a jury, where the findings of fact made by the court are undisputed, as well as when they are agreed upon by the parties, the proper judgment may be rendered thereon in the appellate tribunal after a reversal of the judgment of the trial court. U. S. v. Illinois Surety Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 653, 141 C. C. A. 409.

The Circuit Court of Appeals must affirm the judgment of the trial court if it finds on the record any reason why it considers sound, even though the district judge may have rejected that reason and rested his decree on some other ground. Dean v. Davis, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 88, 128 C. C. A. 623.

Instances of exercise of power.—In New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Piaggio, (1872) 16 Wall. 378, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 358, the judgment was reversed, and a venire de novo refused and directions entered to the Circuit Court to modify the judgment by disallowing a single item of $5,000, which was specifically distinguished by the verdict of the jury. In New York, etc., R. Co. v. Estill, (1893) 147 U. S. 591, 13 S. Ct. 444, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 292, wherein the jury found the issues for the plaintiff and allowed a large amount of interest as shown by the record, but assessed the total damages in lump, the Supreme Court directed a new judgment allowing the principal without interest. In American Nat. Bank v. Williams, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1906) 101 Fed. 943, 42 C. C. A. 101, the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the judgment entered on a verdict of the jury and remitted the case with directions to rectify the allowance of interest, and to enter a judgment for the diminished amount and annulling it for the residue.

In Felton v. Spiro, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1897) 78 Fed. 576, 47 U. S. App. 402, 24 C. C. A. 321, it appeared that the error occurred after verdict with reference to a motion for a new trial and the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the judgment, leaving the verdict to stand, but directing further proceedings with regard to what was subsequent thereon.

In Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Jones, (1894) 155 U. S. 333, 15 S. Ct. 136, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 176, considered and approved in Washington Gas Light Co. v. Lansden, (1899) 172 U. S. 534, 19 S. Ct. 296, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 543, the judgment below was reversed with directions to permit the plaintiffs below to elect to be nonsuited as to one defendant, and to take judgment on the verdict against the other defendants and with further direction that, if they did not so elect, the entire verdict was to be set aside and a new trial ordered.

In Great Western Coal Co. v. Chicago & Great Western R. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 98 Fed. 274, 39 C. C. A. 79, where the declaration contained two counts and a verdict had been rendered for the plaintiff on the second count, and, by direction of the trial court, for the defendant on the first count, the judgment was reversed, with an order that the judgment on the second count should stand, but that there should be a new trial on the first.

In cases where the only error related to the assessment of damages, it has been ordered that, on a partial remittitur, the judgment be affirmed. In such cases it has sometimes been required that the remittitur be made in the court below and sometimes in the appellate court; and sometimes the judgment has been reversed and remanded to the court below for all proceedings with reference thereto. See Hansen v. Boyd, (1896) 161 U. S. 397, 16 S. Ct. 371, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 746; Hazard Powder Co. v. Volger, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 122, 12 U. S. App. 655, 7 C. C. A. 466; Farrar v. Wheeler, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 482, 75 C. C. A. 386.

Modifying judgment.—Under this section the Circuit Court of Appeals is vested with power to modify, as well as to affirm or reverse, any judgment of the District Court. U. S. v. Illinois Surety Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 653, 141 C. C. A. 409.

Where all questions of fact have been tried and determined without error, the incorporation in the judgment of provisions which are unauthorized does not necessitate a new trial, but only a modification of the judgment. Mason City, etc., R. Co. v. Boynton, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 158 Fed. 599, 85 C. C. A. 421.

Where there is error on the face of the record, in the allowance of damages by the jury, the Supreme Court need not direct a new trial, but may modify the judgment by disallowing the erroneous item and remanding the case with directions to enter a judgment for the residue. New Orleans, N. & N. R. Co. v. Mangigio, (1872) 16 Wall. 378, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 353.

The judgment need not be reversed in its entirety for errors of the court in allowing items to which plaintiff was not entitled, but the Supreme Court may modify the judgment by reducing the amount, and so modified, affirm it. U. S. v. Eaton, (1898) 169 U. S. 323, 18 S. Ct. 374, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 767.

Criminal case.—On affirmation of a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, the Circuit Court of Appeals may, at least with the consent of the United States attorney, authorize the trial judge to modify the sentence imposed. Scott v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 165 Fed. 172, 91 C. C. A. 306. And where there is error as to one of the counts in the indictment on which defendant was convicted and no error as to the other counts, the Supreme Court, after reversing the judgment which was on both counts, can annul the verdict upon the one count and leave it to stand unaffected by the other. Ballew v. U. S., (1896) 180 U. S. 157, 15 S. Ct. 283, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 388.

Special findings control.—The Supreme Court can only direct such judgment as is authorized by the facts specially found by the court below. Pullman's Palace Car Co. v. Metropolitan St. R. Co., (1895) 157 U. S. 94, 15 S. Ct. 503, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 632.

Rehearing below.—"After an appeal in equity to this court we cannot upon motion set aside a decree of the court below and grant a rehearing. We can only affirm, reverse, or modify the decree appealed from and that upon the hearing of the cause." Roemer v. Simon, (1875) 91 U. S. 150, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 267, reversing Roemer v. Simon, (1875) 2 B. & A. Pat. Cas. 72, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11,998.

When the Supreme Court has executed its power in a cause before it and its final decree or judgment requires some further act to be done, it cannot issue an execution but must send a special mandate to the court below to award it. Whatever was before the court, and is disposed of, is considered as finally settled. The inferior court is bound by the decree as the law of the case, and must carry it into execution according to the mandate. They cannot vary it, or examine it for any other purpose than execution; or give any other or further relief; or review it upon any matter decided on appeal for error apparent, or intermeddle with it, further than to settle so much as has been remanded. Sibbald v. U. S., (1858) 12 Pet. 488, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167.

In executing a mandate from the Supreme Court, the court below must be guided by the mandate itself. It is the judgment of the Supreme Court transmitted to the inferior court, and when the direction contained in it is precise and unambiguous, it is the duty of the court to which it is directed to carry it into execution, and not to look elsewhere for authority to change its meaning. West v. Brashears, (1840) 14 Pet. 51, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 350.

But where the court below is referred to testimony to ascertain the amount to be decreed and is authorized to take new evidence on the point, it may sometimes happen that there will be some uncertainty and ambiguity in the decree; and in such case the court below has unquestionably the right to resort to the opinion delivered at the time, in order to assist in expounding it. West v. Brashears, (1840) 14 Pet. 51, 10 U. S. (L. ed.) 350.

Execution of judgment—Effect of state statute.—The rule that it is not within the power of the trial court in entering the judgment of the Supreme Court to award a new trial, and it only remains to carry the judgment into execution, cannot apply to an action of ejectment where the party is entitled by the law of the state in which the action arose to a new trial without showing cause, and in regard to which the trial court possesses no discretion. The judgment entered in an action of ejectment in such case by direction of the Supreme Court stands subject to the same control by the lower court as if thus rendered in the first instance. Smale v. Mitchell, (1892) 143 U. S. 99, 12 S. Ct. 353, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

Rehearing or appeal after mandate.—After mandate no rehearing will be granted, and on a subsequent appeal nothing is brought up but the proceeding subsequent to the mandate. Sibbald v. U. S., (1838) 12 Pet. 488, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 1167.

Second appeals or writs of error, as the case may be, will lie in certain cases where it is alleged that the mandate of the appellate court has not been properly executed; but the appeal or writ of error in such cases will bring up nothing for re-examination except the proceeding subsequent to the mandate. Needful explanations may be derived from the original record, but the re-examination cannot extend to anything that was decided in the antecedent appeal or writ of error. Stewart v. Salamon, (1878) 97 U. S. 361, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1044; Illinois v. Illinois Cent. R. Co., (1902) 184 U. S. 77, 22 S. Ct. 300, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 440, citing numerous cases to the same effect.

And an appeal from a decree entered upon a mandate and in all respects according to its directions, will be dismissed with costs. Stewart v. Salamon, (1878) 97 U. S. 361, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 1044. In Roberts v. Cooper, (1857) 20 How. 467, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 467, in the last trial the Circuit Court was requested to give instructions to the jury contrary to the principles established by this court on the first trial, and nearly all the exceptions now urged against the charge are founded on such refusal. But we cannot be compelled on a second writ of error in the same case to review our decision on the first. It has been settled by the decisions of this court, that after a case has been brought here and decided and a mandate issued to the court below, if a second writ of error is sued out, it brings up for review nothing but the proceedings subsequent to the mandate. None of the questions which were before the court on the first writ of error can be reheard or examined on the second. To allow a second writ of error or appeal to a court of last resort on the same questions which were open to dispute on the first, would lead to needless litigation. In chancery, a bill of review is sometimes allowed on petition to the court; but there would be no end to a suit if every obstinate litigant could, by repeated appeals, compel a court to listen to criticisms on their opinions or speculate on chances from changes in its members. . . . We can now notice, therefore, only such errors as are alleged to have occurred in the decisions on questions which were peculiar to the second trial."

Remanding case with instructions.—Where the Supreme Court settles the law, but the findings of fact upon which the judgment is to be awarded are not sufficiently specific to fix the judgment, the cause may be remanded with instructions to make further inquiry as to the facts and to apply the law as found, to the facts so found. Little Miami, etc., v. Co. v. U. S., (1885) 106 U. S. 277, 2 S. Ct. 627, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 724.

In Illinois Cent. R. Co. v. Illinois, (1892) 146 U. S. 387, 13 S. Ct. 110, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 1018, the decree under review was affirmed in all respects except one as to which the cause was remanded for further investigation of the facts upon which it depended.

Entry of judgment by Supreme Court.—Where the only error disclosed in the appeal record is that the judgment rendered is erroneous, as against the defendants jointly and not severally, the Supreme Court will not set aside the verdict and remand the case for a new trial but will render the judgment which the court below should have rendered and certify the same to the trial court. Germainia Fire Ins. Co. v. Boykin, (1879) 12 Wall. 433, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 442.

Bill of review after affirmation of decree.—Where the original decree has been affirmed, without reservation of right of review, a bill of review will not lie. Upon this question, in Southard v. Russell, (1853) 16 How. 547, 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 1055, it was said: "The better opinion is that a bill of review will not lie at all for errors of law alleged on the face of the decree after the judgment of the appellate court. . . . Nor will a bill of review lie in the case of newly discovered evidence after the publication, or decree below, where a decision has taken place on appeal, unless the right is reserved in the decree of the appellate court or permission be given on an application to that court for the purpose." This appears to be the practice of the Court of Chancery and House of Lords in England, and we think it founded in principles essential to the proper administration of the law, and to a reasonable termination of litigation between parties in chancery suits." While this was a dictum, it is quoted with approval in Kingsbury v. Buckner, (1890) 134 U. S. 650, 10 S. Ct. 638, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, and was followed in Franklin Sav. Bank v. Taylor, (C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 53 Fed. 854, 9 U. S.
App. 406, 4 C. C. A. 55 (reversing (N. D. II. 1891) 50 Fed. 269), wherein the court regarded it applicable not only to a decree which has been affirmed but also to one entered upon the order of the appellate court.

And this is so although the judgment of affirmation was by an equally divided court...Leslie v. Urbana, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 56 Fed. 702; 9 U. S. App. 576, 6 C. C. A. 111.

Execution for costs.—The rules of the Supreme Court and Circuit Courts of Appeals provide that when costs are allowed the clerk shall insert the amount in the mandate, with the bill of items annexed. Rule 24, Supreme Court Rules, 3 S. Ct. xii; Rule 31, Court of Appeals Rules, 150 Fed. cxxxiii, 79 C. C. A. cxxiiii. Therefore it has been held that to authorize a Circuit Court to issue execution for costs awarded by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the mandate should contain a special provision directing the same. American Trust, etc., Bank r. Zeigler Coal Co., (N. D. Ill. 1906) 165 Fed. 512.

In Corn Products Refining Co. v. Chicago Real Estate Loan, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 63, 107 C. C. A. 283, it was held that where, on appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals, the bill of costs was taxed by the clerk and annexed to the mandate as required by the Circuit Court of Appeals Rule 29 (6), 150 Fed. ciii, 79 C. C. A. ciii, the mandate was sufficient, both for incorporation of the costs in the order with reference to costs in the Circuit Court, and for the issuance of an execution out of the Circuit Court for the collection of the residue after a set-off.

Sec. 1010. [Damages and costs on affirmation in error.] Where, upon a writ of error, judgment is affirmed in the Supreme Court or a circuit court, the court shall adjudge to the respondents in error just damages for his delay, and single or double costs, at its discretion. [R. S.]

"Circuit" Courts mentioned in this section were abolished by Judicial Code, § 289, supra; this title, vol. 5, p. 1082. The Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, § 4, supra, p. 143, deprived the Circuit Courts of all appellate jurisdiction, but section 11 of said Act, supra, p. 170, continues in force, in respect of Circuit Courts of Appeals, "all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error."

I. AFFIRMANCE BY SUPREME COURT
   1. Power of Court, in General

   "Our experience teaches that the only way to discourage frivolous appeals and writs of error is by the use of our power to award damages, and we think this a proper case in which to say that hereafter more attention will be given to that subject, and the rule enforced both according to its letter and spirit." Whitney v. Cook, (1879) 99 U. S. 607, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 446, per Mr. Chief Justice Waite.

   "Does the power to award damages for delay exist where a writ of error is dismissed because of the unsubstantial and frivolous character of the asserted federal right and the conclusive inference that the writ was prosecuted for mere delay, which arises from such ground for dismissal?" was the question which the court propounded to itself and answered in the affirmation of Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 102, 33 S. Ct. 80, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 140, a case of a writ of error to a state court.

   Where there was no power on a motion to dismiss to consider whether a case was prosecuted for delay only, a prayer for dismissal on such ground could not be allowed and damages could not be awarded. Amory v. Amory, (1875) 91 U. S. 356, 23 U. S. (L. ed.) 436, distinguished in Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 102, 33 S. Ct. 80, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 140.

   Where a judgment is affirmed upon a writ of error there can be no allowance of damages but for the delay. Cotton v. Wallace, (1796) 3 Dall. (Pa.) 302, 1 U. S. (L. ed.) 612.

   2. Allowance of Damages Discretionary

   "It is...solely for the decision of the Supreme Court whether any damages or interest (as a part thereof) are to be allowed or not in cases of affirmation. If upon the affirmation no allowance of interest or damages is made, it is equivalent to a denial of any interest or damages; and the Circuit Court, in carrying into effect the decree of affirmation, cannot enlarge the amount thereby decreed." Boyce v. Grundy, (1835) 9 Pet. 275, 9 U. S. (L. ed.) 127.

In West Wisconsin R. Co. v. Foley, (1877) 94 U. S. 100, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 71, it was held that while, with Supreme Court Rule 23 in force, the court could not award as damages for delay more than ten per cent. upon the amount of the judgment, the court could, in the exercise of its discretion, give less.

3. Interest

4. Evidence of Purpose of Delay

In Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 102, 33 S. Ct. 80, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 140, a writ of error to a state court, the court said: "That the unsubstantial and frivolous character of the only federal question relied upon of necessity concluded the conclusion that the writ was prosecuted for delay, is, in our opinion, indubitable."

"It is clear that there is no error in this record. The answer does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense to the action. No counsel have appeared to prosecute the suit, no brief has been filed, and no error assigned. We are entirely satisfied that the case has been brought here for delay." West Wisconsin R. Co. v. Foley, (1877) 94 U. S. 100, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 71.

There can have been no ground for the writ of error under the former adjudications of this court, and there is no attempt to question these adjudications. We are obliged, therefore, to regard this writ of error as prosecuted for delay." Pennywitt v. Eaton, (1873) 15 Wall. 392, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 114.

"There is nothing in the record which tends to show error in this judgment or to repel the conclusion that the writ is prosecuted merely for delay." Hennessy v. Sheldon, (1871) 12 Wall. 440, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 446.

In Prentice v. Pickersgill, (1868) 6 Wall. 511, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 790, where the defendant pleaded payment and also an arbitration and award, and utterly failed to prove either defense, the court decided that the writ of error was sued out merely for delay.

In Sutton v. Bancroft, (1860) 23 How. 320, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 454, where damages for delay were awarded, the court said: "The plaintiffs in error were sued on a promissory note executed by them. They did not pretend to have any defense. They entered a false plea, which was overruled on demurrer. They refused to plead in bar. Judgment was entered against them in due form, for want of a plea. They do not pretend to allege any error in the proceedings."

Where the defendants did not except to the ruling of the trial court granting leave to the plaintiff to amend his declaration, and did not assign error in the Supreme Court, and failed to appear and prosecute their writ of error, and it was obvious, from an inspection of the transcript, that there was no error, in view of repeated decisions of the Supreme Court, damages for delay were awarded. Jenkins v. Banning, (1860) 23 How. 455, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 580.

"No question was raised upon the trial of this case in the court below, for the consideration of this court, nor have the plaintiffs in error, by counsel or otherwise, made one here. The writ of error was obviously sued out for delay." Kilbourne v. State Sav. Inst., (1860) 22 How. 503, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 370.

5. Damages Awarded

In Deming v. Carlisle Packing Co., (1912) 226 U. S. 102, 33 S. Ct. 80, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 140, the court directed the imposition of a penalty, in addition to interest, of five per cent on the amount of the judgment recovered in the state court whose judgment was affirmed.

In a case where the Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in a personal injury action as against the contention that the plaintiff was shown to have been guilty of contributory negligence, the Supreme Court, concurring in the view that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the verdict, and there being no question of law involved, affirmed the judgment with ten per cent damages. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Prater, (1913) 229 U. S. 177, 33 S. Ct. 637, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139.

"As a superseded bond was given in this case, and thus the writ of error has delayed the proceedings on the judgment, and as it appears to us to have been sued out merely for delay, we award damages on the amount of the judgment at the rate of ten per centum, in addition to interest." Wilson v. Everett, (1891) 139 U. S. 616, 11 S. Ct. 664, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 286. The same award was made under the same circumstances in Gregory Consol. Min. Co. v. Starr, (1891) 141 U. S. 222, 35 S. Ct. 715, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 715.

II. AFFIRMANCE BY CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS

It cannot be said that a writ of error to review a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for personal injury was sued out for delay, so as to authorize ten per cent damages to be assessed under rule 30 of the Circuit Court of Appeals (130 Fed. xxxv) where the Circuit Court of Appeals had construed a state statute in accordance with plaintiff's contention prior to a binding construction thereof to the contrary by the highest state court. Joplin, etc., R. Co. v. Payne, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 387, 114 C. C. A. 305. Nor, in an action for libel, where a state statute involved had not been construed by the state Supreme Court and there was some conflict of authorities on the question, Times-Democrat Pub. Co. v. Mozez, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1903) 136 Fed. 761, 69 C. C. A. 418.

But ten per cent. damages were awarded where "the plaintiff in error must have known that no question could, upon the record, be presented to the court for its decision." Chicago Terminal Transfer R. Co. v. Bamberger, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 884, 65 C. C. A. 64.

Sec. 1011. [Reversal on error limited.] There shall be no reversal in the Supreme Court or in a circuit court upon a writ of error, for error in ruling any plea in abatement, other than a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, or for any error in fact. [R. S.]

I. MATTERS REVIEWABLE GENERALLY

Decisions upon the admission and exclusion of evidence, upon questions of law, upon the question whether or not there is any substantial evidence to warrant the finding, and upon the question whether or not the finding supports the judgment, are the only rulings at the trial that may be reviewed. Barnsdall v. Waltemeyer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 415, 73 C. C. A. 615.

Upon a writ of error only questions of law apparent on the record can be considered; there can be no inquiry whether there was error in dealing with questions of fact. Behn v. Campbell, (1907) 205 U. S. 403, 27 S. Ct. 602, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 857.

The issue of null null record is an issue of fact, and as such no writ of error lies from the judgment of the District Court on that fact. U. S. v. Cook, (1819) 2 Mason 22, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 14,851.

Re-examination of allowance.—Whether the mere amount of an allowance under a statute can be re-examined in the Supreme Court by virtue of this section was left open in question in Meeker v. Lehigh Valley R. Co., (1915) 236 U. S. 412, 35 S. Ct. 328, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 644, Ann. Cas. 19166 691.

II. APPLICABILITY GENERALLY OF SECTION

This section is applicable to the Circuit Court of Appeals.—Hall v. Houghton, etc., Mercantile Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 60 Fed. 350, 10 U. S. App. 644, 8 C. C. A. 661; Paul v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 130 Fed. 951; U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Woodson County, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 143 Fed. 144, 76 C. C. A. 114.

Application to case coming from state court.—"This provision has been a part of the judiciary acts from the beginning, and often has been applied upon writs of error to the Circuit and District Courts, but never to a case coming here from a state court." Buck Stove, etc., Co. v. Vick- ers, (1912) 226 U. S. 205, 33 S. Ct. 41, 57 U. S. (L. ed.) 189.

III. PLEA IN ABATEMENT

In general.—A judgment may not be reversed in the federal courts for error in ruling any plea in abatement. Barnsdall v. Waltzmeyer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 415, 73 C. C. A. 615; Cunning-

The action of a trial court in not sustaining a plea in abatement interposed by the defendants to an indictment, based on the ground that it was procured by the wrongful conduct before the grand jury of testimony and evidence which was obtained by an illegal search and seizure of their private papers and documents, is not a ground for reversal, the plea having been heard by the trial court upon pleas, answer, replication and evidence introduced by both parties, the question involved being wholly a question of fact. Mounday v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 225 Fed. 965, 140 C. C. A. 93.

What is plea in abatement.—An answer in an action on a judgment in a federal court, setting up a parol agreement between the parties that in consideration of the defendant's consent to the taking of the judgment the plaintiff should take no steps for its enforcement until the termination of another suit which is still pending, is in effect a plea in abatement under the Wisconsin practice, and under this section. Marinette Sawmill Co. v. Sce, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 592, 98 C. C. A. 344.

A judgment overruling a demurrer to a plea in abatement, without further order or judgment in the cause, is not subject to review under this section. Cunningham v. Rodgers, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 835, 96 C. C. A. 507.

The plea of another action pending is a plea in abatement within the meaning of this section, and judgment thereon is not subject to revision in the Supreme Court. Piquignot v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1853) 16 How. 104. 14 U. S. (L. ed.) 983; Stephens v. Monongahela Nat. Bank, (1884) 111 U. S. 197, 4 S. Ct. 336, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 399.

IV. JURISDICTIONAL QUESTIONS

The jurisdiction of the court referred to in the exception in this statute seems to relate to jurisdiction as to subject matter, and clearly shows that pleas in abatement are not to be favored. Hinds v. Keith, (C. C. A: 5th Cir. 1893) 57 Fed. 10, 13 U. S. App. 222, 6 C. C. A. 231.

V. QUESTIONS OF FACT AND EVIDENCE

"When an action at law is tried before a jury, their verdict is not subject to review unless there is absence of substantial evidence to sustain it. and even then it is not reviewable unless a request has been made for a peremptory instruction, and an exception taken to the ruling of the court." Pennsylvania Casualty Co. v. Whiteway, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 782, 127 C. C. A. 332.

So the United States Supreme Court has said in a case as to a finding of fact that there was a contract: "As to the finding of fact that there was a contract by the first administrator giving to the attorneys an interest in the proceeds of the claim, with authority to compromise it, this court is prohibited, by section 1011 of the Revised Statutes, from reversing a case on a writ of error, except in fact. In this case there was a dispute as to the fact, and evidence on both sides, and it was a fair exercise of the judgment of the court, on the evidence before it, to make the finding of fact it did. Under such circumstances, an erroneous finding of the fact cannot be held to be an error of law." Jefferies v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., (1884) 110 U. S. 305, 4 S. Ct. 8, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 150.
And in another case the Supreme Court has declared: "Questions of fact will not be reviewed by this court in common-law actions, nor can the questions of law presented in such cases be re-examined here unless the matters of fact out of which they arise are, in some authorized form, given in the record." Crow v. Brewer, (1873) 19 Wall. 70, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 63.

Again the Circuit Court of Appeals has said in this connection: "The court below made its finding upon the statement and the evidence, and it must stand." Section 1011, Rev. St., which governs this court in this matter, provides that 'there shall be no reversal in the supreme court or in a circuit court upon a writ of error ... for any error in fact.' No requests for any declarations of law were made to the court before the trial closed, and that court made no such declarations. No request for any declaration or holding that the evidence was insufficient to sustain a finding or judgment in favor of the defendant in error was made, and none that the court should make any other finding than that it actually did make upon any of the specific questions submitted to it. The result is that none of these questions can be considered. On a writ of error only those questions of law which were presented to and ruled upon in the court below in the trial of the case are subject to review in this court. The finding of the court, whether general or special, performs the office of the verdict of a jury. When it is made and filed, the trial is ended. Even the question whether or not the evidence is sufficient to sustain the finding can only be presented by a request for a peremptory holding that upon the undisputed facts the finding must be otherwise." Citizens' Bank v. Farwell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 63 Fed. 117, 27 C. C. A. 266, 11 C. C. A. 108.

This principle applies in an action to recover damages for personal injuries alleged to be caused by the negligence of another. In a case where this question was considered the court said: "Careful examination of the evidence has fully satisfied us that, as a whole, it sufficed to present, as matter of fact for determination by the jury, the question whether there was negligence on the defendant's part, which, of itself and without contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff, was the proximate and decisive cause of his injury; and it would be useless to consider the testimony in detail for the purpose of ascertaining whether the jury's conclusion upon this question was right, for, even if we believed it to be wrong, we would have no authority to correct it." Pittsburgh & R. Co. v. Sullivan, (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1909) 166 Fed. 749, 92 C. C. A. 429.

If a defendant below desires to test, on writ of error in the Circuit Court of Appeals, the sufficiency of the evidence to sustain the verdict, he should ask at the close of the whole evidence a peremptory instruction for a verdict in his behalf. Not having done so, the court cannot consider the evidence with a view of determining whether it was sufficient to warrant a verdict for the plaintiff. Auckland v. Stabler, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 50 Fed. 689, 4 U. S. App. 324, 1 C. C. A. 616; German Ins. Co. v. Frederick, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 144, 19 L. J. Co. v. Snowdon, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1893) 58 Fed. 342, 12 U. S. App. 704, 7 C. C. A. 264; Lincoln v. Sun Vapor Street Light Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1894) 59 Fed. 756, 19 U. S. App. 431, 8 C. C. A. 253; Western Coal, etc., Co. v. Ingraham, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1895) 70 Fed. 219, 36 U. S. App. 1, 17 C. C. A. 71; Joplin, etc., R. Co. v. Payne, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 387, 114 C. C. A. 305.

Where the evidence is sufficient to require the submission of a case to the jury, an assignment of error based on the denial of defendant's request for a directed verdict cannot be sustained. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Newell, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 394, 93 C. C. A. 1.

Special verdict.—Every special verdict, in order to enable the appellate court to act upon it, must find the facts on which the court is to pronounce the judgment according to law, and not merely state the evidence of facts. In this manner it becomes part of the record. Suydam v. Williamson, (1857) 20 How. 427, 15 U. S. (L. ed.) 978.

General verdict.—Where there is no demurrer to the declaration or other exception to the sufficiency of the pleadings, no exception to the rulings of the court in the progress of the trial, in the admission or exclusion of evidence, or otherwise, no request for a ruling upon the legal sufficiency or effect of the verdict, no evidence, and no motion in arrest of judgment, and the only matter presented by the bill of exceptions which the appellate court is asked to review arises upon the exception to the general finding by the court upon the evidence adduced at the trial, and where the trial is held without a jury, the general finding is conclusive of the issues of fact, and there is no question of law presented by the record, and under this section a revision is forbidden. Martinton v. Fairbanks, (1888) 115 U. S. 870, 5 S. Ct. 321, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 692; World's Columbian Exposition Co. v. Republic of France, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 96 Fed. 687, 38 C. C. A. 483.

If a general finding depends upon the weighing of conflicting evidence it is a decision on the fact, the revision of which is forbidden by this section. Martinton v. Fairbanks, (1885) 112 U. S. 870, 5 S. Ct. 321, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 682.

The jury's finding of facts on conflicting evidence is conclusive. Holk v. Kizer, (C. to a consideration of the correctness of its finding on the law, if there is any evidence in support of the finding of fact." Interstate Life Assur. Co. v. Dalton, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 185 Fed. 76, 91 C. C. A. 210, 29 L. R. A. (N. S.) 722.

The rule in respect to writs of error is that, if there be any substantial evidence tending to support the verdict, it is enough, the proper weight to be given to the evidence not being within the province of the appellate court, which is confined to a consideration of exceptions to admission or rejection of evidence, and to the charge of the court and its refusal to charge. Montana Tonopah Mining Co. v. Dunlap, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 196 Fed. 612, 116 C. C. A. 286.

Setting aside verdict as contrary to evidence.—The action of the trial court in setting aside or refusing to set aside a verdict as contrary to the evidence is not subject to review in the Circuit Court of Appeals, being a matter within the discretion of the lower court. J. W. Bishop Co. v. Shelhorse, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 643, 72 C. C. A. 337.

Where the determination of issues of fact is left to the trial judge upon review (other than in equity and admiralty suits) such questions of fact are not brought before the appellate court, which must accept the findings of the trial court thereon. U. S. v. Two Baskets, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 37, 123 C. C. A. 310.

So it is said that "When a jury is waived, and the cause is tried by the court, the general finding of the court for one or the other of the parties stands as the verdict of a jury, and may not be reviewed in an appellate court unless the lack of evidence to sustain the finding has been suggested by a request for a ruling thereon, or a motion for judgment, or some motion to present to the court the issue of law so involved, before the close of the trial." Pennsylvania Casualty Co. v. Whiteway, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 210 Fed. 782, 127 C. C. A. 332.

And in another case it is declared that "When in an action at law, a jury is waived and the court tries an issue of fact and makes a special finding upon which the substantial evidence is conflicting, the losing party may not reverse it by writ of error because it was not sustained by the weight of evidence." Barnsdall v. Waltemeyer, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 415, 73 C. C. A. 515.

Therefore, "when an action at law is tried without a jury by a federal court, and it makes a general finding, or a special finding of facts, the Act of Congress forbids a reversal by the appellate court of that finding, or the judgment thereon, 'for any error of fact' (R. S. sec. 1011), and a finding of fact contrary to the weight of the evidence is an error of fact." Wear v. Imperial Window Glass Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 224 Fed. 60, 130 C. C. A. 622.

The findings of fact by a consent referee are not reviewable on a writ of error further than to ascertain if they are sufficient to warrant the judgment. U. S. Fidelity, etc., Co. v. Hampton, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1908) 134 Fed. 744, 67 C. C. A. 638.

Sec. 10. [Remand of cases reviewed by supreme court and by circuit courts of appeals.] That whenever on appeal or writ of error or otherwise a case coming directly from the district court or existing circuit court shall be reviewed and determined in the Supreme Court the cause shall be remanded to the proper district or circuit court for further proceedings to be taken in pursuance of such determination. And whenever on appeal or writ of error or otherwise a case coming from a circuit court of appeals shall be reviewed and determined in the Supreme Court the cause shall be remanded by the Supreme Court to the proper district or circuit court for further proceedings in pursuance of such determination. Whenever on appeal or writ of error or otherwise a case coming from a district or circuit court shall be reviewed and determined in the circuit court of appeals in a case in which the decision in the circuit court of appeals is final such cause shall be remanded to the said district or circuit court for further proceedings to be there taken in pursuance of such determination. [36 Stat. L. 829.]

This section is from the Circuit Court of Appeals Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517. Sections 5 and 6 of said Act are given in full in the note to Judicial Code, § 238, in vol. 5, p. 794. As to other sections of said Act see section 4 thereof, supra, p. 143, and the note thereto.

"Circuit" Courts, mentioned in the text section, were repealed and their powers and duties imposed upon District Courts by Judicial Code, §§ 289–291, in vol. 5, pp. 1062, 1083.

I. Disposition of case on appeal or writ of error, 235
II. Disposition of case on certiorari, 237

I. DISPOSITION OF CASE ON APPEAL OR WRIT OF ERROR

Remand of admiralty case.—Upon determination by the Circuit Court of Appeals of an admiralty appeal the cause should be remanded to the court below, although, prior to the creation of the Circuit Court of Appeals, decrees on admiralty appeals in the Circuit Court were entered there and enforced by that court without remand to the District Court. Chicago Ins. Co. v. Graham, etc., Transp. Co. (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1901) 108 Fed. 271, 47 C. C. A. 320.

Control of funds in admiralty case.—As the Circuit Court of Appeals does not execute its own decrees, "the funds upon an appeal from the District Court in an admiralty cause remain in the District Court, and the Circuit Court of Appeals has no control over them, or over the District Court in respect to them, except when the cause is reviewed and determined and remanded for further proceedings, in pursuance of the determination." Mignano v. McAndrews, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1892) 56 Fed. 1 U. S. App. 312, 4 C. C. A. 253.

Judgments in criminal cases.—"Where error is discovered in the proceedings in a criminal case properly presented to a Circuit Court of Appeals for review, it is empowered to enter such judgment and to impose such sentence as the law prescribes, or to reverse the judgment, and direct the court below to take such further proceedings as the justice of the case may require." Whitworth v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 114 Fed. 302, 52 C. C. A. 214.

Under this section, in view of part of section 11 of the same Act, as given supra, p. 170, and the Act of March 3, 1879, ch. 176, § 3, set forth in note under the text of said section 11, supra, at p. 170, and the Act of Feb. 6, 1889, ch. 113, § 6, given supra, p. 146, it was held that the Circuit Court of Appeals on reversing the judgment in a criminal case for an excessive sentence may correct the error by remanding with instructions to modify the judgment by remitting the excess. Hanley v. U. S., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 123 Fed. 860, 64 C. C. A. 153. See also Bower v. U. S., (1895) 160 U. S. 187, 16 S. Ct. 263, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 388, where the court, in consideration of all of the provisions above cited in this paragraph, held that it had authority "on writ of error to take such action as the ends of justice, not only in civil but in criminal cases, might require," and in the case sub judice, where there was a general verdict of guilty on an indictment containing two counts, and it appearing that there was error only as to one count, the general judgment was reversed with instructions to enter judgment upon the other count, and for such proceedings with reference to the remaining count as may be in conformity to law.

Where a Circuit Court was without jurisdiction of a cause because of the absence from the complaint of necessary jurisdictional allegations, the Circuit Court of Appeals, in reversing the judgment therein for that reason, may properly remand the cause and direct that plaintiff be permitted to amend the complaint in that respect, especially where the question of jurisdiction was not raised in the trial court. Puget Sound Nav. Co. v. Lavendar, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 156, 84 C. C. A. 259. See also Eaton v. Hugus, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 64, 72 C. C. A. 74, 5 Ann. Cas. 487. Jurisdictional averments as to diversity of citizenship are now amendable in the appellate court in certain cases, provided in Judicial Code, § 274e, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1061.

But a Circuit Court of Appeals is without power to dismiss an appeal on motion of the appellant and remand the cause to the court below with directions to permit the amendment of a pleading on a showing that facts were inadvertently omitted therefrom, the omission not being known to appellant until after the appeal was taken.

Upon reversing a decree for the plaintiff in a suit in equity, the Circuit Court of Appeals declined to reserve leave to the court below to permit an amendment of the plaintiff's bill where the record contained no proof to sustain the proposed amendment, and therefore the amendment, if allowed, would require the opening of the case below for further proofs. "It is not at all a case where a complainant has proved his case, but his allegations are found by the appellate court to be inapt." American Bell Telephone Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1895) 68 Fed. 542, 33 U. S. App. 236, 15 C. C. A. 589, decree affirmed (1897) 167 U. S. 224, 17 S. Ct. 809, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 144.

In a suit for infringement of a trademark and for unfair competition the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed a decree for the complainant, but of its own motion directed the court below to permit the complainant to amend so as to enable him to obtain preventive relief against the complainant for unfair competition, where the record showed unusual methods of competition to which the defendant had resorted, and the manifestly injurious effects on the complainant's business that a continuance of such methods would have and also the misleading of the public. Dietz v. Horton Mfg. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 865, 96 C. C. A. 41.

Where the Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a decree dismissing a bill for infringement of a patent, and held that the proof did not show an act of infringement by the defendant, that court refused to instruct the court below to allow amendments of the pleadings and process whereby the case could proceed against a new party also accused of an infringement. National Casket Co. v. Stolts, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 135 Fed. 534, 68 C. C. A. 84.

In Post v. Beacon Vacuum Pump, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1898) 89 Fed. 1, 50 U. S. App. 407, 32 C. C. A. 181, after affirmance of a decree dismissing a bill on demurrer, the complainant's motion that leave be reserved to move the court below to allow an amendment of the bill was denied, because "for the court to grant this motion would be merely to permit a continuance of litigation where there are no apparent equities sufficiently strong to justify it."

In Hawkins v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1900) 99 Fed. 322, 39 C. C. A. 538, reversing a decree, it is said: "The mandate was in the customary form. demanding that such further proceedings be had in said cause as are not inconsistent with the opinion of this court, as, according to right and justice and the laws of the United States, ought to be had. . . . The effect was to put the case in the same posture as if no decree had ever been entered, and in that situation the court had the same authority to permit an amendment of the petition or bill of the appellee for the purpose of enlarging the issue and of admitting further proofs as it had before the entry of the reversed decree. The case of In re Ranford Ports, etc., Co., (1895) 100 U. S. 247, 16 S. Ct. 291, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 414, affords an apt precedent." Hence, a motion to modify the mandate by directing the lower court to permit further pleading was denied because the proposed amendment was unnecessary.

In Watson v. Stevens, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1892) 53 Fed. 31, 5 U. S. App. 215, 3 C. C. A. 411, under circumstances there stated, the court, on petition of appellee after a decree of reversal, reserved to appellee liberty to file in the court below an application for leave to file a bill of review, and proceed thereon and on such bill of review as the lower court might determine, and directed that such order should form a part of the mandate to be issued. Followed in Smith v. Weeks, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893) 53 Fed. 708, 5 U. S. App. 240, 3 C. C. A. 644.

Where the Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a decree, the affirman'c turning on an issue which the appellant defendants did not anticipate, and which was first raised by the appellate court itself, and the appellants suggested that the issue could be met by further proofs, the Circuit Court of Appeals reserved to the appellants liberty to file in the court below an application for leave to file a bill of review, or leave to adopt other appropriate methods, and to proceed thereon as that court might determine with reference to the new issue above mentioned. Woodward v. Boston Lasting Mach. Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1894) 63 Fed. 609, 21 U. S. App. 463, 11 C. C. A. 353.

Remand with directions.—Where an order of the Circuit (now District) Court refusing to dissolve and continuing an injunction pendente lite against the sale of certain goods by a sheriff, who had seized them on execution, was affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the latter suggested that a present sale would be for the pecuniary advantage of all parties, and that by consent of the parties the goods should be sold and the proceeds placed in the registry of the court to await the final decision upon the merits; and the court below was instructed that it had the power so to modify its order and was directed "to modify the same upon application of the parties, as it may be advised." Haddan v. Dooley, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 429, 38 U. S. App. 651, 20 C. C. A. 484.

Where an action essentially one at law and without a single equitable feature in it was docketed on the equity side of the federal Circuit Court, and was treated as a cause in equity without objection by either party, and a decree was entered dismissing the suit, from which decree the complainant took an appeal instead of suing out a write of error, the Circuit Court of Appeals, upon objection being made by appellees that the proper mode of review was by writ of error, the time within which a writ of error could be brought having elapsed before the objection was made, reversed the decree of the court below for want of jurisdiction, with instructions to remand the cause to the law docket, and to reframe the pleadings accordingly. McConnell v. Provident Sav. Life Assur. Soc., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 69 Fed. 113, 37 U. S. App. 213, 16 C. C. A. 172. Also germane to such a situation is the Act of Sept. 6, 1916, ch. 448, § 4, 39 Stat. L. 727, set forth in note to Judicial Code, § 274h, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1061.

Motion to modify order of affirmance.—In Minnesota Tribune Co. v. Associated Press, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1908) 84 Fed. 921, 56 U. S. App. 52, 28 C. C. A. 566, after affirmance of a decree dismissing a bill on the merits, the complainant moved to modify the order of affirmance, so as to direct the dismissal of the bill, without prejudice to its right to sue at law. But the Court of Appeals denied the motion: "First, because the majority of the court are of opinion that the decree of the circuit court dismissing the cause of action on its merits was right; and, second, because the motion to modify the order of affirmance in this court was not filed until long after the term had elapsed at which the order of affirmance was entered."

Construction of mandate.—In U. S. v. St. Louis Terminal R. Ass'n, (1915) 236 U. S. 194, 35 S. Ct. 496, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 535, it appeared that a mandate from the Supreme Court, which remedied a suit to enforce the provisions of the Sherman Anti-trust Act against a combination of railway terminal facilities, directed the court below to dissolve the combination "upon failure of the parties to come to an agreement" in accord with the opinion of the court. On second appeal the court said that the word "parties" in the mandate as above quoted embraced only the parties to the agreement from which the combination was dissolved, and did not include the United States—it did not mean "parties to the suit."

A motion to revoke a mandate and to issue a new mandate directing the entry of a different decree from the one required to be entered by the original mandate, in beyond the power of the court to grant, where the motion is made after the lapse of the term at which the decree was rendered and the court's control of its decree was in no manner preserved for a succeeding term. Reynolds v. Manhattan Trust Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 100 Fed. 97, 48 C. C. A. 249. The court said: "In this instance we are not asked to correct a mere clerical mistake made in the entry of a judgment, or to enter a judgment orally announced, which the clerk failed to enter, or to expunge a judgment which, when entered, was absolutely void for want of jurisdiction over the parties, all of which mistakes may doubtless be corrected at any time." See also for a case where a motion to recall a mandate was denied, the motion not having been made until several months after the end of the term at which the judgment was given and the mandate sent down, Miocene Ditch Co. v. Campion Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 497, 117 C. C. A. 61.

Recall of mandate unnecessary for further appeal.—In Ritter v. Mutual Life Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1898) 72 Fed. 567, 39 U. S. App. 189, 19 C. C. A. 41, after affirmance of a decree, the court denied a petition that the mandate be recalled and the record be directed to be returned to the lower court, so that the petitioner might appeal to the Supreme Court, since the petitioner did not need a recall of the mandate for that purpose, as "the transcript of the record is never remitted to the court below, but remains in this court."

Certiorari by Supreme Court after remand.—The provision that in a case coming from a Circuit Court of Appeals "the cause shall be remanded to the proper District or Circuit Court" is not inconsistent with the power of the Supreme Court to issue a certiorari in a case that was an original proceeding in mandamus in the Circuit Court of Appeals. McClellan v. Carland, (1910) 217 U. S. 268, 30 S. Ct. 501, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 762.

Proceeding in court below after remand.—The judge of the Circuit (now District) Court cannot open the case when it is remanded. He cannot in any way modify the judgment of the higher court. He has no judicial function to exercise in the matter. He cannot exercise any discretion. All that can be done is to execute the judgment of the appellate court, and this is merely a ministerial act. Moore v. Chattanooga Electric R. Co., (1908) 119 Tenn. 710, 109 S. W. 497, 16 L. R. A. (N. S.) 978.

II. DISPOSITION OF CASE ON CERTIORARI

See cases cited in note to Judicial Code, § 240, supra, this title, vol. 5, at p. 862, under V. Hearing and Examination, Determination and Remand.

Mandate on certiorari.—As a general rule where a case is reviewed and determined on certiorari to the Circuit Court of Appeals, the mandate of the Supreme Court to avoid circuity will go directly to the court of original jurisdiction. But where the only ground for issuing the certiorari was the failure of the Circuit Court of Appeals to consider the case before it, an exception to the general rule is presented, and the case should be remanded to the Circuit Court of Appeals, to the end that the duty to hear and decide it may be performed. Lutcher, etc., Lumber Co. v. Knight, (1910) 217 U. S. 267, 30 S. Ct. 505, 54 U. S. (L. ed.) 767.
XI. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

Sec. 5. [Action by or against federal railroad company, excluded from federal jurisdiction.] No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of any action or suit by or against any railroad company upon the ground that said railroad company was incorporated under an Act of Congress. [38 Stat. L. 804.]

This section is from the Act of Jan. 23, 1913, ch. 22. 38 Stat. L. 803, entitled "An Act To amend an Act entitled 'An Act to codify, revise and amend the laws relating to the judiciary' approved March third, nineteen hundred and eleven" — the Act thus cited being the Judicial Code.

Section 2 also provided for review by the Circuit Courts of Appeals of final judgments and decrees of the Supreme Court of the Territory of Hawaii and of Porto Rico and is given supra, p. 143.

Section 3 repeated Judicial Code. § 234, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 593.

Section 4 provided for finality of judgments of Circuit Courts of Appeals in cases and controversies arising under the Bankruptcy Act, and is given in title BANKRUPTCY, vol. 1, p. 583; also supra, this title, p. 146.

Section 6 provided that the Act should not affect pending cases, nor be deemed to affect the provisions of the Criminal Appeals Act of March 2, 1907, which latter Act and said section 6 following it are given supra, pp. 146 et seq.

Prior to the enactment of the text section 3 an action by or against a railroad company incorporated under an Act of Congress was within the jurisdiction of the United States District Court as defined in Judicial Code, § 28, paragraph "First," supra, this title, vol. 4, p. 942; see for more, and said section 24 ch. 4 at pp. 926-927.

Effect of statute. — This section took away from courts of the United States jurisdiction in actions by or against any railroad company on the ground that such company was incorporated under an Act of Congress. Actions at suit were brought at the time of its passage were excepted from the provisions. See Texas, et al. v. Colorado, etc., 239 U. S. 346.

Sec. 84C. [Pen of grand and petit juries.] For actual attendance at any court of records and for the "penalty necessarily suggested in going to and returning from the same," these jurors a fine of 5.

ch. 52, § 2, 21 Stat. L. 43, relating to the drawing, term of service, and qualifications of jurors, the latter provisions being incorporated in Judicial Code, §§ 275, 276, 278 and 280, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 1063–1071 and 1077, and thereby repealed by force of the last paragraph of Judicial Code, § 297, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1088. Said R. S. secs. 820 and 821 were also expressly repealed by the Act of May 13, 1884, ch. 46, 23 Stat. L. 22.

The Act of Aug. 8, 1888, ch. 785, 25 Stat. L. 386, entitled “An Act to authorize the juries of the United States circuit and district courts to be used interchangeably, and to provide for drawing talemen,” was nullified by the abolition of the Circuit Courts by Judicial Code, § 298, supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1082.

Jurors’ fees.—Jurors coming from a distance and who receive no mileage other than at the beginning and end of the term are entitled to a per diem for those days during which the panel stands adjourned, and not merely, as is the case of jurors living within the city and districts, for those days to which from time to time adjournments are taken and on which they appear and answer to their names. Parker v. Kempton, (1849) 1 Wall. Jr. C. C. 344, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,741.

Computation of mileage.—Where grand jurors in response to a summons attended court on the first day of the term, and on the same day were discharged until a stated day, and on that day they again attended the court and were finally discharged, it was held that they were entitled to mileage compensation for two round trips to court. In re Grand Jurors’ Mileage, (D. C. Del. 1903) 120 Fed. 307.

The legal fiction that a term of court is but one day has no application to the allowance of mileage compensation under this section. In re Grand Jurors’ Mileage, (D. C. Del. 1903) 120 Fed. 307.

[Jurors’ per diem.] That on and after the passage of this Act the per diem pay of each juror, grand or petit, in any court of the United States, shall be three dollars a day instead of two dollars a day as now provided by law. [32 Stat. L. 396.]

This constituted the Act of June 21, 1902, ch. 1138, 32 Stat. L. 396, entitled “An Act To fix the fees of jurors in the United States courts.”

[SEC. 1.] [Jurors and witnesses — fees and mileage in certain states — double fees prohibited.] • • • Jurors and witnesses in the United States courts in the States of Wyoming, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho, Colorado, and Utah, and in the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona shall be entitled to receive for actual attendance at any court or courts and for the time necessarily occupied in going to and returning from the same, three dollars a day, and fifteen cents for each mile necessarily traveled over any stage line, or by private conveyance, and five cents for each mile by any railway or steamship in going to and returning from said courts: Provided, That no constructive or double mileage fees shall be allowed by reason of any person being summoned as both a witness and juror, or as a witness in two or more cases pending in the same court and triable at the same term thereof. [35 Stat. L. 377.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 200; and there has been no later provision on the subject. Since the enactment of the text provision the territories of Arizona and New Mexico have been admitted into the Union, as shown supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 554. 578.

The provision in the text superseded the Act of Aug. 3, 1892, ch. 361, entitled “An Act fixing the fees of jurors and witnesses in the United States courts in certain States and Territories,” which read as follows:
"That jurors and witnesses in the United States courts in the States of Wyoming, Montana, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada, Idaho, and Colorado, and in the Territories of New Mexico, Arizona, and Utah, shall be entitled to and receive fifteen cents for each mile necessarily traveled over any stage line or by private conveyance and five cents for each mile over any railway in going and returning from said courts: Provided, that no constructive or double mileage fees shall be allowed by reason of any person being summoned both as witness and juror, or as witness in two or more cases pending in the same court and triable at the same term thereof." [27 Stat. L. 347.]

The last mentioned Act superseded the Act of June 16, 1880, ch. 247, entitled "An act in relation to the mileage of jurors and witnesses in the State of Colorado," which read as follows:

"That jurors and witnesses in the district and circuit courts of the United States in and for the State of Colorado, shall be entitled to receive fifteen cents for each mile actually traveled in coming to or returning from said courts." [21 Stat. L. 290.]

[Sec. 1.] [Expenditures for Court of Customs Appeals to be submitted to Congress in detailed statement.] * * * A detailed statement of the expenditures of the appropriations for the United States Court of Customs Appeals shall be submitted to Congress at the beginning of each regular session thereof. [36 Stat. L. 1234.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 287. A paragraph in the same section of the same Act reads as follows:

"A detailed statement of the expenditure of the appropriations for the United States Commerce Court shall be submitted to Congress at the beginning of each regular session thereof." The United States Commerce Court was abolished by provisions in the Act of Oct. 22, 1913, ch. 32, given supra, this title, vol. 5, p. 1108.

[Sec. 1.] [Distribution of Supreme Court Reports to Circuit Courts of Appeals libraries.] Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall hereafter distribute the Supreme Court Reports to the libraries of the United States circuit courts of appeals. [36 Stat. L. 1419.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriations Act of March 4, 1911, ch. 285, where it followed an appropriation to pay certain publishers for volumes of the Supreme Court Reports.

Judicial Code (enacted March 3, 1911), §§ 225-228, supra, this title, vol. 5, pp. 704-706, provide for delivery to and distribution by the Attorney-General of Supreme Court reports, etc.

Office and duties of Attorney-General.—In (1854) 6 Op. Atty.-Gen. 326, Attorney-General Caleb Cushing gave to the President an exposition of the constitution of the office of Attorney-General as a branch of the executive administration of the United States, together with some suggestions of possible improvement in the manner of conducting the legal business of the government.

The Attorney-General has authority to commence a suit in the name of the United States to set aside a patent or other solemn instrument issued by proper authority. The statute contains no further specific statement of the general duties of the Attorney-General, but it is seen from the whole chapter that he has the authority, and it is made his duty, to supervise the conduct of all suits brought by or against the United States, and to give advice to the President and the heads of the other departments of the government. He is undoubtedly the officer who has charge of the institution and conduct of the pleas of the United States, and of the litigation which is necessary to establish the rights of the government. U. S. v. San Jacinto Tin Co., (1888) 125 U. S. 273, 8 S. Ct. 850, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 747.

Advising congressional committees.—It is not within the province of the Attorney-General to advise committees of Congress upon questions of law occurring in matters before them. (1872) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 17.

Sec. 347. [Solicitor-General.] There shall be in the Department of Justice an officer learned in the law, to assist the Attorney-General in the performance of his duties, called the Solicitor-General, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall be entitled to a salary of seven thousand five hundred dollars a year. In case of a vacancy in the office of Attorney-General or of his absence or disability, the Solicitor-General shall have power to exercise all the duties of that office. [R. S.]

Beginning with the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of June 17, 1910, ch. 297, 36 Stat. L. 468, 522, the annual appropriations for the salary of the Solicitor-General have uniformly been $10,000.

Appointment of special assistants to a district attorney.—The fact that the commission of a special assistant to a district attorney appointed under the authority given by R. S. sec. 363 (JUDICIAL OFFICERS, vol. 4, p. 620) is signed by the solicitor-general in the Department of Justice as "acting attorney-general" does not affect the validity of the appointment; the solicitor-general being empowered by this section 347 to exercise the duties of the office of the Attorney-General in case of his absence, which will be presumed in support of the regularity of the appointment. U. S. v. Twining, (D. C. N. J. 1904) 192 Fed. 120.
Justice Department

Sec. 348. [Assistant Attorneys-General.] There shall be in the Department of Justice three officers, learned in the law, called the Assistant Attorneys-General, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall assist the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General in the performance of their duties. Each of them is entitled to a salary of five thousand dollars a year. [R. S.]

Provisions for the appointment of an additional Attorney-General to facilitate the speedy disposition of cases in the Court of Claims, and in Indian depredation claims, were made by the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 538, § 12, 26 Stat. L. 551, and an Act of Dec. 21, 1893, ch. 3, 28 Stat. L. 19.

An additional Assistant Attorney-General was authorized by the Act of July 11, 1890, ch. 667, § 1, infra, p. 257, and the salary of the Assistant Attorney-General was fixed at $9,000 by a provision of the Act of Oct. 22, 1913, ch. 32, infra, p. 258.

The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1053, provided for “six Assistant Attorneys General at $7,500 each.”

Sec. 349. [Solicitor of Treasury, etc., in Department of Justice.] There shall be in the Department of Justice a Solicitor of the Treasury, an Assistant Solicitor of the Treasury, a Solicitor of Internal Revenue, and an Examiner of Claims for the Department of State, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall be entitled to the following salaries: The Solicitor of the Treasury to four thousand dollars a year, the Assistant Solicitor of the Treasury to three thousand dollars a year, the Solicitor of Internal Revenue to five thousand dollars a year, and the Examiner of Claims for the Department of State four thousand dollars a year. [R. S.]

As originally enacted this section provided for a “Naval Solicitor” at a salary of $3,500 per year. This office was abolished by a provision of the Act of June 19, 1878, ch. 329, 20 Stat. L. 205, in the following terms: “And so much of section three hundred and forty-nine of the Revised Statutes as provides for the appointment and payment of a salary to a ‘naval solicitor’ is hereby repealed, and the office is abolished.”

The duties of the naval solicitor were cast upon the judge advocate general of the navy, whose appointment was authorized by the Act of June 8, 1880, ch. 129, 21 Stat. L. 164. See Navy.

By an Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 541, 26 Stat. L. 945, the examiner of claims was to be designated as solicitor for the Department of State. See State Department.

For provisions relating to the solicitors for the departments, see the various departmental titles.

The compensation of these officers has been, from time to time, increased. The Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1053, 1038, provides as follows: In the office of the Attorney-General: solicitor for the Department of the Interior, $5,000; solicitor for the Post Office Department, $5,000; solicitor of Internal Revenue, $5,000; solicitor for the Department of State, $6,000. Office of solicitor of the treasury: solicitor, $5,000; assistant solicitor, $3,000. Office of solicitor of the Department of Commerce: solicitor, $5,000; assistant solicitor, $3,000. Office of the Department of Labor: solicitor, $5,000.

The solicitor of the treasury is an officer of the Department of Justice and not of the Treasury Department. (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 714. See also (1884) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 59.

Jurisdiction of Attorney-General and solicitor of treasury.—In the matter of rendering opinions there is an exclusive jurisdiction of the Attorney-General, an exclusive jurisdiction of the solicitor of the treasury, and a concurrent jurisdiction in both. Whether questions arising in the concurrent jurisdiction, that is, questions of pure law actually arising in the administration of the department, and relating to matters wholly within the direct or supervisory control of its head, shall be referred to the Attorney-General, to the solicitor of the treasury, or to both, is entirely within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 658.

Sec. 350. [What officers under control of Attorney-General.] The officers named in the preceding section shall exercise their functions under the supervision and control of the head of the Department of Justice. [R.S.]

R. S. sec. 375, infra, p. 354, seems to constitute an exception to the provision of this section directing that the solicitor of the treasury shall be under the supervision and control of the Attorney-General. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 715.

Sec. 351. [Subordinate officers.] There shall be in the Department of Justice,

One chief clerk, at a salary of two thousand two hundred dollars a year.
One law clerk, acting as examiner of titles, at a salary of three thousand dollars a year.
One stenographic clerk, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.
One clerk, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year.
One disbursing clerk.

In the office of the Solicitor of the Treasury:

One chief clerk, at a salary of two thousand dollars a year, and such temporary clerks as may from time to time be needed, but the allowances for such temporary clerks shall in no one year exceed one thousand dollars. [R. S.]

The number and compensation of the subordinate officers and employees in the Department of Justice depend upon the various Appropriation Acts which have for many years disregarded the limitations set by the text. The current appropriations were contained in the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1038.

Sec. 352. [Rooms to be provided.] The superintendent of the Treasury building shall from time to time provide such rooms as may be suitable and necessary for the accommodation of the Department of Justice, in some building in the vicinity of the Treasury building. [R. S.]

Recent Appropriation Acts provide for the rent of such buildings and parts of buildings as may be needed. See the notes to the preceding R. S. sec. 351.

R. S. sec. 353. See the notes to R. S. sec. 346, supra, p. 242.

Sec. 354. [Duties of Attorney-General.] The Attorney-General shall give his advice and opinion upon questions of law, whenever required by the President. [R. S.]

The word "of" following the word "questions" was inserted by Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 241.

R. S. sec. 355. See the note to R. S. sec. 346, supra, p. 242.
The right of the President to call upon the Attorney-General for an opinion is not necessarily limited by the provisions of this section. Article II, sec. 2, cl. 1, of the Constitution is entitled to a liberal interpretation. The President may justly call upon him for an opinion or advice in transactions which do not in all respects present a question of law, and unrestrained by the technical rule of the statutes and the strict practice upon the subject. (1901) 23 Op. Atty.-Gen. 364.

When Attorney-General’s opinion binds accounting officers.—In (1904) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 301, Attorney-General Moody said, that while “the authority of the comptroller to decide a question involving a payment to be made from the treasury, so as to guide the auditing officers and himself in passing upon accounts, is complete [citing the Act of July 31, 1894, § 8, 28 Stat. L. 162, 208, in TREASURY DEPARTMENT, and all the notes thereto], on the other hand, although a disbursement may be involved, when the question is of general and great importance, and especially when the comptroller, in advance of decision by himself, requests that the matter be referred to the Attorney-General, and states that the opinion of the Attorney-General will be followed by him, then it is the view of this department that the question may properly be answered by the Attorney-General. . . . If a question is presented to the Attorney-General in accordance with law — that is, if it is submitted by the President or the head of a department — if it is a question of law and actually arises in the administration of a department, and the Attorney-General is of opinion that the nature of the question is general and important in other directions than disbursement, and therefore conceives that it is proper for him to deliver his opinion, I think it is final and authoritative under the law, and should be so treated by the accounting officers, even if the question involves a payment to be made.” See also notes to the following R. S. sec. 366.

Sec. 356. [Opinion of Attorney-General upon questions of law.] The head of any Executive Department may require the opinion of the Attorney-General on any questions of law arising in the administration of his Department. [R. S.]

I. ATTORNEY-GENERAL’S DUTY AND AUTHORITY IN GENERAL

1. Jurisdiction of Attorney-General and Solicitor of Treasury

In the matter of rendering opinions there is an exclusive jurisdiction of the Attorney-General, an exclusive jurisdiction of the solicitor of the treasury, and a concurrent jurisdiction in both. Whether questions arising in the concurrent jurisdiction, that is, questions of pure law actually arising in the administration of the department, and relating to matters within the direct or supervisory control of its head, shall be referred to the Attorney-General, to the solicitor of the treasury, or to both, is entirely within the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 668.

The Attorney-General will not express an opinion upon a question involving payment of money which has been decided by the comptroller of the treasury, whose decision, under section 8 of the Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 2, 28 Stat. L. 208 (in title TREASURY DEPARTMENT) is conclusive in law. (1904) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 185.

Exceptions.—The authority conferred upon the comptroller of the treasury by section 8 of the Act of July 31, 1894, 28 Stat. L. 208 (in title TREASURY DEPARTMENT) to decide questions involving payments to be made from the treasury is complete; but that Act does not establish a rule which is universal and without exception. Congress did not, by that enactment, intend to shorten the reach of R. S. sec. 354 and the text section, or to repeal them pro tanto. Where a question is presented to the Attorney-General in accordance with law for decision, and he is of opinion that the nature of the question is general and important in other respects than disbursement, and therefore conceives that it is proper for him to deliver his opinion, it is final and authoritative under the law, and should be so treated by the accounting officers of the treasury, even though the question involves a payment to be made from the treasury. When the comptroller of the treasury waives his right to determine a matter involving disbursements within the scope of his authority under the law, and requests or suggests a ruling by the Attorney-General, the Attorney-General's opinion should be controlling upon the accounting officers of the treasury, and should be followed by them unless contrary to some authoritative judicial decision. 2. For Information of Congress

3. For Information of Private Individuals

The legality of orders issued by the commissioner of internal revenue, prohibiting the reshipment of alcohol from the staves of empty spirit packages, in the absence of affirmative proof that such alcohol had been properly taxed, is not a question upon which the Attorney-General is authorized to give an opinion, where the question has been decided by the Treasury Department and is presented merely because of the request of counsel for parties interested. (1911) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 596.

4. Only for Guidance of Head of Department

The opinion sought should be needed for the guidance of the head of a department and should relate to some matter calling for action or decision on his part. For the guidance of the heads of bureaus and other officers of the departments in the discharge of their duties, provision is made by R. S. sec. 361, infra, p. 251, for assistance from the office of the Department of Justice under the direction of the Attorney-General. (1898) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 609. See also (1884) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 59; (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 273; (1891) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 251.

5. Matters Belonging to Justice Department

In (1905) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 543, the Attorney-General declined to express an opinion upon the question whether proceedings by court-martial would bar proceedings in the civil courts for an assault or other crime involved in the offense of hazing, for the reason that it would be of no assistance to those officers in the proper discharge of their duties, and should such action be taken the matter would peculiarly be one for the consideration of his department. See also (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 59; (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 651.

6. To Review Proceedings of Courts-Martial

To review the proceedings of courts-martial, in search of questions of law, is not part of the duty of the Attorney-General. (1852) 5 Op. Atty.-Gen. 626.

7. Examination and Approval of Codes or Rules

An examination and approval of codes or rules adopted to meet future cases is not required from the Attorney-General. Nor is he required to examine and approve forms of applications, permits, bonds and affidavits, for future use in other departments. (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 759.

Only on question of law.—The Attorney-General is only authorized to give his official opinion upon a question of law submitted to him for that purpose by the President or the head of one of the executive departments. He cannot, therefore, approve or disapprove opinions of assistant attorneys-general attached to particular of Porto Rico, legally a resident of New York, is eligible for appointment in the United States Hospital service under a departmental regulation which requires the applicant to be a citizen of the United States, or, if of foreign birth, to furnish proof of American citizenship, does not involve any question of law within the meaning of this section, and is not, therefore, one properly calling for an opinion of the Attorney-General. The requirement not being demanded by law, its interpretation may properly be left to the department or bureau responsible for its existence and acter and which must be decided by the

The Attorney-General cannot properly pass upon the question whether the courts in this country have authority to execute letters rogatory issued out of the German patent office, as that is a matter for judicial and not for executive determination.

In (1896) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 97, the Attorney-General declined to express an opinion as to the liability of the postmaster at Baltimore, Md., for a sum of money paid by him to a former clerk in the Baltimore post office, and for which no service was performed, for the reason that the question was essentially a judicial one, amtating to an inquiry whether in regular proceedings a court and jury would hold that officer liable.

In (1896) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 360, the Attorney-General declined to express an opinion upon the question whether a wilful refusal to give true answers to inquiries concerning statistics which, by section 6 of the Permanent Census Act of March 6, 1892 (in Census, vol. 2, p. 31 32 Stat. L. 52), the Department of Commerce and Labor was authorized to collect, would subject a person to the penalties prescribed by section 22 of the Act of March 3, 1899, 30 Stat. L. 1020, for the reason that the question was pre-eminently one for judicial and not executive determination.

When the only way to settle the question submitted is by judicial proceedings, it would not be proper for the Attorney-General to express an opinion on it. (1887)

Question not arising in department making inquiry.—The Attorney-General is not authorized to give an official opinion as to a question of law not arising in the department from which the inquiry is sent; (1891)

(1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 420; (1894) 20

In (1896) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 584, the Attorney-General declined to express an opinion upon the question propounded by the Secretary of the Interior as to whether the preliminary draft of title LXVIII, “Railway and Telegraph Companies,” submitted to him by the commission to revise and codify the laws of the United States, correctly embodies the provisions of existing law upon the subject, for the reason that the inquiry did not present a question of law arising in the administration of his department.

A question which the head of a department is not called upon to answer is not "a question of law arising in the administration of his department." (1892) 20

A question propounded to the Secretary of a Department which he is not called upon to answer is not a question upon which the Attorney-General is authorized to give an opinion. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.- Gen. 534.

As to construction of statute.—This section and R. S. sec. 357 do not permit the Attorney-General to give an opinion as to the construction or interpretation of a statute except in an actual case which has arisen and is before one of the executive departments calling for its action in the regular course of the administration of The duty of applying a statute to the subject matter is one of administration

As to interpretation of regulation of practice.—A request to interpret a regulation of practice made by the commissioner of patents for his own guidance and that of his subordinates, for the convenient, intelligent, and orderly disposal of the business of his office, cannot be granted. Such a regulation when not specially authorized or demanded by law is not law in the sense in which that term is used in the statute. (1887) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 521.

As to propriety of prosecuting appeal.—The propriety of prosecuting an appeal in a matter of public interest pending before a department is not always a matter of law, but may well be one merely of judicial discretion, and does not fall within the competency of the judicial department to give advice thereon. (1876) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 574.

As to advisability of changing law.—This statute limits the function of the Attorney-General in the matter of opinions requested by the heads of departments on questions arising out of the law as it is, and does not seem to call upon him to give his views and opinions upon the advisability of making changes by treaty. (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 598.

Mere moot question.—The inquiry must relate not to a mere moot question, but to one which requires immediate action. The answer must be necessary for the protection of the officer making the inquiry or to infer the lawfulness of the action which he is about to take. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 509. See also (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 506; (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 478.

III. STATEMENT OF QUESTION SUBMITTED

Question to be specifically formulated.—It has been the invariable rule of the Department of Justice to decline to give an opinion upon any question of law unless it is "specifically formulated." (1902) 24 Op. Atty.-Gen. 59; (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 378; (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 609.

A statement of facts must be submitted showing that the question has actually arisen in the administration of his department in an existing case calling for action to authorize the Attorney-General to express an opinion upon a question of law propounded by the head of a department. (1898) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 85.

An opinion cannot be given upon a general subject, but only on one or more specific questions of law based on the case stated. (1901) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 249.

IV. OPINIONS AS BINDING PRECEDENTS

1. On Administrative Officers

2. On Succeeding Attorneys-General

3. On Courts

See cases cited in article STATUTES AND STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION, vol. 1 of this work, p. 83, § 58, note 91.

Sec. 357. [Legal advice to departments of war and navy.] Whenever a question of law arises in the administration of the Department of War or the Department of the Navy, the cognizance of which is not given by statute to some other officer from whom the head of the Department may require advice, it shall be sent to the Attorney-General, to be by him referred to the proper officer in his Department, or otherwise disposed of as he may deem proper. [R. S.]

Opinions for heads of departments, see in general, notes to the preceding R. S. sec. 356, supra, p. 245.

This section does not contain an exception in favor of the employment by the Secretary of the Navy of counsel in foreign countries to institute suit in behalf of the United States to recover damages for injury to a war vessel of the United States, but the case should be referred to the Department of Justice for attention. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 195.

A question of fact as to whether an obstruction to navigation is "unreasonable" will not be determined by the Attorney-General. (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 676.

Hypothetical question.—The Attorney-General declines to express an opinion upon the question whether a paymaster's clerk in the navy retains his status as such clerk while traveling home under orders received prior to the revocation of his appointment, for the reason that the question is hypothetical in its nature. (1909) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 129.

The Attorney-General declines to answer the question whether the Navy Department would be justified in continuing to make partial payments under contracts in the event of the repeal of the clause in the Naval Appropriation Act of March 4, 1911 (36 Stat. 1267), which authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to make partial payments on under contracts for public purposes, as no case involving that question is now pending before that department. (1911) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 46.

Where no occasion has arisen for the official action of the Secretary of War, the Attorney-General will not give an opinion upon a question proposed by him. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 457.

The Attorney-General is not permitted to give an opinion as to the construction or interpretation of a statute except in an actual case which has arisen before one of the Executive Departments calling for its action in the regular course of its affairs. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 510.

A question of the legality of a provision of long standing in contracts of the War and Navy Departments was determined, as presented, in general terms, though a strict regard to the rule of the Department of Justice which forbids the expression of an official opinion upon any question of law which has not arisen in an existing case and presented upon a definite statement of facts, might warrant a refusal of an opinion thereon. (1895) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 207.

Opinion for guidance of private parties. —The Attorney-General is not authorized to express an official opinion as to whether the provisions of the eight-hour law of Aug. 1, 1892 (27 Stat. 340), will apply to the construction of caissons for the United States, where the information is desired for the guidance of certain prospective bidders, as the question is not one which the Secretary of the Navy is called upon to decide in the administration of his department. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 534.

The solution of the question whether an officer on the retired list of the army can accept a diplomatic or consular appointment and still hold his position on the retired list with rank and pay is a matter of his private concern only, and not a subject with which the United States can be concerned until some action has been taken by such officer. (1897) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 510.

Advisory nature of opinion.—The opinion of the Attorney-General, addressed to the Secretary of the Navy, is merely advisory, and cannot be regarded as a determination of the case to which it refers, unless it appears from the record that the Secretary has adopted the advice it contained. (1857) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 32, where Attorney-General Black said: "The duty of the Attorney-General is to advise, not to decide. A thing is not to be considered as done as far as the head of a department merely because the Attorney-General has advised him to do it. You may disregard his opinion if you are sure it is wrong. He aids you in forming a judgment on questions of law; but still the judgment is yours, not his. You are not bound to see with his eyes, but only to use the light which he furnishes, in order to see the better with your own. But though opinions from this office have technically no binding effect, it is generally safer and better to adopt them. Uniformity of decision in the different departments, on similar subjects, is necessary, and cannot be secured otherwise. For the same reason, one Attorney-General ought to be cautious how he differs from another who has gone before him. For myself, I shall never depart from the precedents when I find it possible to follow them without being unfaithful to my own convictions." See also notes to R. S. sec. 356, supra, at p. 248, IV, Opinions as binding precedents.
Sec. 358. [Reference of questions by Attorney-General to subordinates.] Any question of law submitted to the Attorney-General for his opinion, except questions involving a construction of the Constitution of the United States may be by him referred to such of his subordinates as he may deem appropriate, and he may require the written opinion thereon of the officer to whom the same may be referred. If the opinion given by such officer is approved by the Attorney-General, such approval indorsed thereon shall give the opinion the same force and effect as belong to the opinions of the Attorney-General. [R. S.]

This section does not apply in cases where, as in the Departments of the Treasury, Interior, etc., the secretary has a right to ask for an opinion from the subordinate directly, that is, without an intervention by the Attorney-General. (1884) 18 Op. Atty-Gen. 59.

“The Attorney-General must personally pass upon every question so submitted to him; for although he may . . . refer the question to a subordinate for a written opinion, the action of the subordinate must be examined and approved by the Attorney-General to give it effect.” (1895) 21 Op. Atty-Gen. 174, per Attorney-General Olney.

Sec. 359. [Conduct and argument of cases.] Except when the Attorney-General in particular cases otherwise directs, the Attorney-General and Solicitor-General shall conduct and argue suits and writs of error and appeals in the Supreme Court and suits in the Court of Claims in which the United States is interested, and the Attorney-General may, whenever he deems it for the interest of the United States, either in person conduct and argue any case in any court of the United States in which the United States is interested, or may direct the Solicitor-General or any officer of the Department of Justice to do so. [R. S.]

See the Act of June 30, 1906, ch. 3935, infra, p. 257.

Appearance of district attorney before Circuit Court of Appeals.—In the Act creating the Court of Appeals there is no specific direction to any attorney to represent the government. Whenever the Attorney-General calls upon a district attorney to appear for the government in a case ending in the Court of Appeals, he is not directing him in the discharge of his official duty as district attorney, but is employing him as special counsel. The compensation which he may receive is not a part of his compensation as district attorney or limited by the maximum prescribed therefor. U. S. v. Winston, (1898) 170 U. S. 522, 18 S. Ct. 701, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1130. See also Garter v. U. S., (1896) 31 Ct. Cl. 361.

The authority to “conduct suits” in the Court of Claims on behalf of the government may fairly be held to include at least every act in the conduct of such suit which an attorney at law in a suit between individuals may lawfully do; with this reservation, that he cannot, on the trial of a cause, bind the government by admitting facts adverse to it unless they are such as it is his official duty to know, and have become known to him officially in the course of the discharge of such duty. Campbell v. U. S., (1884) 19 Ct. Cl. 429.

A special assistant to the Attorney-General is not an “officer” within the meaning of this section or R. S. sec. 367. U. S. v. Rosenthal, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 121 Fed. 962.

Bringing suit in the name of the Attorney-General.—The power conferred by this section on the Attorney-General does not authorize him to bring a suit in which the United States is interested in his own name, or authorize the solicitor-general or any officer of the Department of Justice to do so. Atty-Gen. v. Rumford Chemical Works, (C. C. R. I. 1876) 32 Fed. 623.

Proceedings before grand jury.—The power given the Attorney-General and his officers to “conduct and argue any case in any court” cannot be exercised in derogation of the exclusive power of the district attorney to initiate proceedings before the grand jury. U. S. v. Rosenthal, (S. D. N. Y 1903) 121 Fed. 962.
Sec. 360. [Performance of duty by officers of Department of Justice.] The Attorney-General may require any solicitor or officer of the Department of Justice to perform any duty required of the Department or any officer thereof. [R. S.]

Extra compensation.—The Attorney-General directed the United States district attorney for the district of Kansas to attend to the taking of a deposition at Wichita, in the state of Kansas, in a suit which was pending in the state of New York; it was held that even if this was one of the duties of some other officer of the same or any other department of the government, he was prohibited from recovering any extra compensation for it by R. S. sec. 1764 (In title Public Officers and Employees). U. S. v. Ady, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1896) 76 Fed. 359, 40 U. S. App. 312, 22 C. C. A. 223.

Sec. 361. [Officers of the department to perform all legal services required for other departments.] The officers of the Department of Justice, under the direction of the Attorney-General, shall give all opinions and render all services requiring the skill of persons learned in the law necessary to enable the President and heads of Departments and the heads of Bureaus and other officers in the Departments, to discharge their respective duties; and shall, on behalf of the United States, procure the proper evidence for, and conduct, prosecute, or defend all suits and proceedings in the Supreme Court and in the Court of Claims, in which the United States, or any officer thereof, as such officer, is a party or may be interested; and no fees shall be allowed or paid to any other attorney or counselor at law for any service herein required of the officers of the Department of Justice, except in the cases provided by section three hundred and sixty-three. [R. S.]

For the guidance of the heads of bureaus and other officers of the departments in the discharge of their duties, provision is made by this section for assistance from the officers of the Department of Justice under the direction of the Attorney-General. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 609.

Reviewing opinion of solicitor of treasury.—The solicitor of the treasury is an officer of the Department of Justice, and therefore, by virtue of this section, is entitled to the direction of the Attorney-General. Whatever this direction may include, it does not extend to opinions asked and given in the course of a formal correspondence in writing. (1884) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 60.

Sec. 362. [Superintendence of district attorneys and marshals.] The Attorney-General shall exercise general superintendence and direction over the attorneys and marshals of all the districts in the United States and the Territories as to the manner of discharging their respective duties; and the several district attorneys and marshals are required to report to the Attorney-General an account of their official proceedings and of the state and condition of their respective offices, in such time and manner as the Attorney-General may direct. [R. S.]

Supervision of district attorneys.—There is no express authority vested in him [the Attorney-General] to authorize suits to be brought against the debtors of the government, or upon bonds, or to begin criminal prosecutions, or to institute proceedings in any of the numerous cases in which the United States is plaintiff; and yet he is invested with the general superintendence of all such suits, and all the district attorneys who do bring them in the various courts in the country are placed under his immediate direction and control." U. S. v. San Jacinto Tim Co., (1888); 125 U. S. 273, 8 S. Ct. 850, 31 U. S. (L. ed.) 747.

General regulations.—The Attorney-General is authorized to exercise general superintendence and direction over attorneys and marshals of all districts and territories as to the manner of discharge of their respective duties; and the section confers upon the Attorney-General power to superintend any criminal prosecution instituted by the district attorney, and to direct the district attorney in regard to the method of discharging his duties in any particular prosecution instituted by him. But it does not authorize the Attorney-General to control the action of the district attorney in criminal cases by general regulation. Fish v. U. S., (E. D. N. Y. 1888) 36 Fed. 680.

Appearances before Circuit Courts of Appeals.—The Attorney-General has authority under this section to direct district attorneys to follow cases on appeal from their own districts into the Circuit Court of Appeals, and he has authority to employ special counsel to assist district attorneys in the discharge of their duties; and he may employ as special counsel one who is district attorney within the district in which the Court of Appeals is sitting in a case coming from another district. Garter v. U. S., (1898) 31 Ct. Cl. 344, affirmed (1898) 170 U. S. 557, 18 S. Ct. 763, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1133.

The authority to exercise general superintendence and direction over the manner of discharging special duties as deputy marshal could not include or imply authority to compel him to do, in a limited time, what could not by any diligence on his part be done in that time, or to deprive him of the compensation which Congress has explicitly provided should be paid to him. Stockdale v. U. S., (D. C. Md. 1889) 39 Fed. 62.

It was within the authority of the Attorney-General to require the district attorney of the northern district of Illinois to consult with and advise the secretary of the board of management of the United States government exhibit at the World's Columbian Exposition, and special compensation fixed by the Attorney-General was allowed. Milichrist v. U. S., (1896) 31 Ct. Cl. 418.

The Attorney-General has power to authorize a district attorney to employ a stenographer to take from dictation, and to copy, certain complaints and indictments and a certain opinion of the district judge in some criminal cases which the United States was prosecuting in that district, and for such services the stenographer is entitled to recover from the government. U. S. v. Denison, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 80 Fed. 370, 49 U. S. App. 352, 25 C. C. A. 496.

The transfer of the settlement of the accounts of district attorneys and marshals to the Attorney-General's office was not affected by this statute. (1861) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 95.

Sec. 367. [Interest of United States in pending suits, who may attend to.] The Solicitor-General, or any officer of the Department of Justice, may be sent by the Attorney-General to any State or District in the United States to attend to the interests of the United States in any suit pending in any of the courts of the United States, or in the courts of any State, or to attend to any other interest of the United States. [R. S.]

Sec. 368. [Accounts of district attorneys, marshals, etc.] The Attorney-General shall exercise general supervisory powers over the accounts of district attorneys, marshals, clerks, and other officers of the courts of the United States. [R. S.]

The decision of the Attorney-General is conclusive and not subject to collateral attack by the courts. Schloss v. Hewlett, (1866) 51 Ala. 266, 4 So. 263. See (1872) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 104.

Effect of judicial order allowing fees.—The supervisory powers given in this section are precisely those which were exercised by the Secretary of the Interior before the Department of Justice was established. They do not give the Attorney-General any authority to make an allowance of fees under R. S. sec. 824, or to review and reverse a judicial order allowing such fees. U. S. v. Waters, (1890) 183 U. S. 208, 10 S. Ct. 249, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 594.

Blanks furnished to district attorney.—The sums paid by the marshal upon the requisition of the district attorney, approved by the Attorney-General, for blank indictments and informations for the necessary use of the district attorney, having been paid by the marshal, with the approval of the Attorney-General, the marshal is entitled to be repaid those sums. Harmon v. U. S., (C. C. Mm. 1890) 43 Fed. 580, affirmed 147 U. S. 268, 13 S. Ct. 327, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 164.

Sec. 369. [Requisitions.] The Attorney-General shall sign all requisitions for the advance or payment of moneys appropriated for the Department of Justice, out of the Treasury, subject to the same control as is exercised on like estimates or accounts by the First Auditor or First Comptroller of the Treasury. [R. S.]

The First Auditor was designated as Auditor for the Treasury Department, and the First Comptroller of the Treasury as Comptroller of the Treasury by the Act of July 31, 1894, ch. 174, §§ 3, 4, 28 Stat. L. 206, 206. See Treasury Department.

Sec. 370. [Traveling expenses of officers of the department.] Whenever the Solicitor-General, or any officer of the Department of Justice, is sent by the Attorney-General to any State, District, or Territory, to attend to any interest of the United States, the person so sent shall receive, in addition to his salary, his actual and necessary expenses while absent from the seat of Government; the account thereof to be verified by affidavit. [R. S.]

Expenses of district attorney outside of his district.—The provisions of this section and R. S. secs. 346, 362, 363, 367, and 368, confer ample authority on the Attorney-General to incur the expense of sending some attorney to any court of the nation to attend any interest of the United States. If he sends an officer of the Department of Justice from Washington, that officer can recover the amount of his expenses, in addition to his salary, under this section. If he employs and retains an attorney, the Acts of Congress prohibit the payment to him of any special compensation for the services he renders without his district (R. S. sec. 367, supra, p. 232, and R. S. secs. 1764 and 1765, in title Public Officers); but they contain no prohibition of the repayment to him of the actual and necessary expenses which he incurs on such a mission. U. S. v. Fleming, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 80 Fed. 373, 49 U. S. App. 354, 25 C. C. A. 498.

Sec. 371. [Disbursement of moneys.] All moneys drawn out of the Treasury upon the requisition of the Attorney-General shall be disbursed by such one of the clerks in the Department of Justice as the Attorney-General may designate. [R. S.]

Recent Appropriation Acts provide for a disbursing clerk. Provision for such clerk at a salary of $2,750 was made by the Act of March 4, 1916, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1039. See Judicial Officers, vol. 4, p. 610.
Sec. 372. [Records formerly appertaining to office of agent of the Treasury.] The Solicitor of the Treasury shall have charge, within the Department of Justice, of the books, papers, and records formerly appertaining to the office of agent of the Treasury, or to the superintendence of the collection of outstanding direct taxes and internal duties which have been transferred to him by the act of May twenty-nine, eighteen hundred and thirty, and remain in his charge; and of the seal adopted for the office of the Solicitor of the Treasury. [R. S.]

R. S. secs. 373, 374. See the note to R. S. sec. 346, supra, p. 242.

Sec. 375. [False reports of bonds delivered for suit.] Whenever it appears that any collector has made return of any bond as in suit, or delivered for suit, which is not, at the time, in suit, or delivered for suit, or has returned any bond as in suit for the whole amount thereof when part thereof has been paid to him or as in suit for more than is actually due thereon, the Solicitor of the Treasury shall, immediately upon discovery thereof, communicate the facts to the President of the United States. [R. S.]

Sec. 376. [Measures taken for the discovery of frauds.] The Solicitor of the Treasury, under direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall take cognizance of all frauds or attempted frauds upon the revenue, and shall exercise a general supervision over the measures for their prevention and detection, and for the prosecution of persons charged with the commission thereof. [R. S.]

Actions to recover moneys due the United States, not involving an issue of fraud, do not come in any way under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury. (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 714.

Sec. 377. [Rules established by solicitor of treasury respecting suits.] The Solicitor of the Treasury shall establish such regulations, not inconsistent with law, with the approbation of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the observance of collectors of the customs, and, with the approbation of the Attorney-General, for the observance of district attorneys and marshals respecting suits in which the United States are parties, as may be deemed necessary for the just responsibility of those officers, and the prompt collection of all revenues and debts due and accruing to the United States. But this section does not apply to suits for taxes, forfeitures, or penalties arising under the internal revenue laws. [R. S.]

The power to compromise a suit in which the United States is a party does not exist with the district attorney. No statute of the United States gives the district attorney any such power, and a regulation established by the solicitor of the treasury and approved by the Attorney-General provides that no district attorney shall agree to take a judgment or decree for a less amount than is claimed by the United States without express instructions from the solicitor of the treasury. U. S. v. Beebe. (1901) 180 U. S. 343, 21 S. Ct. 371, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 563.
Sec. 378. [Report by solicitor of treasury of moneys recovered.] The Solicitor of the Treasury shall report all moneys recovered or collected under his direction to the officer from whom the bond or other evidence of debt was received, who shall give proper credit therefor; and he shall report in like manner all credits allowed by due course of law on any suits under his direction. [R. S.]

Sec. 379. [Instructions by solicitor of treasury to district attorneys and other officers.] The Solicitor of the Treasury shall have power to instruct the district attorneys, marshals and clerks of the circuit and district courts in all matters and proceedings appertaining to suits in which the United States is a party or interested, except suits for taxes, penalties, or forfeitures under the internal-revenue laws, and to cause them, or either of them, to report to him from time to time any information he may require in relation to the same. [R. S.]

Extent of solicitor's authority.—In (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 475, the Attorney-General said that it was not intended by the Act of May 29, 1830, from which this section was taken, to confer on the solicitor a mandatory power independent of the authority of the President or of the heads of departments. "On the contrary, by the tenor of the statute itself, and by a subsisting general order of the President, the solicitor in giving his instructions is to act upon advice of the Attorney-General, or special direction of the secretary within whose department any suit in law may arise; and he is subject, of course, to the direction, both general and special, of the President."

The Secretary of the Treasury has not any direct control over suits instituted for the collection of unpaid duties. This section places these matters in charge of the solicitor of the treasury. As a matter of prudent administration, this discretion of the solicitor of the treasury should be exercised under the supervision and with the approbation of the secretary or that of the head of the department to which the solicitor is attached as subordinate. (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 142.

A direction to stay proceedings in a suit commenced on a duty bond is clearly within the statute; and a direction to stay the commencement of a suit on a duty bond handed over to him by the collector, on such terms as shall be deemed advantageous to the United States, is also an instruction in a matter appertaining to a suit in which the United States is interested, and therefore it may be given by the solicitor. (1837) 3 Op. Atty.-Gen. 251.

An action to recover duties on goods previously smuggled is a suit "in which the United States is a party or interested" within the meaning of this section. (1894) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 714.

Sec. 381. [Duties of United States attorneys.] In the prosecution of any suit for money due the Post-Office Department, the United States attorney conducting the same shall obey the directions which may be given him by the Department of Justice. [R. S.]

Sec. 382. [Proceedings in equity in cases of post-office department.] When proceedings at law for money due the Post-Office Department are fruitless the Department of Justice may direct the institution of a suit in chancery, in any United States district or circuit court, to set aside fraudulent conveyances or trusts, or attach debts due the defendant, or obtain any other proper exercise of the powers of equity to have satisfaction of any judgment against such defendant. [R. S.]

Sec. 383. [Publication of opinions of attorney-general.] The Attorney-General shall from time to time cause to be edited, and printed at the Government Printing-Office, an edition of one thousand copies of such of the opinions of the law-officers herein authorized to be given as he may deem valuable for preservation in volumes, which shall be, as to size, quality of paper, printing, and binding, of uniform style and appearance, as nearly as practicable, with volume eight of such opinions, published, by Robert Farnham, in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-eight. Each volume shall contain proper head-notes, a complete and full index, and such foot-notes as the Attorney-General may approve. Such volumes shall be distributed in such manner as the Attorney-General may from time to time prescribe. [R. S.]

Sec. 384. [Attorney-General to report business and statistics.] It shall be the duty of the Attorney-General to make to Congress at the commencement of each regular session, a report of the business of the Department of Justice for the last preceding fiscal year, and of any other matters appertaining thereto that he may deem proper, including a statement of the several appropriations now or which may hereafter be placed under its control, the amount appropriated, and a detailed statement of the amounts used for defraying the expenses of the United States courts in each judicial district; also the statistics of crime under the laws of the United States, and a statement of the number of causes, civil and criminal, pending during the preceding year in each of the several courts of the United States. [R. S.]

Sec. 385. [Attorney-General to report additional attorneys and counsel employed.] The Attorney-General shall make an annual report to Congress of the names of all persons employed or retained as attorneys or counselors at law to assist any district attorneys in the performance of their duties, stating when and upon what business each was employed, and the compensation paid to each. [R. S.]

[Sec. 1.] [Attorney-General to report expenditures of contingent fund.] * * * And the Attorney-General shall hereafter annually report to Congress in detail, the items, amounts, and causes of expenditure of the contingent expenses of this department. [18 Stat. L. 109.]

This provision follows an appropriation for contingent expenses of the Department of Justice in the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of June 20, 1874, ch. 328.
See the two preceding paragraphs of the text and the notes thereto.
SEC. 3. [Attorney-General to report statement of payments.] That the Attorney-General shall include in his annual report a statement of all payments or expenditures during any fiscal year out of any appropriation fund subject to requisitions by him. [21 Stat. L. 44.]

This section is from the Act of June 30, 1879, ch. 52, "making appropriation for certain judicial expenses," etc.

See the three preceding paragraphs of the text and the notes thereto.

[Sec. 1.] [Additional assistant attorney-general.] * * * For an additional assistant Attorney-General to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall receive a compensation at the rate of five thousand dollars per annum. [26 Stat. L. 265.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of July 11, 1890, ch. 667.

See R. S. secs. 347 and 348, supra, pp. 242, 243, and the notes thereto.

SEC. 23. [Attorney-General to report attorneys' and marshals' expenses, etc.] * * * The Attorney-General shall, in his annual report to Congress each year, include a statement in detail showing for the preceding fiscal year the number of assistant district attorneys employed, the salaries of each; the number of clerical assistants employed for each district attorney, the salaries of each; the amount expended for necessary subsistence and actual and necessary traveling expenses of each district attorney and his assistants; the number of office deputys and clerical assistants employed for each marshal, the salaries paid to each; the amount expended for necessary subsistence and actual and necessary traveling expenses of each marshal and his office deputys, and the number of field deputy marshals employed by each marshal and the amount of fees earned by and the compensation paid to each of them out of such fees. [29 Stat. L. 185.]

This section is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of May 28, 1896, ch. 252.

See R. S. secs. 384, 385, supra, p. 256, and the notes thereto.

An Act To authorize the commencement and conduct of legal proceedings under the direction of the Attorney-General.

[Conduct of proceedings which are authorized to be conducted by District Attorneys.] That the Attorney-General or any officer of the Department of Justice, or any attorney or counselor specially appointed by the Attorney-General under any provision of law, may, when thereunto specifically directed by the Attorney-General, conduct any kind of legal proceeding, civil or criminal, including grand jury proceedings and proceedings before committing magistrates, which district attorneys now are or hereafter may be by law authorized to conduct, whether or not he or they be residents of the district in which such proceeding is brought. [34 Stat. L. 816.]

This Act is also set forth in Judicial Officers, vol. 4, pp. 774-775, and is there annotated.
Provision for conduct and argument of cases is made in R. S. sec. 359, supra, p. 250.

[Sec. 1.] [Administrative audit of accounts.] * * * The administrative audit of all expenditures under the control of the Department of Justice shall hereafter be made in the Division of Accounts of that Department. [37 Stat. L. 404.]

This is from the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of Aug. 23, 1912, ch. 350.

[Sec. 1.] [Assistant Attorney-General—Salary.] * * * For salary of the Assistant to the Attorney General, which is hereby fixed at the rate of $9,000 per annum; in addition to the $7,000 heretofore appropriated, for the balance of the fiscal year nineteen hundred and fourteen, $1,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary. [38 Stat. L. 218.]

This was a provision of the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of Oct. 22, 1913, ch. 32. See the notes to R. S. secs. 348, 349, supra, p. 243.

I. ARBITRATION

An Act Providing for mediation, conciliation, and arbitration in controversies between certain employers and their employees.

[Act of July 15, 1913, ch. 6, 38 Stat. L. 103.]

[Sec. 1.] [Arbitration of controversies with railway employees.] That the provisions of this Act shall apply to any common carrier or carriers and their officers, agents, and employees, except masters of vessels and seamen, as defined in section forty-six hundred and twelve, Revised Statutes of the United States, engaged in the transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad, or partly by railroad and partly by water, for a continuous carriage or shipment from one State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia to any other State or Territory of the United States or the District of Columbia, or from any place in the United States to an adjacent foreign country, or from any place in the United States through a foreign country to any other place in the United States.

The term "railroad" as used in this Act shall include all bridges and ferries used or operated in connection with any railroad, and also all the road in use by any corporation operating a railroad, whether owned or operated under a contract, agreement, or lease; and the term "transportation" shall include all instrumentalities of shipment or carriage.

The term "employees" as used in this Act shall include all persons actually engaged in any capacity in train operation or train service of any description, and notwithstanding that the cars upon or in which they are employed may be held and operated by the carrier under lease or other contract: Provided, however, That this Act shall not be held to apply to employees of street railroads and shall apply only to employees engaged in railroad train service. In every such case the carrier shall be responsible for the acts and defaults of such employees in the same manner and to the same extent as if said cars were owned by it and said employees directly employed by it, and any provisions to the contrary of any such lease or other contract shall be binding only as between the parties thereto and shall not affect the obligations of said carrier either to the public or to the private parties concerned.

A common carrier subject to the provisions of this Act is hereinafter referred to as an "employer," and the employees of one or more of such carriers are hereinafter referred to as "employees." [38 Stat. L. 103.]

This is the first section of the Arbitration Act of 1913 and repeals the prior Act on the subject. See the note to section 11 of this Act, infra, p. 287.

Discharge of employee.—In the Act of June 1, 1898, ch. 370, 30 Stat. L. 428, it was provided in section 10 as follows: "That any employer subject to the provisions of this Act and any officer, agent, or receiver of such employer who shall require any employee, or any person seeking employment, as a condition of such employment, to enter into an agreement, either written or oral, not to become or remain a member of any labor corporation, association, or organization; or shall threaten any employee with loss of employment, or shall unjustly discriminate against any employee because of his membership in such a labor corporation, association, or organization; or who shall require any employees or any person seeking employment, as a condition of such employment, to enter into a contract whereby such employee or applicant for employment shall agree to contribute to any fund for charitable, social, or beneficial purposes; or to release such employer from legal liability for any personal injury by reason of any benefit received from such fund beyond the proportion of the benefit arising from the employer's contribution to such fund; or who shall, after having discharged an employee, attempt or conspire to prevent such employee from obtaining employment, or who shall, after the quitting of an employee, attempt or conspire to prevent such employee from obtaining employment, is hereby declared to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof in any court of the United States of competent jurisdiction in the district in which such offense was committed, shall be punished for each offense by a fine of not less than one hundred dollars and not more than one thousand dollars."

In construing this provision the United States Supreme Court declared that personal liberty as well as the right of property were invaded without due process of law, in violation of U. S. Const., Fifth Amendment, and it was said that there is no such connection between interstate commerce and membership in a labor organization as to authorize Congress to make it a crime against the United States for an agent or officer of an interstate carrier, having full authority in the premises from his principal, to discharge an employee from service to such carrier because of such membership on his part. Adair v. U. S., (1908) 208 U. S. 161, 23 S. Ct. 277, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 430, 13 Ann. Cas. 764, reversing (E. D. Ky. 1907) 152 Fed. 737.

And in Coppage v. Kansas, (1915) 236 U. S. 1, 35 S. Ct. 240, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 441, L. R. A. 1916 C 980, reversing (1912) 87 Kan. 752, 125 Pac. S, a similar statute enacted by the Kansas legislature was declared to be unconstitutional, the decision being based on the reasoning of the court in Adair v. U. S., supra. The Kansas statute read as follows: "It shall be unlawful for any individual or member of any firm, or any agent, officer, or employee of any company or corporation, to coerce, require, demand, or influence any person or persons to enter into any agreement, either written or verbal, not to join or become or remain a member of any labor organization or association, as a condition of such person or persons securing employment, or continuing in the employment of such individual, firm, or corporation. Any individual or member of any firm, or any agent, officer, or employee of any company or imprisoned in the county jail not less than this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not less than $50, or imprisoned in the county jail not less than thirty days." The statute was held unconstitutional as being in conflict with that provision of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States which declared that no state shall deprive any person of liberty or property without due process of law.

SEC. 2. [Board of Mediation and Conciliation — duties.] That whenever a controversy concerning wages, hours of labor, or conditions of employment shall arise between an employer or employers and employees subject to this Act interrupting or threatening to interrupt the business of said employer or employers to the serious detriment of the public interest, either party to such controversy may apply to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation created by this Act and invoke its services for the purpose of bringing about an amicable adjustment of the controversy; and upon the request of either party the said board shall with all practicable expedition put itself in communication with the parties to such controversy and shall use its best efforts, by mediation and conciliation, to bring them to an agreement; and if such efforts to bring about an amicable adjustment through mediation and conciliation shall be unsuccessful, the said board shall at once endeavor to induce the parties to submit their controversy to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

In any case in which an interruption of traffic is imminent and fraught with serious detriment to the public interest, the Board of Mediation and Conciliation may, if in its judgment such action seem desirable, proffer its services to the respective parties to the controversy.

In any case in which a controversy arises over the meaning or the application of any agreement reached through mediation under the provisions of this Act either party to the said agreement may apply to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation for an expression of opinion from such board as to the meaning or application of such agreement and the said board shall upon receipt of such request give its opinion as soon as may be practicable. [38 Stat. L. 104.]

SEC. 3. [Boards of arbitration authorized — members.] That whenever a controversy shall arise between an employer or employers and employees subject to this Act, which can not be settled through mediation and conciliation in the manner provided in the preceding section, such controversy may be submitted to the arbitration of a board of six, or, if the parties to the controversy prefer so to stipulate, to a board of three persons, which board shall be chosen in the following manner: In the case of a board of three, the employer or employers and the employees, parties respectively to the agreement to arbitrate, shall each name one arbitrator; and the two arbitrators thus chosen shall select the third arbitrator; but in the event of their failure to name the third arbitrator within five days after their first meeting, such third arbitrator shall be named by the Board of Mediation and Conciliation. In the case of a board of six, the employer or employers and the employees, parties respectively to the agreement to arbitrate, shall each name two arbitrators, and the four arbitrators thus chosen shall, by a majority vote, select the remaining two arbitrators; but in the event of their failure to name the two arbitrators within fifteen days after their first meeting the said two arbitrators, or as many of them as have not been named, shall be named by the Board of Mediation and Conciliation.

In the event that the employees engaged in any given controversy are not members of a labor organization, such employees may select a committee which shall have the right to name the arbitrator, or the arbitrators, who are to be named by the employees as provided above in this section. [38 Stat. L. 104.]

Construction of statute.—An arbitration of differences between an interstate carrier and its employees, under this Act, is essentially a common-law arbitration, and rests solely on the written agreement of arbitration entered into by the parties, which limits and determines not only the rights of the parties thereto but also the extent of the powers of the arbitrators, and it is to be construed in accordance with the rules governing the construction of contracts, rather than those applicable to pleadings. In re Southern Pac. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1907) 153 Fed. 1001.

SEC. 4. [Requirements of agreement to arbitrate.] That the agreement to arbitrate—

First. Shall be in writing;

Second. Shall stipulate that the arbitration is had under the provisions of this Act;

Third. Shall state whether the board of arbitration is to consist of three or six members;

Fourth. Shall be signed by duly accredited representatives of the employer or employers and of the employees;

Fifth. Shall state specifically the questions to be submitted to the said board for decision;

Sixth. Shall stipulate that a majority of said board shall be competent to make a valid and binding award;

Seventh. Shall fix a period from the date of the appointment of the arbitrator or arbitrators necessary to complete the board, as provided for in the agreement, within which the said board shall commence its hearings;

Eighth. Shall fix a period from the beginning of the hearings within which the said board shall make and file its award: Provided, That this period shall be thirty days unless a different period be agreed to;

Ninth. Shall provide for the date from which the award shall become effective and shall fix the period during which the said award shall continue in force;

Tenth. Shall provide that the respective parties to the award will each faithfully execute the same;

Eleventh. Shall provide that the award and the papers and proceedings, including the testimony relating thereto, certified under the hands of the arbitrators, and which shall have the force and effect of a bill of exceptions, shall be filed in the clerk's office of the district court of the United States for the district wherein the controversy arises or the arbitration is entered into, and shall be final and conclusive upon the parties to the agreement unless set aside for error of law apparent on the record;

Twelfth. May also provide that any difference arising as to the meaning or the application of the provisions of an award made by a board of arbitration shall be referred back to the same board or to a subcommittee of such board for a ruling, which ruling shall have the same force and effect as the original award; and if any member of the original board is unable or unwilling to serve another arbitrator shall be named in the same manner as such original member was named. [38 Stat. L. 105.]

Construction of agreement.—A written contract inter parties, as an agreement for arbitration stating the questions to be submitted and determined, must primarily be interpreted by its language taken in its ordinary and accepted meaning, and if that language is plain and unambiguous in itself, there is no room for construction, but it will be held to mean precisely what its terms imply. It is only when the language is susceptible of more than one construction that the intent or understanding of the parties may be inquired into, or that evidence of the surrounding circumstances may be resorted to. In re Southern Pac. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1907) 155 Fed. 1001.

Scope of question submitted.—An agreement for arbitration between a railroad company and the Order of Railway Telegraphers provided for the submission, among others, of the question “whether members of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers in the employ of the employer shall legislate for train dispatchers respecting rates of pay and hours of service or otherwise.” It was held that such question was not limited to an inquiry as to whether the train dispatchers in the service of the employer had authorized the order or its committee to represent them in the arbitration proceedings, which was merely a matter of agency, but that it covered the broader question as to whether they should be represented generally in their negotiations and dealings with the employer in respect to rates of pay and hours of service by the body of its employees who were members of the order, or should be separately represented, and that the board of arbitration properly admitted evidence offered by the employer to show the nature of their duties, and that their relation to the employer and to its service to the public was different from that of ordinary telegraphers. In re Southern Pac. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1907) 155 Fed. 1001.

An agreement for arbitration between a railroad company and the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose members employed by the company were working under a schedule agreed to between the parties fixing rates of pay and hours of service, which submitted as one of the questions to be arbitrated “the question of eliminating from the operation of the schedule certain important agencies where the duties of soliciting traffic are paramount,” was not ambiguous in respect to such question, which was clearly limited by terms to “agencies where the duties of soliciting traffic are paramount,” and could not be broadened by construction to authorize the board of arbitrators to consider and determine whether the schedule shall apply generally to “station agents whose regular duties do not include telegraphic work and whose annual earnings . . . . equal or exceed a certain sum. In re Southern Pac. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1907) 155 Fed. 1001.

Sec. 5. [Authority of arbitrators to secure testimony, etc.] That for the purposes of this Act the arbitrators herein provided for, or either of them, shall have power to administer oaths and affirmations, sign subpœnas, require the attendance and testimony of witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, contracts, agreements, and documents material to a just determination of the matters under investigation as may be ordered by the court; and may invoke the aid of the United States courts to compel witnesses to attend and testify and to produce such books, papers, contracts, agreements, and documents to the same extent and under the same conditions and penalties as is provided for in the Act to regulate commerce, approved February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, and the amendments thereto. [38 Stat. L. 106.]

For the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, ch. 104, as amended, mentioned in this section, together with other Acts of similar character, see the title Interstate Commerce, vol. 4, p. 331.
SEC. 6. [Acknowledgment and filing of agreement — notification to arbitrators — selection to complete board — notice to board — reconvening of board.] That every agreement of arbitration under this Act shall be acknowledged by the parties thereto before a notary public or a clerk of the district or the circuit court of appeals of the United States, or before a member of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, the members of which are hereby authorized to take such acknowledgments; and when so acknowledged shall be delivered to a member of said board or transmitted to said board to be filed in its office.

When such agreement of arbitration has been filed with the said board, or one of its members, and when the said board, or a member thereof, has been furnished the names of the arbitrators chosen by the respective parties to the controversy, the board, or a member thereof, shall cause a notice in writing to be served upon the said arbitrators, notifying them of their appointment, requesting them to meet promptly to name the remaining arbitrator or arbitrators necessary to complete the board, and advising them of the period within which, as provided in the agreement of arbitration, they are empowered to name such arbitrator or arbitrators.

When the arbitrators selected by the respective parties have agreed upon the remaining arbitrator or arbitrators, they shall notify the Board of Mediation and Conciliation; and in the event of their failure to agree upon any or upon all of the necessary arbitrators within the period fixed by this Act they shall, at the expiration of such period, notify the Board of Mediation and Conciliation of the arbitrators selected, if any, or of their failure to make or to complete such selection.

If the parties to an arbitration desire the reconvening of a board to pass upon any controversy arising over the meaning or application of an award, they shall jointly so notify the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, and shall state in such written notice the question or questions to be submitted to such reconvened board. The Board of Mediation and Conciliation shall thereupon promptly communicate with the members of the board of arbitration or a subcommittee of such board appointed for such purpose pursuant to the provisions of the agreement of arbitration, and arrange for the reconvening of said board or subcommittee, and shall notify the respective parties to the controversy of the time and place at which the board will meet for hearings upon the matters in controversy to be submitted to it. [38 Stat. L. 106.]

SEC. 7. [Organisation of board — proceedings, etc.] That the board of arbitration shall organize and select its own chairman and make all necessary rules for conducting its hearings; but in its award or awards the said board shall confine itself to findings or recommendations as to the questions specifically submitted to it or matters directly bearing thereon. All testimony before said board shall be given under oath or affirmation, and any member of the board of arbitration shall have the power to administer oaths or affirmations. It may employ such assistants as may be necessary in carrying on its work. It shall, whenever practicable, be supplied with suitable quarters in any Federal building located at its place of meeting or at any place where the board may adjourn for its deliberations. The board of arbitration shall furnish a certified copy of its awards to the respective parties to the controversy, and shall transmit the original, together with the papers and proceedings and a transcript of the testimony taken at the hearings, certified under the hands of the arbitrators, to the clerk of the district court of the United States for the district wherein the controversy arose or the arbitration is entered into, to be filed in said clerk’s office as provided in paragraph eleven of section four of this Act. And said board shall also furnish a certified copy of its award, and the papers and proceedings, including the testimony relating thereto, to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, to be filed in its office.

The United States Commerce Court, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Bureau of Labor Statistics are hereby authorized to turn over to the Board of Mediation and Conciliation upon its request any papers and documents heretofore filed with them and bearing upon mediation or arbitration proceedings held under the provisions of the Act approved June first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, providing for mediation and arbitration. [38 Stat. L. 106.]

The Act of June 1, 1898, ch. 370, above mentioned was repealed by section 11 of this Act, infra, p. 287.

Sec. 8. [When award becomes effective — action in district court — disposition of exceptions on questions of law — appeals — restricted to questions of law — finality of judgment — judgment by agreement — no compulsory labor.] That the award, being filed in the clerk’s office of a district court of the United States as hereinbefore provided, shall go into practical operation, and judgment shall be entered thereon accordingly at the expiration of ten days from such filing, unless within such ten days either party shall file exceptions thereto for matter of law apparent upon the record, in which case said award shall go into practical operation, and judgment be entered accordingly, when such exceptions shall have been finally disposed of either by said district court or on appeal therefrom.

At the expiration of ten days from the decision of the district court upon exceptions taken to said award as aforesaid judgment shall be entered in accordance with said decision, unless during said ten days either party shall appeal therefrom to the circuit court of appeals. In such case only such portion of the record shall be transmitted to the appellate court as is necessary to the proper understanding and consideration of the questions of law presented by said exceptions and to be decided.

The determination of said circuit court of appeals upon said questions shall be final, and, being certified by the clerk thereof to said district court, judgment pursuant thereto shall thereupon be entered by said district court.

If exceptions to an award are finally sustained, judgment shall be entered setting aside the award in whole or in part; but in such case the parties may agree upon a judgment to be entered disposing of the subject matter of the controversy, which judgment when entered shall have the same force and effect as judgment entered upon an award.

Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to require an employee to render personal service without his consent, and no injunction or other legal process shall be issued which shall compel the performance by any employee against his will of a contract for personal labor or service. [38 Stat. L. 107.]
Exceptions and review.—Under this section an award is subject to exception only on pure questions of law directly and necessarily affecting the award made and which go to the jurisdiction of the board, the legality of its formation under the statute, and the scope of its inquiry with respect to the questions specifically submitted to it. The judgment of a District Court on the exceptions to an award made in arbitration proceedings pursuant to this section, is reviewable by appeal in the Circuit Court of Appeals. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 765, 132 C. C. A. 559.

Entry of judgment.—In an arbitration proceeding to settle differences between an interstate carrier and its employees, judgment on the award cannot be entered by the court until after the appeal has been determined, or until after the time for taking an appeal has expired. In re Southern Pac. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1907) 156 Fed. 1001.

Sec. 9. [Rights of employees under federal court receivers—restriction on reducing wages.] That whenever receivers appointed by a Federal court are in possession and control of the business of employers covered by this Act the employees of such employers shall have the right to be heard through their representatives in such court upon all questions affecting the terms and conditions of their employment; and no reduction of wages shall be made by such receivers without the authority of the court therefor, after notice to such employees, said notice to be given not less than twenty days before the hearing upon the receivers’ petition or application, and to be posted upon all customary bulletin boards along or upon the railway or in the customary places on the premises of other employers covered by this Act. [38 Stat. L. 107.]

Sec. 10. [Compensation of arbitrators.] That each member of the board of arbitration created under the provisions of this Act shall receive such compensation as may be fixed by the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, together with his traveling and other necessary expenses. The sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, to be immediately available and to continue available until the close of the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and fourteen, for the necessary and proper expenses incurred in connection with any arbitration or with the carrying on of the work of mediation and conciliation, including per diem, traveling, and other necessary expenses of members or employees of boards of arbitration and rent in the District of Columbia, furniture, office fixtures and supplies, books, salaries, traveling expenses, and other necessary expenses of members or employees of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, to be approved by the chairman of said board and audited by the proper accounting officers of the Treasury. [38 Stat. L. 108.]

That part of the above section providing for an appropriation may be regarded as temporary, since appropriations are made yearly for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act. That for the fiscal year 1915 is contained in the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 147, 38 Stat. L. 1140.

Sec. 11. [Commissioner and assistant commissioner of mediation and conciliation—other members to constitute board of mediation and conciliation—assistant commissioner—former act repealed—pending agreements, etc., continued.] There shall be a Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and whose salary shall be $7,500 per annum, who shall hold his office for a term of seven years and until a successor qualifies, and who shall be removable by the President only for misconduct in office. The President shall also designate not more than two other officials of the Government who have been appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the officials thus designated, together with the Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation, shall constitute a board to be known as the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation.

There shall also be an Assistant Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and whose salary shall be $5,000 per annum. In the absence of the Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation, or when that office shall become vacant, the assistant commissioner shall exercise the functions and perform the duties of that office. Under the direction of the Commissioner of Mediation and Conciliation, the assistant commissioner shall assist in the work of mediation and conciliation and when acting alone in any case he shall have the right to take acknowledgments, receive agreements of arbitration, and cause the notices in writing to be served upon the arbitrators chosen by the respective parties to the controversy, as provided for in section five of this Act.

The Act of June first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, relating to the mediation and arbitration of controversies between railway companies and certain classes of their employees is hereby repealed: Provided, That any agreement of arbitration which, at the time of the passage of this Act, shall have been executed in accordance with the provisions of said Act of June first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, shall be governed by the provisions of said Act of June first, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight, and the proceedings thereunder shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of said Act. [38 Stat. L. 108.]

II. COMMISSION ON INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS

An Act To create a Commission on Industrial Relations.

[Sec. 1.] [Commission established — composition.] That a commission is hereby created to be called the Commission on Industrial Relations. Said commission shall be composed of nine persons, to be appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, not less than three of whom shall be employers of labor and not less than three of whom shall be representatives of organized labor. The Department of Commerce and Labor is authorized to cooperate with said commission in any manner and to whatever extent the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may approve. [37 Stat. L. 415.]

This is known as the "Industrial Relations Commission Act."

The Department of Commerce and Labor was to be called the Department of Commerce, and the secretary thereof the Secretary of Commerce by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, sec. 1, 37 Stat. L. 736, creating the Department of Labor as a new executive department. See Labor Department. See the note to sec. 3 of this Act, infra, p. 269.

Sec. 2. [Compensation of members — general authority.] That the members of this commission shall be paid actual traveling and other necessary expenses and in addition a compensation of ten dollars per diem while actually engaged on the work of the commission and while going to or returning from such work. The commission is authorized as a whole, or by subcommittees of the commission, duly appointed, to hold sittings and public hearings anywhere in the United States, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to summon and compel the attendance of witnesses and to compel testimony, and to employ such secretaries, experts, stenographers, and other assistants as shall be necessary to carry out the purposes for which such commission is created, and to rent such offices, to purchase such books, stationery, and other supplies, and to have such printing and binding done, as may be necessary to carry out the purposes for which such commission is created, and to authorize its members or its employees to travel in or outside the United States on the business of the commission. [37 Stat. L. 415.]

SEC. 3. [Reports and recommendations to Congress.] That said commission may report to the Congress its findings and recommendations and submit the testimony taken from time to time, and shall make a final report accompanied by the testimony not previously submitted not later than three years after the date of the approval of this Act, at which time the term of this commission shall expire, unless it shall previously have made final report, and in the latter case the term of the commission shall expire with the making of its final report; and the commission shall make at least one report to the Congress within the first year of its appointment and a second report within the second year of its appointment. [37 Stat. L. 415.]

By the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 75, § 1, 38 Stat. L. 840, an appropriation was made:

"For completing the inquiries and investigations authorized by the Act of August twenty-third, nineteen hundred and twelve, entitled 'An Act to create a Commission on Industrial Relations,' and to provide the expenses of such inquiries and investigations as are enumerated in section two of said Act, and for all necessary printing, including the final report of the commission, $100,000, to be immediately available."

SEC. 4. [Inquiries into labor conditions.] That the commission shall inquire into the general condition of labor in the principal industries of the United States including agriculture, and especially in those which are carried on in corporate forms; into existing relations between employers and employees; into the effect of industrial conditions on public welfare and into the rights and powers of the community to deal therewith; into the conditions of sanitation and safety of employees and the provisions for protecting the life, limb, and health of the employees; into the growth of associations of employers and of wage earners and the effect of such associations upon the relations between employers and employees; into the extent and results of methods of collective bargaining; into any methods which have been tried in any State or in foreign countries for maintaining mutually satisfactory relations between employees and employers; into methods for avoiding or adjusting labor disputes through peaceful and conciliatory mediation and negotiations; into the scope, methods, and resources of existing bureaus of labor and into possible ways of increasing their usefulness; into the question of smuggling or other illegal entry of Asians into the United States or its insular possessions, and of the methods by which such Asians have gained and are gaining such admission, and shall report to Congress as speedily as possible with such recommendation as said commission may think proper to prevent such smuggling and illegal entry. The commission shall seek to discover the underlying causes of dissatisfaction in the industrial situation and report its conclusions thereon. [37 Stat. L. 416.]

SEC. 5. [Employment of experts — salaries.] That the sum of one hundred thousand dollars is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated for the use of the commission for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and thirteen: Provided, That no portion of this money shall be paid except upon the order of said commission, signed by the chairman thereof: Provided, That the commission may expend not to exceed five thousand dollars per annum for the employment of experts at such rate of compensation as may be fixed by the commission but no other person employed hereunder by the commission, except stenographers temporarily employed for the purpose of taking testimony, shall be paid compensation at a rate in excess of three thousand dollars per annum. [37 Stat. L. 416.]

See the note to sec. 3 of this Act, supra, p. 269, respecting appropriations.

III. HOURS OF LABOR

An act relating to the limitation of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia.

SECTION 1. [Hours of labor for laborers and mechanics on government work — dredging, etc., in rivers and harbors — permitting longer hours — exceptions.] That the service and employment of all laborers and mechanics who are now, or may hereafter, be employed by the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia, or by any contractor or subcontractor, upon a public work of the United States or of the District of Columbia, and of all persons who are now, or may hereafter be, employed by the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia, or any contractor or subcontractor, to perform services similar to those of laborers and mechanics in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia, is hereby limited and restricted to eight hours in any one calendar day; and it shall be unlawful for any officer of the United States Government or of the District of Columbia, or any such contractor or subcontractor whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control the services of such laborers or mechanics or of such persons employed to perform services similar to those of laborers and mechanics in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia, to require or permit any such laborer or mechanic or any such person employed to perform services similar to those of laborers and mechanics in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia, to work more than eight hours in any calendar day, except in case of extraordinary emergency: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall apply or be construed to apply to persons employed in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia while not directly operating dredging or rock excavating machinery or tools, nor to persons engaged in construction or repair of levees or revetments necessary for protection against floods or overflows on the navigable rivers of the United States. [27 Stat. L. 340, as amended by 37 Stat. L. 726.]

This is the first section of the "Hours of Service Act" or the "Eight Hour Law of 1892" and was amended to read as above given by section 1 of an Act of March 3, 1913, ch. 106, entitled, "An Act relating to the limitation of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon a public work of the United States and of the District of Columbia, and of all persons employed in constructing, maintaining, or improving a river or harbor of the United States and of the District of Columbia."

The section as originally enacted was as follows:

"That the service and employment of all laborers and mechanics who are now or may hereafter be employed by the Government of the United States, by the District of Columbia, or by any contractor or subcontractor upon any of the public works of the United States or of the said District of Columbia, is hereby limited and restricted to eight hours in any one calendar day, and it shall be unlawful for any officer of the United States Government or of the District of Columbia or any such contractor or subcontractor whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control the services of such laborers or mechanics to require or permit any such laborer or mechanic to work more than eight hours in any calendar day except in case of extraordinary emergency."

By its enactment it superseded the following provision of the Revised Statutes:

"Sec. 3738. Eight hours shall constitute a day's work for all laborers, workmen, and mechanics who may be employed by or on behalf of the Government of the United States."

Section 4 of the Amending Act of March 3, 1913, ch. 106, provided as follows:

"Sec. 4. That this Act shall become effective and be in force on and after March first, nineteen hundred and thirteen."

I. Power to legislate respecting hours of labor, 271
II. Construction and application generally, 271
III. Term "public works" construed and applied, 273
IV. Term "laborers and mechanics" construed and applied, 274
  1. In general, 274
  2. Particular employees, 274
V. Decisions construing R. S. sec. 3738, 275
I. POWER TO LEGISLATE RESPECTING HOURS OF LABOR

Authority of Congress.—Congress has power to prescribe the terms and conditions under which labor shall be performed in the construction of public works of the United States, and without reference to the fact whether such public works are or are not upon land over which the national government exercises political jurisdiction. U. S. v. San Francisco Bridge Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 86 Fed. 891.

Constitutionality.—The prohibition, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, except in case of extraordinary emergency, against requiring or permitting laborers or mechanics employed upon any of the public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia to work more than eight hours each day, is not repugnant to the Federal Constitution. Ellis v. U. S., (1907) 206 U. S. 246, 27 S. Ct. 600, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, 11 Ann. Cas. 588. See also (1905) 25 Op. Atty.-Gen. 441.

II. CONSTRUCTION AND APPLICATION GENERALLY

Purpose of eight-hour law.—The underlying purpose of all this legislation is to confer upon workmen the benefits, physical and moral, supposed to flow from a reduction of their labor to eight hours a day; not to increase their wages by enabling them to secure additional pay, if practicable, for working more than eight hours a day. Such statutes are paternalistic in character, and it is not intended that their benefits should be nullified through contracts made by the beneficiaries. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 488.

The effect of this Act was to make the government in all respects an eight-hour a-day employer as regards laborers and mechanics. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 506.

This Act was passed merely to extend the Act of June 25, 1898, R. S. sec. 3738, to contractors and subcontractors and to provide a penalty for violations of its restrictions, but not to change its general meaning. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 371.

Effect of Act of March 15, 1896.—Whether this Act was repealed to any extent whatever by the Act of March 16, 1898 (amending the Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 211, sec. 5, given in Civil Service, vol. 2, p. 164), providing for the hours of labor for governmental department employees, is a question upon which there may be some doubt, although the congressional history of the later Act indicates that Congress recognized its inconsistency with the eight-hour law in so far as it covers the same field and intended to that extent to repeal this Act. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 491.

Eight hours' effective labor.—This law means eight hours of effective labor. (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 64.

Extraordinary emergency.—The exception in this section of cases of extraordinary emergency was designed to excuse overtime work which must be rendered to avert some sudden unusual emergency, unexpectedly arising and calling for prompt action. (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 278.

But "no mere requirement of business convenience or pecuniary advantage is an extraordinary emergency within the meaning of this Act. The extraordinary emergency which relieves from the act is not one that is contemplated and inheres necessarily in the work. It is a special occurrence, and the phrase used emphasizes this. It is not an emergency simply which is expressed by it, something merely sudden and unexpected, but an extraordinary one, one exceeding the common degree." U. S. v. Garbish, (1911) 222 U. S. 257, 32 S. Ct. 77, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 190.

And a contractor for a public work of the United States, who intentionally permits laborers employed thereon to work more than eight hours a day, under the mistaken assumption that an extraordinary emergency exists, intentionally violates the provisions of this Act. Ellis v. U. S., (1907) 206 U. S. 248, 27 S. Ct. 600, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, 11 Ann. Cas. 589.

In this connection it has been decided that the building of levees on the banks of the Mississippi river in the Eastern District of Louisiana presents at all times an extraordinary emergency, exempted from operation of the eight-hour law. U. S. v. Garbish, (E. D. La. 1910) 180 Fed. 502.

A delay, however, not entirely unexpected, in obtaining the timber required for the construction of a pier at the Boston navy yard, was held not to create an extraordinary emergency within the meaning of the exception in this Act. Ellis v. U. S. (1907) 206 U. S. 246, 27 S. Ct. 600, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, 11 Ann. Cas. 589.

And in U. S. v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co., (S. D. Ohio 1906) 149 Fed. 809, it was held that an "extraordinary emergency" in connection with the building of a dam across the Ohio river could not be construed as a continuing emergency, which would suspend the eight-hour law during the entire lifetime of the contract, nor an emergency growing out of the scarcity of labor, nor could it be made to include, not only the time of the happening of a flood, but also the time required to repair the injuries resulting therefrom; but that it is such an unforeseen, sudden, or unexpected emergency as requires immediate action or remedy, and when the emergency passes the privilege ceases.

Laborers at customs ports.—This Act includes in its scope such of the laborers employed at the various customs ports as are actually engaged in manual labor. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 491.

Government vessel as public work.—The employment of laborers and mechanics in making repairs to government vessels is employment upon a public work of the United States and is therefore subject to the restrictions of the eight-hour law. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369.

Torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers.—This Act does not apply to the construction of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 404.

Construction of naval vessels.—This Act does not apply to the manufacture elsewhere than at the place where the vessel is built of machinery or other material which is to enter into the construction of the vessel. (1910) 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. 368.

Disease contracted in course of employment.—The word injury as used in this statute is in no sense suggestive of disease. Thus an artisan or laborer employed by the United States in the construction of river and harbor work, who contracted a severe cold in the course of his employment resulting in pneumonia and which incapacitated him from duty for a period lasting more than fifteen days, is not entitled to compensation under this Act. (1911) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 254.

Skilled workmen.—The eight-hour law includes skilled as well as unskilled workmen; and the employment of persons for a longer period than eight hours in any one day "when a dam is being raised or lowered" and the service is one "requiring skill and training" which "cannot safely be intrusted to inexperienced men," is not an employment in case of an "extraordinary emergency," and is a violation of that statute. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 605.

Statute does not affect wages.—If a workman is required by the officer in charge of the work to perform more labor each day during a part of his term of employment than the law allows, then the officer is an offender, unless there is an emergency; but that fact does not fix the wages of the workman or establish an agreement, either express or implied, when one did not exist before, and he is not entitled to recover compensation for the labor performed by him in excess of eight hours on each calendar day. U. S. v. Moses, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 58, 60 C. C. A. 600.
Indian service employees.—Persons employed by the Indian service on the Menominee Indian Reservation, Wis., under the Act of October 3, 1906 (34 Stat. 501), for the cutting of timber thereon and its conversion into logs and other lumber, are not employees of the United States Government and are not subject to the restrictions imposed by the Act of August 1, 1892, (27 Stat. 340) as regards hours of labor. (1909) 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. 139.

There is no conflict between the declarations in section 4 of the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. L. 388 (see WATERS), that eight hours shall constitute a day's work upon the public works therein specified and the declarations in section 1 of this Act which allows more than eight hours' work in one calendar day "in case of extraordinary emergency." (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 64.

Jetty work.—In (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 273, it was held that this Act applied to the jetty work at the mouth of the Columbia river, which was being conducted directly by the government, and that those employed upon that work who came fairly within the meaning of the words "laborers and mechanics" should be restricted to eight hours of effective labor in any one calendar day, irrespective of enforced idleness on other days, except in case of a sudden emergency requiring prompt action.

Locks and dams.—A lock and dam permanent in its nature, constructed across a navigable stream pursuant to a contract with the United States, the title to which was to vest in the United States, although the medium of payment is not a money consideration but a grant of right to use the water power produced by said dam, is a "public work within the meaning of the Act. Chattanooga, etc., Power Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1913) 209 Fed. 28, 126 C. C. A. 170.

Obstructions to navigation.—The removal of such obstructions in the rivers and harbors of the country is a part of the public work of the government. U. S. v. Jefferson, (D. C. Wash. 1894) 60 Fed. 736.

Panama canal.—This Act applies to the employment of laborers and mechanics in the construction of the Panama canal.

It does not apply to the office force of the Isthmian Canal Commission stationed on the Isthmus of Panama, or to any of the employees of the government who are not within the ordinary meaning of the words "laborers and mechanics." (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 441.

Employees of Panama railroad.—This Act does not apply to laborers and mechanics in the employ of the Panama Railroad and Steamship Line, such persons being employed by the corporation and not by the United States. (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 465.

IV. TERM "LABORERS AND MECHANICS" CONSTRUED AND APPLIED

1. In General

The words "laborers and mechanics" must be presumed to have been used by Congress in their ordinary sense. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 487.

As to laborers and mechanics in the direct employment of the government and in the District of Columbia, the statute is general, and the limitation to public works applies only to such persons as are not in the employ of contractors and subcontractors. (1902) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 459.

Method of payment not material. The words "laborers and mechanics," as used in the eight-hour law, apply to all persons who may fairly come within the description of laborers and mechanics, whether they are paid by the year, by the month, or by the day. (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 465.

Labor outside regular hours. Persons employed as lock tenders, lock helpers, lockmen, and in similar employments at the locks of the various canals owned and operated by the government may be called upon to perform service at any hour of the day, and such requirement is legal and proper under the eight-hour law so long as the total service rendered does not exceed eight hours per day. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 605.

2. Particular Employees

Blacksmiths and their helpers, firemen, and pumpmen employed in the Reclamation Service are either mechanics or laborers within the meaning of the eight-hour law. (1906) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 64.

Carpenters. A carpenter "whose duty is to perform manual labor in the removal of furniture and office fixtures, cutting grass, washing floors and windows, and general office cleaning," is not a laborer within the meaning of the eight-hour law; such services being more those of a domestic servant than those of a laborer in the usual meaning of the term. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 623.

Foremen of mechanics at the Port Leavenworth military prison are not laborers or mechanics within the statute. (1894) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 32.

Hostler. A hostler "whose duty is to feed, drive and care for horses, and to clean carriages, harness, and stables," is rather a domestic servant than a laborer. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 623.

Messengers. A messenger "whose duty is to sweep floors and do general office cleaning, attend to fires, and carry messages," is not a laborer or mechanic within the meaning of the eight-hour law. (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 623. See also (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 604.

Seamen. To the question whether the statute includes teamsters, watchmen, engineers, and firemen employed in the public service in the War Department, and all engineers, firemen, deckhands, mates, and seamen on government vessels, in the service thereof, the Attorney-General replied that the answer depended upon matters of fact not stated and not within his cognizance. "If the employees named are ordinary laborers or mechanics, working for the government for wages under ordinary conditions, the statute would seem to apply. At the same time, it is quite apparent that, as to some of them, it might frequently happen that they would be within the emergency exception named in the statute; and as to others, as, for instance, sailors or others on shipboard, or teamsters or their employment being peculiar, they might well be held to be, as a matter of fact, neither laborers nor mechanics within the meaning of this law." (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 459.

Masters, mates, engineers, firemen, crane men, deck hands, and scow men employed on tugs, dredges, and scows used in dredging a harbor channel are not laborers or mechanics within the meaning of this Act. Ellis v. U. S., (1907) 206 U. S. 246. 27 S. Ct. 600, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 1047, 11 Ann. Cas. 589.

In Breakwater Co. v. U. S., (C. C. A. 3d Cir. 1910) 182 Fed. 112, 105 C. C. A. 404, it appeared that the defendant was a contractor engaged in constructing for the United States jetties near Cape May harbor, extending from the shore into the open sea. The jetties were built up with stone, thrown overboard from barges, which were towed across Delaware bay, anchored, and as needed towed to the jetties and warped along while being discharged. As crews of such barges defendant employed engineers, boatmen, and hoistmen, selected for their seafaring experience, who operated the barges and also discharged their cargoes. The work done and the time required to do it depended on tide, wind, and weather, which ordinarily required variable hours of service on the part of the men. The court followed Ellis v. U. S., supra, and held that such men were seamen, with the rights of such, including the right to a lien on the vessel for their wages, and could not be classed as laborers or mechanics, within the meaning of this Act. Watchmen. In (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 623, it was held that a watchman "whose duty is to watch the entrance of one of the public buildings occupied by the War Department, executing instructions with regard to admitting persons into the building and permitting public property to be taken out of the building, reporting to his chief any violation of law, disturbance of the peace, etc., that may be brought to his attention, or to guard the building and property therein during the night," was not a laborer or mechanic within the meaning of the eight-hour law.

In (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 622, it was held that a watchman employed at Corregidor Island, Philippine Islands, whose duties were "to supervise all arrivals and to see that no one lands on the island without authority, to investigate such matters as the absence from work of native employees, and to make reports of those matters," was not a laborer or mechanic within the meaning of the eight-hour law. See also (1908) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 804.

The crew of a vessel belonging to the War Department, used in the removal of obstructions to navigation in rivers and harbors, are laborers of a different kind from those who are ordinarily employed upon public works of the United States. If part of the crew of such vessel is also sent to perform service in the making or clearing of obstructions from the rivers and harbors in order to convict the officer of the vessel under section 2 of this statute, it would have to be found that the defendant required them upon the public work, aside from their duties as seamen or deck hands on the vessel, to perform more than eight hours work in a day. U. S. v. Jefferson, (D. C. Wash. 1894) 60 Fed. 736.

V. DECISIONS CONSTRUING R. S. SEC. 3738
This statute was the original eight-hour law and contains no reference to "public works," but applies in terms to "all laborers, workmen, and mechanics now employed or who may hereafter be employed by or on behalf of the government of the United States." This statute proved ineffective because it was held to be not mandatory but merely directory (U. S. v. Martin, (1876) 94 U. S. 400, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 128), and also not to apply to laborers employed by independent contractors even though engaged in government work (Crandall, (1877) 96 U. S. 421, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 847). The present Act (Act of August 1, 1892, ch. 352, 27 Stat., p. 270) was passed avowedly to meet these two decisions. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 481; (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 482.

Directory.—The statute is in the nature of a direction by the government to its agent, and the government is not precluded from making contracts fixing a different length of time as a day's work. If an employee in the public service, independently of the Act, works more than eight hours per day, and is paid by the day and accepts payment, he cannot be heard to say that every eight hours constituted a day's work. U. S. v. Martin, (1876) 94 U. S. 400, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 128. See also Laurev v. U. S., (1897) 32 Ct. Cl. 259; Driscoll's Case, (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 33; (1890) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 685.

This statute is general, applying to all "laborers and workmen and mechanics" in the direct employment of the United States. In practical administration, however, this section has been held to be merely directory, and has not been enforced. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 462.

The statute is not a contract between the government and its laborer that eight hours shall constitute a day's work. It does not prevent the government from making agreements, either express or implied, by which a day's labor could be more or less than eight hours a day, nor does it prescribe the amount of compensation for that time or any other number of hours' labor. Coleman v. U. S., (D. C. Ky. 1897) 81 Fed. 824.

Employed by contractor.—The provisions of this statute are not applicable to mechanics, workmen, and laborers who are in the employment of a contractor with the United States. (1872) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 87; See also U. S. v. Driscoll, (1877) 96 U. S. 421, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 847; (1872) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 45.

"Where a contract was entered into between the Secretary of State and an individual whereby the latter was to furnish all the labor necessary for dressing and boxing certain granite, and to be paid the cost thereof with fifteen per cent. added, it cannot be deemed an evasion of the statute known as the eight-hour law. The legal execution of a right in such form as not to come within the prohibition of a statute is not necessarily an evasion of the statute." Driscoll's Case, (1877) 13 Ct. Cl. 15.

But where a contract with a contractor provided that the United States were to pay the contractor "the full expense and cost of working, dressing, insuring, and boxing the stone," and it appears that the granite cutters, dressers, and boxers of the stone were paid by the United States, they were held to be the employees of the government, though their labor was engaged and directed by the contractor, and such they were subject to and entitled to the benefit of this statute. Dix Island Granite Case, (1876) 12 Ct. Cl. 624.

The provisions of this section were extended to contractors and subcontractors, and a penalty provided for violations of its restrictions by the Act of Aug. 1, 1892. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 371.

Statute does not affect wages.—This statute does not establish an inflexible rule for the payment of wages to employees and give them the right to the same rate of compensation for each eight hours' labor that they would otherwise be entitled to for a calendar day's work or more hours', actual service. Averill's Case, (1878) 14 Ct. Cl. 200. See also Collins v. U. S. (1889) 24 Ct. Cl. 571.

It does not absolutely require that employees of the government must receive as high wages for their eight hours' labor as similar industry in private employment receives for a day's labor of ten or twelve hours; but it simply requires that the same worth of labor shall be compensated in the public employment at the same rate of wages that it receives in private employment. (1868) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 530. See also (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 29.

This statute left the subject of compensation to be regulated upon principles in force at the time of its passage. The President, by proclamation dated May 19, 1869, directed that thereafter no reduction should be made in the wages of government employees on account of the reduction in the hours of labor; it was held that persons serving the government as laborers, workmen, and mechanics are not entitled to receive, for the period intervening between the date of the Act and the date of the proclamation, the wages of a day of ten hours for working eight hours — the government being under no obligation to pay more for the past because it has agreed to pay more for the future. (1871) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 494.

The following propositions may be deduced from former opinions of the Attorneys-General and the decisions of the Court of Claims and the Supreme Court of the United States: 1. That the Act of 1868 (R. S. sec. 3738) prescribed the length of time which shall constitute a day's work; but it does not establish any rule by which the compensation for a day's work shall be determined — this being left to be fixed in the ordinary or customary manner where the law does not otherwise provide. 2. That it does not contemplate a reduction of wages simply because of the reduction thereby made in the length of the day's work; but on the other hand it does not require that the same wages shall be paid therefor as are received by those who in similar private employments work a greater length of time per day. This matter of wages is to be dealt with as pointed out in the preceding paragraph, having due regard to the public interest. 3. That it does not forbid the making of contracts which shall have a different length of time for the day's work than that prescribed in the law. 4. The provisions of the Act are not applicable to mechanics, workmen, and laborers who are in the employment of a contractor of the United States. It was not intended that the Act should extend to any others than the immediate employees of the government. 5. All persons who are employed and paid by the day are included within the Act, even though they do not fall within the strict language of "laborers, workmen, and mechanics." (1868) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 359. See also (1882) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 341; (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 69.

When the salary of an office is limited by statute to a certain sum per annum, it precludes the officers of the United States and the person appointed to the office from the exercise of the power of contractors to increase the compensation beyond the limited appropriation. Gordon v. U.S., (1896) 31 Ct. Cl. 254.

When an employee continues in a service which requires twelve hours of time each day at a stated compensation per month, he is not entitled to recover as upon an implied contract for the service in excess of eight hours a day. U. S. v. Martin, (1876) 94 U. S. 400, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 128; Timmonds v. U. S., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1898) 84 Fed. 933, 56 U. S. App. 269, 26 C. C. A. 470.

Where an employee in the public service works twelve hours a day, is paid by the day, and accepts the payment, he is excluded from maintaining that every eight hours constituted a day's work under the provisions of the eight-hour law. Averill's Case, (1875) 14 Ct. Cl. 200.

A circular of the Navy Department announcing that "the department will contract for the labor of mechanics, foremen, leading men, and laborers on the basis of eight hours a day," but that workmen "serving to labor ten hours a day will receive a proportionate increase of their wages," is in accordance with this section. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 58.

Watchmen are not included within the designation of persons entitled to the benefits in the preceding section, to wit, "laborers, workmen, and mechanics." Gordon v. U. S., (1898) 31 Ct. Cl. 254.

VIOLATION OF ACT BY OFFICER OR CONTRACTOR PUNISHABLE.

Sec. 2. That any officer or agent of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or any contractor or subcontractor whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control any laborer or mechanic employed upon a public work of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or any person employed to perform services similar to those of laborers and mechanics in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia, who shall intentionally violate any provision of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each and every such offense shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court having jurisdiction thereof.

This section was amended to read as above given by the Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 106. See the note to section 1 of this Act supra, p. 271. Originally it was as follows:

"Sec. 2. That any officer or agent of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or any contractor or subcontractor whose duty it shall be to employ, direct, or control any laborer or mechanic employed upon any of the public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia who shall intentionally violate any provision of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and for each and every such offense shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not to exceed one thousand dollars or by imprisonment for not more than six months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court having jurisdiction thereof."

Jurisdiction.—In a prosecution of govern- ment contractors for "unlawfully, intentionally, and knowingly requiring or permitting a laborer or mechanic, employed on public work," to wit, a dam across the Ohio river, to work more than eight hours in a single calendar day, contrary to the provisions of this Act, the offense was not the working overtime by the laborer or mechanic, but was on the part of the contractor in requiring and permitting such overtime work to be done; and hence, where the work was directed, required, or permitted from the Ohio side of the river, the federal court for the Southern District of Ohio had jurisdiction over the offense, notwithstanding some or all of the work may have been performed south of the line which divides the states of Ohio and Kentucky. U. S. v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co., (S. D. Ohio 1900) 149 Fed. 809.

To render a person amenable to this statute he must have been an officer or agent of the government of the United States, or a contractor or subcontractor, whose duty it was to employ, direct, or control laborers or mechanics employed upon some of the public works of the United States. He must have intentionally violated the provision of this act by requiring or permitting such laborers or mechanics to work more than eight hours in any calendar day. U. S. v. Ollinger, (S. D. Ala. 1893) 59 Fed. 699.

Indictment.—The time of the commission of an offense under this Act as laid in the indictment does not confine the proof within the limits of that period, but proof that the offense was committed on or about the dates fixed in the indictment, if con- fined to dates prior to the finding of the grand jury, is competent to establish the charge. U. S. v. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co., (S. D. Ohio 1900) 149 Fed. 809.

Information.—This Act makes it a separate offense in the case of each laborer or mechanic so required to work more than eight hours, and a criminal information against a contractor for violation of such provision must set out the names of, or otherwise identify, the persons so alleged to have been unlawfully employed, that the accused may meet the charge intelligently, and be able to plead a conviction or acquitthe eight-hour law given by that department during the years immediately following the passage of the law, he is not entitled to introduce such construction as a defense. U. S. c. Sheridan-Kirk Contract Co., (S. D. Ohio 1906) 149 Fed. 810.

EXISTING CONTRACTS NOT AFFECTED BY ACT.

SEC. 3. That the provisions of this Act shall not be so construed as to in any manner apply to or affect contractors or subcontractors, or to limit the hours of daily service of laborers or mechanics engaged upon a public work of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or persons employed to perform services similar to those of laborers and mechanics in connection with dredging or rock excavation in any river or harbor of the United States or of the District of Columbia, for which contracts have been entered into prior to the passing of this Act or may be entered into under the provisions of appropriation Acts approved prior to the passage of this Act. [27 Stat. L. 540, as amended by 37 Stat. L. 727.]

This section was amended to read as above given by the Act of March 3, 1913, ch. 106. See the note to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 271. The original provision was as follows:

"SEC. 3. The provisions of this act shall not be so construed as to in any manner apply to or affect contractors or subcontractors, or to limit the hours of daily service of laborers or mechanics engaged upon the public works of the United States or of the District of Columbia for which contracts have been entered into prior to the passage of this act."

Where on July 28, 1892, the formal acceptance of a bid was given, but leaving a minor detail to be agreed upon, and a formal contract and bond were afterwards to be prepared and executed, no contract was entered into prior to the passage of the Act within the meaning of the statute. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 445.

An Act Limiting the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon work done for the United States, or for any Territory, or for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

[SEC. 1.] [Eight-hour work day — all public contracts to provide for, by laborers or mechanics — penalty to be stipulated — inspectors to report violations — deduction from contract — appeals to head of department, etc.—right of action in Court of Claims.] That every contract hereafter made to which the United States, any Territory, or the District of Columbia is a party, and every such contract made for or on behalf of the United States, or any Territory, or said District, which may require or involve the employment of laborers or mechanics shall contain a provision that no laborer or mechanic doing any part of the work contemplated by the contract, in the employ of the contractor or any subcontractor contracting for any part of said work contemplated, shall be required or permitted to work more than eight hours in any one calendar day upon such work; and every such contract shall stipulate a penalty for each violation of such provision in such contract of five dollars for each laborer or mechanic for every calendar day in which he shall be required or permitted to labor more than eight hours upon said work; and any officer or person designated as inspector of the work to be performed under any such contract, or to aid in enforcing the fulfillment thereof, shall, upon observation or investigation, forthwith report to the proper officer of the United States, or of any Labor

Territory, or of the District of Columbia, all violations of the provisions of this Act directed to be made in every such contract, together with the name of each laborer or mechanic who has been required or permitted to labor in violation of such stipulation and the day of such violation, and the amount of the penalties imposed according to the stipulation in any such contract shall be directed to be withheld for the use and benefit of the United States, the District of Columbia, or the Territory contracting by the officer or person whose duty it shall be to approve the payment of the moneys due under such contract, whether the violation of the provisions of such contract is by the contractor or any subcontractor. Any contractor or subcontractor aggrieved by the withholding of any penalty as hereinbefore provided shall have the right within six months thereafter to appeal to the head of the department making the contract on behalf of the United States or the Territory, and in the case of a contract made by the District of Columbia to the Commissioners thereof, who shall have power to review the action imposing the penalty, and in all such appeals from such final order whereby a contractor or subcontractor may be aggrieved by the imposition of the penalty hereinbefore provided such contractor or subcontractor may within six months after decision by such head of a department or the Commissioners of the District of Columbia file a claim in the Court of Claims, which shall have jurisdiction to hear and decide the matter in like manner as in other cases before said court. [37 Stat. L. 137.]

This is the first section of the "Hours of Service Act" or "Eight Hour Law" of 1912. For provisions relating to the Court of Claims, see JUDICIAL, vol. 5, p. 646.

"Work contemplated by the contract." — The eight-hour work day restriction applies only to work contemplated by the contract. The words "work contemplated by the contract" include the work directly and proximately in view in the contract as specifically appropriated to and destined for the government use. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 534.

Employees on dredging vessel.— Floating dredges are vessels, within the admiralty jurisdiction of the United States, and persons employed on them are seamen and not "laborers and mechanics" within the operation of the eight-hour law. It is therefore not necessary to report the cases of any persons working more than eight hours a day upon any vessel engaged in dredging under a government contract, irrespective of whether such persons are connected with the vessel as a part of its crew in its operation and management or are only employed thereon in the particular work of dredging and handling material. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 583.

Sec. 2. [Contracts excepted — all classes of contract work included — waiver in time of war — emergencies, etc.— eight-hour law not affected.]

That nothing in this Act shall apply to contracts for transportation by land or water, or for the transmission of intelligence, or for the purchase of supplies by the Government, whether manufactured to conform to particular specifications or not, or for such materials or articles as may usually be bought in open market, except armor and armor plate, whether made to conform to particular specifications or not, or to the construction or repair of levees or revetments necessary for protection against floods or overflows on the navigable waters of the United States: Provided, That all classes of work which have been, are now, or may hereafter be performed by the Government shall, when done by contract, by individuals, firms, or corporations for or on behalf of the United States or any of the Territories or the District of Columbia, be performed in accordance with the terms and provisions of section one of this Act. The President, by Executive order, may waive the provisions and stipulations in this Act as to any specific contract or contracts during time of war or a time when war is imminent, and until January first, nineteen hundred and fifteen, as to any contract or contracts entered into in connection with the construction of the Isthmian Canal. No penalties shall be imposed for any violation of such provision in such contract due to any extraordinary events or conditions of manufacture, or to any emergency caused by fire, famine, or flood, by danger to life or to property, or by other extraordinary event or condition on account of which the President shall subsequently declare the violation to have been excusable. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to repeal or modify the Act entitled "An Act relating to the limitation of the hours of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon the public works of the United States and of the District of Columbia" being chapter three hundred and fifty-two of the laws of the Fifty-second Congress, approved August first, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, as modified by the Acts of Congress approved February twenty-seventh, nineteen hundred and six, and June thirtieth, nineteen hundred and six, or apply to contracts which have been or may be entered into under the provisions of appropriation Acts approved prior to the passage of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 138.]

The Acts of June 30, 1906, ch. 3912, 34 Stat. L. 689, and Feb. 27, 1908, ch. 510, 34 Stat. L. 33, above mentioned, were temporary only and provided that the Act of Aug. 1, 1892, ch. 352, supra, p. 270, should not apply to unskilled alien laborers employed in the construction of the Isthmian Canal within the Canal Zone.

The word "supplies" and the phrase "such materials or articles as may usually be bought in open market" are practically synonymous and cover things which are had in store or stock. Whether a particular article or material falls within this exception to the eight-hour provision is generally a matter of administration. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 534.

Contracts for purchase of government supplies.—The eight-hour work day restriction known as the eight-hour law, applies to contracts for the purchase of supplies by the government where the work incident to the manufacture thereof has ordinarily been performed by the government up to the time of the making of the contract therefor, and not merely occasionally or to a limited extent, and it is immaterial whether the contractor furnishes both materials and labor or labor only. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 505.

Projectiles.—Contracts for the purchase of projectiles are not excepted from the operation of the eight-hour restriction, but only the work done in assembling the parts, treating the forging or casting and machining the projectiles would be "work contemplated by the contract," unless the casting and other parts were manufactured solely and exclusively for the purpose of making projectiles. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 534.

Smokeless powder is manufactured ordinarily by the government and hence contracts for the purchase thereof are not excepted from the operation of this Act. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 534.

Sec. 3. [Effect.] That this Act shall become effective and be in force on and after January first, nineteen hundred and thirteen. [37 Stat. L. 138.]

IV. COMPENSATION FOR INJURIES TO EMPLOYEES

An Act Granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment.

[Sec. 1.] [Compensation to certain government employees for injuries sustained during employment.] That when, on or after August first, nineteen hundred and eight, any person employed by the United States as an artisan or laborer in any of its manufacturing establishments, arsenals, or navy-yards, or in the construction of river and harbor or fortification work or in hazardous employment on construction work in the reclamation of arid lands or the management and control of the same, or in hazardous employment under the Isthmian Canal Commission, is injured in the course of such employment, such employee shall be entitled to receive for one year thereafter, unless such employee, in the opinion of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, be sooner able to resume work, the same pay as if he continued to be employed, such payment to be made under such regulations as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may prescribe: Provided, That no compensation shall be paid under this Act where the injury is due to the negligence or misconduct of the employee injured, nor unless said injury shall continue for more than fifteen days. All questions of negligence or misconduct shall be determined by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. [35 Stat. L. 556.]

This is known as the "Government Employers' Liability Act," and was extended by the Act of March 11, 1912, ch. 57, infra, p. 283, and the Act of July 27, 1912, ch. 255, sec. 2, infra, p. 284.

For Acts relating to injuries to employees on the Isthmian Canal see the title RIVERS, HARBOURS AND CANALS.

The Department of Commerce and Labor was to be called the Department of Commerce, and the secretary thereof the Secretary of Commerce by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, sec. 1, 37 Stat. L. 736, creating the new executive Department of Labor. See LABOR DEPARTMENT.

Negligence or misconduct as bar.—Although this statute is remedial and should be generously construed, the provision that no compensation shall be paid where the injury is due to negligence or misconduct forbids a construction of the statute which will involve the government in liability for injuries resulting from voluntary and unnecessary acts of persons in its employ. So where a laborer employed by the United States in the construction of river and harbor works, while off duty, went upon a hill to talk with the man emptying gravel about going home the following Sunday, and in the act of leaving, voluntarily and with no emergency for immediate action, attempted to empty a box of gravel and in so doing fell overboard and was drowned, the accident is deemed not to have arisen within the course of his employment, and compensation therefor is unauthorized under this Act. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 415.

And an employee in a government building who knows of an insecure plank in a passageway, and has passed over it frequently, is guilty of contributory negligence if he allows himself to trip upon it when with ordinary care he could pass over it in safety. Hayes v. U. S., (1911) 46 Ct. Cl. 382.

But where a plate printer in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing sprained his right wrist in the course of his employment, without misconduct or negligence on his part, which injury was complicated by a rupture of the synovial sac surrounding the ligaments leading from the back part of the forearm to the fingers, the injury continuing for more than fifteen days, it was ruled that he had suffered "an injury" within the meaning of this Act, on account of which compensation might be paid. 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. (1909) 346.

Sec. 2. [Compensation to widow, children, or dependents.] That if any artisan or laborer so employed shall die during the said year by reason of such injury received in the course of such employment, leaving a widow, or a child or children under sixteen years of age, or a dependent parent, such widow and child or children and dependent parent shall be entitled to receive, in such portions and under such regulations as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may prescribe, the same amount, for the remainder of the said year, that said artisan or laborer would be entitled to receive as pay if such employee were alive and continued to be employed: Provided, That if the widow shall die at any time during the said year her portion of said amount shall be added to the amount to be paid to the remaining beneficiaries under the provision of this section, if there be any. [35 Stat. L. 556.]

See the note to the preceding sec. 1 of this Act regarding the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

Sec. 3. [Reports of injuries — character of reports.] That whenever an accident occurs to any employee embraced within the terms of the first section of this Act, and which results in death or a probable incapacity for work, it shall be the duty of the official superior of such employee to at once report such accident and the injury resulting therefrom to the head of his Bureau or independent office, and his report shall be immediately communicated through regular official channels to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. Such report shall state, first, the time, cause, and nature of the accident and injury and the probable duration of the injury resulting therefrom; second, whether the accident arose out of or in the course of the injured person’s employment; third, whether the accident was due to negligence or misconduct on the part of the employee injured; fourth, any other matters required by such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may prescribe. The head of each Department or independent office shall have power, however, to charge a special official with the duty of making such reports. [35 Stat. L. 557.]

With respect to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to sec. 1 of this Act, supra, p. 281.

The word "accident" is employed in this section to denote the happening of some unusual event producing death or injury, which injury results in incapacity for work, lasting more than fifteen days. 27 Op. Atty-Gen. (1909) 346.

An employee may, within the language of this section, be injured in the course of his employment without having suffered a definite accident. 27 Op. Atty-Gen. (1909) 346.

Sec. 4. [Affidavit in case of death — physician’s certificate — affidavit in case of injury — determining compensation.] That in the case of any accident which shall result in death, the persons entitled to compensation under this Act or their legal representatives shall, within ninety days after such death, file with the Secretary of Commerce and Labor an affidavit setting forth their relationship to the deceased and the ground of their claim for compensation under the provisions of this Act. This shall be accompanied by the certificate of the attending physician setting forth the fact and cause of death, or the nonproduction of the certificate shall be satisfactorily accounted for. In the case of incapacity for work lasting more than fifteen days, the injured party desiring to take the benefit of this Act shall, within a reasonable period after the expiration of such time, file with his official superior, to be forwarded through regular official channels to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, an affidavit setting forth the grounds of his claim for compensation, to be accompanied by a certificate of the attending physician as to the cause and nature of the injury and probable duration of the incapacity, or the nonproduction of the certificate shall be satisfactorily accounted for. If the Secretary of Commerce and Labor shall find from the report and affidavit or other evidence pro duced by the claimant or his or her legal representatives, or from such additional investigation as the Secretary of Commerce and Labor may direct, that a claim for compensation is established under this Act, the compensation to be paid shall be determined as provided under this Act and approved for payment by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. [35 Stat. L. 557.]

See the note to sec. 1 of this Act, supra, p. 281, respecting the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

The word "injury" in this section is employed comprehensively, to embrace all the cases of incapacity to continue work or employment, unless the injury is due to the negligence or misconduct of the employee injured, and includes all cases where, as a result of the employee's occupation, and without any negligence or misconduct, he becomes unable to carry on his work, and the condition continues for more than fifteen days. 27 Op. Atty.-Gen. (1909) 346.

But it has been ruled that the word "injury," as used in above statute, is in no sense suggestive of disease, nor has it ordinarily any such significance. 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. (1910) 254.

So an artisan or laborer employed by the United States in the construction of river and harbor work, who contracted a severe cold in the course of his employment, resulting in pneumonia, which incapacitated him for duty for a period lasting more than fifteen days, is not entitled to compensation under this act. 28 Op. Atty.-Gen. (1910) 254.

SEC. 5. [Medical examination.] That the employee shall, whenever and as often as required by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, at least once in six months, submit to medical examination, to be provided and paid for under the direction of the Secretary, and if such employee refuses to submit to or obstructs such examination his or her right to compensation shall be lost for the period covered by the continuance of such refusal or obstruction. [35 Stat. L. 557.]

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor see the note to sec. 1 of this Act, supra, p. 281.

SEC. 6. [Payments to beneficiaries, etc.] That payments under this Act are only to be made to the beneficiaries or their legal representatives other than assignees, and shall not be subject to the claims of creditors. [35 Stat. L. 557.]

SEC. 7. [Contracts exempting from liability void.] That the United States shall not exempt itself from liability under this Act by any contract, agreement, rule, or regulation, and any such contract, agreement, rule, or regulation shall be pro tanto void. [35 Stat. L. 558.]

SEC. 8. [Repeal.] That all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict herewith or providing a different scale of compensation or otherwise regulating its payment are hereby repealed. [35 Stat. L. 558.]

An Act To amend an Act entitled "An Act granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment," approved May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight.

[Provisions extended to Bureau of Mines and Forest Service.] That the provisions of the Act approved May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight, entitled "An Act granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment," shall, in addition to the classes of persons therein designated, be held to apply to any artisan, laborer, or other employee engaged in any hazardous work under the Bureau of Mines or the Forestry Service of the United States: Provided, That this Act shall not be held to embrace any case arising prior to its passage. [37 Stat. L. 74.]

For the Act of May 30, 1908, ch. 236, above mentioned, see supra, p. 280.

Sec. 2. [Provisions extended to certain employees in the Lighthouse Service.] * * * And hereafter the benefits of the Act of May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight (Thirty-fifth Statutes, page five hundred and fifty-six), entitled "An Act granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment," shall be extended to persons employed by the United States in any hazardous employment in the Lighthouse Service. [37 Stat. L. 239.]

This is from an Act of July 27, 1912, ch. 255, entitled "An Act to authorize additional aids to navigation in the lighthouse service, and for other purposes."

of the said seal. [37 Stat. L. 736.]

This is known as the "Department of Labor Act." R. S. sec. 158, amended by the text, enumerated the various executive departments and is given under the title EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS.
The various Acts relating to the Department of Commerce and Labor which are affected by the provisions of the text are given under COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.
SEC. 2. He shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary or required by law. There shall also be one chief clerk and a disbursing clerk, and such other clerical assistants, inspectors, and special agents as may from time to time be provided for by Congress. The Auditor for the State and Other Departments shall receive and examine all accounts of salaries and incidental expenses of the office of the Secretary of Labor and of all bureaus and offices under his direction, and all accounts relating to all other business within the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor, and certify the balances arising thereon to the division of bookkeeping and warrants and send forthwith a copy of each certificate to the Secretary of Labor. [37 Stat. L. 736.]

SEC. 3. The Bureau of Immigration and Naturalization is hereby divided into two bureaus, to be known hereafter as the Bureau of Immigration and the Bureau of Naturalization, and the titles Chief Division of Naturalization and Assistant Chief shall be Commissioner of Naturalization and Deputy Commissioner of Naturalization. The Commissioner of Naturalization or, in his absence, the Deputy Commissioner of Naturalization, shall be the administrative officer in charge of the Bureau of Naturalization and of the administration of the naturalization laws under the immediate direction of the Secretary of Labor, to whom he shall report directly upon all naturalization matters annually and as otherwise required, and the appointments of these two officers shall be made in the same manner as appointments to competitive classified civil-service positions. [37 Stat. L. 737.]

Acts relating to immigration and naturalization are treated under the titles IMMIGRATION and NATURALIZATION respectively.
The Children's Bureau is treated infra, subdivision III, p. 295.
The Act of May 30, 1908, ch. 238, referred to in the text, is given under LABOR, ante, p. 280.
Sec. 4 of this Act, relating to reports by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of conditions of labor and products, is given infra, p. 291.
Sec. 5. [37 Stat. L. 738.]

Sec. 7. [Solicitor for department.] That there shall be a solicitor of the Department of Justice for the Department of Labor, whose salary shall be five thousand dollars per annum. [37 Stat. L. 738.]

[37 Stat. L. 738.]

Sec. 9. [Annual report—reports of special investigations.] That the Secretary of Labor shall annually, at the close of each fiscal year, make a report in writing to Congress, giving an account of all moneys received and disbursed by him and his department and describing the work done by the department. He shall also, from time to time, make such special investigations and reports as he may be required to do by the President, or by Congress, or which he himself may deem necessary. [37 Stat. L. 738.]

By a provision of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of May 1, 1913, ch. 1, § 1, infra, this page, the Secretary of Labor was required to submit to Congress annually estimates in detail for all personal services and for all general and miscellaneous expenses for the Department of Labor.

[Sec. 1.] [Detail of special immigrant inspectors for duty at Washington.] • • • Bureau of Immigration. • • • Hereafter special immigrant inspectors, not to exceed three, may be detailed for duty in the Bureau at Washington. [28 Stat. L. 786.]

This is a provision of the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 177.

[Sec. 1.] [Detail of officer employed in enforcement of Chinese Exclusion Acts.] • • • and nothing in section four of the Act of August fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two (Twenty-second Statutes at Large, page two hundred and twenty-five) shall be construed to prevent the Secretary of the Treasury from hereafter detailing one officer employed in the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion Acts for duty at the Treasury Department at Washington. [31 Stat. L. 611.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 791. By the Act of Feb. 14, 1903, ch. 562, § 7, given in Commerce Department, vol. 2, p. 476, the authority then possessed by the Secretary with respect of the Chinese exclusion laws was transferred to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 6, supra, p. 288, it was provided that all laws prescribing the work, etc., of the various bureaus, etc., transferred to the Department of Labor, should be executed by the Secretary of Labor. This paragraph, therefore, may be regarded as applicable to the Secretary of Labor.

[Sec. 1.] [Detail of officer and clerk employed for enforcing alien contract labor provisions.] * * * Section four of the Act of August fifth, eighteen hundred and eighty-two (Twenty-second Statutes, page two hundred and twenty-five), shall not be construed to prevent the Secretary of Labor from hereafter detailing one officer and one clerk employed for the special duty of enforcing the alien contract labor provisions of the immigration Act approved February twentieth, nineteen hundred and seven (Thirty-fourth Statutes, page eight hundred and ninety-eight), in pursuance of section twenty-four of said immigration Act, for duty at the Department of Labor at Washington. [38 Stat. L. 1151.]

This is from the Deficiencies Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 147. See the notes to the preceding paragraph of the text.

The Act of Feb. 20, 1907, ch. 1134, mentioned in the text, is given in Immigration, vol. 3, p. 637 et seq.

These provisions superseded the similar provisions of the Act of March 3, 1901, ch. 863, § 1, 31 Stat. L. 1155.

[Designation of Bureau and of Commissioner of Labor Statistics.] * * * The Bureau of Labor shall hereafter be known as the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor shall hereafter be known as the Commissioner of Labor Statistics; and all the powers and duties heretofore possessed by the Commissioner of Labor shall be retained and exercised by the Commissioner of Labor Statistics; and the administration of the Act of May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight, granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment. [37 Stat. L. 737.]

This is the latter part of the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, sec. 3, being an “Act to Create a Department of Labor,” the duties and powers of the Bureau of Labor Statistics created by the provisions of the text being defined by the following sec. 4 of the same Act. The other sections of this Act are given in subdivision I, supra, p. 286.

The Act of May 30, 1908, ch. 296, mentioned in the text is given under the title Labor, ante, p. 290.

The Act of June 13, 1888, ch. 389, creating the former Department of Labor, is given, infra, p. 291.

The Department of Labor, established by the Act of June 13, 1888, infra, p. 291, was placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce and Labor as created by the Act of Feb. 14, 1903, ch. 552, by sec. 4 of said Act. See Commerce Department, vol. 2, p. 474. Thence it was again transferred, to be known as the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the Commissioner of the Bureau of Labor was designated the Commissioner of Labor Statistics by the provisions of the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, given in the text.
SEC. 4. [Collation and report of labor conditions, products, etc.] That the Bureau of Labor Statistics, under the direction of the Secretary of Labor, shall collect, collate, and report at least once each year, or oftener if necessary, full and complete statistics of the conditions of labor and the products and distribution of the products of the same, and to this end said Secretary shall have power to employ any or either of the bureaus provided for his department and to rearrange such statistical work and to distribute or consolidate the same as may be deemed desirable in the public interests; and said Secretary shall also have authority to call upon other departments of the Government for statistical data and results obtained by them; and said Secretary of Labor may collate, arrange, and publish such statistical information so obtained in such manner as to him may seem wise. [37 Stat. L. 737.]

See the note to the preceding sec. 3 of this Act.

An act to establish a Department of Labor.

[SEC. 1.] [Former department of labor — design and duties.] That there shall be at the seat of Government a Department of Labor, the general design and duties of which shall be to acquire and diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with labor, in the most general and comprehensive sense of that word, and especially upon its relation to capital, the hours of labor, the earnings of laboring men and women, and the means of promoting their material, social, intellectual, and moral prosperity. [25 Stat. L. 182.]

See the two preceding paragraphs of the text and the notes thereto.

SEC. 2. [Commissioner, compensation.] That the Department of Labor shall be under the charge of a Commissioner of Labor, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; he shall hold his office for four years, unless sooner removed, and shall receive a salary of five thousand dollars per annum. [25 Stat. L. 182.]

See the note to the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, supra, p. 290.

SEC. 3. [Clerical force.] That there shall be in the Department of Labor, to be appointed by the Commissioner of Labor: One chief clerk, at a salary of two thousand five hundred dollars per annum; four clerks of class four, all to be statistical experts; five clerks of class three, one of whom may be a stenographer; six clerks of class two, one of whom may be a translator and one of whom may be a stenographer; eight clerks of class one; five clerks, at one thousand dollars per annum; one disbursing clerk, who shall also have charge of accounts, at a salary of one thousand eight hundred dollars per annum; two copyists, at nine hundred dollars each per annum; two copyists, at seven hundred and twenty dollars each per annum; one messenger; one assistant messenger; one watchman; two assistant watchmen; two skilled laborers, at six hundred dollars each per annum; two char-

Columbia, exclusive of actual transportation including sleeping-car fares; and such temporary experts, assistants, and other employees as Congress may from time to time provide, with compensation corresponding to that of similar officers and employees in other departments of the Government.
[25 Stat. L. 182.]

This section was in effect superseded by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, which created this department and provided in sec. 2 thereof, supra, p. 287, for the necessary clerical force. Appropriations for the Bureau of Labor Statistics for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, were made by the Legislative, Executive, and Judicial Appropria-
See the notes to the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, supra, p. 290.

SEC. 4. [Chief clerk as commissioner.] That during the necessary absence of the Commissioner, or when the office shall become vacant, the chief clerk shall perform the duties of Commissioner. [25 Stat. L. 182.]

The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1046, provides for a “chief statistician who shall also perform the duties of chief clerk.”

SEC. 5. [Disbursing clerk.] That the disbursing clerk shall, before entering upon his duties, give bond to the Treasurer of the United States in the sum of twenty thousand dollars, which bond shall be conditioned that the by virtue of his office, with sureties to be approved by the Solicitor of the Treasury. Such bond shall be filed in the office of the First Comptroller of the Treasury, to be by him put in suit upon any breach of the conditions thereof. [25 Stat. L. 182.]

This section was in effect superseded by sec. 2 of the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, supra, p. 287, which provided for a disbursing clerk.
See the notes to the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, supra, p. 290.

SEC. 6. [Custody of building and property.] That the Commissioner of in its business, and he shall be allowed to expend for periodicals and the purposes of the library, and for the rental of appropriate quarters for the accommodation of the Department of Labor within the District of Columbia, and for all other incidental expenses, such sums as Congress may provide from time to time. [25 Stat. L. 182.]

This section was superseded by the Act of Feb. 14, 1903, ch. 552, sec. 9, 32 Stat. L.
829, which was in turn superseded by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 6, supra,
p. 288.

SEC. 7. [Duties of commissioner of labor.] That the Commissioner of Labor, in accordance with the general design and duties referred to in section one of this act, is specially charged to ascertain, at as early a date as possible, and whenever industrial changes shall make it essential, the cost of producing articles at the time dutiable in the United States, in leading countries where such articles are produced, by fully-Specified units of production, and under a classification showing the different elements of cost, or approximate cost, of such articles of production, including the wages paid in such industries per day, week, month, or year, or by the piece; and hours employed per day; and the profits of the manufacturers and producers of such articles; and the comparative cost of living, and the kind of living.

"It shall be the duty of the Commissioner also to ascertain and report as to the effect of the customs laws, and the effect thereon of the state of the currency, in the United States, on the agricultural industry, especially as to its effect on mortgage indebtedness of farmers;" and what articles are controlled by Trusts, or other combinations of capital, business operations, or labor, and what effect said trusts, or other combinations of capital, business operations, or labor have on production and prices. He shall also establish a system of reports by which, at intervals of not less than two years, he can report the general condition, so far as production is concerned, of the leading industries of the country. The Commissioner of Labor is also specially charged to investigate the causes of, and facts relating to, all controversies and disputes between employers and employees as they may occur, and which may tend to interfere with the welfare of the people of the different States, and report thereon to Congress. The Commissioner of Labor shall also obtain such information upon the various subjects committed to him as he may deem desirable from different foreign nations, and what, if any, convict made goods are imported into this country, and if so from whence. [25 Stat. L. 183.]

That part of the above section requiring the Commissioner of Labor to ascertain the cost of production of certain articles, and imposing on him certain duties relating to information concerning trusts, was superseded by the transfer of these duties to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce by the Act of August 23, 1912, ch. 380, sec. 1, 37 Stat. L. 497, given under the title COMMERCE DEPARTMENT. See the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 4, supra, p. 291.

Sec. 8. [Annual and special reports.] That the Commissioner of Labor shall annually make a report in writing to the President and Congress, of the information collected and collated by him, and containing such recommendations as he may deem calculated to promote the efficiency of the Department. He is also authorized to make special reports on particular subjects whenever required to do so by the President or either House of Congress, or when he shall think the subject in his charge requires it. He shall, on or before the fifteenth day of December in each year, make a report in detail to Congress of all moneys expended under his direction during the preceding fiscal year. [25 Stat. L. 183.]

Sec. 9. [Existing labor bureau merged.] That all laws and parts of laws relating to the Bureau of Labor created under the act of Congress approved June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, so far as the same are applicable and not in conflict with this act, and only so far, are continued in full force and effect, and the Commissioner of Labor appointed under said act, approved June twenty-seventh, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, and all clerks and employees in the Bureau of Labor authorized to be appointed by said act or subsequent acts, shall continue in office and employment as if appointed under the provisions of this act, and until a Commissioner of Labor, other officers, clerks, and employees are appointed and qualified as herein required and provided; and the Bureau of Labor, as now organized and existing, shall continue its work as the Department of Labor until the Department of Labor shall be organized in accordance with this act; and the library, records, and all property now in use by the said Bureau of Labor are hereby transferred to the custody of the Department of Labor hereby created, and on the organization of the Department of Labor on the basis of this act the functions of the Bureau of Labor shall cease. [25 Stat. L. 183.]

The Act of June 27, 1884, ch. 127, 23 Stat. L. 60, "An act to establish a Bureau of Labor," mentioned in the text, was as follows:

"That there shall be established in the Department of the Interior a Bureau of Labor, which shall be under the charge of a Commissioner of Labor, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Commissioner of Labor shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor shall be appointed and qualified, unless sooner removed, and shall receive a salary of three thousand dollars a year. The Commissioner shall collect information upon the subject of labor, its relation to capital, the hours of labor, and the earnings of laboring men and women, and the means of promoting their material, social, intellectual, and moral prosperity. The Secretary of the Interior upon the recommendation of said Commissioner, shall appoint a chief clerk, who shall receive a salary of two thousand dollars per annum, and such other employees as may be necessary for the said Bureau: Provided, That the total expense shall not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars per annum. During the necessary absence of the Commissioner, or when the office shall become vacant, the chief clerk shall perform the duties of Commissioner. The Commissioner shall annually make a report in writing to the Secretary of the Interior of the information collected and collated by him, and containing such recommendations as he may deem calculated to promote the efficiency of the Bureau."

See the note to the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, supra, p. 290.

Sec. 10. [Estimates.] That on the passage of this act the Commissioner of Labor shall at once submit estimates for the expenses of the Department of Labor for the next fiscal year, giving in detail the number and salaries of officers and employees therein. [25 Stat. L. 184.]

[Sec. 1.] [Official statistics of cities.] * * * The Commissioner of Labor is authorized to compile and publish annually, as a part of the Bulletin of the Department of Labor, an abstract of the main features of the official statistics of the cities of the United States having over thirty thousand population. [30 Stat. L. 648.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 548. See generally the title PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. See the notes to the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, § 3, supra, p. 290.

[Sec. 1.] [Bulletin as to condition of labor, etc.] * * * The Commissioner of Labor is hereby authorized to prepare and publish a bulletin of the Department of Labor, as to the condition of labor in this and other countries, condensations of State and foreign labor reports, facts as to conditions of employment, and such other facts as may be deemed of value to the industrial interests of the country, and there shall be printed one edition of not exceeding ten thousand copies of each issue of said bulletin for distribution by the Department of Labor. [38 Stat. L. 805.]

This was a provision of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 2, 1895, ch. 177.

See the preceding paragraph of the text.

III. CHILDREN’S BUREAU

An Act To establish in the Department of Commerce and Labor a bureau to be known as the Children’s Bureau.

[Act of April 9, 1912, ch. 73, 37 Stat. L. 79.]

[Sec. 1.] [Children’s Bureau established.] That there shall be established in the Department of Commerce and Labor a bureau to be known as the Children’s Bureau. [37 Stat. L. 79.]

This is known as the “Children’s Bureau Act,” and the Bureau by it established was transferred to the Department of Labor by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 141, sec. 3, supra, p. 287.

Sec. 2. [Chief — appointment and salary — investigations — restrictions — publications.] That the said bureau shall be under the direction of a chief, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive an annual compensation of five thousand dollars. The said bureau shall investigate and report to said department upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of our people, and shall especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents and diseases of children, employment, legislation affecting children in the several States and Territories. But no official, or agent, or representative of said bureau shall, over the objection of the head of the family, enter any house used exclusively as a family residence. The chief of said bureau may from time to time publish the results of these investigations in such manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor. [37 Stat. L. 79.]

Sec. 3. [Office force.] That there shall be in said bureau, until otherwise provided for by law, an assistant chief, to be appointed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who shall receive an annual compensation of two thousand four hundred dollars; one private secretary to the chief of the bureau, who shall receive an annual compensation of one thousand five hundred dollars; one statistical expert, at two thousand dollars; two clerks of class four; two clerks of class three; one clerk of class two; one clerk of class one; one clerk, at one thousand dollars; one copyist, at nine hundred dollars; one special agent, at one thousand four hundred dollars; one special agent, at one thousand two hundred dollars, and one messenger at eight hundred and forty dollars. [37 Stat. L. 80.]

The appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, provided for additional employees at different salaries and were contained in the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 141, 38 Stat. L. 1046.
Sec. 4. [Quarters for bureau.] That the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is hereby directed to furnish sufficient quarters for the work of this bureau at an annual rental not to exceed two thousand dollars. [37 Stat. L. 80.]

Sec. 5. [Effect.] That this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage. [37 Stat. L. 80.]

Sec. 3584. [Foreign coins.] No foreign gold or silver coin shall be a legal tender in payment of debts. [R. S.]

Foreign equivalent in legal tender.—A promissory note to pay one thousand pounds sterling, lawful money of Great Britain, agreed by the parties to be worth a stipulated sum in the gold coin of the United States, is solvable only in gold coin. The Edith, (1871) 5 Ben. 144, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,281.

And as a decree by a court of the United States for the payment of money can be made only for the payment of so many dollars of some species of money that is made lawful money by a statute of the United States, it follows that a recovery upon such a promissory note or contract must be for so many dollars in gold and silver coin, lawful money of the United States, as are equivalent to the foreign denomination, expressed in the instrument, upon which the recovery is decreed. The Edith, (1871) 5 Ben. 144, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,281; Forbes v. Murray, (1869) 3 Ben. 497, 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4,928.

Where a bill of lading stipulated that freight, payable in New York, should be paid at the current rate of exchange for bankers' sight bills on London, at the date of the steamer's report at the custom house, and the freight reserved by the bill of lading was expressed in English money, the amount to be paid in the current money of the country was such sum as would be sufficient to buy the bills on London designated. Hus v. Kempf, (1879) 10 Ben. 364, 12 Fed. Cas. No. 6,944.

Where the amount of freight to be paid on the discharge of a cargo in England is expressed in dollars, it should, if not paid in current specie dollars, be liquidated with as many sovereigns or a bill for as many pounds sterling as the stipulated amount will buy at the place agreed for payment. Jelison v. Lee, (1847) 3 Woodb. & M. 368, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,256.

Sec. 3585. [Gold coins of the United States.] The gold coins of the United States shall be a legal tender in all payments at their nominal value when not below the standard weight and limit of tolerance provided by law for the single piece, and when reduced in weight below such standard and tolerance, shall be a legal tender at valuation in proportion to their actual weight.  [R. S.]

Not repealed.—The Act of June 20, 1874, ch. 343, known as “the National Bank Act” (title National Bank) was not intended to repeal or affect the general provisions of law embodied in this and following sections, making the coins of the United States a legal tender in all payments.  (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 144.

Contract payable in gold.—An express contract to pay in gold will be respected by the courts, and be enforced, or its breach be redressed, according to its tenor, although made after the passage of the legal tender acts.  The Emily B. Souder, (1871) 8 Blatchf. 337, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,486; The Edith, (1871) 5 Ben. 144, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,281.

R. S. sec. 3586. This section was as follows:

“Sec. 3586. The silver coins of the United States shall be a legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding five dollars in any one payment.”

While not repealed, this section was undoubtedly superseded by the following provisions:

The coining of twenty-cent pieces was authorized and they were made legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding five dollars in any one payment by an Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 143, 18 Stat. L. 478. This Act was repealed by an Act of May 2, 1878, ch. 79, 20 Stat. L. 47.

Construction.—R. S. sec. 3586 made the subsidiary silver coins of the United States legal tender at their nominal value only where the amount of the debt, in payment of which they were offered, did not exceed five dollars. The provision applied alike to cases wherein the officers of the government received payment of its dues and to cases wherein they disbursed the public funds in discharge of its obligations. 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. (1878) 128.

Sec. 3587. [Minor coins.] The minor coins of the United States shall be a legal tender, at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding twenty-five cents in any one payment.  [R. S.]

Five-cent pieces.—Under this section and R. S. sec. 3587, COINAGE, MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES, vol. 2, p. 350, providing that no coin shall consist of five-cent pieces, three-cent pieces, and one-cent pieces, five-cent pieces are legal tender, so that proof that a defendant stole eighty-three cents in United States five-cent pieces was sufficient to sustain an indictment for theft of property of eighty-three cents, and the United States of America, v. Frank F. State, 144 4th C. C. 78 S. W. 511, normal to accept payment of street car fare.—The refusal of a collector, under the rules of the company, to accept five one-cent pieces for fare except in exchange for a five-cent piece to be inserted in the automatic collector by the passenger, is not a violation of this section, providing that the minor coins of the United States shall be a legal tender at their nominal value for any amount not exceeding twenty-five cents in one payment, under which five separate pieces are legal tender for a debt of five cents, so as to render the rule unreasonable; such refusal not amounting to a refusal to accept the five coins in payment of the fare within the meaning of the statute. Martin v. Rhode Island Co., (1911) 32 R. L. 192, 78 Atl. 548, Ann. Cas. 1912C 1255, 32 R. L. A. (N. S.) 688.
Sec. 3588. [United States notes.] United States notes shall be lawful money, and a legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, within the United States, except for duties on imports and interest on the public debt. [R.S.]

Constitutionality.—In Legal Tender Cases, (1870) 12 Wall. 457, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 287, it was held that the Acts of Congress known as the Legal Tender Acts were constitutional as applied to contracts made either before or after their passage, occurring so much of Hepburn v. Griswold, (1869) 8 Wall. 603, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 513, as ruled the Acts unwarranted by the Constitution so far as they applied to contracts made before their enactment. See also Railroad Co. v. Thompson, (1875) 15 Wall. 195, 21 U. S. (L. ed.) 178; Legal Tender Cases, (1884) 110 U. S. 421, 4 S. Ct. 122, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 204; Latham's Case, (1864) 1 Ct. Cl. 149; (1866) 12 Op. Atty-Gen. 54.

The question whether at any particular time, in war or in peace, the exigency is such, by reason of unusual and pressing demands on the resources of the government, or of the inadequacy of the supply of gold and silver coin to furnish the currency needed for the uses of the government and of the people, that it is, as matter of fact, wise and expedient to resort to this means, is a political question to be determined by Congress when the question of exigency arises, and not a judicial question, to be afterwards passed upon by the courts. Legal Tender Cases, (1884) 110 U. S. 421, 4 S. Ct. 122, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 204.

In Essex Co. v. Pacific Mills, (1867) 14 Allen 389, the court, in reply to a contention that Congress had no constitutional power to make treasury notes a legal tender, or to give them the qualities of lawful money, said: "We do not regard it as consistent with the duties of this court to undertake at this time to consider or pass upon this question, as an original question of constitutional right. These notes practically constitute, and for nearly five years have constituted the money of the country. The pecuniary transactions of the whole people have been adapted to the state of things, and interests of an incalculable amount are affected by it. The validity of the Acts of Congress under which they were issued has been affirmed, so far as we are aware, by every judicial tribunal in which the question has been presented; and has been recognized in various ways by the action of the state governments."

Effect of statute.—The Acts of Congress making United States notes lawful money and a legal tender in the payment of debts are not laws operating retrospectively, but in present and prospectively. No new obligations are created, nor new duties imposed by them; neither do they attach new disabilities in respect to transactions or considerations which had transpired before their passage. They simply provide that the notes issued by their authority shall be lawful money, and that such money shall be a legal tender in the payment of debts. Higgins v. Bear River, etc., Water, etc., Co., (1865) 27 Cal. 153.

Scope of statute.—"Debts" within the meaning of the statute include all debts, public and private, within the United States, except duties on imports and interest on the bonds and notes of the United States. The Acts of Congress, so far as they declare that treasury notes shall be a legal tender in the payment of debts, make no reference to the time when the obligation had its inception. They operate directly upon subsisting debts, recognizing the existing relations of debtors and creditors, and declare that a certain kind of money, which is made lawful money by sovereign authority, shall be a legal tender as well as other kinds of money, in the payment of debts then due, or to become due thereafter, while such money may be a lawful cur; rency and legal tender in the payment of debts. Higgins v. Bear River, etc., Water, etc., Co., (1866) 27 Cal. 159.

Taxes imposed by state authority are not within this statute, which relates to debts in the ordinary sense of the word arising out of simple contracts or contracts by specialty, which include judgments and recognizances. Lane County v. Oregon, (1868) 7 Wall. 71, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 101; Perry v. Washburn, (1869) 20 Cal. 318.

A tax levied by the territorial legislature of Idaho was a debt within the meaning of the statute. Haas v. Misner, (1867) 1 Idaho 170.

Assessments for local improvements.—The Acts of Congress making the notes of the United States a legal tender do not apply to involuntary contributions exacted by a state, but only to debts, in the strict sense of that term, that is, to obligations for the payment of money founded on contracts, express or implied. Hagar v. Reclamation Dist. No. 108, (1884) 111 U. S. 701, 4 S. Ct. 663, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 569.
Debts payable in money generally.— The provision that United States notes are legal tender for all debts means for all debts which are payable in money generally, and not obligations payable in commodities or obligations of any other kind. Trebilcock v. Wilson, (1871) 12 Wall. 687, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 460.

On a shipment of specie the agreement in the bill of lading is not a promise to pay money, but to transport certain articles on freight. In an action to recover damages for a breach of such bill of lading the legal tender statute is not applicable. The Ship Patrick Henry, (1887) 1 Ben. 529, 18 Fed. Cas. No. 10,806.

National bank notes are properly "money" though not legal tender.

Effect as to measure of damages.— In assessing damages a jury may take into account the fact that the judgment could be paid in legal tender notes. The Vaughan, (1871) 14 Wall. 258, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 807. See also Texas v. White, (1868) 7 Wall. 769, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 227; Legal Tender Cases, (1870) 12 Wall. 459, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 287.

Judgment for money payable in gold.— The direction in a judgment as to the payment "in United States gold coin" is mere surplusage where the record shows that the notes sued on were notes for the payment of so many dollars generally. It is only where the contract calls for the payment of the debt in gold coin that the judgment should be rendered for coined dollars. Belford v. Woodward, (1866) 158 Ill. 122, 41 N. E. 1097, 29 L. R. A. 593.

Sec. 3589. [Demand treasury notes.] Demand Treasury notes authorized by the act of July seventeen, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, chapter five, and the act of February twelve, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, chapter twenty, shall be lawful money and a legal tender in like manner as United States notes. [R. S.]

Treasury notes issued prior to February 25, 1862.— In (1882) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 195, the attorney-general said that treasury notes issued under the various Acts of Congress prior to February 25, 1862, are not legal tender.

Judgments on contracts payable in gold may be entered for coined dollars and parts of dollars. Bronson v. Rodes, (1868) 7 Wall. 229, 19 U. S. (L. ed.) 141.

Debts of United States payable abroad. — "Undoubtedly all claims against the United States, not specially excepted, which are payable at the treasury, are payable in these notes. It is not so clear that debts of the United States incurred and to be paid abroad, where our treasury notes have no currency, come within the purview of this Act. On the contrary, the reasonable construction leads to the conclusion that in this class of debts and expenditures the rate of exchange must be taken into the account, so as to provide the full amount necessary to pay the debt or expenditure at the place of payment." (1866) 12 Op. Atty.-Gen. 9. But see (1864) 11 Op. Atty.-Gen. 52, where the sum awarded to the claimant "is payable in current money of the United States."

Obligations of foreign countries.— In (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 85, the attorney-general said that the annual instalments of interest due to the United States under the convention with Spain of February 17, 1834, might, by virtue of the Legal Tender Act of February 25, 1862, be paid in treasury notes if the Spanish government chose to offer them in payment, there being no express provision in the convention that the money should be paid in coin.

Sec. 3590. [Interest-bearing notes.] Treasury notes issued under the authority of the acts of March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, chapter seventy-three, and June thirty, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, chapter one hundred and seventy-two, shall be legal tender to the same extent as United States notes, for their face value, excluding interest:
Provided, That Treasury notes issued under the act last named shall not be a legal tender in payment or redemption of any notes issued by any bank, banking association, or banker, calculated and intended to circulate as money. [R. S.]

The term “treasury notes” has been generally employed by Congress from an early period to designate interest bearing notes of the United States, something intermediate between the currency and the funded debt of the United States. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 317.

Sec. 2. [Trade dollar not to be legal tender.] That the trade dollar shall not hereafter be a legal tender, and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to limit from time to time, the coinage thereof to such an amount as he may deem sufficient to meet the export demand for the same. [19 Stat. L. 215.]

This is from the Res. of July 22, 1876, No. 17. The other provisions of the resolution are given in COINAGE, MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES, vol. 2, p. 339.

Sec. 3. [Silver coins legal tender for ten dollars.] That the present silver coins of the United States of smaller denominations than one dollar shall hereafter be a legal tender in all sums not exceeding ten dollars in full payment of all dues public and private. [21 Stat. L. 8.]

This and sec. 4 following are from the Act of June 9, 1879, ch. 12. The other provisions of the Act are given in COINAGE, MINTS AND ASSAY OFFICES, vol. 2, p. 341.

Sec. 4. [Repeal.] That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act be, and the same are hereby, repealed. [21 Stat. L. 8.]

Sec. 30. [Collections composing.] The Library of Congress, composed of the books, maps, and other publications which now remain in existence, from the collections heretofore united under the act of January twenty-six, eighteen hundred and two, chapter two; the resolution of October twenty-one, eighteen hundred and fourteen; the act of January thirty, eighteen hundred and fifteen, chapter twenty-seven; the act of June twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, chapter one hundred and forty-seven, section one; the resolution of July twenty-five, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; the act of March two, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, chapter one hundred and sixty-seven, section one; and those added from time to time by purchase, exchange, donation, reservation from publications ordered by Congress, deposit to secure copyright, and otherwise shall be preserved in the Capitol in the rooms which were on the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, appropriated to its use, and in such others as may hereafter be assigned thereto. [R.S.]

Provisions for the transfer of the library to the Library Building were made by the Act of Feb. 19, 1897, ch. 265, 29 Stat. L. 544, parts of which are given, infra, p. 509.

The Library of Congress.—The name “The Library of Congress” is used in the laws principally to signify something “composed of books, maps, etc.,” and partly the place in which these are kept. (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 447.

It is largely under the control of a joint committee of Congress and there is no indication in the statutes concerning it that it is a corporation or artificial person. (1907) 26 Op. Atty.-Gen. 447.

Form of bequests for the Library of Congress.— “The Library of Congress” is not a proper legatee to be named in a bequest. The question as to what is the best form of such a bequest depends upon the law of the testator’s domicile, and it is therefore impossible to formulate any particular style of bequest that will be everywhere valid and in proper form. However, a bequest “to the United States of America, to be deposited in the Library of Congress,” which latter part may be varied in case of pecuniary bequests “to be applied to the increase or improvement of the Library of Congress,” will, it is believed, be a satisfactory form to be used generally in the states of the Union and in other English-speaking countries. II. REGULATION OF LIGHTS AND BUOYS

Sec. 4661. [Cession of jurisdiction requisite.] No light-house, beacon, public piers, or landmark, shall be built or erected on any site until cession of jurisdiction over the same has been made to the United States. [R. S.]

R. S. secs. 4659–4680 constituted title 55 of the Revised Statutes entitled "Lights and Buoys."

R. S. secs. 4653–4660, 4663–4667, 4669–4671 provided for the organization of a lighthouse board, the conduct of its business, and general regulations for the lighthouse service. These sections were all repealed by an Act of June 17, 1910, ch. 301, § 13, infra, p. 326.

The other sections of said Act of June 17, 1910, ch. 301, being sections 4–12 thereof, supra, p. 315, and infra, p. 324, made other provisions for the establishment of a Bureau of Lighthouses, prescribing its powers and duties, the provisions of said Act being in effect substitutes for those sections of the Revised Statutes which were repealed.

By the Act of Feb. 14, 1903, ch. 552, § 4, the Lighthouse Board, the Lighthouse Establishment, and all pertaining thereto were transferred to the jurisdiction of the Department of Commerce and Labor, which subsequently became the Department of Commerce. See COMMERCE DEPARTMENT, vol. 2, p. 477.

Presumption of jurisdiction.—When a lighthouse has been built it will be presumed that jurisdiction over the place has been ceded to the United States, inasmuch as this section provides that no lighthouse shall be built on any site until cession of jurisdiction over the same has been made to the United States. The Schooner Maud Webster, (1876) 8 Ben. 547, 16 Fed. Cas. No. 9,302.

Movable beacon or bug-light.—The provisions of this section do not apply to a movable beacon or bug-light, which is not designed to be permanently fixed in any one place, but whose location is contemplated to be changed on the beach from time to time according to circumstances, from time to time require is sufficient. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 328.
these changes extending over a distance of half a mile. Those provisions are only Lands under navigable water of the United States.—Where lands under navigable water are needed by the government as a site for the establishment of a light-house, it may appropriate them for that purpose. This it may do, not by virtue of any ownership in the soil, but by virtue of the right of eminent domain. (1879) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 369.

Sec. 4662. [What cession is sufficient.] A cession by a State of juris- Right to serve state process.—When the conveyance by the state is for the right of serving state process exists, diction over a place selected as a site of a light-house, or other structure or work the purposes enumerated in this statute, the whether specifically reserved or not. of the Light-House Establishment, shall be deemed sufficient within the preceding section, notwithstanding it contains a reservation that process issued under authority of such State may continue to be served within such place. And notwithstanding any such cession of jurisdiction contains no such reservation, all process may be served and executed within the place ceded, in the same manner as if no cession had been made. [R. S.]

Sec. 4668. [Substitution of light-houses for light-ships.] Whenever any purposes of light-vessels occupying positions which are adapted to the erection of light-houses upon pile-foundations require to be rebuilt, or require such extensive repairs as to render the substitution of such light-houses advisable and practicable, such permanent structures may be erected in place of any such light-vessels; but the expense arising from all such changes and erec- tions shall be defrayed from the general annual appropriations for repairs, and so forth, of light-vessels, except when a special appropriation is made for such change. [R. S.]

A provision of the Act of March 3, 1879, ch. 192, 20 Stat. L. 379, that "The expense of maintaining the vessels of the light-house establishment, may be paid from any surplus of the appropriation for the works, general or special, on which the respective vessels are, for the time being, employed; and the cost of repairs to such vessels may be paid from the appropriation under which they respectively were employed when they were injured or became deteriorated to such an extent as to render the repairs necessary; or, if such appropriation be exhausted, then from the appropriation under which they are respectively to be next employed," was repealed by a provision of the Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 384, 36 Stat. L. 755.

Sec. 4672. [Collectors of customs to act as superintendents.] The Sec- terary of the Treasury shall assign to any of the collectors of the customs the superintendence of such light-houses, beacons, light-ships, and buoys, as he deems best; but no person whose compensation as collector of customs exceeds three thousand dollars a year shall receive any compensation as disbursing agent for the Light-House Establishment, whether the sums disbursed by him be for articles to be used or services rendered within or without the limits of his superintendency or collection-district: Provided, That where the compensation of any collector as disbursing agent is not more than three thousand dollars a year, such agent shall receive for such services not more than four hundred dollars in any fiscal year. [R. S.]

This section was in part repealed by the following provision of the Act of June 16, 1880, ch. 235, 21 Stat. L. 289: "so much of section forty-six hundred and seventy-two of the Revised Statutes of the United States as provides compensation to collectors of the customs for services as superintendents of lights or as disbursing agents for the Light-House Establishment is hereby repealed."

The compensation of the various collectors of customs was prescribed by the Plan for the Reorganization of the Customs Service given under the title CUSTOMS DUTIES, vol. 2, p. 902.

The Lighthouse Board and Lighthouse Establishment was transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Commerce by the Act of Feb. 14, 1903, ch. 552, which created that department. See COMMERCE DEPARTMENT, vol. 2, p. 474.

Compensation.—Collectors of customs whose compensation did not exceed $3,000 a year were entitled, under this section, when acting as superintendents and disbursing agents for light-houses, to compensation for their services as such disbursing agents, the amount whereof was to be determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, but it was not to exceed $400 in any fiscal year. (1877) 15 Op. Atty.-Gen. 348. See also (1843) 4 Op. Atty.-Gen. 272.

Sec. 4673. [Compensation of light-house keepers.] The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to regulate the salaries of the respective keepers of light-houses in such manner as he deems just and proper, but the whole sum allowed for such salaries shall not exceed an average of six hundred dollars to each keeper. [R. S.]

See the note to the preceding R. S. sec. 4672.

Sec. 4674. [Discontinuance and re-establishment of lights.] The Secretary of the Treasury may, upon the recommendation of the Light-House Board, discontinue from time to time such lights as may from any cause become useless or unnecessary. And he may, upon the like recommendation, from time to time re-establish any lights which have been thus discontinued, whenever he believes such re-establishment to be required by public convenience or the necessities of trade or commerce. [R. S.]

As to the Secretary of the Treasury, see note to R. S. sec. 4672, supra, this page.

R. S. sec. 4675. This section was as follows:

"Sec. 4675. The Secretary of the Treasury may, after a week's notice to the public, sell and convey any real estate no longer used for light-house purposes, the avails of such sale to be paid into the national Treasury."

This was superseded by the provisions of the Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 455, 18 Stat. L. 217, which was superseded by the last paragraph of the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 188, infra, p. 327.

Sec. 4676. [Warnings to be placed over obstructions, etc.] The Light-House Board may, when they deem it is necessary, place a light-vessel, or other suitable warning of danger, on or over any wreck or temporary obstruction to the entrance of any harbor, or in the channel or fairway of any bay or sound. [R. S.]

the owner of wrecked or sunken craft to

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 455. The provisions of the Act of Aug. 31, 1852, ch. 116, referred to in the text, are incorporated into R. S. secs. 4653-4680.

[33 Stat. L. 433.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1301, and follows appropriations for the Light-House Establishment. Detailed statements were required to be made with estimates by a provision of the Act of June 28, 1910, ch. 384, § 1, infra, p. 326.

L. 324. There being no section 6 of said Act, the reference is evidently intended to be section 3 of said Act, given in the text.

Earlier provisions relating to the purchase of sites were made by R. S. sec. 4660, repealed by section 13 of this Act, infra, p. 326.

Subsequent provisions relating to this subject were made by the Act of March 4, 1913, ch. 168, the provisions of which are given infra, p. 327.

Range lights in navigable rivers.—Proprietary of the adjacent lots is not necessary, nor is any permission from riparian proprietor required, to give the United States right to erect range lights in the waters of Saginaw river; this is a matter between the United States and the state, and not one that concerns the shore owners. (1875) 14 Op. Atty.-Gen. 47.

Boundaries of site.—The grant to the government of a site for a lighthouse, which is bounded by a line running to the shore and thence by the shore, does not include the shore. But a grant bounded on or by the sea, instead of by the shore, would carry to low water and include the shore. (1887) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 20.

Sec. 10. [Administrative regulations.] That the commissioner of light-houses, under the direction and control of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, shall, from time to time, prescribe and distribute such regulations as he may deem proper for securing an efficient, uniform, and economic administration of the Light-House Service. [36 Stat. L. 538.]

See the notes to sec. 8 of this Act, supra, p. 324.

R. S. sec. 4669, repealed by section 13 of this Act, infra, p. 326, provided that regulations should be prescribed by the Light-House Board, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Judicial notice of regulations.—Courts of admiralty will take judicial notice of the regulations of the lighthouse board, although they are neither pleaded nor offered in evidence. Smith v. Shakopee, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1900) 103 Fed. 240, 44 C. C. A. 1, overruling (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1896) 97 Fed. 974, 38 C. C. A. 617.

Regulations under prior statute.—R. S. sec. 4669, embodied in part herein, restricted the power of the lighthouse board to the adoption and enforcement of such regulations as concerned the management and control of lighthouse keepers, inspectors, and employees for the purpose of properly administering the lighthouse establishment. (1895) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 344.

And that statute did not authorize the board to adopt and enforce regulations controlling in any manner the appointment of lighthouse keepers or other inferior officers, or to designate the appointees. (1886) 10 Op. Atty.-Gen. 344.

Where a regulation, made under and within the power granted by R. S. sec. 4669, was regularly approved, neither the board without the approval of the secretary nor the approval of the board could change it. But such regulation could not abridge or control in any manner the power of appointment conferred by law upon the secretary. (1887) 18 Op. Atty.-Gen. 529.

Sec. 11. [Light-house districts — inspectors — salaries — temporary assignment of Army and Navy officers — engineer officer for Mississippi river districts — detail for construction, etc.] That the commissioner of light-houses, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, as soon as practicable, shall rearrange the ocean, gulf, and lake coasts and the rivers of the United States, Porto Rico, and the naval station in Cuba into not exceeding nineteen light-house districts, and a light-house inspector shall be assigned in charge of each district. The light-house inspectors shall each receive a salary of two thousand four hundred dollars per annum, except the inspector of the third district, whose salary shall be three thousand six hundred dollars per annum. The President may, for a period not exceeding three years from the taking effect of this section, assign army and navy officers to act in lieu of the appointment of civilian light-house inspectors, but such army and navy officers shall not receive any salary or compensation in addition to the salary or compensation they are entitled to as such army or navy officers: Provided, That in the districts which include the Mississippi River and its tributaries the President may designate army engineers to perform the duties of and act as inspectors. The President may detail officers of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army for consultation or to superintend the construction or repair of any aid to navigation authorized by Congress. [36 Stat. L. 538.]

See the notes to sec. 8 of this Act, supra, p. 324.

Provisions for the arrangement of the various lighthouse districts were made by R. S. sec. 4670, amended by an Act of July 28, 1896, ch. 779, 24 Stat. L. 148, and provisions for the appointment of an officer of the army or navy, who should act as inspector, were made by R. S. sec. 4671, both of which sections were repealed by section 13 of this Act, infra, this page.

SEC. 12. [Appropriations transferred.] That all unexpended appropriations which shall be available at the time when this Act takes effect, in relation to the Light-House Board, the Light-House Establishment, and the Light-House Service, shall be available from the time that this Act takes effect for expenditures in and by the bureau of light-houses, and shall be treated the same as though the bureau of light-houses had been named directly in the Acts making said appropriations. [36 Stat. L. 539.]

See the notes to sec. 8 of this Act, supra, p. 324.

SEC. 13. [Laws repealed.] That sections forty-six hundred and fifty-three, forty-six hundred and fifty-four, forty-six hundred and fifty-five, forty-six hundred and fifty-six, forty-six hundred and fifty-seven, forty-six hundred and fifty-eight, forty-six hundred and fifty-nine, forty-six hundred and sixty, forty-six hundred and sixty-three, forty-six hundred and sixty-four, forty-six hundred and sixty-five, forty-six hundred and sixty-six, forty-six hundred and sixty-seven, forty-six hundred and sixty-nine, forty-six hundred and seventy, and forty-six hundred and seventy-one of the Revised Statutes of the United States are hereby repealed. [36 Stat. L. 539.]

See the notes to sec. 8 of this Act, supra, p. 324.

SEC. 14. [Effect.] That sections four to thirteen, inclusive, of this Act, shall take effect on the first day of July next succeeding its passage. [36 Stat. L. 539.]

See the notes to sec. 8 of this Act, supra, p. 324.

[Sec. 1.] [Lighthouse establishment — detailed statements to be made with estimates.] * * * Hereafter there shall be submitted, following each estimate for support of the Light-House Establishment, statements showing the amount required for each object of expenditure mentioned in each of said estimates, together with a statement of the expenditures under each of such objects for the fiscal year terminated next preceding the period of submitting said estimates. [36 Stat. L. 755.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of June 26, 1910, ch. 384. See the earlier provision of the Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1301, § 1, supra, p. 321.
SEC. 2. [Clothing for crews of vessels — reimbursement for supplies to shipwrecked persons.] * * * And hereafter the Secretary of Commerce and Labor is authorized to purchase, from the appropriations for the Lighthouse Service, clothing for the crews of vessels, to be sold to the employees of said service and the appropriations reimbursed; and hereafter reimbursement, under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, is authorized to keepers of light stations and masters of light vessels and of lighthouse tenders for rations and provisions and clothing furnished shipwrecked persons who may be temporarily provided for by them, not exceeding in all five thousand dollars in any fiscal year. [37 Stat. L. 239.]

This is a provision of an Act of July 27, 1912, ch. 255, authorizing additional aids to navigation in the Light-House Service, and for other purposes.

A further provision of this section provided that "hereafter the benefits of the Act of May thirtieth, nineteen hundred and eight (Thirty-fifth Statutes, page five hundred and fifty-six), entitled 'An Act granting to certain employees of the United States the right to receive from it compensation for injuries sustained in the course of their employment,' shall be extended to persons employed by the United States in any hazardous employment in the Lighthouse Service," and is given, together with the Act of May 30, 1908, ch. 236, to which it refers, under the title labor.

As to the Secretary of Commerce and Labor, see the notes to R. S. sec. 4661, supra, p. 317.

[Additional land purchases — limit of cost.] * * * Hereafter the purchase of necessary additional land for light stations and depots is authorized under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce and Labor: Provided, That no single acquisition of such additional land shall cost in excess of $500. [37 Stat. L. 1018.]

This and the two following paragraphs of the text are provisions of an Act to authorize aids to navigation and other works in the Lighthouse Service, and for other purposes, of March 4, 1913, ch. 168.

Earlier provisions relating to the purchase of land for sites were made by the Act of June 17, 1910, ch. 301, § 8, supra, p. 324.

[Supplies to be furnished from general stock.] Hereafter supplies and equipment for special works of the Lighthouse Service may be furnished from general stock and the appropriation "General expenses, Lighthouse Service," reimbursed therefor from the respective appropriations for special works. [37 Stat. L. 1018.]

See the note to the preceding paragraph of the text.

[Sale of condemned supplies, etc.— proceeds.] Hereafter when any condemned supplies, materials, equipment, or land can not be profitably used in the work of the Lighthouse Service the same shall be appraised and sold, either by sealed proposals for the purchase of the same or by public auction after advertisement of the sale for such time as in the judgment of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor the public interests require, the proceeds of such sales, after the payment therefrom of the expenses of making the sales, to be deposited and covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts as now provided for by law in like cases. [37 Stat. L. 1019.]

See the note to the second preceding paragraph of the text.

The provisions of this paragraph superseded those of R. S. sec. 4675 and the Act of June 23, 1874, ch. 455, noted supra, pp. 319, 321.
[Sec. 1.] [Construction of buildings — improvements — wages and supplies — vouchers.] * * * That any oil or carbide house erected hereunder shall not exceed $550 in cost; construction of necessary outbuildings at a cost not exceeding $200 at any one light station in any fiscal year, the improvements of grounds and buildings connected with light stations and depots, wages of laborers attending post lights, pay of temporary employees and field force while engaged on works of general repair and maintenance, and pay of laborers and mechanics at lighthouse depots; rations and provisions or commutation thereof for keepers of lighthouses, officers and crews of light vessels and tenders, and officials and other authorized persons of the Lighthouse Service on duty on board of such tenders or vessels, and money accruing from commutation for rations and provisions for the above-named persons on board of tenders and light vessels may be paid on proper vouchers to the person having charge of the mess of such vessels, reimbursement under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce of keepers of light stations and masters of light vessels and of lighthousetenders for rations and provisions and clothing furnished shipwrecked persons who may be temporarily provided for by them, not exceeding in all $5,000 in any fiscal year. [38 Stat. L. 870.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 75, following appropriations for the Lighthouse Service.

See the Act of July 27, 1912, ch. 255, § 2, supra, p. 327.

Sec. 4. [Leaves of absence to employees.] That hereafter employees of the Lighthouse Service compensated at a per diem rate of pay may be granted fifteen working days' leave of absence each year without forfeiture of pay during such absence, under rules prescribed by the Secretary of Commerce: Provided, That no employee of the class herein mentioned shall be entitled to any leave until he has served twelve consecutive months, when he may be granted fifteen days' leave, and that during the second or any subsequent year fifteen days' leave at the rate of one and one-fourth days per month, as earned, may be granted from the beginning of the second service year: Provided further, That the inspectors of the several lighthouse districts shall have discretion as to the time when the leave can be allowed without detriment to the service, and that absence on account of sickness shall be deducted from the leave hereby granted. [38 Stat. L. 927.]

The provisions of the foregoing section 4 and the following sections 5, 6, 7, and 8 are from an Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 81, entitled "An Act To authorize aids to navigation and other works in the Lighthouse Service, and for other purposes."

Sections 1, 2, and 3 are omitted as temporary.

The Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of Aug. 1, 1914, ch. 223, 38 Stat. L. 658, provided as follows: "... Hereafter employees of the Lighthouse Service, who are not now entitled to leave of absence with pay and who have served twelve consecutive months, shall be given fifteen days' leave of absence with pay each year: Provided, That pro rata leave shall be allowed those serving fractional parts of a year: Provided further, That heads of divisions shall have discretion as to the time when the leave shall be granted."

Sec. 5. [Lights and other aids to navigation authorized in Florida.] That hereafter post-lantern lights and other aids to navigation may be established and maintained, in the discretion of the Commissioner of Lighthouses, out of the annual appropriations for the Lighthouse Service, on Lakes Okeechobee and Hispoochee and connecting waterways across the State of Florida and on the Apalachicola River and Chipola cutoff. [38 Stat. L. 927.]

See the note to the preceding section 4 of this Act.

SEC. 6. [Expenses of cooperation between Lighthouse Service and Forest Service — how met.] That hereafter the annual appropriations for the Lighthouse Service shall be available for defraying the expenses of cooperation between the Lighthouse Service and the Forest Service in the management of forest land on lighthouse reservations. [38 Stat. L. 928.]

See the note to section 4 of this Act, supra, p. 328.

SEC. 7. [Chief clerks, etc., in offices of lighthouse inspectors — power to administer oaths.] That hereafter the provisions of section eight of the Act of Congress approved August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve (Thirty-seventh Statutes, page four hundred and eighty-seven), relative to the administering of oaths to travel accounts or other expenses against the United States shall be extended to chief clerks in the offices of lighthouse inspectors or other employees in the Lighthouse Service designated by them, and hereafter chief clerks in offices of lighthouse inspectors and employees designated by them are authorized to administer oaths of office to employees of the Lighthouse Service. [38 Stat. L. 928.]

See the note to section 4 of this Act, supra, p. 328.

For the provisions of the Act of Aug. 24, 1912, ch. 355, § 8, 37 Stat. L. 487, mentioned in the text, see Public Officers and Employees.

SEC. 8. [Obstruction to navigation — penalties.] That hereafter the penalties provided in section six of the Act of May fourteenth, nineteen hundred and eight (Thirty-fifth Statutes, page one hundred and sixty-two), for obstruction to or interference with any aid to navigation maintained by the Lighthouse Service shall apply with equal force and effect to any private aid to navigation lawfully maintained under the authority granted the Secretary of Commerce and the Commissioner of Lighthouses by section six of the Act of June twentieth, nineteen hundred and six (Thirty-fourth Statutes, page three hundred and twenty-four). [38 Stat. L. 928.]

See the note to section 4 of this Act, supra, p. 328.

The Act of May 14, 1908, ch. 168, § 6, mentioned in the text, is given supra, p. 323.

The reference to “section six” of the Act of June 20, 1906, mentioned in the text, is evidently intended to be section 3 of said Act of June 20, 1906, ch. 3447, supra, p. 322, since said section 3 provides for the maintenance of private aids to navigation, and the Act of which it was a part contained no “section six.”

Sec. 4281. [Liability of masters, etc., as carriers.] If any shipper of platina, gold, gold dust, silver, bullion, or other precious metals, coins, jewelry, bills of any bank or public body, diamonds, or other precious stones, or any gold or silver in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, watches, clocks, or time-pieces of any description, trinkets, orders, notes, or securities for payment of money, stamps, maps, writings, title-deeds, printings, engravings, pictures, gold or silver plate or plated articles, glass, china, silks in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, and whether wrought up or not wrought up with any other material, furs, or lace, or any of them, contained in any parcel, or package, or trunk, shall lade the same as freight or baggage, on any vessel, without at the time of such lading giving to the master, clerk, agent, or owner of such vessel receiving the same a written notice of the true character and value thereof, and having the same entered on the bill of lading therefor, the master and owner of such vessel shall not be liable as carriers thereof in any form.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

or manner; nor shall any such master or owner be liable for any such goods beyond the value and according to the character thereof so notified and entered. [R. S.]

Sections 4281-4282 are a part of chapter 6 (entitled "Transportation of Passengers and Merchandise") of title 48 (entitled "Regulation of Commerce and Navigation") of the Revised Statutes.

Application of statute.—This section has reference alone to the liability of carriers by water who transport goods and merchandise of the kind designated. It has no application whatever to carriers by land, and does not assume to declare or restrict their liability for the baggage of passengers. New York Cent., etc., R. Co. v. Fraloff, (1879) 100 U. S. 24, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 531.

Effect of statute—extent of exemption.—Prior to the enactment of this statute, the carrier was liable for any loss, except such as was attributable to the act of God or the public enemy. The statute merely relieves the carrier where the notice is not given and entrance made as required thereby from any liability as carrier, but does not attempt to relieve it from any duty as bailee. Mallory Steamship Co. v. G. A. Bahn Diamond, etc., Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1913) 154 S. W. 252.

The provision of this section which declares that any shipper of certain articles specified, among which are "pictures" shall lade the same as freight or baggage on any vessel without, at the time, giving notice to its owner, master or agent of the true character and value of the property shipped, and having the same entered upon the bill of lading "the master and owner of such ship or vessel shall not be liable as carriers thereof in any form or manner," while it relieves the ship owner from liability as carrier, when the property has been entered on the manifest, does not affect his liability as bailee for hire. As bailee therefore the owner is liable where it is shown that the property was lost through his negligence. Wheeler v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1891) 125 N. Y. 165, 26 N. E. 248, 21 A. S. R. 729; reversing (1899) 52 Hun 75, 5 N. Y. S. 101.

The words "as a carrier thereof" are vital to the true interpretation of the statute. The liability of the carrier as such was well understood by the framers of the statute. By force of his public employment, he became an insurer of the property entrusted to his care, and liable for its loss, irrespective of the cause, unless from the act of God or the public enemy. But involved in this greater liability and absorbed by it was a lesser liability as bailee for hire; of no consequence while the greater liability existed, but paramount on the destruction of that, so that when the carrier ceased to be liable as carrier, he yet remained liable as bailee.

So much, and no more than that, this section accomplished, for it distinctly removes the liability as carrier without touching that of bailee. Wheeler v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1891) 125 N. Y. 155, 26 N. E. 248, 21 A. S. R. 729, reversing (1899) 52 Hun 75, 5 N. Y. S. 101.

Nor is this construction affected by the added words "in any form or manner." They are not used disjunctively, and so as to constitute a separate command, but qualify the expression "shall not be liable as carriers thereof." The full form of the words being that the liability as carrier shall not exist in any form of action or through any manner of procedure. Wheeler v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1891) 125 N. Y. 155, 26 N. E. 248, 21 A. S. R. 729.

"A possible criticism upon this view of the statute is quite likely to suggest itself," said the court in Wheeler v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., supra. "One may inquire of what value to the shipowner is the enactment when, after all, he is left liable for the loss, and responsible, whether the property is entered upon the ship's manifest or not? The inquiry goes to the root of the matter, and its answer will further test the justice and propriety of our interpretation. Under it, the shipowner is protected as far as he should be, and in two very important respects. First, the statute leaves him at liberty to refuse to carry the property at all unless its value and character are disclosed and entered upon the ship's manifest. The law makes him master of the situation, and able, if he shall please, to enforce obedience to it. As carrier he could not refuse, but since he does not become such unless the proper entry is made, he may refuse until then to transport the property at all. As a simple bailee he may take the property or decline it. If now he chooses to take it in that character the act is voluntary; there is no compulsion about it; and on what principle shall we say that because he so takes it he shall be absolved from all care over it, at liberty to be as negligent as he pleases, and that only bailee in the world having that lawless control? Second, if a loss occurs he is no longer liable as an insurer. The door to a just defense is opened before him, and the burden of proof to establish negligence is shifted to his adversary. If the ship-owner has in truth exercised due care, he may show it and go discharged.
If he has not exercised it, if he has been negligent and careless, he ought to respond in damages and must do so."

Stipulation in bill of lading.—A stipulation in a bill of lading in regard to non-accountability for gold or silver, manufactured plated articles, jewelry, trinkets, and goods contained in any package or parcel shipped under a bill of lading, "unless the value thereof will be therein expressed, and extra freight, as may be agreed, be paid," cannot be questioned as to its reasonableness, for it is authorized by this section. The Bermuda, (E. D. N. Y. 1896) 29 Fed. 399.

A condition in bills of lading issued by a steamship company, limiting its liability in case of loss to a specified sum per package unless the value of the goods shall be expressed therein, is not an agreed valuation of the goods, and is invalid to relieve the company from liability for the full loss in case of their loss or injury through negligence, but a limitation to the invoice or declared value is reasonable and enforceable. U. S. Lace Curtain Mills v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 145 Fed. 701.

Limitation of liability in passenger ticket.—There is a well recognized distinction between mere notices by the carrier, printed upon the ticket or otherwise given to the passenger, that the carrier will not be liable beyond a certain amount, and provisions to that effect contained in the contract of carriage itself. The former are not valid unless distinctly brought home to and accepted by the passenger; the latter, entering into and forming part of the contract, are necessarily accepted with the ticket, unless repugnant to public policy. The Cretic, (D. C. Mass. 1914) 224 Fed. 216, citing The Majestic, (1897) 166 U. S. 375, 17 S. Ct. 597, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1039; Bachman v. Clyde Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 403, 81 C. C. A. 529; The Morro Castle, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 168 Fed. 555; Hohl v. Nordduetscher Lloyd, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 544, 99 C. C. A. 166.

Value of baggage. In the Cretic, (D. C. Mass. 1914) 224 Fed. 216, which was a libel in rem, brought to recover for the loss of a trunk and contents, limitations of liability to $100, in the passenger's ticket, were held valid and binding. In that case it appeared that the libelant purchased a ticket for first class passage for transportation of himself and family, with baggage from Boston to Genoa. A trunk in question formed part of the personal baggage. It was delivered on board the steamer and tagged for the "stateroom." The trunk contained jewelry and personal effects to a total value of $2,000. It was never delivered to the stateroom or to the libelant and the findings of fact were that it was undoubtedly lost by the negligence or willful misconduct of some officers or members of the crew after the voyage began. The passenger ticket contained a provision in effect that the liability of the company or the vessel to the passenger referred to in the ticket for the loss of baggage should not exceed $100 and the defense principally relied upon was, that by reason of such provision contained in the ticket, the steamer was not liable for the value of the jewelry lost. Limiting the damages to the sum of $100, with costs, the court said: "It seems to me that the limitation of liability to $100 per passenger was valid and was binding. Presumably this limitation entered into the price charged for the ticket. It the passenger desired further protection, he could obtain it by declaring a greater value and paying thereon or by shipping under a bill of lading. . . . Even though R. S. sec. 4281, does not apply to personal baggage for which no bills of lading are taken, it certainly shows legislative recognition of the wisdom of allowing ocean carriers to protect themselves against claims for undelivered jewelry in baggage or freight, a thing so plainly just and well settled as to need no elaboration." The court held also that the fact that the libelant chose to accept the ticket without reading it, or familiarizing himself with its provisions, did not enlarge his rights in the suit. He was to be held to the terms of the contract which he accepted, so far as those terms were not invalid as against public policy.

On the contrary in Weinberger v. Compagnie Generale-Transatlantique, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 146 Fed. 616 it was held that a provision printed in a steamer ticket for the carriage of six passengers, limiting the liability of the carrier for loss or damage to baggage to $100, not read by nor called to the attention of the passenger, was unreasonable and void. But this case is doubtless is distinguishable from The Cretic, cited supra. The court said: "These clauses [limiting liability to $100] although entitled 'Conditions of Passage' do not appear to be anything more than notices. They are printed in connection with the ticket but not made a part thereof and are of no greater force than if printed on the back of the ticket. The libelants have testified that they did not read them nor were they brought to their attention. Moreover, they were not reasonable and are, therefore, not enforceable, especially, although the ticket was designed to cover a number of passages, no provision is made for a greater liability than 500 francs for all and such amount is insisted was the extent of the respondent's liability. The contention can not be sustained.

A steamship company issued a passage ticket limiting its liability for loss of the personal effects of passengers to $100, unless the value of the same, in excess of that sum, be declared before the issue of the contract of carriage by the named party, and the payment of said sum, in addition to the ship and payment of freight at current rates thereon. Hand baggage was delivered to the company's baggage master at his direction, and on his statement that it would be sent to the passenger's room, but it was never delivered. It was held that the loss, if unexplained, established a prima facie case of negligence for which the company was liable, notwithstanding the failure of the passenger at the time of delivery to declare the value thereof or pay excess freight thereon; such requirement not applying to hand baggage. Holmes v. North German Lloyd Steamship Co., (1906) 184 N. Y. 280, 77 N. E. 21, 5 L. R. A. (N. S.) 650. This case is distinguished in The Cretic, cited supra, on the ground that the property lost was not actually delivered as baggage whereas in The Cretic, the property in question was delivered to the steamer and accepted by her as baggage belonging to the person traveling under the ticket which determined the rights and liabilities of the parties.

Whether a limitation of liability to goods above the value of $100 per package applies to "gold, silver, bullion, specie, documents, jewelry, pictures, embroidery, works of art, silks, furs, Chins, porcelain, watches, clocks," as well as to goods of other description, may admit of some doubt, in view of the fact that by this section the vessel and her owners would not be liable for such articles at all unless specifically mentioned at a value agreed upon. Calderon v. Atlas Steamship Co., (1898) 170 U. S. 272, 18 S. Ct. 688, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1033.

A passenger simply carrying, as part of ordinary baggage, such small articles of jewelry and silverware as under any circumstances would only be regarded as a proper and legitimate part thereof, does not come within the provisions of the statute and is not a shipper of such articles within the meaning of the law. Carlson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1888) 109 N. Y. 359, 16 N. E. 546.

Articles carried by a passenger as baggage and which are properly so carried are not affected by this section, but articles like silk and lace not intended for personal use when carried as baggage are within the terms of the section. Haddad v. Hartford, etc., Transp. Co., (1915) 38 Atl. 261, 94 Atl. 697.

Jewelry worn by passenger.—The provision of this section that if any shipper of jewelry, etc., contained in any parcel or package or trunk shall take the same as freight or baggage on any vessel without giving written notice of its character and value, and having the same entered on the bill of lading, the shipowner shall not be liable as carrier, is intended to apply where such goods are received from a shipper by a carrier for transportation in the usual course of business, and does not relieve a shipowner from liability for jewelry worn and carried on board by a passenger with the intention of placing it in the custody of the purser, as permitted by the rules of the ship, but which was stolen by an employee of the ship before there was opportunity to do so. The Finnentoks, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 509, 77 C. C. A. 217, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 52.

Trinkets.—Elaborate fans and parasols were held to be trinkets in the sense in which that word is used in the statute so when the proof showed that they were made of delicate and expensive material, highly ornamented with carving and extremely fragile in construction, and that they were really intended more for ornament than for use, though they may have some possessed to some extent the quality of utility, and this consideration constituted a very small element of the purpose for which they were designed and contributed incomensurably to their value. Savannah Ocean Steamship Co. v. Way, (1892) 90 Ga. 747, 17 S. E. 57, 20 L. R. A. 123.

Lace.—A Chantilly lace shawl, valued at $400, is lace within the meaning of this statute. Savannah Ocean Steamship Co. v. Way, (1892) 90 Ga. 747, 17 S. E. 57, 20 L. R. A. 123.

Writings.—Memorandum books in which a traveler had entered, from time to time, results of his experience and observation as respects the quality, quantity, use, and combination of articles used in his business in numerous different localities, and valuable to him for information and comparison in the continued prosecution of the same business, are within the provisions of this section. The St. Cuthbert, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 97 Fed. 346.

Documents.—The term "documents" in a bill of lading is not a substitute for or equivalent to the term "writing" in the statute. The St. Cuthbert, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 97 Fed. 346.

Contract by foreigner with foreign corporation.—It is questionable whether the law is applicable to a foreigner who made a contract of carriage with a foreign corporation outside the jurisdiction of this country, even though action is brought in this country on such contract. Carlson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1888) 109 N. Y. 359, 16 N. E. 546.
Burden of proof.—Under this statute the burden of proof is upon the steamship company to show a failure on the part of the shipper to give the notice required and cause the entry to be made in the bill of lading. Mallory Steamship Co. v. G. A. Gahn Diamond, etc., Co., (Tex. Civ. App. 1913) 164 S. W. 282.

Sec. 4282. [Loss by fire.] No owner of any vessel shall be liable to answer for or make good to any person any loss or damage which may happen to any merchandise whatsoever, which shall be shipped, taken in, or put on board any such vessel, by reason or by means of any fire happening to or on board the vessel, unless such fire is caused by the design or neglect of such owner. [R. S.]

Source and history of act.—The first section of the Act of March 3, 1851, embodied herein, was copied from the second section of Act 26 Geo. III. c. 86, which received a judicial interpretation by the Court of Queen's Bench in Morewood v. Pollok, (1853) 1 El. & Bl. 743, 72 E. C. L. 741, 18 Eng. L. & Eq. 341. The City of Clarksville, (D. C. Ind. 1899) 94 Fed. 201.

The earliest American legislation upon this subject is found in a statute of Massachusetts passed in 1818, and revised in 1836. This was taken substantially from the Statute of George II. It was followed by an act of the legislature of Maine in 1831, copied from the Statute of Massachusetts. The attention of Congress does not seem to have been called to the necessity for similar legislation until 1848, when the case of The Lexington reported under the name of the New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, (1848) 6 How. 344, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 465, was decided by the Supreme Court. In that case the owners of a steamboat, which was burnt on Long Island Sound, were held liable for about $18,000 in coin which had been shipped under the steamer and lost. In consequence of the unreasoned produced among shipowners by this decision and for the purpose of putting American shipping upon an equality with that of other maritime nations, Congress, in 1851, enacted what is known as the Limited Liability Act, which was incorporated into the Revised Statutes, sections 4282 to 4290. The Main v. Williams, (1894) 152 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 381.

Constitutionality.—The Act of March 3, 1851, ch. 43, from the first section of which this section derives, was not only a maritime regulation in its character but was clearly within the scope of the power given to Congress "to regulate commerce." Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1883) 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 167, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1058.

Purpose of statute.—It is evident from the provisions in pari materia with this, that the legislative intent was to relieve the carrier from a liability which had theretofore entered into the contract for carriage of goods. This object is recognized in Moore v. American Transp. Co., (1861) 24 How. 1, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 674, and the opinion states: "The decision in the case of The Lexington, which was burned upon Long Island Sound led to this Act of 1851," referring to New Jersey Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants' Bank, (1848) 6 How. 344, 12 U. S. (L. ed.) 465, where the carrier was subject to liability for a loss of goods by fire in transit under the rule at common law. By that rule the carrier became absolutely responsible for the safety of the goods entrusted to him for transportation, excepting only for acts of God or the King's enemies. The liability as an insurer which was thus imposed by the common law, had proved onerous and discouraging when applied to cases of loss by accidental fire, and relief had been extended in England by statute; this similar enactment followed here. Both the circumstances and the context show that this provision was intended only to affect the contract for carriage, so that this insurance against loss by fire should no longer be implied as a part of that contract. The Roanoke, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 59 Fed. 161, 18 U. S. App. 407, 8 C. C. A. 67.

Construction of statute.—This statute is a remedial statute. It was enacted to remedy the rigor of the common law, which it was deemed unwise, on grounds of public policy, to continue. It should, therefore, be construed, if not literally, at least fairly, to carry out the policy which it was enacted to promote. Chamberlain v. Western Transp. Co., (1871) 44 N. Y. 305, 4 Am. Rep. 681, reversing (1866) 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 218. See also Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1883) 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 167, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1058, favoring a liberal construction in behalf of the ship owners.

But in The Main v. Williams, (1894) 152 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 381, the court observed: "The English courts have held, very properly we think, that these statutes [limited liability statutes] should be strictly construed."
Effect of statute.—The statute affords a complete defense when there is no proof to support an accusation against the owners of any Intentional act or negligence which could have been the cause of the fire and consequent injury to the vessel and her cargo. The Rapid Transit, (D. C. Wash. 1892) 52 Fed. 320.

The shipowners cannot be held liable, as for neglect, when it appears that the vessel was built by responsible shipbuilders and passed the scrutiny of Lloyd's surveyors, and that in the particular complained of, which was alleged to have caused the fire, from the testimony of skilled persons it complied with all the known demands of skill and safety. The Strathdon, (E. D. N. Y. 1888) 89 Fed. 374.

Any vessel.—As to what vessels are within the statute, see infra, R. S. sec. 4289, p. 367.

Liability under R. S. sec. 4283.—Cases of loss by fire fall within R. S. sec. 4283, infra, p. 336, as well as this section. There is no inconsistency or repugnancy in allowing a partial exemption in cases falling within R. S. sec. 4283; that is, cases of loss by fire happening without the privity or knowledge of the owners. They may not be, under this section, to show that it happened without any neglect on their part, or what a jury may hold to be neglect, while they may be very confident of showing, under R. S. sec. 4283, that it happened without their privity or knowledge.

The conditions of proof, in order to avoid a total or a partial liability under the respective sections, are very different. Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1883) 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038.

"Design or neglect."—The word "design" contemplates a causative act or omission, done or suffered wilfully or knowingly by the shipowner. It involves an intention to cause the fire or to suffer it to be caused by another. The word "neglect" has an opposite meaning, and involves the absence of willful injury and is an unintended breach of duty, resulting in injury to the property or person of another. The Strathdon, (E. D. N. Y. 1898) 89 Fed. 374.

Design or neglect of part owner as affecting liability of co-owners.—A circumstance that the master owned an eighth interest in the vessel can have no effect to enlarge the liability of his co-owners. If a master be sued in his character of master, he will be held responsible notwithstanding that he is one of the part owners; but if he be sued as a part owner, with the other part owners, the circumstance that the loss was occasioned by his fault and with his privity will not take away from the other part owners the protection which the statute intended to give them. Keene v. The Bark Wm., (1878) 2 Savy. 348, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,645.

Fire originating upon dock.—A fire originating upon the dock could not be said to have happened to the ship within the meaning of this section even though the fire extended to and did some damage to the vessel. Constable v. National Steamship Co., (1894) 154 U. S. 51, 14 S. Ct. 1062, 33 U. S. (L. ed.) 903.

A fire which originated upon the dock and extended to the steamer so far as to do some damage to her hull and rigging before she was towed away, is not such a fire as is contemplated by the statute. The loss of the goods must be "by reason or by means of" a fire that happens "to the ship" or "on board" of her. The Egypt, (S. D. N. Y. 1885) 25 Fed. 320. See Richardson v. Goddard, (1859) 23 How. 28, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 418; Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, (1857) 10 C. & L. Ware 111, 23 Me. 10; Coope v. Perlick, (1853) 122 U. S. 12, 267; Salmon Falls Mfg. Co. v. The Tangier, (1857) 21 Law Rep. 6, 6 Am. L. Reg. 504, 21 Fed. Cas. No. 12,205; Scott v. Baltimore, etc., Steam Boat Co., (C. C. Md. 1884) 19 Fed. 56.

In Dill v. Bertram, (1857) 7 Fed. Cas. No. 3,910, it was held that freight delivered on the wharf and taken charge of by the vessel's officers is to be regarded as laden on board the ship, and if destroyed by a fire originating on land, and the loss of it was occasioned by the negligence of the officers of the ship in not taking it sooner on board, such loss and damage must be regarded as happening to the goods "shipped, taken in, or put on board the ship," and the owners are therefore exempt from responsibility.

Fire originating upon wharf-boat.—This statute limits its operation to a fire happening to or on board the vessel and does not extend to a fire happening on board of a wharf boat while lying alongside the shore, into which cargo has been unloaded. The City of Clarksville, (D. C. Ind. 1889) 94 Fed. 201.

Nor does the statute have reference to a loss by fire after the merchandise is unloaded and placed in the warehouses of third parties. Black v. Ashley, (1890) 80 Mich. 90, 44 N. W. 1120.

Fire result of collision.—This section can have no application in a case where fire is but an incident of a collision. Losses by collision are provided for in a subsequent section. The Steamer City of Norwich, (1889) 3 Ben. (U. S.) 575, affirmed Fire during deviation.—The owner of a vessel which has deviated from her voyage by his order is not relieved from liability for loss of cargo by fire during such deviation by R. S. sec. 4282, which exempts him from liability "by the design or neglect of such owner." The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1909) 171 Fed. 929.

Fire during transfer to connecting carrier.—The owner of a vessel in which goods are shipped to be transferred to a connecting steamship line is not liable where the goods are destroyed by fire while being transferred to the ship of the connecting carrier by lighters, if the loss is not caused by design or neglect. (1914) D'Uttas v. Mallory Steamship Co., 162 App. Div. 410, 147 N. Y. S. 313.

Fire as proximate cause.—Where a steamer, with a cargo consisting principally of lime, suffered damage by fire in a city harbor, and was, by the fire department of the city, beached and scuttled for the purpose of extinguishing the flames and the sinking of the vessel, which was the only method by which a total loss of the vessel could be prevented, caused a total destruction of the lime, it was held that the shipowner was exempt from liability under this section. The Rapid Transit, (D. C. Wash. 1892) 52 Fed. 329. See also The Stratdon, (E. D. N. Y. 1898) 89 Fed. 374.

Merchandise.—Horses, trucks, and harness, in charge of drivers, who were teamsters, and came aboard a ferryboat as passengers on their way home at noon, without any goods or other load, were held not to be merchandise within the meaning of the statute, and the liability of the ferryboat for the loss, by fire, of such horses, trucks, harness, etc., is not a liability as for merchandise, but a wholly different and much more restricted liability, namely, that of passengers and their baggage. The Garden City (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 26 Fed. 706.

Passenger’s baggage is not included in the word merchandise. The Marine City, (E. D. Mich. 1881) 6 Fed. 413. Umphors Chamberlain v. Western Transp. Co., (1870) 44 N. Y. 305, 4 Am. Rep. 681, wherein the term, "any goods or merchandise whatsoever" used in the Act of March 3, 1861, were held to include baggage.

General average.—This statute does not exempt the vessel from general-average contribution. The Roanoke, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1893) 89 Fed. 161, 18 U. S. App. 407, 8 C. C. A. 67; The Win. J. Quillian, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 168 Fed. 407; The Wm. J. Quillian, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 175 Fed. 207, reversed on other grounds, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 180 Fed. 651, 103 C. C. A. 647. See also The Rapid Transit, (D. C. Wash. 1892) 52 Fed. 320. See Rall v. Troop, (1895) 157 U. S. 386, 15 S. Ct. 657, 39 U. S. (L. ed.) 742, as to the right of general average when the vessel was scuttled by direction of municipal authorities, without the order or concurrence of the master or commanding officer of the vessel.

An action against the owners of a vessel for having improperly and negligently delivered the cargo without exacting contribution, is not within the provisions of this section. Heye v. North German Lloyd, (S. D. N. Y. 1867) 33 Fed. 90.

Contract to insure cargo.—A contract between carrier and shipper that the carrier should insure the cargo, operates to restore the carrier’s common-law liability for loss by fire, abrogated by this section. Southern Cotton Oil Co. v. Merchants’, etc., Transp. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 179 Fed. 133.

Burden of proof.—After the loss has been shown to have arisen by fire, the burden is on those asserting that the fire was caused by the shipowners’ design or neglect to prove it. The Stratdon, (E. D. N. Y. 1898) 89 Fed. 374.

After judgment in state court.—If a libel for loss of cargo by fire be filed in a state court and judgment rendered therein, the judgment must be treated in a federal court with due deference, governed by the comity between courts. The limitation of liability in the federal court on the judgment will then be governed by R. S. sec. 4283, and not by this section. In re Old Dominion Steamship Co., (E. D. N. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 845.

Waiver of statutory exemption.—The immunity from liability is statutory, but the carrier may waive the same and extend its liability. D’Uttas v. Mallory Steamship Co., (1914) 162 App. Div. 410. 147 N. Y. S. 313.

Sec. 4283. [Liability of owner not to exceed his interest.] The liability of the owner of any vessel, for any embezzlement, loss, or destruction, by any person, of any property, goods, or merchandise, shipped or put on board of such vessel, or for any loss, damage, or injury by collision, or for any act, matter, or thing, loss, damage, or forfeiture, done, occasioned, or incurred, without the privity, or knowledge of such owner or owners, shall in no case exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in such vessel and her freight then pending. [R. S.]

See R. S. sec. 4289, infra, p. 367.

I. CONSTITUTIONALITY

There is no doubt that Congress had power to pass this statute. It is only a maritime regulation in its character, but it is clearly within the scope of the power given to Congress "to regulate commerce." Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1883) 100 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038. See also In re Morrison, (1893) 147 U. S. 14, 15 S. Ct. 346, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 60; King v. American Transp. Co., (1859) 1 Flipp. 1, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,878; The Garden City, (S. D. N. Y. 1886) 26 Fed. 766. Congress has power to regulate the liability of the owners of vessels navigating the high seas, but engaged only in the transportation of goods and passengers between ports and places in the same state. As limited by R. S. sec. 4289, infra, p. 367, this section is constitutional. Lord v. Goodall, etc., Steamship Co., (1880) 102 U. S. 541, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 324.

A state constitutional provision against any limitation of the amount to be recovered for injuries resulting in death cannot be set up against a right given by this section. The control by Congress of the maritime law of the country is paramount, and when it has been exercised in a particular way all state authority must conform to it. Loughlin v. McCauley, (1889) 186 Pa. St. 517, 40 Atl. 1020, 65 A. S. R. 876, 48 L. R. A. 33.

II. PURPOSE AND EFFECT OF STATUTE

In Moore v. American Transp. Co., (1861) 24 How. 1, 16 U. S. (L. ed.) 674, the court thus stated the purpose of the limitation of liability which the statute grants: "The act was designed to promote the building of ships and to encourage persons engaged in the business of navigation and to place that of this country on a footing with England and on the continent of Europe."

The purpose of this section was the public benefit which was to be derived from the upbuilding of the shipping interests, to induce capitalists to invest money in this branch of industry, and to establish a uniform rule of liability, which should not overwhelm merchants if a tremendous catastrophe should happen, as is always likely to occur at sea. In re P. Sanford Ross (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 196 Fed. 921; U. S. v. Hamburg-Amerikanische Pachersforehft Actien Gesellschaft, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 40, 128 C. C. A. 496.

The manifest and adjudged effect of the Act has been to afford a shipowner, in those cases where the blame is not brought too nearly home to him, the opportunity of escaping further liability by giving up his ship, as if at the end of the voyage, with freight earned, or the value of what his interest therein would be at the end of the voyage, or a bond therefor. The Act is one for the owner's advantage and he must bring himself within its spirit to escape further responsibility. The Defender, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 214 Fed. 316, wherein the court said: "The right to take advantage of the statute for limitation of liability to the vessel and her freight pending does not..."
depend upon whether the value exceeds or falls below the claims made or ultimately established, although the excess over such value would ordinarily be the actuating motive for invoking the statute. The object of the law was to afford certainty for uncertainty, and to establish a limitation beyond which a shipowner could not be pursued by certain creditors. It is neither intended that he should give less, nor his creditors take less, than the value of his interest at the end of the voyage. If there be subsequent liens, though they may be inferior to such as libellant's, and it ultimately prevail against them, it is not intended that it should sustain the burden of litigation to determine this, or that the ship's owner should have the advantage of the act and escape further liability by the surrender of a thing worth less to him than the vessel at the end of the voyage, which would be the result if there were subsequent liens thereon, or the vessel lessened in value to him for other reasons."

III. CONSTRUCTION

In The Main v. Williams, (1894) 152 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 391, it was held that a strict construction should be given to the limited liability statutes, the court observing: "The English courts have held, very properly we think, that these statutes [limited liability statutes] should be strictly construed." But in the earlier case of Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1885) 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038, a liberal construction of the limited liability law was favored, the court saying: "If the courts having the execution of it administer it in a spirit of fairness, with the view of giving to shipowners the full benefit of the immunities intended to be secured by it, the encouragement it will afford to commercial operations will be of the last importance: but if it is administered with a tight and grudging hand, construing every clause most unfavorably against the shipowner, and allowing as little as possible to operate in his favor, the law will hardly be worth the trouble of its enactment." See to the same effect, Chamberlain v. Western Transp. Co., (1871) 44 N. Y. 305, 4 Am. Rep. 681, reversing (1866) 45 Barb. 218.

IV. SCOPE OF STATUTE

1. Territorially

"If a collision should occur in British waters, at least between British ships, and the injured party should seek relief in our courts, we would administer justice according to the British law, so far as the rights and liabilities of the parties were concerned, provided it were shown what that law was and if not shown, we would apply our own law to the case. But if a collision occurs on the high seas, where the law of no particular state has exclusive force, but all are equal, any forum called upon to settle the rights of the parties would prima facie determine them by its own law as presumptively expressing the rules of justice; but if the contesting vessels belonged to the same foreign nation, the court would assume that they were subject to the law of their nation carried under their common flag, and would determine the controversy accordingly. If they belonged to different nations, having different laws, since it would be unjust to apply the laws of either to the exclusion of the other, the law of the forum, that is, the maritime law as received and practiced therein, would probably furnish the rule of decision." The Scotland, (1881) 105 U. S. 24, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001.

The statute applies as well when adverse to as when for the benefit of foreign ships or foreign owners. In re Leonard, (S. D. N. Y.) 14 Fed. 3d.

This statute is not merely a local and municipal regulation applicable only to American vessels, but is a modification of the common law of a general and universal character. Levinson v. Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (1876) 17 Alb. L. J. 283, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8290.

The statute has no extraterritorial effect and cannot be resorted to for the purpose of limiting the liability of a foreigner for a collision occurring upon the high seas and beyond the territorial limits of the United States. Churchill v. The British America, (1878) 9 Ben. 516, 5 Fed. Cas. No. 2,715.

2. Extent of Liability

3. Owners Affected

In general.—All owners of vessels are not entitled to the privileges of the limitation of liability, but only such as fall within the description named in the Act, to wit, those who had no privity or knowledge of the act to which affirmative steps are to secure it. The Maria and Elizabeth, (D. C. N. J. 1882) 11 Fed. 520.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Carriers by land and water.—The statute does not except from its operation owners of vessels who are common carriers partly by land and partly by water, nor those whose vessels are not registered. Wallace v. Providence, etc., Steam-Ship Co., (C. C. Mass. 1882) 14 Fed. 56. Mobile Steamboat Owners v. Brownell, (1875) Holmes 467, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,695. But under a more liberal construction of the statute, it has been held that a steam engine and hoist of a fuel scow is a part of the vessel. The Buffalo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 815, 85 C. C. A. 531.

A scow, upon which a piledriver is placed, and which is moved about from place to place by a tug, is included within the term vessel. In re P. Sanford Ross, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 106 Fed. 321, reversed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 248, 132 C. C. A. 516, on the question of privity or knowledge without determining whether under all the circumstances the piledriver came within the limited liability statutes.

A motorboat is within the provisions of the statute where the evidence established that the vessel was properly manned and equipped at the time of the accident which occurred without the owner's privity or knowledge. The Alola, (E. D. Va. 1915) 228 Fed. 1006.

Dismantled vessel.—In the C. H. Northam, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 983, it appeared that the owners of the vessel had started to dismantle her and had removed her masts and engines, though part of her machinery remained on board the hull, with a derrick and dummy engine belonging to her owner, which were being used in the dismantling process. It was held that as she was still capable of floating, of carrying a cargo, and of being towed from place to place, she was a vessel within the meaning of the statute.

A floating boathouse used merely as a storage room and as a part of a dock, rising and falling with the tide, was held not to be a vessel, even though the floating part was similar in construction to that of a scow. Woodruff v. One Covered Scow, (E. D. N. Y. 1887) 30 Fed. 269.
Ferry.—In The Southside, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 384, the benefit of the statute was allowed to a ferry company operating between two places in the same state.

Other boats of same owner.—The fact that other boats belonging to the same owner as the boat in fault are in the immediate vicinity when the injury occurs does not make them liable, or require the owner to surrender them under the limited liability statute, where no negligence is alleged against them. The Sunbeam, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 195 Fed. 488, 115 C. C. A. 370.

Foreign vessel.—In The Titanic v. Mellor, (1914) 233 U. S. 718, 34 S. Ct. 754, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 1171, the court had under consideration questions certified to it by the Circuit Court of Appeals, the facts of the case being as follows: The Titanic, a British steamship, which had sailed from Southampton, England, on her maiden voyage for New York, collided on the high seas, on April 14, and sank the next morning, with the loss of many lives and total loss of vessel, cargo, personal effects, mails and everything connected with the ship except certain life boats. The owner, alleging that the loss was occasioned and incurred without its privity or knowledge, filed a petition for limitation of its liability under the laws of the United States, R. S. secs. 4283, 4294, 4295, and Admiralty Rules 54 and 58. 210 U. S. 562, 564. Before it did so a number of actions to recover for loss of life and personal injuries resulting from the disaster had been brought against the petitioners in federal and state courts. The persons who sustained loss were of many different nationalities, including citizens of the United States. Mellor, a British subject, excepted to the petition, on the ground that "the acts by reason of which and for which [the petitioner] claims limitation of liability took place on board a British registered vessel on the high seas" and therefore the law of the United States would not apply. Anderson, a citizen of the United States, excepted on the ground that the law of the United States could not and that of England was not shown to apply. The District Court dismissed the petition as to these two, (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 209 Fed. 501. The petitioner appealed, and the Circuit Court of Appeals certified the following questions: "A. Whether in the case of a disaster upon the high seas, where (1) only a single vessel of British nationality is concerned and there are claimants of many different nationalities; and where (2) there is nothing before the court to show what, if any, is the law of the foreign country to which the vessel belongs, touching the owner’s liability for such disaster,—such owner can maintain a proceeding under §§ 4283, 4294 and 4285 U. S. Rev. Stat. and the 54th and 56th Rules in Admiralty? B. Whether, in such a case it appears that the law of the foreign country to which the vessel belongs, and the provision for the limitation of the vessel owner’s liability, upon terms and conditions different from those prescribed in the statutes of this country, the owner of such foreign vessel can maintain a proceeding in the courts of the United States, under said statutes and rules? In the event of the answer to question B being in the affirmative, C. Will the courts of the United States in such proceeding enforce the law of the United States or of the foreign country in respect to the amount of such owner’s liability?" The first two questions were answered "yes," and the last, "'The law of the United States." The court in part said: "The general proposition that a foreign ship may resort to the courts of the United States for a limitation of liability under R. S. sec. 4293 is established. The Scotland, (National Steam Nav. Co. v. Dyer) [1882] 105 U. S. 24, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001; La Bourgogne, (Deilongs v. La Compagnie Generale Transatlantique) [1908] 210 U. S. 95, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973, 28 S. Ct. 684. These were cases respectively of collisions between American and English and English and French vessels. See also The Chattahoochee, [1899] 173 U. S. 540, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 801, 19 S. Ct. 491. The Germanic, (Oceanic Steam Nav. Co. v. Atkin) [1908] 186 U. S. 589, 589, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 610, 614, 25 S. Ct. 317. But it is argued that there is an exception in a case like this, where only a single foreign ship is concerned. The argument is supported by a quotation from Mr. Justice Bradley in The Scotland, to the effect that if a collision occurred on the high seas between two vessels belonging to the same nation, the court would determine the controversy by the law of their flag. For, it is said, if the foreign law would govern in that case, it must govern in this, and therefore, at least, in the absence of allegations bringing the case within the foreign law, the petition must be dismissed. If, in the observation referred to, Mr. Justice Bradley had been speaking of proceedings of this class, it would be important as sanctioning the view that the United States courts offered a forum concursus for the administration of other systems as well as of our own; but we apprehend that he was speaking of an ordinary collision case, and merely indicating that, in such a case, the principle usually governing foreign torts would apply. That principle may be accepted equally governing here, but it does not carry us far. It is true that the act of Congress does not control or profess to control the conduct of a British ship on the high seas. See American Banana Co. v. United Fruit Co. [1900] 213 U. S. 547, 565 U. S. (L. ed.) 1226, 29 S. Ct. 511, 16 Ann. Cas. 1047. It is true that the foundation for a recovery upon a British tort is an obligation created by British law. But it also is true that the laws of the forum may decline altogether to enforce that obligation, even though it be contrary to the domestic policy, or may decline to enforce it except within such limits as it may impose. Cuba R. Co. v. Crosby, [1912] 222 U. S. 473, 478, 480, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 274-276, 38 L. R. A. (N. S.) 40, 32 S. Ct. 132; Dicey, Conf. L. 2d ed. 947. It is competent, therefore, to Congress to enact that, in certain matters belonging to admiralty jurisdiction, parties resorting to our courts shall recover only to such extent or in such way as it may mark out. Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., [1889] 130 U. S. 557, [9 S. Ct. 615, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017]. The question is whether the owner of the Titanic by this proceeding can require all claimants to come in and can cut down rights vested under English law, as against, for instance, Englishmen living in England who do appear. It is only when we are dealing with a suit in this country are limited in their recovery irrespective of the English law. That they are so limited results in our opinion from the decisions of this court."

Inland navigation.—By R. S. sec. 4289, if applicable, the provisions of the statute are made applicable to all vessels used on lakes, rivers, or in inland navigation, including canal boats, barges and lighters. The Columbia, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1886) 73 Fed. 226, 44 U. S. App. 326, 19 C. C. A. 436. See also In re The Annie Faxon, (D. C. Wash. 1895) 66 Fed. 575; In re P. Sandford Ross, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 196 Fed. 921.

5. Losses Covered

Three classes of damage.—This section limits the shipowner's liability in three classes of damage or wrong happening without their privity and by the fault or neglect of the master or other person on board, namely: 1. Damage to goods on board; 2. damage by collision to other vessels and their cargoes; 3. any other damage or forfeiture done or incurred. Norwex, etc., Transp. Co. v. Wright, (1871) 13 Wall. 154. 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 585.

Cases of personal injury and death.—This section applies to cases of personal injury and death, as well as to cases of loss or injury to property. In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881; The Southside, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 153 Fed. 304; Monongahela River Consol. Coal., etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 200 Fed. 711, 118 C. C. A. 127; The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 250 Fed. 519; State v. Daggett, (1915) 87 Wash. 253, 158 Pac. 645, L. R. A. 1916A 446. See also Matter of The Steam Propeller Epsilon, (1873) 6 Ben. 378, 8 Fed. Cas. No. 4,506; Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 557, 9 S. Ct. 612, in which case the deceased was a passenger, and Craig e. Continental Ins. Co., (1891) 141 U. S. 638, 12 S. Ct. 97, in which case the deceased was one of the crew.

This section extends to claims for personal injury or death, or for loss of property, or for loss of life of passengers, whether arising under the general law of admiralty or under the federal or state statutes. The City of Columbus, (D. C. Mass. 1884) 22 Fed. 400. See also The Longfellow, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 360, 45 C. C. A. 370.

Passenger falling on gangplank.—Conflicting evidence considered, and held insufficient to sustain the burden resting upon a passenger to prove, in a proceeding for limitation of liability, that the injury for which she claimed damages, and which resulted from her falling while passing over the gangplank of petitioner's barge, was due to the wet and unfit condition of that gangplank. In re Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1906) 151 Fed. 274.

Loss by fire.—Cases of loss by fire fall within this section as well as R. S. sec. 4282, supra, p. 334. There is no inconsistency or repugnancy in allowing a partial exemption in cases falling within this section; that is, cases of loss by fire happening without the privity or knowledge of the owners. They may not be able, under section 4282, to show that it happened without any neglect on their part, or what a jury may hold to be neglect, whilst they may be very confident of showing, under this section, that it happened without their privity or knowledge. The conditions of proof, in order to avoid a total or a partial liability under the respective sections, are very different. Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co., (1883) 100 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1028.

Collision.—Loss arising from a collision is included in this statute, and the loss of a vessel and her cargo arising from a collision is on an equality with the lien for the loss of the cargo of the other vessel for the same cause. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co. v. Wright, (1871) 13 Wall. 154. 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 586.

In case of collision the cargo owners, not being in fault, are entitled to be first paid in full. All the vessels and their owners were held ultimately jointly and severally liable in solido for this claim, subject only to the statutory limitation of liability as respects each vessel so far as applicable. The Doris Eckhoff, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 41 Fed. 156.

Mutual fault.—In the case of collision where two parties are in fault, the charge in such a case is joint, and it is correct to divide the damage; but the injured party, if without fault, is entitled to full compensation; and it follows that if either of the guilty parties is unable to pay the whole of the moneys it is in general the right of the injured party to collect the

Where both vessels were in fault and the damages are divided, the rule is that as each vessel is liable for one-half of the damage done to both, if one suffered more than the other the difference should be equally divided and the one which suffered least should be decreed to pay one-half of such difference to the one which suffered most, so as to equalize the burden. In other words, as both parties were in fault, the damage done to both vessels should be added together in one sum and equally divided, and a decree should be pronounced in favor of the owners of the vessels which suffered most against those of the vessel which suffered least for one-half of the difference between the amounts of their respective losses. The Manitoba, (1887) 122 U. S. 97, 7 S. Ct. 165, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1095. See also Duncan v. The C. H. Foster, (C. C. Mass. 1880) 1 Fed. 733; The North Star, (1882) 106 U. S. 17, 1 S. Ct. 41, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 91; The Bristol, (S. D. N. Y. 1857) 29 Fed. 867, when the cargo in one vessel is owned by the owner of the vessel.

"If the doctrine of The North Star, (1882) 106 U. S. 17 [1 S. Ct. 41, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 91], be a sound one, that in cases of mutual fault the owner of the vessel which has been totally lost by collision is not entitled to the benefit of an act limiting his liability to the other vessel until after the balance of damage has been struck, it would seem to follow that the sunken vessel is not entitled to the benefit of any statute tending to lessen its liability to the other vessel, or to an increase of the burden of such other vessel, until the amount of such liability has been fixed upon the principle of an equal division of damages." The Chattahoochee, (1899) 173 U. S. 540, 19 S. Ct. 491, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 897.

Both vessels having same ownership.—Where, after collision, the corporation owning both boats filed a petition to limit its liability with reference to the boat lost only, and did not offer to surrender the colliding boat, an interlocutory decree that the owner of the boat lost was entitled to limit its liability to the appraised value of such boat with its freight pending was no bar to libellant's subsequent action against the owner for damages for the death of a passenger in such collision, in which it was held that both boats were at fault, though libellant had appeared and presented a claim for such damages in the limitation proceeding. Hall r. North Pac. Coast R. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1904) 124 Fed. 309.

The purpose of proceedings for limitation of liability for a collision is to exempt the petitioner from all personal liability on account of the collision, on whatever ground it may rest; and where the petition is for the limitation of liability as owner of a vessel sunk, but it is found on the hearing, on appropriate allegations in the answer, that petitioner was also owner of the other vessel concerned, and both were in fault for the collision, it is a condition precedent to the granting of the relief sought that both vessels and their pending freight be surrendered. The San Rafael, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 270, 72 C. C. A. 388, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1904) 134 Fed. 749, certiorari denied (1906) 200 U. S. 619. 28 S. Ct. 765, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 623.

Claim for salvage.—By the Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, infra p. 388, the right to limit liability is extended to nonmaritime torts. Richardson v. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96, 32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110. Under this amendment claims for salvage are included in the indemnity against which the vessel's owner may limit his liability. The San Pedro, (1912) 223 U. S. 365, 32 S. Ct. 275, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 473, Ann. Cas. 1913D 1221, wherein the court said: "But it is contended that a salvage claim such as the one here involved is not a claim for damages or injury by collision within the meaning of § 4283, Revised Statutes, and therefore not one to which the limited liability act applies; that the damages there referred to are damages by collision to other vessels and their cargo, and that the expense of being towed to port is a claim like one for repairs. It is also said that even if the vessel owners may be able to include what they must pay for such a service in the damages recoverable from the guilty vessel, it is notwithstanding not a damage arising from collision within the meaning of that section. But we need not consider whether the claim is one against the owner of the character described either in § 4283 or the succeeding, § 4284. Those sections have been amended by the sixteenth section of the Act of June 26, 1884 (23 Stat. 55, c. 121), (infra, p. 368) so as to include 'any and all debts and liabilities of the owner incurred on account of the ship without his privity or fault.' Richardson r. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96 [32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110]. The service was rendered to the sea, benefiting alike owner and creditors. The claim is, therefore, of a highly meritorious character. But the question of preference in payment out of the fund is one to be determined in the limited liability case. We, therefore, express no opinion as to whether such a claim may be preferred or must share pro rata with others."
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Sums paid salvors for services rendered in rescuing a vessel, and also contributions, if any, in respect of a vessel jettisoned, may be allowed. The salvage expenses are to be apportioned upon the vessel, freight, and cargo in proportion to their respective values, and the shares belonging to the vessel and freight are to be deducted from the proceeds in the registry. The general average contribution apportioned upon the vessel and freight for cargo jettisoned is to be deducted in full. The Abbie C. Stubbs, (D. C. Mass. 1886) 28 Fed. 719.

A barge sank while in tow of a tug, and it was found that under the contract of towage the tug was liable for the damages. The owners of the tug raised the barge and brought her into port. They libeled the barge for salvage. The salvage services were rendered by the owners of the tug before application for limiting their liability. It was held that salvage compensation could not be deducted from the sums awarded against the owners of the tug. The Pine Forest, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 700, 64 C. C. A. 228, 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 873.

The wages of the master and seamen after the collision and the expense of the tug in towng the vessel to port are not salvage services, but the ordinary expenses of the voyage incurred in earning the freight, and no deduction can be allowed therefor. The Abbie C. Stubbs, (D. C. Mass. 1886) 28 Fed. 719.

Liens for supplies, repairs, etc.—Upon proceedings for limitation of liability for damages resulting from collision there cannot be deducted from the amount to be distributed among libelants and claimants, according to law, a sum equal to the full amount of all debts due for supplies, repairs, etc., for which liens against the vessel could be enforced. The real value of the vessel in fault, without regard to liens upon her at the termination of her voyage upon which she negligently caused the injury complained of, measures equitably and justly the value of the interest of the owner therein as contemplated by the limited liability Act. The Leonard Richards, (D. C. N. J. 1890) 41 Fed. 818.

Parties suffering loss have a right to priority of payment out of the fund without any deduction for the amount of bottomry, mortgage, pilothage, towage, seamen's wages, or other contracts of the master or owners. Barnes v. Steamship Co. (1368) 6 Phila. (Pa.) 479, 23 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 190, 2 Fed. Cas. No. 1,023.

Personal or agency contract.—The owners are individually liable for the contracts of the managing agent made in the home port in the ordinary repair of the vessel, the repairs being known and approved by some of the owners. Such repairs are treated as the personal debts of the owner and cannot be discharged by a surrender of the vessel. Gookey v. Fort, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 44 Fed. 364.

A proceeding in admiralty under this section and the rules of the Supreme Court is substantially a proceeding in rem for the distribution of a fund, and does not determine the question of the owners' liability except to those whose claims are limited by the Act, or possibly others who voluntarily become parties to the cause. It cannot affect the rights of those who have not submitted themselves to the jurisdiction and whose claims are not limited to the amount to be distributed, but rest upon the owners' personal liability at common law as a wrongdoer. The proceedings and decree in a District Court of the United States do not bar a suit brought by such persons in the state court. Hill Mfg. Co. v. Providence, etc., Steamship Co. (1787) 125 Mass. 292.

The purpose of the statute was to limit the liability of the owner as to any damage his vessel should do without his privy or knowledge, whether the person or thing damaged was upon the water or the land, and so covers the case of a collision with the abutment of a bridge, or Vessel Owners' Towing Co., (N. D. Ill. 1886) 26 Fed. 160. See also In re Vessel Owners' Towing Co., (N. D. Ill. 1884) 26 Fed. 172.

Unauthorized sale of cargo.—An unauthorized sale of cargo by the master upon condemnation of his vessel as unserviceable is within the statute. The Giles Loring, (D. C. Me. 1890) 48 Fed. 463.

"A claim for prepaid freight is not a claim based upon the loss or destruction of the goods." Matter of Liverpool, etc., Steam Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 3 Fed. 165.

Damages provable on loss by stranding.—Damages provable against a fund representing the vessel, for injury to cargo caused by stranding, will include the loss of perishable cargo made worthless by delay and thrown overboard, as well as the partial damage to that brought into port, and also the costs and charges pending the salvage of the cargo; that is to say, its proper proportion of the aggregate costs.
and charges up to the time of its arrival in port as well as any further damage, if any, by reason of any difference in market prices from the delay in arrival. The City of Para, (S. D. N. Y. 1891) 44 Fed. 689.

Baggage belonging to one who had purchased a ticket, which was on the wharf boat to which the steamboat was moored, was held to have been "shipped" within the meaning of this section. In re Louisville, etc., Packet Co., (S. D. Ohio 1899) 95 Fed. 996. See also The Longfellow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 360, 45 C. C. A. 379.

Losses occurring on distinct voyages.—The casualties or losses of different voyages cannot be aggregated or grouped together, and all of the losses be credited in to share what has been saved from shipwreck or other disaster. The voyage or trip, each separate journey which the ship makes from one port to another, must be treated as a separate venture involving its own particular hazards, losses, and earnings. When each such voyage is ended, it is for the owner to decide whether the losses have been such as to make it expedient for him to invoke the protection given by this Act of Congress. If he does not decide to do this, but sends his ship upon a new voyage, he thereby concedes his personal liability for the damages incurred upon the past voyage. The Alpena, (N. D. Ill. 1881) 8 Fed. 280.

V. PRIVITY OR KNOWLEDGE OF OWNER

1. In General

"Privity" or "knowledge" defined.—In Lord v. Goodsell, etc., Steamship Co., (1877) 4 Sawyer, 292, 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,508, it was held: "The word 'privity' of the owner, used in section 4283 of the Revised Statutes, means some fault or neglect in which the owner of the vessel personally participates; and 'knowledge' as used, means some personal cognizance; or means of knowledge, of which he is bound to have, of a contemplated loss, or of a condition of things likely to produce or contribute to a loss, without adopting appropriate means to prevent it. The owner is bound to exercise the utmost care in the selection of a competent master and crew, and in providing a vessel in all respects seaworthy; and if by reason of any neglect or fault in these particulars, a loss occurs, the owner is in privity within the meaning of the statute."

Privity of owner.—It is not necessary that an owner of a vessel, in order to be entitled to limit his liability under the statutes, must, before sending his vessel on her way, acquaint himself with the science of navigation, or acquire expert knowledge concerning his vessel, its equipment, its machinery, or the necessary crew therefor, or must place between himself and the master an intermediary who shall possess such knowledge. Boston Marine Ins. Co. v. Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 703, 117 C. C. A. 97.

Owner's neglect.—A loss is not occasioned without the knowledge or privity of the shipowner when it arises from his personal neglect to inform himself of the defective condition of the vessel, the vessel being under his personal supervision. The Republic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 100, 20 U. S. App. 561, 9 C. C. A. 386. See In re Sinclair, (1880) 8 Am. L. Reg. 206, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,885.

Deviation by order of owner.—The owner of a vessel whose cargo was injured by fire while the vessel was in dry dock by the owner's order under circumstances constituting a deviation cannot claim exemption from liability on the ground that the loss was without his "privity or knowledge." The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1909) 171 Fed. 929.

Mere negligence.—Mere negligence, of itself, does not necessarily establish the existence of the part of the owner of a vessel of "privity or knowledge," so as to preclude the shippers from limiting their liability. La Bourgonne, (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 62 U. S. (L. ed.) 973.

An owner who, after a general inspection, purchases a vessel from a shipbuilder of recognized standing and reputation, who equips her with machinery, means, and appliances which are suitable and sufficient, if properly used, may limit his liability for injuries to a stevedore, occasioned by the negligent use of such appliances by his employees. The Harry Hudson Smith, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 724, 74 C. C. A. 56, affining (E. D.) N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 271.

Negligence of agent.—A shipowner, who has provided a suitable person as his agent to inspect or provide for the proper equipment of the vessel, is not deprived of the benefit of the statute limiting liability by proof of negligence of such agent in failing to provide such equipment or to maintain it in good condition of which the owner had no knowledge or notice. The Tommy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 131 Fed. 570, C. C. A. 50; The Alola, (E. D. Va. 1916) 228 Fed. 1008.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Negligence of superintendent.— Where the superintendent of the owner of a floating derrick or hoist failed to exercise a proper degree of care in directing the manner in which work was to be performed and in inspecting the equipment and appliances for doing such work, it was held that liability for the injury of an employee arose with the knowledge and privity of the owner. The Teddy, (W. D. N. Y. 1915) 226 Fed. 498.

Privity of master who is part owner.— If the alleged privity or personal fault of the master and a part owner in the negligence which caused a collision be determined against him, that will not prevent the proceeding going on for the benefit of the other innocent owner. In re Leonard, (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 14 Fed. 53. See The Maria and Elizabeth, (D. C. N. J. 1892) 12 Fed. 627.

In a collision case it appeared that the master of the vessel was part owner, and on the night of the collision was on board and was taking his full share in the navigation of the vessel. He had served out his watch at midnight, when the mate and two others of the crew took charge, and had gone to his berth and was asleep at about one o'clock in the morning when the collision occurred. The wind was light, the night fair, and there was nothing in the situation that called for any special diligence. It was held that under these circumstances, as such part owner, the master had no privity or knowledge of the collision within the meaning of the statute. The Maria and Elizabeth, (D. C. N. J. 1892) 12 Fed. 627.

Inevitable accident.— A steamer owned by petitioners was placed by them on the beach, where she had been for several weeks, and had been partially broken up and her machinery removed, when during a storm and high tide at night she floated, broke free from her moorings, and drifted across the bay. She did not float at ordinary high tide, and lay in a hollow, with a bank between her and the sea. She was made fast by five hawsers, three of which parted, and the others slipped from their fastenings. A watchman was on board. The storm and height of the tide were extraordinary, and exceeded any that had been known for several years, and many other vessels dragged their anchors or broke from their moorings. The direction of the wind at high water was such as to force the vessel off shore, but in most storms occurring at that time of year the wind blows on shore. The court held (1) that there was no absence of reasonable care or skill on the part of petitioners, which would charge them with privity or knowledge, such as to prevent them from limiting their liability; and (2) that the breaking away of the steamer was due to an inevitable accident or via major, and she could not be held liable for injuries to other vessels into which she may have drifted. The C. H. Northam, (D. C. Mass. 1900) 181 Fed. 986.

Hearing and determination of question.— In a proceeding by the owner of a vessel for limitation of liability on account of a collision, where an answer is filed by the owner of the other vessel setting up a claim for damages, the question of the knowledge or privity of the petitioner, though jurisdictional, and the question of liability for the collision, where both are put in issue by the pleadings and are to be determined largely upon the same evidence, may properly be heard at the same time as a matter of convenience, and the court is not required to hear and dispose of the jurisdictional question separately. In re Eastern Dredging Co., (D. C. Mass. 1906) 159 Fed. 541.

2. Corporation

Privity and knowledge are chargeable upon a corporation when brought home to its principal officers and to the superintendent, who is its representative. The privity or knowledge referred to in the statute is not that which rises out of the mere relation of principal and agent by legal construction. The knowledge or privity that excludes the operation of the statute must therefore be in a measure actual, and not merely constructive; that is, actual through the owner's knowledge, or authorization, or immediate control of the wrongful acts or omissions, or through some kind of personal participation in them. The Colima, (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 82 Fed. 655.

One to whose management the company's entire fleet of boats in remote waters, as well as all of its other property in that region, is intrusted, should be regarded as the company's representative, and his dispatch of any of the company's boats to a neighboring point as being at least within his ostensible authority. His knowledge must therefore be regarded as his company's knowledge and his acts as the acts of the company, and for gross negligence the company will be held responsible. Parsons v. Empire Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 202, 49 C. C. A. 302.

Imputation of privity or knowledge.— There can be no imputation to a corporation of privity or knowledge of defects in the boilers of a vessel unless the defects were apparent and of such a character as to be detected by the inspection of an unskilled person. It is sufficient if the corporation employ, in good faith, a competent person to make such inspection; when it has employed such a person in good faith, and has delegated to him that branch of its duty, its liability beyond the value of the vessel and freight ceases so far as concerns injuries from defects of which it has no knowledge, and which are not apparent to the ordinary observer, but which require for their detection the skill of an expert. The Annie Faxon. (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 312, 44 U. S. App. 591, 21 C. C. A. 366.

Knowledge of president.—The privity or knowledge of a president of a corporation is chargeable to the corporation, and for loss of life resulting from an attempt to transport passengers in an overcrowded boat, in the presence of the president, the liability of the company cannot be limited. Weisshaar v. Kimball Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 307, 310, 55 L. R. A. 373, 65 L. R. A. 87.

The privity or knowledge of a corporation is established when it appears that the president, by his omission of proper care in his examination of the vessel, failed to discover her defective condition. The Republic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 100, 20 U. S. App. 561, 9 C. C. A. 386.

Where a judgment was rendered in a state court against a corporation for the death of a person killed on a derrick scow owned by the defendant, by the breaking of a part of the derrick, the court finding that the part was obviously defective on inspection, but that no inspection or repair was made, that the derrick was being used at the time in the raising of a sunken vessel under the personal direction of the defendant’s president, who was on board, and that the defendant was chargeable with negligence causing or contributing to the death, the corporation cannot maintain a petition for limitation of liability against such judgment, on the ground that the deceased was occasioned without its privity or knowledge, through the fault or negligence of the master of the scow. The Capt. Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1909) 169 Fed. 453.

Negligence of watchman in permitting vessel to go adrift.—Where the precautions taken by the petitioner to secure and care for the vessel were sufficient, and it appeared that none of its managing officers had knowledge of her going adrift or of the negligence of the watchman, it was not chargeable with privity or knowledge which precluded it from limiting its liability. In re Eastern Dredging Co., (D. C. Mass. 1906) 159 Fed. 541.

Excessive speed in fog.—A steamship company, which establishes rules and regulations requiring the masters of its vessels to maintain only the moderate speed required by the international rules in case of fog, and has not knowingly tolerated or encouraged the violation of such rules or neglected their enforcement, and which has exercised due care in securing officers of experience and ability, is not deprived of the right to a limitation of liability for damages caused by a collision for which its vessel was in fault by reason of maintaining excessive speed in a fog, on the ground that the collision occurred with its privity or knowledge. La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 130 Fed. 433, 71 C. C. A. 480, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973.

3. Competency of Master and Crew

Privity of owner.—Incompetency of master.—Incompetency of the master, such as will charge the owners of the vessel with privity and knowledge because they employed him, is not shown by proof that he was not possessed of the knowledge which might have enabled him to avoid the particular danger which caused the injury, where it was shown that he had had thirty years’ experience at sea, and was in full use of all his faculties, with nothing to his discredit in his record. The Murrell, (D. C. Mass. 1911) 200 Fed. 826.

Duty of owner.—It is the duty of the owner to provide the vessel with a competent master and a competent crew, and to see that the ship when she sails is in all respects seaworthy. He is bound to exercise the utmost care in these particulars; such care as the most prudent and careful men exercise in their own matters under similar circumstances. And if by reason of any fault or neglect in these particulars, a loss occurs, it is with his privity and within the meaning of the Act. If some secret defects exist which could not be discovered by the exercise of such due care, the owner is exonerated by the exercise of all proper care in making his ship seaworthy. Matter of Wright, (1878) 10 Rem. 14, 111 N. Y. 1008.

Chinese sailors.—It is the duty of the owners of a vessel to provide a crew not merely competent for the ordinary duties of an uneventful voyage, but for any exigency that is likely to happen and which calls for instant action to save the lives of passengers and crew. A ship is insufficiently manned when the sailors can only receive orders through a boatswain. In re Pacific Mail Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 76, 64 C. C. A. 410, 69 L. R. A. 71.

Fault in navigation.—Where it appears that the boat was seaworthy, in view of the voyage she was to make, and the loss was due to faulty navigation, liability of the owners is limited under this section. The Longfellow, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 720, 68 C. C. A. 379.

The owners are entitled to limitation of their liability when the negligence in the management of the vessel and the ordinary or proper caution and care in navigation were the proximate and efficient causes of its stranding. The City of Para. (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 44 Fed. 683.

For injury resulting from the imprudence of the master of the tow, the owner is entitled to limitation of liability. The Bordentown. (S. D. N. Y. 1889) 40 Fed. 682.

Failure to keep lookout.—When watchmen, whose duty it was to serve as lookouts, were supplied by the owners, but the master chose to assign to the lookouts a duty which took them from their stations or divided their attention, the owner is not to be deprived of the benefit of the statute for such misconduct of the master. The George W. Roby. (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 601, 49 C. C. A. 481.

Bad loading and bad management.—If the accident is to be ascribed to bad loading and bad management combined, and there was no unseaworthiness or faults in the ship herself, or in her equipment, both of the causes of the disaster fall within the peculiar duties of the master as such; and considering that neither of them was within the knowledge or in actual privity or actual personal superintendence of the petitioner, or its managing agent, but belonged to the master of the ship in that capacity only, and in the exercise and manner of his official functions as master, the case is within the intent as well as the language of this section. The Colima. (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 82 Fed. 665.

4. Unseaworthiness of Vessel

In general.—The question of the unseaworthiness of a vessel on account of her equipment is largely determined by custom and usage. Boston Marine Ins. Co. v. Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 703, 117 C. C. A. 97.

"It is well settled that the owner of a vessel is not entitled to limit his liability arising from the unseaworthiness of a vessel. If the libellant was ignorant of the condition of the vessel, it was because of a negligent examination, as in The Republic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 109, [20 U. S. App. 561, 9 C. C. A. 386]." Braker v. F. W. Jarvis Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 166 Fed. 987.

Proper equipment in general.—"The right of a shipowner to limit his liability is dependent upon his want of complicity in the acts causing the disaster, and the burden of proof rests upon him to show affirmatively that he has properly equipped and equipped the vessel for the contemplated service." McGill v. Michigan Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 789, 75 C. C. A. 518, revering (N. D. Cal. 1904) 132 Fed. 577; certio

The owner of a barge is not entitled to a limitation of liability for the death of an employee engaged in discharging a cargo of rails, which resulted from the fact that the vessel lacked the necessary equipment for handling the rails, and the master borrowed and used a set of tongs which were worn and unfit for use, although warned of their defective condition; it not appearing that such owner had delegated power to any competent person to provide the vessel with proper equipment to render her seaworthy for the service in which she was engaged. Thc Tommy. (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 142 Fed. 1034, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 161 Fed. 570, 81 C. C. A. 50.

Failure of owner's agent to ascertain condition.—A contention on the part of the respondent company that its liability should be limited to the value of the boats, not sustained because the responsible agent of the company neglected to avail himself of an opportunity to ascertain the condition of the boats. Sanbern v. Wright, etc., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 171 Fed. 449, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 1021, 102 C. C. A. 666.

Failure to comply with inspection law.—The failure to comply with the inspection law may be invoked to prove that the owner is not entitled to the benefit of limitation of liability. The Annie Faxon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 312, 44 U. S. App. 591, 21 C. C. A. 366; Braker v. F. W. Jarvis Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 106 Fed. 987.

But if local inspectors, who are public officers, fail to perform their duty and make an insufficient examination of the vessel, the fault does not rest upon the petitioners, nor is there imputation to them of knowledge of such defective inspection, they having delegated the whole matter of the inspection of their vessel to a competent company. The Annie Faxon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 312, 44 U. S. App. 591, 21 C. C. A. 366.

Master a habitual drunkard.—To establish the unseaworthiness of a vessel for the reason that her master was a drunkard, it is necessary to prove that the master was a habitual drunkard within the knowledge, or the means of knowledge, of the owner. The Anna, (D. C. S. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 520.

Deviating compass.—Where there are several correct compasses, but one compass for any cause deviates, and a competent master, by the exercise of ordinary care and skill, can discover the deviation and correct the deviating compass by comparison with the others, and be thus enabled to steer the proper course, the ship in this respect is seaworthy. Matter of Wright. (1878) 10 Ben. 14, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,086.
Life preservers.—While a sailing vessel ought to carry a sufficient number of life preservers, and the captain should make requisition for them, although there is no statutory requirement, where the owners depend upon the captain to see that the equipment of the vessel for the voyage is complete in every particular, they are exempt from personal liability in this regard. The Jane Grey, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 99 Fed. 582.

Failure to have survey made.—A barge leased by libellant corporation to one of the respondents to be used in coaling a vessel in port, while being unloaded alongside the vessel capsized, and the cargo was lost and one person drowned. The immediate cause of the capsizing was the unusual quantity of water in the hold, which had come in during the latter part of the time she was being loaded. The evidence tended to show that she was loaded and was being unloaded in the usual and proper manner. She was an old vessel, had been two extensively overhauled and repaired, the last time some five years before. The superintendent and the manager of the libellant had both been through the hold only a few days previously, but without lights; and it did not appear that they made more than a casual examination, nor had she been surveyed by any one having skill; and there was evidence that some of her interior timbers were broken. It was held that the sinking was attributable to her unseaworthiness, which was not without the privity of libellant, and that it was not entitled to a limitation of liability. Oregon Round Lumber Co. v. Portland, etc., Steamship Co., (D. C. Ore. 1906) 162 Fed. 912. See also Braker v. F. W. Jarvis Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 166 Fed. 987.

Loss of vessel at sea by striking submerged obstruction.—Evidence considered, and held to entitle the owner of the Danish steamship Norge to a limitation of liability on account of her loss at sea while on a voyage from Copenhagen to New York, through striking a derelict or unknown obstruction under the surface of the water to the southward of Rockall Rock, by which she was so injured that she sank in twenty minutes, and a number of persons lost their lives; it being shown that she was seaworthy and properly manned and equipped, that she was on an approved route with a lookout properly stationed, and that there was no fault or negligence in her management. Claims made by representatives of persons who lost their lives by the disaster also dismissed. The Norge, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 845.

VI. MEASURE OF LIABILITY

1. Value of Vessel

The value of the ship at the time of the ending of the voyage must be taken as the measure of the owners' liability. In case of a collision resulting in the sinking of the vessel the proper valuation is that which she had when she had sunk; that was the termination of the voyage. The City of Norwich, (1886) 115 U. S. 468, 30 L. ed. 1150; The Envoy, (1883) 113 U. S. (L. ed.) 134; The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 186 Fed. 662. See also The Benefactor, (1880) 103 U. S. 239, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 354; The Alpena, (N. D. Ill. 1881) 8 Fed. 250; The Rose Culkin, (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 52 Fed. 322; Im re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881; Im re La Bourgogne, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 117 Fed 261.

When the vessel was not sunk or wrecked by means of the collision, but afterwards, by the carelessness of her master or crew, the voyage was not terminated until the vessel was sunk or stranded. The Great Western, (1886) 119 U. S. 529, 6 S. Ct. 1172, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 156.

When a vessel sunk in a creek not far from the landing in shoal water, was raised and the cargo delivered at the landing, the appraisement must be made as she was at the landing, with a deduction of the expense incurred in raising. The Anna, (D. C. S. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 525.

Determination of value of vessel.—In determining the value of a vessel in proceedings to limit the owner's liability for the damage caused by a collision, a fair estimate of the expense and cost of taking her to that port, together with a reasonable sum on account of the risk and the hazard to which she might be subject, affecting her then value, and on account of such hazard as the conditions existing at that time would make it reasonable to suppose might attend the work of salvaging her, may be deducted from the value of the vessel when brought into port, although the amount so deducted exceeds the amount allowed for salvage. Boston Marine Ins. Co. v. Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 703; 139 C. C. A. 228; 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 873; The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 186 Fed. 662.

There is authority, however, to the effect that salvage and general average are not to be treated as diminishing the value of the vessel at the end of her voyage. The Pine Forest, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1904) 129 Fed. 790, 64 C. C. A. 228; 1 L. R. A. (N. S.) 873; The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1910) 186 Fed. 662.

No deduction can be allowed for the wages of the master and seamen after the collision and the expense of a tug in towing the vessel to port. The Abbie C. Stubbs, (D. C. Mass. 1889) 29 Fed. 720.

Additional value which the owners have put upon the vessel by repairing her constitutes no part of her at the time the damage was sustained. Matter of Wright, (1879) 10 Ben. 14, 30 Fed. Cas. No. 18,666.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS’ LIABILITY

In a proceeding for limitation of liability arising out of an accident which occurred more than two years before the proceeding, in appraising the value of the vessel, the court, in deducting from her present value on account of additions made since the accident, should also be made at their present value, and not at their cost. The Captain Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1903) 162 Fed. 508.

A libellant’s recovery cannot exceed the value of the vessel. The valuation of the vessel, whether by consent or otherwise, for the purpose of bond or stipulation to discharge it from the custody of the marshal, is not the test or real value in the case of collision. Wells v. The Ann Caroline, (1861) 29 Fed. Cas. No. 17,389B.

Damasges for collision awarded to owner.

— In case of a collision an owner who retains the sum of the damages which have been awarded him for the loss of his ship and the damages allowable for the amount or value of his interest in the ship, and therefore, to the extent of the damages paid on account of the collision, is liable to the creditors of the ship. O’Brien v. Miller, (1897) 106 U. S. 287, 18 S. Ct. 140, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 469.

Insurance money received by owners.

Hoisting apparatus as part of vessel.

A traveling steam hoist or derrick, mounted on a fuel scow specially designed to be towed, although removable, it had been removed but once in fourteen years, is a part of the vessel, within the meaning of the limitation of liability statute. The Buffalo, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 815, 33 C. C. A. 531, affirming (W. D. N. Y. 1906) 148 Fed. 331.

Tug and scow used together.

Where a contractor for raising a sunken vessel employed in the work an outfit consisting, of a scow on which was mounted a derrick, and a tug to supply motive power, in order to maintain a petition for limitation of liability for the killing of a person by the breaking of a part of the derrick during the work the contractor was required to surrender the entire outfit, including the tug. The Captain Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1909) 169 Fed. 455.

Dismantled ship.

Where a vessel, at the time of the commission of injuries for which her owner is liable, had been so far dismantled as to have no market value as a vessel, for the purpose of fixing the amount of the stipulation to be given by petitioners, the net value of the materials in her after she is broken up may properly be taken; but in such computation the value of a dummy engine placed on board for use in removing the machinery, and which was no part of her equipment, should be excluded. The C. H. Northam, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 985.

Time of surrender.

An owner may not keep the boat and elect to retain her for his own benefit, rather than to turn her over to the court for sale, and after some time, if a claim arises, yield up a boat greatly deteriorated in value or even partially destroyed, in place of what was subject to the claims at the time those claims arose. The Passaic, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 644.

A surrender upon a petition to limit liability, at a date long after the liability was incurred only allows the amount of the boat has not depreciated beyond ordinary wear and tear. In other words, if the owner surrenders the boat, or desires to substitute a bond for the ship at the time when the liability was incurred. The owner of the boat has no right to limit his responsibility by surrendering the property, and at the same time use up that property to his own profit. The T. W. Wellington, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 235 Fed. 728. See The Capt. Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1909) 169 Fed. 455 wherein it was held that a petition to limit liability will be dismissed if the entire vessel is not surrendered.

2. Freight Pending

This section requires not only the surrender of the ship, but also of the freight pending. Sumner v. Caswell, (S. D. N. Y. 1884) 20 Fed. 249.

Definition of term “freight pending.”

By the terms “freight pending” as used in this section and “freight for the voyage,” as used in the succeeding R. S. sec. 4254, is meant the earnings of the voyage, whether for the carriage of passengers or merchandise, and where passage or freight money is prepaid under contracts by which it becomes the absolute property of the shipowner whether the voyage is completed or not, it must be regarded as earned, although the vessel is lost, and must be surrendered by the owner to entitle him to a limitation of liability under the statute for claims growing out of such loss. La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 433, 71 C. C. A. 489, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L ed.) 973.

Inclusiveness of term “freight pending.”

— Unless the freight and passengers they are pending in the sense that they are earned as a result of the maritime advanture, they do not fall within the terms of the statute. In re La Bourgogne, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 117 Fed. 281.

The words "freight pending" include freight earned at the end of the voyage for cargo on board at the time of collision. If the ship is sunk or destroyed and no freight earned, the owners' whole responsibility is at an end. The Abbie C. Stubs, (D. C. Mass. 1886) 28 Fed. 719.

"Pending" freight is limited to that due to or to be earned by the particular vessel through whose fault the loss occurred, and the fact that goods when lost or injured were being transported under through bills of lading on different vessels of the same owner does not require a surrender of the freight earned by a different vessel in the course of such shipment. Ralli v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 286, 83 C. C. A. 290.

But where goods were loaded on one boat and she sank at the pier, damaging a larger part of her cargo, the fact that the undamaged cargo was then transferred by her owner to another vessel and that the first boat did not deliver any part of it, did not relieve the owner in proceedings for limitation of his liability from the necessity of surrendering as "pending freight," the freight which she would have earned if she had carried the cargo. Ralli v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 286, 83 C. C. A. 290.

Identie ownership of vessel and cargo.—When the same persons own the vessel and the cargo, the earnings of the vessel in transporting the goods will be deemed freight within the meaning of the statute, and the amount will be what would have been a fair compensation for transporting the same goods had they belonged to other persons. Allen v. Mackay, (1854) 1 Sprague 219, 1 Fed. Cas. No. 228.

Freight prepaid at the port of departure is included in the term "freight then pending." The Main v. Williams, (1894) 153 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 381.

Passage money is included in the term "freight then pending." The Main v. Williams, (1894) 152 U. S. 122, 14 S. Ct. 486, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 381. See also In re Meyer. (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881; The Jane Grey, (D. C. Wash. 1890) 90 Fed. 382.

Decommerce due and unpaid must be treated as pending freight. The Giles Loring, (1890) 48 Fed. 473.

Salvage.—The words "freight pending" do not include salvage, for that is paid as a reward to the vessel, its officers and crew, for their efforts to save life and property, and is personal to the salvors irrespective of any relation they bear to others. In re Meyer. (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881.

Earnings of fishing vessel.—The season's cruising of a fishing vessel is to be accounted as a single voyage, and the earnings during the whole season's fishing are, equally with the vessel, liable for its contract on the vessel's account. Whitcomb v. Emerson, (D. C. Mass. 1892) 50 Fed. 128.

Earnings in wrecking service.—Where, at the time of an injury which gave rise to proceedings for limitation of liability, the vessel surrendered was employed in raising a sunken vessel under a contract by which the petitioner received a stated sum for the service, such sum may properly be considered as "freight pending" within the meaning of the statute, which must also be surrendered, and no deduction can be made therefrom on account of other vessels or appliances also used in the service, but which the petitioner did not surrender. The Captain Jack, (D. C. Conn. 1908) 162 Fed. 808.

Subsidies.—When the owners of the ship were entitled to a subsidy from a foreign government if they made a certain number of trips a year, with certain deductions and bonuses for lesser or greater speed than the average called for, it was held that no part of the subsidy need be turned into the court as "freight pending." La Bourgogne, (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 684, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 453, 71 C. C. A. 489.

VII. EFFECT OF PROCEEDINGS ON OTHER ACTIONS

Enjoining actions on claims.—"A court of admiralty, in which is pending a proceeding for the limitation of the liability of a shipowner, may enjoin the prosecution of suits in state courts against the shipowners. In re Whitehall, [N. D. Cal. 1890] 17 Fed. 371, 372, and cases cited; The Tolchester, [D. C. Md. 1890] 42 Fed. 180, 185. And in proceedings of this character, which have been designated as 'equity proceedings in admiralty,' to prevent a multiplicity of suits, it has frequently been decided that the powers of an admiralty court are as extensive, and its remedies are as effective, as are those of a court of chancery when its jurisdiction is invoked in an equitable proceeding, and that all persons having claims, whether in rem or in personam, against a ship or its owners, can have their rights determined therein. This principle was clearly recognized by this court in In re Pacific Mail Steamship Co., [C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904] 130 Fed. 76 [64 C. C. A. 410, 69 L. R. A. 71]; In re Meyer [N. D. Cal. 1896] 74 Fed. 897; The Annie Faxon, [C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896] 76 Fed. 318, 320; [44 U. S. App. 591] 21 C. C. A. 366; Dowdell v. U. S. Dist. Ct., [C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905] 139 Fed. 444, 71 C. C. A. 288.

Whether an injunction may be granted under any circumstances by the United States Supreme Court to stay proceedings in the state courts during the pendency of an appeal in a suit brought by the owners of a vessel to obtain the benefit of the limitation of liability, such relief should not be granted when the United States Circuit Court and the District Court have decided that the vessel did not come within the purview of the statute. The Mamie, (1884) 110 U. S. 742, 4 S. Ct. 104, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 313. See also The Benefactor, (1880) 103 U. S. 239, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 351. And see cases under side-heading Injunction in notes to R. S. sec. 4225, infra, p. 384.

The provisions of the Acts of Congress limiting liability apply to death claims when brought in the state court, and such suits in the state court may be enjoined and the litigation and the adjustment of all such claims transferred to the courts of admiralty. "Since, therefore, under the provisions of the Acts of Congress, the recovery of damages for death in maritime cases may be wholly withdrawn from the state courts by order of the admiralty courts after the actions are begun in the state courts, or may be prosecuted in the first instance in a court of admiralty for a pro rata distribution, citing all claimants to appear, it is evident that a court of admiralty must have jurisdiction over the whole subject, and may award the damages given by the state statute upon a simple libel, as the greater includes the lesser." The City of Norwalk, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 55 Fed. 98, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 384, 20 U. S. App. 570, 9 C. C. A. 521. See The St. Nicholas, [S. D. Ga. 1891] 49 Fed. 671.

Materialmen having claims against the vessel cannot be enjoined from bringing their actions for recoveries under the Limited Liability Act does not, in terms or by implication, include such claims; and as to them the owner's liability is not by force of the statute in any degree limited. The Leonard Richards, [D. C. N. J. 1890] 41 Fed. 822.

Effect of restraining order.—A court of admiralty in which proceedings are instituted by a vessel owner for limitation of liability has exclusive jurisdiction to settle in such proceedings all claims arising out of the matters on which they are based, and an order made therein restraining all persons having claims from prosecuting suits thereon elsewhere is a bar to a subsequent suit on a claim in another court, although brought by an administrator who had not at that time been appointed. Seece v. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co., [W. D. Pa. 1907] 153 Fed. 507.

Effect on existing judgments.—Proceedings to limit a vessel owner's liability do not affect the status of a decree already entered in a collision suit. Such a decree is a final adjudication, both as to liability and the amount of damages. But if the defendant's liability is limited only a portion of the judgment may be paid. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, [C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912] 200 Fed. 711, 119 C. C. A. 127.

VIII. PROCEDURE

1. Jurisdiction

a. In General

When the jurisdiction of the District Court in Admiralty has been invoked for the purpose of limiting the liability of the petitioner and adjusting such claims it is proper for the court to obtain by its own process, or upon its own order, the possession of the vessel which should have been surrendered in the first instance

Before the abolition of the Circuit Court it was held that a proceeding in a District Court for limitation of liability, could not be kept open until the same could be tried in the Circuit Court, and the question of negligence of the owner passed upon by a jury. In re Old Dominion Steamship Co., (E. D. N. C. 1902) 115 Fed. 849.

Of claims against vessel.—A court of admiralty in which proceedings are instituted by a vessel owner for limitation of liability has exclusive jurisdiction to settle in such proceedings all claims arising out of the matters on which they are based, and order the same therein restraining all persons having claims from prosecuting suits thereon elsewhere is a bar to a subsequent suit on a claim in another court, although brought by an administrator who had not at that time been appointed. See In re Monongahela River Coal, etc., Co., (W. D. Pa. 1907) 155 Fed. 507.

District Courts having jurisdiction to enforce the statutory rule of limited liability, have jurisdiction of the enforcement of claims as auxiliary and incident to their jurisdiction of the main subject. In re Goodrich Transp. Co., (E. D. Wis. 1888) 26 Fed. 715.

Reducing claim below appraised value of vessel.—Where a District Court has acquired jurisdiction of a proceeding for limitation of liability for a claim for damages on which the owner has been sued in another district, the claimant cannot defeat such jurisdiction by appearing specially and offering or attempting to reduce the amount of his claim below the appraised value of the vessel and her pending freight. The John K. Gilkinson, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 150 F. 457, 158 F. 100 (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 158 Fed. 868.

Effect of pleading—settlement of questions of fact.—In White v. Island Transportation Co., (1914) 233 U. S. 346, 34 S. Ct. 589, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 993, it appeared that the owner of a vessel sued for personal injuries received on a vessel, filed a petition in the District Court to secure the benefit of this statute limiting the liability of vessel owners. One of the questions involved related to the jurisdiction of the court, the objection being raised that the court was without jurisdiction because the pleadings showed that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the owner. On this question the court said: "The objection that the court was without jurisdiction, because the pleadings showed that the damage was occasioned by the negligence of the owner, evidently resulted from a misapprehension of what was in the pleadings. So far they were from settling where the fault lay that they put the matter directly in issue, the petition alleging that the injury was occasioned without the owner's privity or knowledge and the answer affirming that it was caused by the owner's negligence and not otherwise. If the fact was as alleged in the petition, the case was within the statute. . . . And while the claimant was at liberty, under admiralty rule 56, to contest the owner's right to a limitation of liability, the decision of the question necessarily rested with the court. Its jurisdiction was not ousted merely because the claimant took issue with what was alleged in the petition. Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 327, 552, 553, (9 S. Ct. 612, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017). The questions of fault were to be settled by a trial, and this was so whether the facts were jurisdictional or otherwise. But there was no trial. Instead of insisting that the allegations of the petition be proved, the claimant expressly waived proof of them, thereby consenting that they be taken as true. As they were pleaded to, the effect that the injury was without the privity or knowledge of the owner, there was no defect in the jurisdiction at that point."

Averment of claim in excess of value of vessel.—It is not necessary to aver or prove that claims against the vessel are in excess of her value as a condition of the jurisdiction of the District Court to entertain a proceeding for limitation of liability. The Garden City, (S. D. N. Y. 1886) 26 Fed. 768.

Recovery of loss within value of vessel.—The fact that loss within the value of the vessel is recovered does not oust the District Court of jurisdiction of the proceeding to limit liability when the claim made was much greater than her value, and there may also be other claims thereafter presented. Briggs v. Day, (S. D. N. Y. 1884) 21 Fed. 727.

b. In Which District

The rules of the Supreme Court require the owner to commence his proceedings for limited liability where the libel has been filed or suit brought against the owners, and provide that if no libel has been filed or suit brought, then he may present his petition to the District Court of the district where the vessel is. If suit has been brought in a District Court other than that of the district where the vessel is, then he must resort to that district; but if different suits are brought in different districts, then he has his election either to go into any district where a libel has been filed or suit brought, or he may go into the district where the vessel then is. Likewise, if suit is brought in a state court, he has the right to bring his petition before a District Court of the United States where the vessel is. The Enterprise, (W. D. Pa., 1912) 196 Fed. 404.

Under admiralty rule 57, 9 S. Ct. iii, where the owner of a vessel has been sued on a claim for damages against which he is entitled to a limitation of his liability under the statute, but the vessel has not been libeled, a proceeding for limitation of liability may be brought either in the District Court of the district in which the owner has been sued or in that of the district in which the vessel may be, and an allegation in the petition that the vessel is within the district gives the court jurisdiction. The John K. Gilkinson, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 150 Fed. 454.

A tug which, in pursuit of her business, was frequently within the Southern District of New York, and was there in a regular way at the time of the filing of a petition for limitation of liability by her owner, was within the district for the purpose of giving the court jurisdiction, under admiralty rule 57, although the domicile of the owner was elsewhere. The John K. Gilkinson, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 150 Fed. 866.

In the case the vessel be not libeled the proceeding for limitation of liability may be brought in the District Court in any district in which the owner is sued; the presence of the vessel within the jurisdiction of the court is not essential to jurisdiction. Gleason v. Duffy, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 293, 54 C. C. A. 100.

The District Court in which the fund or security is, and where the litigation is instituted for the recovery of claims against the owner, is the proper court in which to present the petition for limitation, if any, of the owner's liability. In re Leonhard, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 14 Fed. 53.

The District Court within whose territorial limits the stranding of a vessel occurred is the proper court in which to institute a proceeding for the limitation of the vessel owners' liability when no suit has been instituted in any other district. The Steamship John Bramall, (1879) 10 Ben. 495, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,334.

c. In Case of Single Claim

A plurality of claims is not essential to support a proceeding for limitation of liability. In White v. Island Transp. Co., (1914) 233 U. S. 346, 34 S. Ct. 589, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 993, the question arose whether there must be a plurality of claims against an owner of a vessel to entitle him to bring a proceeding under this section to limit his liability. The answer was in the negative, the court saying: "The objection that the court could not entertain the proceeding, because the petition disclosed only one claim arising out of the injury, is grounded upon the terms of §§ 4284 and 4285, which require a pro rata distribution of the value of the vessel and freight when not sufficient to satisfy all claims, authorize proceedings to obtain the benefit of the statute, make the surrender of the vessel and freight for the benefit of claimants a sufficient compliance with the statute on the part of the owner, and declare that upon such surrender all claims and proceedings against the owner shall cease. It must be conceded that these sections, if taken alone, give color to the objection, for, with a single exception, their words apparently contemplate a plurality of claims. But to a right understanding of these sections it is essential that they be read with § 4283. It contains the fundamental provision on which the others turn. It broadly declares that "the liability for the damages . . . shall be no case exceed the value of the vessel and freight. The succeeding sections are in the nature of an appendix and relate to the proceedings by which the first is to be made effective. Therefore, they should be so construed as to bring them into correspondence with it. It was so held in Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1899) 130 U. S. 527, (9 S. Ct. 612, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017), where it became necessary to consider another difference in terms between them and it. . . . In the lower federal courts there has been some contrariety of opinion upon the point now being considered, but the prevailing view has been that due regard for the broad terms and dominant force of § 4283 requires that §§ 4284 and 4285 be construed as authorizing a proceeding for limitation of liability whether there be a plurality of claims or only one. Quinlan v. Prew, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1909), 56 Fed. 111, 120, (5 U. S. App. 382, 5 C. C. A. 438); The S. A. McCaulley [E. D. Pa. 1899] 99 Fed. 302, 304; The Hoffmans, (S. D. N. Y. 1909), 171 Fed. 455, 457; Benedict's Admiralty, 4th ed. § 553. In the recent case of Richardson v. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96, (32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110), where there was but a single claim, it was assumed by both courts and counsel that a plurality of claims was not essential. We think that is the true view of the statute." To the same effect see In re Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1903) 124 Fed. 101; The Tommy, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 142 Fed. 1034; The John K. Gilkinson, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 160 Fed. 454; The Southside, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 364; The Hoffmans, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 455; The Defender, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 201 Fed. 189. For cases in the lower federal courts, supporting the opposite contention,

In The Dauntless, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 212 Fed. 255, the court said: "The statute providing for limitation of liability is designed for the protection of the shipowner, and the object of proceedings thereunder is to afford such protection by preventing recoveries in excess of the value of the vessel and freight pending and distributing such value in proper proportions where there are more claimants than one. Where there is but one claimant, however, and his claim is for much less than the amount to which the liability of the shipowner may properly be limited, there is neither danger of recovery above such amount, nor necessity for distribution among a number of claimants."

In Shipowners, etc., Tugboat Co. v. Hammond Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1914) 218 Fed. 161, 134 C. C. A. 575, the court held that where there is but a single claim and the value of the vessel largely exceeds the amount of the claim, the proceedings should be dismissed where an action had already been brought in the state court to recover judgment for the claim. The acts of Congress for limitation of liability apply only to cases where liability may be limited and except for that particular purpose it clearly was not the intention of Congress to oust the jurisdiction of other courts.

2. Nature of Proceeding

The proceeding to limit liability is not an action against the vessel and her freight, except when they are surrendered to a trustee, but is an equitable action. In re Morrison, (1893) 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 60.

3. Mode of Procedure

The proper course of procedure for obtaining the benefit of the statute would seem to be this: "When a libel for damage is filed, either against the ship in rem or the owner in personam, the latter (whether with or without an answer to the merits) should file a proper petition for an apportionment of the damages according to the statute and should pay into the court (if the vessel or its proceeds is not already there), or give due stipulation for such sum as the court may, by proper inquiry, find to be the amount of the limited liability, or else surrender the ship and freight by assigning them to a trustee in the manner pointed out in the fourth section. Having done this, the shipowner will be entitled to a monition against all persons to appear and intervene pro interesse suo, and to an order restraining the prosecution of others suits. If an action should be brought in a state court the shipowner should file a libel in admiralty, with a like surrender or deposit of the fund, and either plead the fact, in bar in the state court or procure an order from the District Court to restrain the further prosecution of the suit. The court having jurisdiction of the case, under and by virtue of the Act of Congress, would have the right to enforce its jurisdiction and to ascertain and determine the rights of the parties." Norwich, etc., Transp. Co. v. Ward, 187 Mass. 132, 91 N. E. 202 (L. ed.) 583; The Great Western, (1886) 118 U. S. 520, 6 S. Ct. 1172, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 156; Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 711, 119 C. C. A. 127.

4. Time to Invoke Statute

A vessel owner has the right to take the benefit of the limitation of liability directly in a suit brought for injuries caused by a collision but he is not bound to do so. He has the right to first contest liability for the collision in any court, state or federal, in which action therefor may be brought, including the appellate court of last resort, without raising the question of limitation, and without thereby waiving the right to take the benefit of the statute. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 230 Fed. 371, 119 C. C. A. 127.

A vessel may be surrendered under the statute allowing limitation either before or after a verdict has been obtained settling the responsibility for the accident. The Benefactor, (1881) 103 U. S. 230, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 351; The City of Boston, (11 Mass. 1906) 159 Fed. 277; The P. Sanford Ross, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 196 Fed. 921.

When the question of liability of a vessel for a collision has been determined, it is res adjudicata and is in no way involved in the application of the owners for the benefit of the limited liability act. The Maria, (D. C. N. J. 1882) 12 Fed. 630.

But the right of the shipowner to invoke the provisions of this statute, is not suspended until suits or libels have been actually instituted against him. The Alpena, (N. D. Ill 1851) 8 Fed. 284. See also The John Bramall, (1879) 10 Ben. 495, 13 Fed. Cas. No. 7,334.

The determination of the question of fault in general liability does not preclude the owners from instituting proceedings for a limited liability. The omission to take the benefit of the law in reference to a particular party does not, preclude the owners of the ship from claiming its benefit as against other parties suffering loss by the same collision. In case of the payment of a demand against a vessel before proceedings for limited liability are commenced, the court will refuse its aid in compelling the return of the money received. The Benefactor, (1881) 103 U. S. 239, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 351.

5. Consolidation of Proceedings

In The City of Boston, (D. C. Mass. 1909,) 182 Fed. 171, a motion to consolidate proceedings to limit the liability of each of two colliding vessels was denied. The court said: "Both these petitions, it is true, grow out of the same collision. The petition in this case is a damage claimant in the other. The total damage from the collision is now to be borne, one-half each, by the owners of the two vessels. Notwithstanding these facts, I am not clear that consolidation of the two cases should be ordered. No precedent for such consolidation of two petitions of this kind is found. I am not convinced that the advantages to be gained would outweigh the possible disadvantages. It seems to me that the rights of the parties can be secured as well by continuing the distinction between the two proceedings, and that no loss of time will necessarily be involved."

6. Parties

Necessary parties.—On appointment of a commissioner to take proofs on a damage claim filed in a proceeding for limitation of liability by the owner of one of two vessels in collision, after an authoritative determination by the Circuit Court of Appeals that both vessels were in fault, the owner of the other vessel, if not a party, should be brought in by notice, being liable to contribution if the claim is established and enforced. The City of Boston, (D. C. Mass. 1909,) 182 Fed. 171.

7. Notice

It is not necessary, in order to sustain a proceeding for limiting liability in case of a collision, that the injured parties should have been personally served with notice within the district in which the original libel was filed, or that the vessel in fault should have been taken and held by the court. In re Morrison, (1893) 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 60.

Where a monition and publication is made according to the rules and practice in admiralty proceedings, it becomes notice to all persons having any claims, whether they receive actual notice thereof or not, and if they fail to appear within the time designated they are liable to lose the opportunity of presenting their claims in that proceeding or in any other. Dowell v. U. S. District Ct., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 444. 71 C. C. A. 288.

8. Petition

Essentials.—The petition must state the facts and circumstances by reason of which exception from liability is claimed, even though no libel or suit for recovery is pending. The Sacramento, (E. D. Wis. 1904) 131 Fed. 373; In re Davidson Steamship Co., (E. D. Wis. 1904) 132 Fed. 411.

Sufficiency of petition.—On the question of the sufficiency of the allegations in a petition for a limitation of liability, and offering to surrender the vessel to a trustee for the benefit of a libelant and others entitled to share therein, see The Defender, (W. D. Wash. 1914) 214 Fed. 316.

Where a petition in admiralty to limit the liability of a vessel and cargo for collision, as authorized by admiralty rules 54-57, failed to state the facts and circumstances by reason of which exemption from liability was claimed, as required by rule 56, the petition was sufficient to entitle petitioner to contest the question of fault on the part of its vessel. The Sacramento, (E. D. Wis. 1904) 131 Fed. 373.

Pleading limitation of liability.—Upon a petition for limitation of liability the petitioner, while denying all liability for any damage, may nevertheless claim the benefits of the provisions providing for the limitation of the liability of shipowners if the court should find the petitioner or steamer liable. The alternative prayer of the petitioner is proper. In re Piper Aden Goodall Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 86 Fed. 670.

A petition for limitation of liability held sufficient to give the court jurisdiction as against a special plea. In re Eastern Dredging Co., (D. C. Mass. 1905) 138 Fed. 942.

9. Answer

Essentials.—The answer must be full, explicit and distinct, and this requirement is not met by a denial alone. If the party answering is uninformed in the premises, he may so state and thus raise the issue without denying; but a denial must be founded on information, and possessing that the pleader must state the facts accordingly upon information and belief. In re Davidson Steamship Co., (E. D. Wis. 1904) 133 Fed. 411; In re Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 721; The Pire Marquette 18, (E. D. Wis. 1913) 203 Fed. 127.

Sufficiency of answer.—Affirmative allegations of an answer, which seem to comingle matters going to defeat the right to limit liability with matters upon which a claim for damages may be founded, are properly subject to exception. For example, allegations that petitioner "breached and violated its duties to" claimant's intestate, which "proximately and directly caused the loss of life" and that "the sinking of the said steamer as aforesaid and the loss of life . . . proceeded directly and proximately from the fault and want of care of the petitioner, . . . and was due directly to causes within the privity and knowledge of petitioner and its said managing officers" all fail to meet that degree of fullness and particularity required not only by the admiralty but by other rules of pleading. They are not allegations of fact, but merely the ultimate conclusion of the pleader, predicated upon facts presumed to be in his possession and of which his adversary can demand disclosure. The Pere Marquette 18, (E. D. Wis. 1913) 203 Fed. 127.

Equally insufficient are allegations that the steamer was "insecure and unsalvageable and unequal to meet the perils of navigation, and was unsafely constructed so that water was likely to fill the hold of the said boat and cause it to sink, . . . and that the officers, agents, and servants carelessly and negligently failed to inspect the same and to repair;" and "that the engines, appliances, machinery and equipment" were so "defective and insufficient that the boat was caused to sink." These are mere general conclusions, apprising the petitioner of no fact showing negligent construction, unsafe condition or a breach of duty on which liability could be predicated. The Pere Marquette 18, (E. D. Wis. 1913) 203 Fed. 127.

In a proceeding by the owner of a vessel for limitation of liability, where the petition alleges generally, without fault on the part of claimant, he must allege and offer evidence to prove the same; and it is not sufficient merely to deny such allegation of the petition, but the answer should specify in what the fault consisted. In re Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1900) 173 Fed. 721.

Claimants who pleaded as a defense to a petition for limitation of liability the negligence of petitioner, because of the unseaworthiness of the vessel, but failed to comply with an order requiring them to specify the particulars, will not be permitted to give testimony as to such defense under a general denial, to controvert petitioner's prima facie case. The John H. Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 327.

Where all parties injured are represented by libelants or interveners, an answer setting up the defense of limited responsibility is fully adequate to give the shipowners all the protection they need. The Scotland, (1881) 105 U. S. 24, 26 U. S. ed. 1031.

Exceptions to answer.—The filing and bringing on for hearing of exceptions to an answer is the recognized and proper way to obtain more definite statements of the elements of any defense or answer. In re Starin, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 173 Fed. 721.

10. Evidence

Burden of proof.—The petitioner has the burden of proving the absence of its privity or knowledge, as one of the facts and circumstances on which limitations of liability is claimed, and therefore as a jurisdictional fact without sufficient proof of which, whether denied by answer or not, the authority of the court to make the degree sought is not established. Whether it makes sufficient proof of the absence of its privity or knowledge may be a question both of law and of fact. But if the claimants should offer evidence upon it of facts not specifically pleaded and it should appear that the petitioner was taken by surprise and had not a fair opportunity to meet the evidence offered, delay might prove prejudicial in order to afford him such an opportunity, and delay after the trial has once begun would be undesirable from every point of view. The Murrell, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 168 Fed. 727.

The right of the shipowner to limit its liability is dependent upon its want of complicity in the acts causing the disaster and the burden of proof rests upon him to show affirmatively that he has properly officered and equipped the vessel for the contemplated service. McGill r. Michigan Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 788, 75 C. C. A. 518, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1904) 133 Fed. 577, certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 593, 27 S. Ct. 782, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 332; In re P. Sanford Ross, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 248, 192 C. C. A. 516. See also In re H. H. Starin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 191 Fed. 506, 112 C. C. A. 286.

Effect of proof.—The proof required in support of the petition that any liability incurred was without the privity or knowledge of the petition does not reach the subsequent issue of liability, as it relates only to the personal negligence or conduct of the owners. In re Davidson Steamship Co., (E. D. Wis.) 133 Fed. 411.

Interrogatories annexed to answer.—Interrogatories annexed to an answer in a proceeding for limitation of liability, which are directed solely to the discovery of assets of the petitioner, are immaterial to the issues, and are inadmissible. In re Knickerbocker Steamboat Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 966.

Compelling answers to interrogatories. —Upon the petition of a steamship company for the purpose of limiting its liability for loss of property and life in the sinking of a steamship, interrogatories addressed to the petitioner were filed and with the answer. It was held that the mere loss of the right of the steamship company to limitation of liability under this statute, though proof of "privity" with the cause of the damage, would not be of itself such "forfeiture" as to exempt the petitioner from answering interrogatories or from compulsory testimony as a witness. The exemption can only be based upon the liability to such penalties or forfeitures as may be made the subjects of a penal or criminal proceeding. La Bourgogne, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 823.

11. Payment into Court

The time when the amount of liability should be paid into court will depend upon circumstances. If the owner sets up his claim to limited liability in his answer, and does not seek a general concurrence of creditors, it will be sufficient if the amount is paid after the trial of the cause and the ascertainment of the amount of liability in the decree. Payment and satisfaction of the decree will be a discharge of the owner as against all creditors represented in the decree. The City of Norwich, (1886) 118 U. S. 468, 6 S. Ct. 1150, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 134.

When the owners have set up a defense of limitation of liability by answer it is not necessary that they should pay the money into court or make a surrender of the vessel. The Doris Eckhoff, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 41 Fed. 156.

Under admiralty rule 23, which permits the libellant to require the defendant to answer on oath interrogatories at the close of the libel, and the provisions of the statute taken in connection with admiralty rule 54, allowing a vessel owner to take proceedings to limit liability by filing a libel or petition, it has been held that the petitioner has a right to propound interrogatories and require a damage claimant to answer them. The Murrell, (D. C. Mass. 1910) 188 Fed. 727.

12. Issues

Issues on petition and answer.—In a proceeding for limitation of liability the petition and answer on the one hand and the individual claims for damages on the other present distinct issues, which are to be separately adjudicated in the order named. In re Davidson Steamship Co., (E. D. Wis. 1904) 133 Fed. 411.

Where unseaworthiness of the vessel is pleaded by the claimants to show negligence on the part of the petitioner, and a bill of particulars is ordered, the claimants if they do not give the bill of particulars, will not be allowed to give evidence of unseaworthiness under their general denial, to rebut the prima facie case made by the petitioner. The John H. Stain, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 175 Fed. 522.

Where a claimant has filed an answer to a petition for limitation of liability and a claim for damages, the court may determine on the same proceeding the question of the petitioner's privity or knowledge and the question as to its liability for the accident. In re Eastern Dredging Co., (D. C. Mass. 1908) 159 Fed. 541.

13. Interest

Right to interest.—The allowance of interest on damages is not an absolute right. Whether it should or should not be allowed depends upon the circumstances in each case and rests very much upon the discretion of the tribunal which has to pass upon the subject, whether it be a court or a jury. The Scotland, (1886) 118 U. S. 507, 6 S. Ct. 1174, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 153.

In affirming a decree in admiralty in the Supreme Court, if interest is not expressly allowed it is not included. The Scotland, (1886) 118 U. S. 507, 6 S. Ct. 1174, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 153.

When issue is raised by answer.—Where the owner obtains an appraisement it is established that a bond to be given should bear interest as a substitute for the benefit a surrender of the vessel would be to those entitled to it; and when the shipowner resorts to an answer to establish his limitation he should not be placed in a better position than where he surrenders the vessel or gives a bond but should be required to pay interest on the value of the vessel as it was at the time of or immediately after the accident. Attorney v. Booth, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 112 Fed. 553.

Time of allowance.—Interest should be allowed from the day on which the final decree is entered in the District Court, and when the amount is insufficient to pay the principal of the claim the decree for interest was also awarded against the owner of the vessel and not against the stipulator for value. The H. F. Dimock, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1896) 77 Fed. 226, 33 U. S. App. 547, 28 C. C. A. 123. See also The Cygnet, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 742, 61 C. C. A. 548.

Where a damage claimant, in proceedings by a vessel owner for limitation of liability on account of a collision, had instituted an action in a state court, and obtained a verdict therein before the commencement of the limitation proceedings, on which she was subsequently permitted to take judgment, and which was accepted by the court of admiralty as a liquidation of her claim, she was also entitled to interest on the amount of the verdict from the time of its rendition. The City of Boston, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 182 Fed. 174.

Rate.—An agreement in a bond given for the release of a vessel to pay the value of the vessel at the time of collision "and the interest on the same as provided by law," is an agreement to pay the legal rate of interest from the date of its execution. The George W. Roby, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 601, 49 C. C. A. 481.

14. Costs

The allowance of costs in many cases is largely a matter of discretion with the court, but the general rule is that the successful party in the action is entitled to them. Where there were really two distinct and separate issues, the first relating to the owners and the benefits of the limited liability Act, and the second to the negligence and fault of the vessel in the collision, it was held that upon maintaining the first issue the owners should be allowed such costs as accrued solely upon that issue; and upon the second issue, as the vessel was found guilty, the owners of the tug should pay the costs accruing on that issue. The Leonard Richards, (D. C. N. J. 1890) 41 Fed. 818.

Costs on issuing monition.—The cost of issuing and publishing the monition should be paid out of the fund. All that the petitioner in such a case is required to pay is the expense incurred in availing himself of the Act of Congress, the cost of filing the petition and stipulation for costs and value, and the expense of appraisals, etc. Boston Marine Ins. Co. v. Metropolitan Redwood Lumber Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 703, 117 C. C. A. 97.

Costs under stipulation.—If the owner, in lieu of the transfer of the vessel, desires to give a stipulation, as the appraising is necessarily a condition precedent to giving the stipulation, he cannot get his fund into court without paying the taxable costs of the stipulation. All the expenses of administration, including the fees and other charges of the officers of the court and the fees and other charges of the commissioner, shall be paid from the bond which the stipulation represents unless, and so far as, parties have made issue. The appraising on every contest of issue should fall on the party losing, and as to this the owner stands not otherwise than any other party. The H. F. Dimock, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1896) 77 Fed. 226, 33 U. S. App. 647, 23 C. C. A. 123. See also The Cygnet, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 742, 91 C. C. A. 348.

Costs cannot be allowed against the sureties in an admiralty stipulation where it appears that the decree for damages exhausts the whole amount of the stipulation for value. Seasonable payment of the sum expressed in the instrument is all that can be required; but if the sureties neglect to fulfill the terms of the instrument and the suffering party is driven by such neglect to resort to legal measures to recover the amount to satisfy his loss, they are then, like the delinquent shipowner, liable for costs and interest occasioned by their neglect. The Wanata, (1877) 85 U. S. 600, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 461.

Laches.—When the owners have failed to assert their rights to limitation of liability until after judgment in the common-law action against them, it is only equitable that they should be required, as a condition of granting the relief demanded, in addition to the payment into court of the appraisal value of the vessel, to pay the costs awarded in the common-law action. Gleason v. Duffy, (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1902) 116 Fed. 298, 54 C. C. A. 100.

Security for costs.—Security for costs must be given by all contesting claimants unless the party is suing in forma pauperis. The Pere Marquette, 18, (E. D. Wis. 1913) 203 Fed. 127.

15. Reopening Proceeding After Decree

Where proceedings in a court of admiralty by a shipowner, for limitation of liability, have been terminated, so far as the parties before the court are concerned, by a final decree, the court has no power to reopen the proceedings for the purpose of allowing other claimants, who have not appeared therein, to come into the case and prove their claims. If for any reason the decree is not binding on such claimants, their remedy is by an independent suit. Dowell v. U. S. Dist Ct., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 444, 71 C. C. A. 288.

16. Appeal

Parties.—A proceeding for the limitation of liability is a joinder of separate and distinct causes of action, the decrees in which are several in their nature and should be treated as several in their operation even though joint in form, and an appeal may be prosecuted by one or more of the parties. The Columbia, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 226, 44 U. S. App. 326, 19 C. C. A. 438, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1895) 67 Fed. 942, 29 U. S. App. 647, 15 C. C. A. 91.

Time for taking appeal.—A decree in admiralty in proceedings for limitation of liability adjudging the rights of the parties and referring the cause to a commissioner to take testimony on claims for damages is reviewable on an appeal taken after the entry of a final decree on the commissioner's report, although the time for taking an appeal from the first decree had expired, such decree being in its nature interlocutory. La Bourgogne,
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Decisions reviewable—Jurisdiction of District Courts.—The Circuit Court of Appeals has no jurisdiction to review an appeal from the District Court and admiralty in proceedings for limitation of liability where the only question contained in the record on appeal is the question of the jurisdiction of the District Court to hear and determine the issues as to liability and to render a personal judgment or decree against the owners of the vessel. The Annie Faxon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1898) 87 Fed. 961, 59 U. S. App. 421, 31 C. C. A. 323.

Injunction.—An order granting an injunction restraining claimants from beginning actions pending the determination of the question of the right to limit liability is a final decision and therefor appealable. In re Oceanic Steam Nav. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 259, 124 C. C. A. 347.

Jurisdiction of Supreme Court.—As petitions for the limitation of liability of shipowners are admiralty cases, and the decrees of the Circuit Courts of Appeal in such cases were made final by the sixth section of the Judiciary Act of March 3, 1891, now embodied in section 128 of the Judicial Code (in JUDICIARY, vol. 5, p. 607), an appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court will not lie. Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Balfour, (1900) 179 U. S. 53, 21 S. Ct. 28, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 82.

IX. Effect of Other Statutes

The Federal Employer's Liability Act. —The Act of April 22, 1908, ch. 149, 35 Stat. L. 65 (title RAILROADS) does not by implication repeal this section in so far as it may be used to limit claims for personal injury of employees who employed on work coming within the provisions of the act. The Passaic, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 644.

Contrasted with R. S. secs. 4284 and 4285.—The provision of the Act of March 3, 1851, which is substantive in character, and sections 4284 and 4285 are adjectival or procedural. The two latter are not as broad as the former. White r. Island Transp. Co., [1914] 233 U. S. 346, 34 S. Ct. 389, 58 U. S. (L. ed.) 983. Section 4283 is negative in its terms. It merely provides that in cases covered by it the liability of the owner of the vessel shall not exceed the amount or value of his interest in the vessel and her freight then pending. It does not expressly confer on the vessel owner a right to institute a proceeding to limit his liability thereunder. But it does confer such right by implication. The basis of the implication is the circumstance that sections 4284 and 4285 authorize the vessel owner in cases of injuries to property, where there is a plurality of claimants, to institute such a proceeding. The sense of section 4283 is completed by inference from sections 4284 and 4285. It is to be gathered therefrom that it is the thought of section 4283 that the vessel owner, not only in cases covered by sections 4284 and 4285, but in all cases covered by that section—i.e., where there are injuries to person as well as to property, and where there is a single claimant, as well as where there is a plurality of claimants—may institute a proceeding to limit his liability to the value of the vessel, or to the vessel itself, as he may prefer, and her pending freight, as much so as if the same had been expressed therein; that no provision is made for a proceeding in cases where the injuries are to the person, or where there is but a single claimant, where the injuries are to property and there are several claimants, is not against the vessel owner's right to institute a proceeding in such cases; it being the thought of section 4283 that where a proceeding may be had in such case the character thereof is to be determined by analogy to the proceedings authorized in sections 4284 and 4285 in the cases covered by them. In re Louisville, etc., Packet Co., (E. D. Ky. 1915) 223 Fed. 185.

Relation to R. S. sec. 4493.—This section and R. S. sec. 4493 (in STEAM VESSELS) "stand together in the Revised Statutes, and provide for two distinct classes of liability—the one prescribing the general rule that, for damages through negligent acts done without the privity or knowledge of the owner, liability should not exceed the amount or value of the interest of such owner in the vessel and her freight then pending; the other providing that for injury occurring through the neglect or failure of the owner to comply with the provisions of title 52 of the Revised Statutes for the regulation of steam vessels, or occurring through known defects or imperfections of the steering apparatus or of the hull, there should be, as to passengers, liability to the full amount of the damage. They are statutes in pari materia, the one creating a general rule of limitation of liability, the other making exceptions in favor of passengers." The Annie Faxon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 312. 44 U. S. App. 591. 21 C. C. A. 366.

Act of Feb. 13, 1853.—As to the relation of secs. 3 and 6 of the Act of Feb. 13, 1893, infra, pp. 377, 393, to this section, see The Viola, (S. D. N. Y. 1803) 39 Fed. 632.

Act of March 3, 1851.—The provisions in section 1 of the Act of 1851 that nothing in the Act contained should prevent the parties from making such a contract as they pleased extending or limiting the liability of the shipowners, was not re-enacted in Revised Statutes, and as a portion of the section containing it is embraced in this section, the provision is repeated by force of R. S. sec. 5596 (title Statutes) The Montana, (E. D. N. Y. 1884) 22 Fed. 715.

Act of June 26, 1884.—This section and the Act of June 26, 1884, sec. 18, infra p. 368, were designed to bring the law of this country into harmony with the maritime law of most other countries in respect to the limitation of the liability of shipowners arising from the navigation of their vessels and the acts of masters, whether growing out of contract or tort. Miller v. O'Brien, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 25 Fed. 779; Force v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 767.

This section was amended by the Act approved June 26, 1884, ch. 121, 23 Stat. L. 55, infra p. 368, so as to do away with the restriction upon the character of debts and liabilities against which the limitation might be asserted. O'Brien v. Miller, (1897) 168 U. S. 287, 18 S. Ct. 140, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 469.

State Workmen's Compensation Act.—The federal limited liability statutes create no irreconcilable conflict with the Workmen's Compensation Act of California (St. 1913, p. 279) since giving them full force it would result only that the accident commission would be in duty bound to limit its award so that it would not exceed the ascertained value of the interest of the owner and the California Workmen's Compensation Act will therefore be read as though the federal statutes were embodied in it. North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1917) 163 Pac. 199.

X. WAIVER OF STATUTORY LIMITATION

Surrender of vessel.—The right to proceed for a limited liability is not waived or lost by a surrender of the vessel to the insurers. The City of Norwich, (1886) 118 U. S. 408, 6 S. Ct. 1150, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 134.

Provision in bill of lading.—The right to petition for limitation of liability is not waived by a provision in a bill of lading that the transportation shall be subject to certain specified conditions. The Hoffmans, (N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 455.

Supersedes bonds.—The giving of a supersedeas bond, in an action in personam, is not a waiver of the limited liability statute. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 711, 119 C. C. A. 127.

Sec. 4284. [General average of losses.] Whenever any such embezzlement, loss, or destruction is suffered by several freighters or owners of goods, wares, merchandise, or any property whatever, on the same voyage, and the whole value of the vessel, and her freight for the voyage, is not sufficient to make compensation to each of them, they shall receive compensation from the owner of the vessel in proportion to their respective losses; and for that purpose the freighters and owners of the property, and the owner of the vessel, or any of them, may take the appropriate proceedings in any court, for the purpose of apportioning the sum for which the owner of the vessel may be liable among the parties entitled thereto. [R. S.]

The word "owners," as it appears preceding the words "of the property," was substituted by Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 251, for the word "owner" appearing in the section as originally enacted.

See R. S. sec. 4289, infra, p. 367.

Purpose and effect of section.—The limitation of liability to the value of the ship and freight is general, and when the proceeds of the latter are insufficient to pay the entire loss, the object of R. S. sec. 4284 is mainly to prescribe a pro rata distribution amongst the parties who have sustained loss or damage. Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017.

The effect of this section is to provide a general average of loss in case the value of the vessel and freight is insufficient to make full compensation to all sustaining a loss. Monongahela River Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 711, 119 C. C. A. 127.

Scope of section.—Cases of personal injury and death.—The designation of losses and injuries in this section and R. S. sec. 4283, infra, p. 363, is imperfect, a part being mentioned representatively for the whole; these sections extend to injuries to the person as well as to injuries to property. Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017. See also The Catskill. (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 95 Fed. 706.

Where only one claim.—Where suit has been brought upon one claim and the circumstances are such as to make probable the existence of other claims arising out of the same accident, as in cases of col-
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS’ LIABILITY 361

The earnings of the voyage which a shipowner is required by the statute to surrender in order to obtain a limitation of liability for losses occurring on such voyage are those only of the particular voyage which exposed the passengers or property to risk; and where a steamship was engaged in making regular trips across the Atlantic from Havre to New York and return, discharging her passengers and cargo at each terminal port, each of the trips between such ports constitutes a voyage, within the meaning of the statute, and in proceedings for limitation of liability for claims arising out of the sinking of the ship in collision while on her way from New York to Havre the owner is not required to surrender the earnings of the preceding trip from Havre to New York. La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 139 Fed. 433, 71 C. C. A. 489, affirmed (9th Cir. Y. 1902) 117 Fed. 261, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973; The Americana, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 863.

"Freight for the voyage."—In proceedings by a French steamship company for limitation of liability for claims arising out of the sinking of one of its ships while on a voyage from New York to Havre, the "freight for the voyage" which the petitioner is required by the statute to surrender cannot be construed to include any part of an annual subsidy paid to the company by the French government, in consideration for which the company agreed to build and maintain a weekly steamship service between Havre and New York, the vessels to be built in France and to be of a character, size, speed, and equipment specified, and to use of its government in case of war or other extraordinary political circumstances, and to transport gratuitously all mails and specie for the use of the state. In such case it is impossible to determine what part of subsidy is to be considered as compensation to any vessel for transportation of the mails on a single trip. La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 139 Fed. 433, 71 C. C. A. 489, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973; The Americana, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 863.

Jurisdiction.—This section expressly allows the owner to institute appropriate proceedings in any court, that is to say, any court of competent jurisdiction, for the purpose of ascertaining among the proper parties the sum for which he is liable. R. S. sec. 425-5 provides, that it shall be deemed a sufficient compliance on his part with the requirements of the act if he shall transfer all his interest in the vessel and freight to a trustee, appointed by the court for the persons who may prove to be legally entitled thereto. Any court, therefore, which gets actual possession of the things to be transferred, and about which the concourse of claimants is to be had, is a court of competent jurisdiction to try the questions that will properly arise upon the apportionment to be made. Ex p. Slayton (1881) 105 U. S. 451, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066.

Destruction of property on land.—The District Court, as a court of admiralty, has no jurisdiction of proceedings for the limitation of the liability of the owner of a vessel for the destruction of property on land by fire caused by the steamer. "Our decision against the jurisdiction of the District Court is made without deciding whether or not the statutory limitation of liability extends to the damages sustained by the fire in question, so as to be enforceable in an appropriate court of competent jurisdiction. The decision of that question is unnecessary for the disposition of this case." Ex p. Sunnix Bros. Co., (1886) 118 U. S. 610, 7 S. Ct. 25. 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 274. See further the notes under R. S. sec. 4282, supra, p. 334.

As to jurisdiction in general under the limited liability statutes see the notes under R. S. sec. 4285, supra, p. 336.

Procedure.—Four modes are provided by which the statute may be availed of: 1. By the simple answer of the shipowner when sued; 2, by his libel or petition, offering a transfer of the ship to a trustee appointed by the court under R. S. sec. 4285: 3, by a similar libel or petition offering, instead of a transfer of the ship, a stipulation, under rule 54 of the Supreme Court in Admiralty, to pay her value as appraised under the order of the court, or a deposit in court of the amount of such appraised value; 4, by a creditor's suit for an apportionment and pro rata distribution. The H. F. Dimock. (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 52 Fed. 598, citing The Scotland, (1851) 105 U. S. 24, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001.

"Appropriate proceedings."—In construing the phrase "appropriate proceedings," as used in this section, Seaman, J., said: "With no precedents interpreting the rules as to the practice upon such issue [liability of the vessel], I am of opinion that they [the provisions of the statute] intend the appropriate judicial hearing of the controversy over liability, with the issues presented upon distinct allegations of fact for and against the claim: that claimant must state, as the fundamental requisite of apportionment and recovery for damages, the fact of the collision and the prima facie case of liability on the part of the petitioner's vessel, such liability being expressly reserved for contest; and that the petitioner becomes respondent in respect of such issue, and may either answer the claim, or make allegations by counter statements of facts, consistent with the petition, or have the averments of the petition thereupon adopted for the purpose of the issue. Unless the rules intend that the fact of collision, followed by the petition to limit liability, creates a presumption of liability which the petitioner must overcome, the contention is untenable that the claimant may rest its claim upon specification of damages sustained and averment that the injuries occurred without fault on its part. Such departure from the general doctrine cannot be upheld under my understanding of the letter or spirit of the rules." In re Davidson Steamship Co., (E. D. Wis. 1904) 133 Fed. 411.

Right to institute proceedings.—The owner of the vessel may institute proper proceedings in a court of competent jurisdiction to obtain the benefit of the limitation of liability provided for by this section and R. S. sec. 4285, infra, p. 363, without waiting for a suit to be begun against him or his vessel for the loss out of which the liability arises. Rules promulgated by the Supreme Court are not intended to prevent the owner from availing himself of any other remedy or process which the law itself entitles him to adopt, but to aid him in bringing into court those having claims against him arising from the acts of the master or crew. Ex p. Slayton, (1881) 105 U. S. 451, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1066.

Delay in bringing proceeding.—Delay for more than two years after action brought in a state court for a maritime tort will not bar a proceeding in a United States District Court by the owners of the vessel for the limitation of their liability, but the petitioners should be required to pay the costs that have accrued upon the suit in the state court, including costs in the state Supreme Court. The S. A. McCaulley, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 99 Fed. 302. See also In re The Garden City, (S. D. N. Y. 1886) 27 Fed. 234.

Parties entitled to distribution.—Not more appropriate proceeding could be taken where all the parties are before the court in admiralty, and where the owners plead their exemption under the statute, than to give a decree against them for the amount of their liability and to distribute the same amongst the parties entitled to it. If there are parties not represented in the suit who have claims for damages, it is the owners' fault for not bringing them in as might be done under the rules by pursuing the remedy pointed out in those rules. As to the actual libelants and interveners in the suit, there is no reason why the owners should not pay the sum recovered into court, nor why such amount should not be distributed pro rata among the claimants. The Scotland, (1881) 105 U. S. 24, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001.

The pro rata distribution of the funds when the amount is not sufficient to pay all claims in full relates to a distribution among those whose losses arise from the collision, and has no reference to losses of an inferior grade and quality upon the wrongdoing vessel, such as the wages of seamen. The Maria and Elizabeth, (D. C. N. J. 1882) 12 Fed. 627.

Appraisement and stipulation.—The making of the appraisement ex parte and the taking of the appraisement are at most an irregularity which the District Court may correct. In re Morrison, (1893) 147 U. S. 14, 13 S. Ct. 246, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 60. See also The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 52 Fed. 598.

It is competent for a court having had an appraisement on an ex parte application to order a reappraisement and further security upon application by any creditor showing that the previous appraisement was mistaken and inadequate, and that the duty of the appraisers had been inadequately performed. The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 52 Fed. 598.

Interest on bond.—The statute contains no provision for the giving of a bond. Under a rule of the Supreme Court an owner may elect whether he will transfer his interest to a trustee or substitute the appraised value. If the owner prefer to take the alternative offered by the rule and to substitute the appraised value of the vessel, it is left to the discretion of the court to determine whether such value should be paid into court in cash or secured by bond. In case the owner elect not to transfer, and asks to be allowed to receive his vessel upon stipulating to pay the appraised value of his interest at some future day, he should be required to stipulate for interest from the time when he thus releases his ship. In re Harris, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1893) 57 Fed. 243, 14 U. S. App. 506, 6 C. C. A. 320.

Sec. 4285. [Transfer of interest of owner to trustee.] It shall be deemed a sufficient compliance on the part of such owner with the requirements of this Title relating to his liability for any embezzlement, loss, or destruction of any property, goods, or merchandise, if he shall transfer his interest in such vessel and freight, for the benefit of such claimants, to a trustee, to be appointed by any court of competent jurisdiction, to act as such trustee for the person who may prove to be legally entitled thereto; and from and after which transfer all claims and proceedings against the owner shall cease. [R. S.]

See R. S. sec. 4289, supra, p. 336.

Measure of owner's liability.—See notes under R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 336.

Effect of proceedings.—The effect of the proceedings to limit liability as provided for in this section is to bar all claimants against the vessel or its owner in every other tribunal except the one in which such proceedings are pending. But this is true only when the petitioner shall have transferred the vessel as she was at the end of the voyage on which the liability occurred, or in lieu of such transfer shall have furnished a stipulation for the amount of her value at the end of such voyage to be ascertained by a due appraisement caused to be made by the court. The American, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 853.

Jurisdiction.—This section, in providing for the transfer to a trustee of the interest of the owner in the vessel and freight, provides only that the trustee may be appointed by any court of competent jurisdiction, leaving the question of such competency to depend on other provisions of law. Ex p. Phenix Ins. Co., (1886) 18 U. S. 610, 7 S. Ct. 25, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 274.

On the question as to whether a state court is a court of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of this section, the court in The S. A. McCasuley, (E. D. Pa. 1899) 69 Fed. 302, said: “I cannot avoid the conclusion that the Circuit Court of Appeals for the First Circuit was right in deciding (Quinlan v. Pew, [C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1893] 56 Fed. 111, [5 U. S. App. 382], 5 C. C. A. 438) that a state court does not possess the machinery fully to administer the act of Congress, even in cases where there is only one claimant. It may be (although I do not decide the point) that a state court is a 'court of competent jurisdiction' within the meaning of section 4283 of the Revised Statutes, and may therefore have power to appoint a trustee under that section. But, even if this be true, a state court has no power to appraise the vessel under rule 54 in admiralty, or to carry out the other provisions there to be found, and these provisions are now as much a part of the right as is the statutory direction concerning the appointment of a trustee.”

As to jurisdiction in general under the limited liability statutes see the notes under R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 336.

Actual or constructive transfer.—The operation of the Act in this behalf cannot be regarded as confined to cases of actual 'transfer' (which is merely allowed as a sufficient compliance with the law), but must be regarded, when we consider its reason and equity and the whole scope of its provisions, as extending to cases in which what is required and done is tantamount to such transfer; as where the value of the owners' interest is paid into court, or secured by stipulation and placed under its control, for the benefit of the parties interested." Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. (1883) 109 U. S. 578, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038. See also In re Morrison, (1893) 14, U. S. 14, 15 S. Ct. 246, 37 U. S. (L. ed.) 60.

Option to surrender vessel or to pay appraised value.—This section and R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 336, clearly give the owner of any vessel the right to personal exemption from liability for any damage occasioned by such vessel without his privity or knowledge by transferring her and her pending freight to a trustee to be appointed by a Court of Admiralty, and although admiralty rule 54, prescribing forms and procedure under said sections, permits him at his option to retain the vessel by having her appraised and paying her appraised value and pending freight into court or giving a stipulation therefor, he still has the right before an appraisement made on his petition has been accepted, or any order has been made thereon, to dismiss that part of his petition, and, instead, to ask for the appointment of a trustee to whom he may transfer the vessel and her freight. Ohio Transp. Co. v. Davidson Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1908) 145 Fed. 185, 78 C. C. A. 319, certiorari denied (1906) 203 U. S. 593, 27 S. Ct. 782, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 332.

Time of transfer.—It has been held that an owner upon a petition to limit liability, at a date long after the liability was incurred, could only be allowed where the boat had not depreciated beyond ordinary wear and tear. In other words, if the owner surrendered the boat, or desired to substitute a bond for the same the amount of the surrender must equal the fair value for the boat at the time when the liability was incurred. The Passaic, (E. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 644; The T. W. Wellington, (E. D. N. Y. 1916) 235 Fed. 798.

The vessel must be transferred as she was at the end of the voyage on which the liability accrued. The Americana, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 230 Fed. 853.

Injunction.—Power to grant an injunction exists under this section. The San Pedro, (1912) 223 U. S. 385, 32 S. Ct. 275, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 473, Ann. Cas. (1913D) 1221, wherein the court said: "The view we take of the statutory injunction declared by section 4286, and of its application to cases where the vessel has been surrendered and a stipulation entered into as provided by admiralty rule 54, as a proceeding tantamount to a transfer of the ship as authorized by section 4286, is fully supported by the leading case of Providence, etc., Steamship Co. v. Hill Mfg. Co. (1883) 109 U. S. 578, 584, 599, 600 and 604, 3 S. Ct. 379, 617, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 1038. That was a suit in a state court against the owner of a steamship to recover for goods lost by the burning of a steamer. While the suit was pending the owner filed his petition in the proper District Court for the benefit of the limited liability statute. The proceedings seem to have been conducted in accordance with admiralty rule 54, but in addition the petitioners made application, as permitted by that rule, for an order restraining the prosecution of 'all and any such suit or action by the owner in respect of claims subject to the provisions of the Act. The owner and defendant in the suit pending in the state court thereupon, by plea, set up the limited liability suit as a reason why the state court should proceed no further. This was overruled. Later the defendant therein pleaded the final decree in the liability suit as a bar to any decree in the state court against him, as owner. This, too, was disregarded and a decree rendered against the owner for the claim for damages caused by the burning of the steamer and the plaintiff's goods. This was affirmed in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts and brought here upon writ of error. After a consideration of the meaning and purpose of the Limited Liability Act of 1851 (March 3, 1851, 9 Stat. 635, c. 43) sections 4283, 4284 and 4285, Revised Statutes, and of admiralty rule 54, the court said (p. 594) : 'We have deemed it proper to examine thus fully the foundation on which these rules adopted in December, 1851, and in 1871, were based, because if those rules are valid and binding (as we deem them to be), it is hardly possible to read them in connection with the Act of 1851 without perceiving that after proceedings have been commenced in the proper district court in pursuance thereof, the prosecution pari passu of distinct suits in different courts, or even in the same court by separate claimants, against the shipowners, is, and must necessarily be, utterly repugnant to such proceedings and subversive of their object and purpose.' Later the court added (pp. 599, 600): 'Proceedings under the Act having been duly instituted in this court, it acquired full jurisdiction of the subject matter: and having taken such jurisdiction, and procured control of the vessel and freight (or their value), constituting the fund to be distributed and issued its monition to all parties to appear and present their claims, it became the duty of all courts before which any of such claims were prosecuted, upon being properly certified of the proceedings, to suspend further action upon said claims. . . . The operation of the Act in this behalf, cannot be regarded as confined to cases of actual transfer, (which is merely allowed as a sufficient compliance with the law), but must be regarded, when we consider its reason and equity and the whole scope of its provisions, as extending to cases in which what is required and done is tantamount to such transfer; as where the value of the owners’ interest is paid into court, or secured by stipulation and placed under its control, for the benefit of the parties interested.”

The provision that “all claims and proceedings against the owner shall cease” was held to be paramount to R. S. sec. 720 (re-enacted without change in section 265 of the Judicial Code, title JURISDICTION, vol. 5, p. 599), and not affected by it. In re Whitelaw, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 71 Fed. 733. And to the same effect, see in re Long Island North Shore Passenger, etc., Transp. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1881), 5 Fed. 599.

Owners of vessels, complying with the statute in proceedings for the limitation of their liability are entitled to an injunction order restraining the prosecution of suits in a state court. The Amsterdam, (S. D. N. Y. 1883) 23 Fed. 112.

“The district court, having in its control the only fund to which claimants have a right to resort for payment of their claims, and being the only court competent to administer the admiralty rule for the limitation of the liability of the owners of the vessel, it has the authority and jurisdiction, in order to prevent that administration and its decrees from being nugatory, to issue an order restraining the further prosecution of the suits in the state courts. The Tolchester, (D. C. Md. 1890) 42 Fed. 180.

In the case of In re The Providence, etc., Steamship Co., (1872) 6 Ben. 258, 20 Fed. Cas. No. 11452, the owners of a vessel destroyed by fire filed a petition for the limitation of their liability and obtained an injunction restraining the prosecution of suits which had been commenced against them in state courts by owners of the cargo. See also The H. F. Dimock, (S. D. N. Y. 1892) 52 Fed. 598; In re Humboldt Lumber Manufacturers’ Ass’n, (N. D. Cal. 1894) 60 Fed. 428, affirmed (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 73 F. 299, 44 U. S. App. 434, 10 C. C. A. 481, 46 L. R. A. 264.

A recovery in personal against the owners of the vessel is restrained upon the surrender of the vessel in proceedings under the statute. The Catskill, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 95 Fed. 700.

See further the note under the heading VII. Effect of proceedings on other actions under R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 350.

Sale by trustee.—The court has power to make an order directing the trustee to sell the vessel, where such sale is necessary to preserve the property from destruction, requires no present determination of questions that should be determined at a final hearing, and further does not affect any rights involved. The Mendota, (S. D. N. Y. 1882) 14 Fed. 358.

Costs.—Costs are within the discretion of a court of admiralty, and equity demands that where a party contests a claim for damages he ought to be mulcted only in the interest upon the funds, and in such costs as necessarily arise from that contest. Costs which but for such contest would be paid from the fund ought to remain chargeable against the fund. The Vernon, (E. D. Mich. 1884) 36 Fed. 113.

After the transfer authorized by this section has been made the owner is entitled to depart without delay. The payment into court of the appraisal value, or the giving of a stipulation in lieu thereof, takes in all respects the place of the transfer of the vessel and freight, so that after making such payment or giving such stipulation the owner is in the same manner entitled to depart without delay, except only by attending for the purpose of making good the stipulation at the proper time. Costs of issues not made by him, but accruing after he has paid in or secured the funds, cannot be taxed against him. The H. F. Dimock, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1896) 77 Fed. 226, 35 U. S. App. 647, 23 C. C. A. 193.

Mode of proceeding not exclusive.—The primary enactment providing for the limitation of liability is embodied in R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 356, and two modes for carrying out this law are there prescribed, one in R. S. sec. 4284, supra, p. 360, and the other in the text section. The failure of the shiowners to transfer interest in vessel and freight as provided for in this section, does not deprive them of the benefits of the preceding section. The Scotland, (1881) 106 U. S. 24, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 1001.

Effect of other statutes.—This section was not repealed by the Act of Feb. 4, 1887, ch. 104, 24 Stat. L. 379, known as the Hepburn Act (title InterState Com-merce, vol. 4, p. 331). The Hoffmans, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 171 Fed. 455.

Sec. 4286. [When charterer is deemed owner.] The charterer of any vessel, in case he shall man, victual, and navigate such vessel at his own expense, or by his own procurement, shall be deemed the owner of such vessel within the meaning of the provisions of this Title relating to the limitation of the liability of the owners of vessels; and such vessel, when so chartered, shall be liable in the same manner as if navigated by the owner thereof. [R. S.]

Liability of persons.—When the charterer does not man, victual, and navigate the vessel at his own expense his liability does not seem to be within the provision of this section. Smith v. Booth, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 110 Fed. 650, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 122 Fed. 626, 58 C. C. A. 479.

Owner pro hac vice.—One who sails a vessel on shares, hiring his own crew, paying and victualing them, paying half the port charges, retaining half the net freight after the charges are taken out, and paying for the general owners the other half, must be considered as the owner for the time being. Thorp v. Hammond, (1870) 12 Wall. 408, 20 U. S. (L. ed.) 419. See Somes v. White, (1876) 65 Me. 542, 20 Am. Rep. 718.

Control of vessel.—Where a charter-party transfers to the charterer the entire command, possession, and control of the vessel, the charterer is owner for the service stipulated for; but where a charter-party is merely an agreement for the use of the vessel, the general owner at the same time retaining command, possession, and control over her navigation, the charterer is a contractor for the specific service, and the responsibilities of the owner are not changed. Grimberg v. Columbia Packers' Ass'n, (1905) 47 Ore. 257, 83 Pac. 104, 114 A. S. R. 927, 8 Ann. Cas. 491.

Lien for supplies.—When the circumstances denote that the owner of the vessel is not the party for whose interest the supplies are furnished, and would not be at fault if they were not paid for, it would be inequitable that a merchant should have the right to give credit to another and assert a lien therefor, contrary to the stipulations and interests of the owner. The rule requiring the exercise of good faith is applicable in giving due construction and effect to the clause found at the end of section 4286, if that clause has a wider scope than the immediate subject matter with which the context deals. The Samuel Marshall, (E. D. Mich. 1892) 49 Fed. 754, affirmed (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 396, 6 U. S. App. 399, 4 C. C. A. 385.

Sec. 4287. [Remedies reserved.] Nothing in the five preceding sections shall be construed to take away or affect the remedy to which any party may be entitled, against the master, officers, or seamen, for or on account of any embezzlement, injury, loss, or destruction of merchandise, or property, put on board any vessel, or on account of any negligence, fraud, or other malversation of such master, officers, or seamen, respectively, nor to lessen any responsibility to which any master or seaman of any vessel may by law be liable, notwithstanding such master or seaman may be an owner or part owner of the vessel. [R. S.]

Purpose of section.—This section shows that it is the purpose of the preceding section to release the owner from some liability for the negligence and fraud of the master and other agents of the owner for which those persons are themselves liable and are to remain so. Craig v. Continental Ins. Co., (1891) 141 U. S. 838, 12 S. Ct. 97, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 886. See Walker v. Western Transp. Co., (1885) 3 Wall. 150, 18 U. S. (L. ed.) 172; The City of New York, (S. D. N. LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Sec. 4289. [Limitation of liability of owners to apply to all vessels.] The provisions of the seven preceding sections, and of section eighteen of an act entitled "An act to remove certain burdens on the American merchant marine and encourage the American foreign carrying-trade, and for other purposes," approved June twenty-sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-four, relating to the limitations of the liability of the owners of vessels, shall apply to all sea going vessels, and also to all vessels used on lakes or rivers or in inland navigation, including canal-boats, barges, and lighters. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of June 19, 1886, ch. 421, § 4, 24 Stat. L. 80. The section originally read as follows: "SEC. 4289. The provisions of this Title relating to the limitation of the liability of the owners of vessels, shall not apply to the owners of any canal-boat, barge, or lighter, or to any vessel of any description whatsoever used in river or inland navigation." Act of March 3, 1851, ch. 43, § Stat. L. 635. The section as thus originally enacted was first amended by the Act of Feb. 18, 1875, ch. 80, 18 Stat. L. 320, by substituting for the words "this title" the words "the seven preceding sections." The section 19 of the Act of June 28, 1884, ch. 121, mentioned in the text, is set out in the following paragraph of the text. "The seven preceding sections" mentioned in the text are R. S. secs. 4282-4287, given supra, pp. 334-366, and R. S. sec. 4288, given under CARRIERS, vol. 2, p. 18.

Constitutionality.—It is unnecessary to invoke the powers given to Congress to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several states in order to find authority to pass this Act. The Act was passed in amendment of the maritime law, and the power to make such amendments is coextensive with that law. The law of limited liability being part of the maritime law may be applied to navigable rivers above tide water, and to vessels engaged in the carrying trade above such river between points within the same state. In re Garnett, (1891) 141 U. S. 1, 11 S. Ct. 940, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 651, 1, law.

If the navigable waters of a state, wholly within the state and with no exterior water connections, are yet utilized under common control, management, or arrangement in connection with railroads for continuous commerce, for purposes of such commerce, they would become public water of the United States and subject to congressional control under the commerce laws of the Constitution if not under the admiralty laws. The Katie, (S. D. Ga. 1889) 40 Fed. 480.

Operation of statute.—This statute is prospective in effect and not retroactive. Chappell v. Bradshaw, (C. C. Md. 1888) 35 Fed. 923.

Scope of statute—All vessels.—By this statute the provisions of the limited liability sections are made applicable to all vessels used on lakes, rivers, or in inland navigation, including canal-boats, barges, and lighters. The Columbia, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 73 Fed. 226, 44 U. S. App. 326, 19 C. C. A. 436. See also In re The Annie Faxon, (D. C. Wash. 1895) 66 Fed. 679.

Ferry boats.—A New York corporation operating a ferry for the carriage of passengers across the East river between Manhattan and Brooklyn was held entitled to a limitation of its liability for the death of a passenger to the value of the boat on which he was such passenger and its freight. The Southside, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 155 Fed. 364.

Scows.—A scow 110 feet long, employed in carrying mud in Boston harbor and adjacent waters, or other waters subject to the jurisdiction of admiralty courts, is a "vessel" for the purposes of admiralty jurisdiction and the maritime law, and her owner may maintain proceedings for limitation of liability on account of collision. In re Eastern Dredging Co., (D. C. Mass. 1905) 138 Fed. 942.

A scow engaged in carrying stone about the harbor of New York and unloading its cargoes, and similar cargoes from other scows, at places where sea walls are being built and riprap work is being done, although she has not carried a cargo for three years but is capable of doing so, is within the protection of this section. The Sunbeam, (C. C. A 2nd Cir. 1912) 105 Fed. 468, 115 C. C. A. 370.

Small schooner.—This statute was held to include a vessel of small burden plying between the city of Charleston and points on the coast of South Carolina lying on and adjacent to bays, creeks, and estuaries penetrating the coast. The Anna, (D. C. S. C. 1891) 47 Fed. 625.

Fishing vessels.—Fishing vessels are included in this statute. Whitcomb v. Emerson, (D. C. Mass. 1892) 50 Fed. 128.

Pile driver.—A scow or barge with a pile driver erected thereon and moved about from place to place by tugs, was hold to be within the section. In re P. Sanford Ross, (E. D. N. Y. 1912) 196 Fed. 921, reversed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1913) 204 Fed. 248, 122 C. C. A. 516, on the question of privity or knowledge, without determining whether under all the circumstances the pile driver came within the limit of liability statutes.

Ship taken ashoor to be dismantled.—A steamer, which had been taken on shore by her owners for the purpose of being dismantled, and from which the masts and engines had been removed, so long as the dismantling process had not proceeded so far as to render her wholly incapable of being navigated as a tow or otherwise, continued to be a "vessel" within the meaning of this section, and her owners could maintain proceedings for a limitation of liability for damage done by her, where she floated and went adrift in a storm without their knowledge. The C. H. Northam, (D. C. Mass. 1909) 181 Fed. 983.

Dry docks as "vessels."—Dry docks even though floating and capable of being towed, are not "vessels" within the meaning of the statute. Berton v. Tietjen, etc., Dry Dock Co., (D. C. N. J. 1916) 219 Fed. 763, wherein a variety of water craft is discussed with reference to the term "vessel" as defined in R. S. sec. 3 (title Statutes).

See further the notes Vessels included under R. S. sec. 4293, supra, p. 339.

State Workmen's Compensation Act.—The federal limited liability statutes create no irreconcilable conflict with the Workmen's Compensation Act of California (St. 1913, p. 279), since giving them full force it would result only that the Accident Commission would be in duty bound to limit its award so that it would not exceed the ascertained value of the interest of the owner, and the California Workmen's Compensation Act will, therefore, be read as though the federal statutes were embodied in it. North Pac. Steamship Co. v. Industrial Acc. Commission, (Cal. 1917) 163 Pac. 199.

SEC. 18. [Liability of owners of vessels for debts limited.] That the individual liability of a ship-owner, shall be limited to the proportion of any or all debts and liabilities that his individual share of the vessel-bears to the whole; and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same shall not exceed the value of such vessels and freight pending: Provided, That this provision shall not affect the liability of any owner incurred previous to the passage of this act, nor prevent any claimant from joining all the owners in one action; nor shall the same apply to wages due to persons employed by said ship-owners. [23 Stat. L. 57.]

This was from an Act of June 26, 1884, ch. 121, entitled "An Act to remove certain burdens on the American Merchant Marine, and encourage American foreign carrying trade, and for other purposes.

See R. S. sec. 4299, given in the preceding paragraph of the text.

Constitutionality.—This section is constitutional. The Steam Dredge No. 6, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 222 Fed. 576.

"It is within the power of Congress to extend the admiralty jurisdiction to non-maritime torts. Counsel urges that Congress had no power to extend the admiralty jurisdiction to nonmaritime torts, and that the consideration should not be given that point as in the Richardson Case [(1911) 222 U. S. 96, 32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110], the question of the constitutionality of section 18 was not presented; but I do not think there is any doubt of constitutional power to extend the act to nonmaritime torts. I believe that a proper construction of article 3, § 8, U. S. Constitution, which provides that judicial power shall extend to all acts of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction, includes the right to Congress to vest a Court of Admiralty with jurisdiction of all injuries caused, without the privity or knowledge of the owner, by the negligence of the vessel or those having charge of her navigation." The Steam Dredge No. 6, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 222 Fed. 576.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

Construction and scope.—This section limits the owner's risk to his interest in the ship in respect to all claims arising out of the conduct of the master and the crew, whether the liability is strictly maritime or arises from a nonmaritime tort, but leaves him liable for his own fault, neglect and contracts. Richardson v. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96, 32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110, wherein the court, in construing the section, said: "We therefore conclude that the section was intended to add to the enumerated claims of the old law 'any and all debts and liabilities' not theretofore included. . . . Thus construed, the section harmonizes with the policy of limiting the owner's risk to his interest in the ship in respect of all claims arising out of the conduct of the master and crew, whether the liability be strictly maritime or from a tort nonmaritime." See also The Parallel, (W. D. Wash. 1915) 226 Fed. 966.

This statute amends R. S. sec. 4283 supra, p. 336, so as to do away with the restrictions upon the character of debts and liabilities against which the limitations may be secured. O'Brien v. Miller, (1897) 168 U. S. 287, 18 S. Ct. 140, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 460; The Steam Dredge No. 6, (S. D. N. Y. 1915) 222 Fed. 576.

"This statute seems to have been intended as explanatory of the intent of Congress in this class of legislation. It declares that the individual liability of a shipowner shall be limited to the proportion of any or all debts and liabilities that his individual share of the vessel bears to the whole; and the aggregate liabilities of all the owners of a vessel on account of the same shall not exceed the value of such vessel and freight pending. The language is somewhat vague, it is true; but it is possible that it was intended to remove all doubts of the application of the limited liability law to all cases of loss and injury caused without privity or knowledge of the owner. But it is unnecessary to decide this point in the present case." Butler v. Boston, etc., Steamship Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 527, 9 S. Ct. 612, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1017. See The Giles Loring, (D. C. Me. 1890) 48 Fed. 463; In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1898) 74 Fed. 881.

"It will be seen upon comparing this section with the Act of 1851, embraced in sections 4282-4289, inclusive, in the Revised Statutes, that while the Act of 1851 related to losses occurring to freighters by reason of fire, collision, embezzlement, the Act of 1884 limits responsibility of all shipowners for any and all debts and liabilities. This Act, whether it be an amendment to the Act of 1851 or an independent statute, cannot be construed to repeal the last section of the Act of 1851 relating to the liability of owners of barges and lighters, because it refers only to the liability of shipowners and their vessels, which must mean ships; and there are no words in it which signify that it was intended to be a repealing statute. It appears to be another section intended to take its place at the end of the Act of 1851 as that Act is given in the Revised Statutes." Chappell v. Bradshaw, (C. C. Md. 1892) 35 Fed. 923.

Losses caused by owners' negligence.—This statute does not displace the liability of the shipowners for losses caused by their own negligent acts. It does not purport to repeal any pre-existing law, but is legislation in pari materia with the Act of 1851. The Republic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 109, 20 U. S. App. 561. 9 C. C. A. 386.

Death claims.—Following Richardson v. Harmon, (1911) 222 U. S. 96, 32 S. Ct. 27, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 110, the court held in The Rochester, (W. D. N. Y. 1916) 230 Fed. 519, that the owner of the steamship may limit its liability for death claims and that such claims are embraced by the words "any and all debts and liabilities" of this section.

Direct personal contracts.—This statute does not limit the liability of the owners of vessels upon their direct personal contracts outside of the ordinary business of the vessel, but only the liability cast upon them by law by reason of their ownership of the vessel through the contracts or torts of the master or others engaged in its navigation. Laverly v. Clausen, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 40 Fed. 542. See also The Amos D. Carver, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 865; Force v. Providence Washington Ins. Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 767; Miller v. O'Brien, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 33 Fed. 779; McPhail v. Williams, (D. C. Mass. 1890) 41 Fed. 61.

This section is to be construed in connection with the Act of 1851 (embodied in R. S. secs. 4282-4289, supra, pp. 334-367), and does not apply to personal contracts, so as to exempt a part owner from full liability for supplies purchased by his authority, or with his knowledge and consent. Rudolf v. Brown, (S. D. N. Y. 1905)

In Great Lakes Towing Co. v. Mill Transp. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1907) 155 Fed. 11, 83 C. C. A. 607, 22 L. R. A. (N. S.) 769, a towing company entered into a contract with the managing agent of petioner, which was the owner of certain vessels on the Great Lakes, by which it agreed to perform all towing and wrecking service required by such vessels during the season at certain stated prices. One of petitioner's vessels having stranded, the towing company was called on pursuant to said contract, and sent a tug with wrecking apparatus to the assistance of such vessel, where it spent several days in pumping and attempting to get her afloat, but unsuccessfully, and she was lost. It was held that the petitioner was not entitled to a limitation of liability for the services so rendered by the towing company under its contract, to the value of the salvage recovered from the wreck.

There is nothing in the statute prohibiting part owners to so contract as to become liable for the entire damage, whatever it may be. Kerry v. Pacific Marine Co., (1868) 121 Cal. 564, 54 Pac. 89, 66 A. S. R. 65.

Debts contracted for the ship—Generally.—This statute is to be treated as in pari materia with the Act of 1851 (embodied in R. S. secs. 4282-4289, supra, pp. 334-367). Like the Act of 1851, it limits the owner's liability to the value of such vessel and freight pending. In the case of debts contracted for the benefit of the ship and her owners which are known and are for a known or ascertainable amount, and of which the owners reap the benefit in the improvement of the ship and in the freights subsequently earned, the owners, having knowledge of such debts, adopt them as their own personal liabilities if the vessel is sent out upon subsequent voyages, and lose their right to limit their liability in respect to such beneficial contracts even if they were not at first personally liable therefor. Gokey v. Fort, (S. D. N. Y. 1890) 44 Fed. 966.

Coal.—The managing owner of a tug ordered coal for the use of the tug, bills for which were sent to him on the first of each month, and he made payment of the account from time to time. In an action against the owners to recover balance due, it was held that he was authorized to attend to the business of the vessel just as a ship's husband or master may be, but his acts were not the personal acts of the co-owners, and under the statute no more bound them beyond their due proportion of the indebtedness than would those of such husband or master. Warner v. Boyer, (E. D. Pa. 1896) 74 Fed. 873.

Wages.—When one of the owners becomes liable as an owner pro hac vice for wages of the master, the defense of limited liability is good as respects the other owner, but this defense under this statute does not extend to such wages, for which all are also personally liable; but as respects this liability the owner pro hac vice would be bound to indemnify the other owner. Douse v. Sargent, (S. D. N. Y. 1891) 48 Fed. 695.

Repairs.—Repairs were furnished upon the order of one of three owners, who was also the master, without the privy or knowledge of the other owners and not under any contract with them except so far as the master had implied authority to bind them as part owners for necessities. It was held that as the liability of the other two owners arose solely from their ownership of a two-thirds interest in the vessel, and not on account of their personal intervention, the liability of each was limited to one-third of the debt by virtue of this statute. Whitcomb v. Emerson, (D. C. Mass. 1892) 50 Fed. 128.

Liability of underwriters.—Underwriters to whom a vessel has been abandoned have each an interest in the property as owner to the extent of the insurance as compared with the aggregate insurance by all the underwriters, and each is liable upon that basis for all expenses, reasonable and proper, incurred after the disaster in order to save the vessel, not exceeding the value of the vessel and the freight pending; that is, within the limits of their own part. The underwriters are liable, not as partners, but each for itself, to the extent of its interest in the vessel; and the interest of each is determined by the proportion which the amount insured by it bears to the whole insurance of the vessel. Gilchrist v. Chicago Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1899) 104 Fed. 568, 44 C. C. A. 43.

Indebtedness for preceding voyages.—Vessel owners under this Act cannot avoid personal liability for indebtedness incurred on behalf of the vessel for an indefinite number of preceding voyages. The Act only covers liabilities incurred during the last voyage, allowing a reasonable time for knowledge of such liabilities within which to claim the benefit of the Act. The Puritan, (N. D. Ill. 1899) 84 Fed. 365.

R. S. sec. 4284 is supplementary to R. S. sec. 4493 (title STEAM VESSELS), is not repealed by this statute. The Annie Faxon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 75 Fed. 312, 44 U. S. App. 501, 21 C. C. A. 366.
LIMITATION OF VESSEL OWNERS' LIABILITY

An Act Relating to navigation of vessels, bills of lading, and to certain obligations, duties, and rights in connection with the carriage of property.

[Sec. 1.] [Bills of lading—clauses relieving from liability for negligence in loading, delivery, etc., prohibited.] That it shall not be lawful for the manager, agent, master, or owner of any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports to insert in any bill of lading or shipping document any clause, covenant, or agreement whereby it, he, or they shall be relieved from liability for loss or damage arising from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, stowage, custody, care, or proper delivery of any and all lawful merchandise or property committed to its or their charge. Any and all words or clauses of such import inserted in bills of lading or shipping receipts shall be null and void and of no effect. [27 Stat. L. 445.]

This was the first section of the Act known as the "Harter Act," the "Carriers' Act," or the "Bill of Lading Act."

By section 7 of this Act, infra, p. 393, the provisions of the foregoing section 1 and section 4, infra, p. 392, were not to apply to the transportation of live animals.

Scope of section.—Foreign vessels.—The words "any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports" include a foreign vessel transporting merchandise from a foreign port to a port of the United States. Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills, (1900) 170 U. S. 69, 21 S. Ct. 30, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

Vessels plying between domestic ports.—This section applies to any shipment "from ports of the United States," whether to a foreign or domestic port, and is broad enough to render void a clause of a bill of lading by which the shippers waive any lien upon the vessel for any breach thereof, where it is attempted to set up such clause as a defense to a libel in rem to recover for loss or damage to cargo arising from negligence of the carrier. The Tampico, (N. D. Cal. 1907) 161 Fed. 868.

Private carriers.—Under a contract between a lighterman company and a manufacturer, by which the company agreed to transport property of the manufacturer in New York harbor and vicinity, and for such purposes furnished it the full capacity of lighters or barges when such transportation was required, as between the parties the company was a private and not a public carrier, and a provision of the contract, by which in consideration of the making of a lower rate the shippers agreed to exempt the carrier from liability for loss or injury to cargoes from negligence, is not within the statute, but is valid and enforceable. The Maine, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 161 Fed. 401.

Purpose of statute.—This statute was designed to modify the relations previously existing between vessels and their cargoes, and has no reference to relations between owners and charterers. Lake Steam Shipping Co. v. Bacon, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 120 Fed. 819.

Liability of vessel—Proper care of cargo.—The action of the master of a vessel in permitting whale oil, which leaked from barrels, to remain in the bilges, with the object of saving it at the end of the voyage, did not pertain to the "management of the vessel," but injury to other cargo from such oil arose from "failure in proper care of the cargo." The Persians, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 396, 107 C. C. A. 416, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 150 Fed. 1019.

Negligence in stowage.—Bales of wool were taken on board a vessel and stowed on end with proper dunnage between decks, near the bow and forward of a temporary wooden bulkhead which was not tight. Sugar was stowed with proper dunnage between decks, aft of the wooden bulkhead. At that time the vessel was trimmed by the stern, and all drainage from the sugar flowing aft was carried off by the scuppers, which were sufficient for the purpose when the vessel was down by the stern or on even keel in calm weather. There was no provision for carrying off the drainage in case it ran forward. The vessel discharged her cargo at an intermediate port; when she left that port she was two feet down by the head. She continued in this trim until she took on additional cargo at the next port, where the error in trim was corrected, and she left that port loaded one foot by the stern. The wool was damaged by sugar drainage finding its way through a bulkhead and reaching the wool at the first intermediate port or between there and the next, and not afterwards. After the vessel was again trimmed by the stern at the second port none of the drainage from the sugar found its way forward. It was held that the damage in question arose from negligence in loading or stowage of the cargo, and not from fault or error in the navigation or equipment of the ship. Knott v. Botany Worsted Mills (1900) 179 U. S. 69, 21 S. Ct. 30, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 90.

Where stevedores, in loading a cargo of licorice root under the direction and control of the master, broke open a large number of the bales and stowed the root in unusual places, where it received injury, it was held that a notation, placed on the bill of lading at the insistence of the master, stating that the ship was not responsible for broken or cut bales, was void as the insertion in the bill of lading of a clause relieving the ship from liability for damages "arising from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading stowage," within the meaning of the Act, Bethel v. Mellor, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 129.

Where, during the unloading of a barge in the usual manner, which caused an uneven keel for a few hours, she sprang a leak, and the remaining cargo was damaged by water, it was held that such damage was not caused by fault or error in the management of the vessel, but from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading for which the vessel is liable. Donaldson v. J. W. Perry Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 643, 71 C. C. A. 93.

During the voyage of a steamship across the Atlantic burlap bags containing walnuts, stowed with other cargo in the hold, which was without partitions, were torn, apparently by wooden cases containing other cargo which were thrown around by the pitching of the vessel, and the walnuts were lost or damaged. The voyage was rough, but not rougher than should reasonably have been anticipated at the season. It was held that the loss was not due to perils of the sea, within the exceptions in the bills of lading, but to negligent stowage, for which the vessel was liable; due care requiring that the bags should have been kept separate from the other cargo which was likely to injure them. The Trignac. (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 169 Fed. 682.

A steamedhip was held liable for damage to a cargo of olives shipped in casks, on the ground of negligent stowage, on evidence showing that cargo of such weight was stowed on top of the casks as to flatten the staves of same, causing the brine to leak out, and consequent damage to the olives. The Sovo Maru, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 921, 102 C. C. A. 428.

The mere fact that a large quantity of coconut oil had leaked from the casks during the voyage does not show improper stowage. The Oceana, (E. D. N. Y. 1909) 171 Fed. 172; The Neidenfels, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 174 Fed. 293.

Where bottled mineral water was stored near bone meal which got hot and damaged the water it was held that the ship was liable under the Harter Act notwithstanding limitations of liability in the bill of lading, as the master was negligent. The Skipton Castle, (N. D. Cal. 1915) 223 Fed. 589.

Cargo stowed without dunnage.—A vessel is liable for damage to a cargo of coffee resulting from its having been by the master's orders stowed on the bottom of a hold without dunnage, and from a leaky water tank. Downgate Steamship Co. v. Arbuckle, (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 168 Fed. 172.

It is the duty of the owners to make due provisions to protect cargo from inundation resulting from such heavy weather as the vessel might reasonably be expected to experience, and they are liable for injury to cargo where it appears that sufficient dunnage was not laid to protect it from leakage through a leaky chain locker against which the sugar was stowed. The Palmas, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1901) 108 Fed. 87, 47 C. C. A. 230.

Employment of charterer's stevedores.—A provision of a charter-party that the master shall employ the charterer's stevedores at ports of loading, and discharge and pay them stated compensation, "the stevedores to be wholly under the direction and control of the master," does not affect the liability of the ship or owners for improper stowage. Bethel v. Mellor, etc., Co., (E. D. Pa. 1904) 131 Fed. 129.

A ship is responsible for proper stowage of her cargo, although the charter-party gave a representative of the charterer the right to select the stevedores for loading, which fact did not deprive the master of his authority to control the manner of stowage, nor affect the warranty of seaworthiness, which includes proper stowage. Knorr v. Pacific Crocking Co., (W. D. Wash. 1910) 181 Fed. 856.

Negligent failure to deliver because of improper stowage.—By this section the carrier shall not be relieved from liability from loss or damage arising from negligence in the proper stowage or proper delivery of the goods, and the owner of the vessel is liable for negligence in so stowing the goods that their delivery at an intermediate port is overlooked, resulting in their subsequent loss. Calderon v. Atlass Steamship Co., (1908) 170 U. S. 272, 18 S. Ct. 588, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1093.

When improper loading primary cause of damage.—The owner of a vessel cannot claim "due diligence" to have been used to make the ship seaworthy, under section three of this Act, where there was negligence of his employees before the vessel left.
port. The cargo should be so stowed that the vessel on leaving port is in a fit condition to encounter the ordinary sea perils likely to be met at that season of the year, and where unfitness arises from improper loading and inattention to the position of the heavy-weight cargo the driver must be considered the primary cause of all that may follow, and the owner is not relieved from liability even if the immediate cause of the damage was some indiscretion or negligent act in the "management of the ship" in an attempt to cure the list caused by such improper loading. The Oneida, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 108 Fed. 886.

Grounding of vessel while loading.—A provision of a contract for the carriage of a cargo of flour on a barge by which the shipper assumed the risks of carriage did not relieve the barge owner from liability for a loss of flour by reason of its negligence or that of its agent in failing to properly care for the barge while being loaded. Stockton Milling Co. v. California Nav., etc., (N. D. Cal. 1908) 165 Fed. 355.

Hasty and inconsiderate unloading.—Damage to cargo from the sinking of a ship after arriving in port, due to hurried and imprudent unloading, which brought the center of gravity of the ship too high for safety, does not result from "faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel," but arises from "negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading, storage, custody, care, or proper delivery" of merchandise. The Germanic, (1905) 106 U. S. 589, 25 S. Ct. 317, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 610, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521, which modified (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 107 Fed. 294.

Failure to ventilate cargo.—Failure to properly ventilate a ship, with the result that the cargo is injured by dampness, is "negligence, fault, or failure in proper care of . . . merchandise or property committed" to the owner or master of the ship within the meaning of those words as used in this section, and is not a fault or error "in navigation or in the management of the ship" within section 3 of the Act, infra, p. 377. The Jean Bart, (D. C. Cal. 1911) 197 Fed. 1002.

Jettison of cargo made necessary by the unseaworthy condition of the ship, consequent entirely upon the mode of loading, stowing, and ballasting, falls under the provisions of this section. The Whittleburn, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 89 Fed. 528.

Validity of exemptions.—Prior to this Act it was established that a common carrier by sea could not by any agreement in the bill of lading exempt himself from responsibility to the owner of the cargo for damages arising from the negligence of the master or crew of the vessel. But the responsibilities of the carrier, with respect to vessels transporting merchandise from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports, were substantially modified by this Act. The Jason, (1912) 225 U. S. 32, 32 S. Ct. 560, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 969.

Construction of exemption.—Exemptions contained in bills of lading are never construed to cover the negligence or default of the carrier unless that is expressly stipulated for. The Toronto, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 174 Fed. 632, 98 C. C. A. 356, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 168 Fed. 356.

Negligence of owner or servants.—Bills of lading cannot consistently, either with section 1 of the Harter Act or with public policy or general principles of maritime law stipulate for exemption from liability for losses resulting from the negligence of the owner or its servants. Gilchrist Transp. Co. v. Boston Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 716, 139 C. C. A. 246.

Where the owner's negligence has made the danger operative, the exception of "dangers of the sea" or "sea perils" in a bill of lading will not avail the owner, because he remains liable for that negligence as the efficient cause, or causa causans, producing the loss. The Manitoba, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 153.

Loss by theft.—General exemptions of loss of goods while at the quay, and as to loss by theft, are valid, but should be construed as restricted to cases where the carrier is not at fault for negligence or failure of due care. In an action for loss of goods on such a stipulation the jury should be instructed that the owner is entitled to the benefit of these exemptions unless upon the facts in evidence the jury should find that the negligence of the owner or agents contributed to or facilitated the theft. Steamship Co. v. Kelley, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 678, 53 C. C. A. 310.

Similarly, in The Ghaeez, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 368, 97 C. C. A. 66, it was held that an exemption in a bill of lading of liability for loss of cargo by theft did not relieve the vessel, where there was negligence on her part which contributed to or facilitated the theft. See also The Seneca, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 163 Fed. 591.

Deviation.—The clause in a bill of lading—"with liberty to sail with or without pilots, to make deviation, and to call at any intermediate port or ports for any purpose"—only authorizes such departures from the voyage as are reasonable, necessary, and contemplated, and liberates may recover for damages arising from delay in delivery, by unreasonable deterioration in the beef and loss of market, where the delay was by reason of unreasonable, unnecessary, and arbitrary deviations. If the rules of construction required the adoption of the view that the owner of the vessel might delay the delivery of goods at his pleasure, the proviso would be void under this Act. Swift v. Furness, (D. C. Mass. 1898) 87 Fed. 345.

Shortage in weight.—A ship is relieved from liability for a shortage in weight of a shipment of vegetable fibre in bales under a bill of lading containing the clause, "Not responsible for weight, nor quality, nor for loose bales," where it shows that all the bales shipped were delivered. The La Kroms, (E. D. Pa. 1905) 138 Fed. 936.

Use of lighters.—In loading a steamer with a cargo of corn in bulk, lighters were used to bring the corn across the harbor to the steamship where she was lying at her dock. One of the lighters, after being loaded, upset when 200 or 300 feet distant from the elevator, and her load of corn was lost, from which circumstance and no unusual occurrence of any sort arising, the presumption is that there was some unseaworthiness in the vessel. If the use of lighters is part of the loading, storing, custody, and care of the cargo, an exemption relieving the carrier from liability for fault or failure is forbidden by this section, and the failure to provide a fit lighter is a fault from which the vessel cannot contract for exemption. "Since the case of Bulkley v. Naumkeag Steam Cotton Co., (1860) 24 How. 396 [16 U. S. (L. ed.) 599], it has been conceded, under circumstances such as are presented in this case, that, for the purpose of that service, the lighter is the substitute of the ship, and that the goods are in fact, therefore, delivered into the custody and care of the ship and her owners from the time that they are placed on the lighter." Insurance Co. of North America v. North German Lloyd Co., (D. C. Md. 1900) 106 Fed. 973.

There can be no exemption by stipulations in the bills of lading for loss of goods by the lighters, to which the goods had been transferred, before it reached the wharf. The Seaboard, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 119 Fed. 375.

Stipulation limiting time for making claim.—A stipulation in a bill of lading for goods carried by ship, that all claims for damages against the steamship company or its stockholders must be presented within thirty days, applies to a libel against the ship itself, as well as to claims in personam against the owners, and such stipulation is not unreasonable as applied to a loss which was known to the consignors more than three weeks before the expiration of the stipulated time, since the enforcement of the stipulation in such a case would not work a manifest injustice. The Queen of the Pacific, (1901) 180 U. S. 49, 21 S. Ct. 278, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 419, reversing (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 180, 36 C. C. A. 135. See also The Niceto, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 134 Fed. 655.

Limitation of value of package.—It is competent for a steamship company as a carrier of goods to limit its liability in case of loss, even as against its own negligence, by a provision in the bills of lading that it is "not accountable for any sum exceeding $100 per package for goods of whatever description, unless the value of such be herein expressed and freight as may be agreed paid therefor," where such valuation is the basis on which freight is charged and was fully known to the shipper. Hohl v. Norddeutscher Lloyd, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 175 Fed. 544, 99 C. C. A. 168, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 160 Fed. 990.

In Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co., (1884) 112 U. S. 331, 5 S. Ct. 151, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 717, it was held to be competent for carriers of passengers or goods, by specific regulations brought distinctly to the notice of the passenger or the shipper to agree upon a rate of freight with the property, to contract with a rate of freight based on the condition that the carrier assumes liability only to the extent of the agreed valuation, even in case of loss or damage by the negligence of the carrier and that such contracts will be upheld in the lawful means of securing a due proportion between the amount for which the carrier may be responsible and the freight he receives.

In Calderon v. Atlas Steamship Co., (1898) 170 U. S. 272, 18 S. Ct. 598, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1053, it was held that where the negligence of the company is clearly proved, a stipulation in a bill of lading that the carrier "shall not be liable for" certain goods "which are above the value of $100 per package" does not mean that the carrier shall not be liable "beyond the sum or value of $100 per package," but that the carrier shall not be liable to any amount for goods exceeding in value $100 per package, and, having that meaning, is void under this Act. This decision, however, does not qualify the conclusions expressed in Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co., supra. In the Calderon v. Atlas Steamship Co. case, the pertinent clause in the bill of lading read: "It is also mutually agreed that the carrier shall not be liable for gold, silver, or for goods of any description which are above the value of $100 per package, unless bills of lading are signed therefor, with the value therein expressed, and a special agreement is made." It was held by the District Court, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 64 Fed. 574 and affirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 89 Fed. 574, 35 U. S. App. 587, 16 C. C. A. 332, that this clause should be construed as requiring the carrier to pay up to the limit ($100 per package) when no value was expressed, under the rule that a document of this sort, susceptible of two constructions, when prepared by one party, should be construed in favor of the other party. The Supreme Court, however, held that the language was not susceptible of two constructions, that there was no ambiguity about it, and that it provided that, where the goods were over the value stated.

and there was no prior declaration of value, with special agreement, the carrier should pay nothing in case of loss. Such a provision was manifestly void.

In Hart v. Pennsylvania R. Co. (1884) 112 U. S. 151, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 717, the court discussing many authorities decides that it is just to hold the shipper to his agreement, fairly made, as to value, even where the loss or injury has occurred through the negligence of the carrier; that the limitation as to value has no tendency to exempt from liability for negligence; that it does not induce want of care, but exacts from the carrier the measure of care due to the value agreed on and the carrier is bound to respond in that value for negligence.

Exemption authorized by foreign law.—Where a provision in the contract of carriage exempting the carrier from liability for the act, neglect, or default of its servants, is authorized by the law of a foreign country where the contract was entered into, and by which the contract is to be governed, and the stipulation is against the public policy of this country, it cannot be enforced by its courts. This is clearly so where both parties to the contract are citizens of the United States, and the place of completion of the contract is within this country. The Kensington. (1902) 183 U. S. 263, 22 S. Ct. 102, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 190 (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 885, 36 C. C. A. 533.

A provision in a contract of affreightment exempting a carrier by sea from liability for loss of or damages to cargo "occasioned by negligence, default, or error of judgment of the pilot, master, or mariners," may be enforced in a court of the United States where the contract was made in a country by whose laws such stipulation was legal and no part of it was performed in the United States, and where it related to the transportation of property on a foreign vessel on a voyage which did not include a port of the United States. The Fri, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 335, 83 C. C. A. 295, reversing (E. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 123, certiorari denied (1908) 210 U. S. 431, 28 S. Ct. 761, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 1135.

Evidence.—In an action to recover for damage to cargo from leakage of the vessel, evidence that directions as to the manner of loading were given the agents of the vessel by libellant, which directions were not followed, was competent. Donaldson v. J. W. Perry Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 643, 71 C. C. A. 93.

Burden of proof.—Where a cargo is shipped in good order, and is damaged while in the ship, the rule is that prima facie, the injury is attributable to the fault of the carrier. This casts upon the carrier the burden of showing that it was not at fault, or that the injury was the result of an excepted peril. When, however, the injury is proven to be attributable to an excepted peril, the burden shifts to the shipper to show that the fault consists in negligence or inattention to duty on part of the carrier. Clark v. Russwell, (1851) 12 How. 272, 13 U. S. (L. ed.) 955.

When the damage is brought within the exceptions of the bill of lading, the ship is exonerated, unless the libellant shows that notwithstanding such exception the ship is liable because of some negligence. The Dolbadarn Castle, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 222 Fed. 838, 138 C. C. A. 284, affirming (N. D. Cal. 1914) 212 Fed. 565.

Where a libel for injury to goods in shipment alleges that the injury consisted of breakage, the case is prima facie within an exception in the bill of lading against liability for loss or injury from breakage, and the burden rests on the libellant to prove that the breakage occurred through the negligence of the carrier. The Henry B. Hyde, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1898) 90 Fed. 114, 32 C. C. A. 534.

Where the damage to a cargo of jute was caused by "heat" or "heating," and the claimant relied upon the exceptions "rain," "heat" and "decay" in the bill of lading to excuse the failure of the ship to deliver all the jute received in good condition, the burden of proof was on the shipper to show that such "heat" or "heating" was caused by the negligence of the ship. The Good Hope, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1912) 197 Fed. 149, 116 C. C. A. 573, overruling on this point (S. D. N. Y. 1911) 190 Fed. 597, but affirming on the ground that although the burden of proof was on the libelants, it was fully sustained. See to the same effect The Portnevue, (S. D. N. Y. 1888) 35 Fed. 670; The Patria, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 132 Fed. 971, 66 C. C. A. 397; The Polmina, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 163 Fed. 853, 82 C. C. A. 440; The St. Quentin, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 883, 89 C. C. A. 573; The Barlow, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1909) 172 Fed. 220, 97 C. C. A. 24; The Königin Luise, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 478, 107 C. C. A. 578, The Koranna, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 214 Fed. 172; The Glenlochy, (D. C. Ore. 1915) 226 Fed. 971.

There would appear to be nothing in the opinion of the Supreme Court, in answer to the questions certified in The Polmina, (1909) 212 U. S. 354, 29 S. Ct. 363, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 546, 15 Ann. Cas. 748, which qualifies the foregoing decisions. In that case there was a disputed question of fact as to whether the damage was caused by salt water or by fresh water. When the facts came to be certified to the Supreme Court, the finding of the majority of the court below that it was caused by sea water was included and the Supreme Court held that an exception of "perils of the sea" could not avail a vessel which delivered its cargo damaged by sea water without anything to indicate in any way how the sea water reached it. In other words, when goods received in good order on board a vessel under a contract to deliver them at the termination of the voyage in like good order and condition, are damaged on the voyage, the burden of proof is on the carrier to show that the damage was occasioned by a peril for which it is not responsible, and that merely proving that the damage was done by sea water does not establish that the damage was caused by a peril of the sea, within the exception of the bill of lading, and that it is the duty of the carrier to sustain the burden of proof by showing a connection between damage by the sea water and the exception against said peril. See also The Citta Di Palermo, (E. D. N. Y. 1914) 226 Fed. 522, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1915) 226 Fed. 529, 141 C. C. A. 285, wherein it was held that proof of the fact alone that the vessel encountered very heavy weather during the voyage was not sufficient to support a finding that the damage was due to perils of the sea.

Sec. 2. [Covenants avoiding exercise of due diligence in equipping, etc., vessels prohibited.] That it shall not be lawful for any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States of America and foreign ports, her owner, master, agent, or manager, to insert in any bill of lading or shipping document any covenant or agreement whereby the obligations of the owner or owners of said vessel to exercise due diligence [to] properly equip, man, provision, and outfit said vessel, and to make said vessel seaworthy and capable of performing her intended voyage, or whereby the obligations of the master, officers, agents, or servants, to carefully handle and stow her cargo and to care for and properly deliver same, shall in any wise be lessened, weakened, or avoided. [27 Stat. L. 445.]

Purpose of section.—Section 3, infra, p. 377, must be read with this section to effectuate the purpose of the Act, and shows the intention upon the part of Congress to relax in certain respects the harshness of the previous rules of obligation upon shippers, providing the owner was using due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy in all respects, in which event neither the vessel nor the owner shall be liable, among other things, for faults in management, or for loss through inherent defect, quality, or vice of the thing carried. The Southwark, (1903) 191 U. S. 1, 24 S. Ct. 1, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

This section is the complement of section 3, which excuses the shipowner if he has exercised due diligence to make the vessel "in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied." The two sections are to be read together, both being intended to enforce the same rule of diligence in respect to the same subject matter. The Prussia, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 837, 32 C. C. A. 625.

Before the passage of this Act it was the settled law of this court that, in the absence of special contract, there was a warranty upon the part of the shipowner that the ship was seaworthy at the beginning of her voyage. The warranty was absolute and did not depend upon the knowledge or the diligence of his efforts to provide a seaworthy vessel. The Southwark, (1903) 191 U. S. 1, 24 S. Ct. 1, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

Application to passengers and baggage. — In The Kensington, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 94 Fed. 885, 36 C. C. A. 533, the court said that the provisions of the second section of this Act as to bills of lading and shipping documents do not apply to passenger tickets. The Kensington, (1902) 183 U. S. 263, 22 S. Ct. 102, 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 190, in reversing the decree and remanding the case upon other grounds, said, "whether or not the Harter Act concerns the carriage of passengers and their baggage, it becomes unnecessary to invoke any opinion as to whether the provisions of the Act in question apply to such contracts."

A notice or memorandum printed on the back of a steamship ticket purporting to limit the liability of the carrier for loss of baggage, not referred to in the body of the ticket nor called to the attention of the purchaser, is simply a notice, and forms no part of the contract. La Bourgogne, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 144 Fed. 781, 75 C. C. A. 647, affirmed (1908) 210 U. S. 95, 28 S. Ct. 664, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 973.

Application to charter-party.—The provision of this section relates to contracts between carrier and shipper, and does not apply to a charter-party by which a ship is demised. Golcar Steamship Co. v. Tweedle Trading Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 146 Fed. 563.

General duty to furnish seaworthy ship. —The provisions of this section do not deal with the general duty of the owner to furnish a seaworthy ship, but solely with his power to exempt himself from doing so by contract when the particular conditions exacted by the statute obtain. "Because the owner may, when he has used due diligence to furnish a seaworthy ship, contract against the obligation of seaworthiness, it does not at all follow that when he has made no contract to so exempt himself he nevertheless is relieved from furnishing a seaworthy ship, and is subjected only to the duty of using due diligence. To make it unlawful to insert in a contract a provision exempting from seaworthiness where due diligence has not been used, cannot by any sound rule of construction be treated as implying that where due diligence has been used, and there is no contract exempting the owner, his obligation to furnish a seaworthy vessel has ceased to exist." The Carib Prince, (1898) 170 U. S. 655, 18 S. Ct. 753, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1181.

Due diligence.—The fact of a vessel having obtained the surveyor's certificate is not evidence of due diligence of having made the vessel seaworthy. The Abbazia, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 127 Fed. 498.

This section recognizes the obligation to use due diligence to provide a seaworthy vessel and carefully to handle, stow, care for, and deliver the cargo, and makes it unlawful to insert a clause in the bill of lading whereby these obligations are avoided or weakened. The Germanic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 581.

Where it appears that a refrigerating apparatus had been constructed by builders of requisite capacity, and after it had become a part of the equipment of the steamship had been tested by competent experts in the most thorough manner and found to be perfect, and was new and had not been used long enough to impair its efficiency, a libelant cannot recover upon the theory that the owners of the vessel were negligent in providing defective refrigerating apparatus for the purposes of transportation. The Prussia, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1890) 93 Fed. 837, 35 C. C. A. 625.

Latent defects.—A bill of lading containing a clause especially addressed to restricting the liability of the carrier in respect of the transportation of dressed meat, by which the parties agreed that the carrier should not be responsible for any loss or damage to it arising from defects or insufficiencies in any part of the refrigerating apparatus, whether arising before or after the shipment, would not extend to exempt the carrier for loss or damage caused by his own negligence, but protects him against such as arises in consequence of a latent defect in the apparatus, existing without his knowledge or negligence. The Prussia, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1890) 93 Fed. 837, 35 C. C. A. 625. But see The Carib Prince, (1898) 170 U. S. 655, 18 S. Ct. 753, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1181, under section 3, infra, this page.

Master of intemperate habits.—The owners are liable for injury to cargo resulting from collision when the evidence shows that the master employed was of such intemperate habits and so addicted to intoxication as to render him wholly unfit for his position. The Guildhall, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 58 Fed. 796.

Leakage of sea water through valve.—A ship cannot by bill of lading exempt herself from liability for damage to cargo from sea water, as a peril of the sea, where such water entered because of the obstruction of a valve, due to the failure to exercise due diligence in the equipment of the ship at the beginning of the voyage. The Brilliant, (E. D. N. Y. 1905) 138 Fed. 743, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 1022, 66 C. C. A. 171.

Substituted delivery.—The provision in this section, inhibiting the insertion of any words whereby the obligation of the master "to carefully handle and stow the cargo and care for and properly deliver same shall in any wise be lessened, weakened or avoided" does not prohibit a provision in the bill of lading for substituted delivery in accordance with long established custom. Portuguese Prince, (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 209 Fed. 905, wherein the court said: "The ordinary form of words in a bill of lading, authorizing a substituted delivery long antedated the Harter Act and a substituted delivery, whether by contract or usage, has long been known to the law. The draftsman of the Harter Act is presumed to have known that there was more than one kind of delivery, or more than one method of making delivery. The obligation of the statute is not to deliver in any peculiar manner, or any one manner, or any special manner, but only to properly deliver."

S.C. 3. [Limitation of liability for negligent navigation, dangers of the sea, acts of God, etc.] That if the owner of any vessel transporting merchandise or property to or from any port in the United States of America shall exercise due diligence to make the said vessel in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, neither the vessel, her owner or owners, agent, or charterers shall become or be held responsible for damage or loss resulting from faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel nor shall the [sic] vessel, her owner or owners, charterers, agent, or master be held liable for losses arising from dangers of the sea or other navigable waters, acts of God, or public enemies, or the inherent defect, quality, or vice of the thing carried, or from insufficiency of package, or seizure under legal process, or for loss resulting from any act or omission of the shipper or owner of the goods, his agent or representative, or from saving or attempting to save life or property at sea, or from any deviation in rendering such service. I. IN GENERAL

Purpose of statute.—The purpose of the Act is, according to the interpretation given to it by the Supreme Court, to enable the owner to stipulate in contravention of the implied warranty, providing he has used due diligence, proper care, and reasonable foresight to make his vessel seaworthy and fit for the voyage undertaken. The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1910) 178 Fed. 591.

Construction of statute.—The trend of judicial decision has been to construe this Act strictly. The law has been stated as follows: "The greatest amount of litigation under the act has centered around the third section. This section does not release the owner from the duty of furnishing a seaworthy vessel at the beginning of the voyage or affect his liability for damages to the cargo arising from unseaworthiness, but only exempts him from liability for damage arising from the risks therein designated when due diligence has been used to make the vessel seaworthy." Benner Line v. Pendleton, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 217 Fed. 497, 133 C. C. A. 349.

This statute should be construed strictly so as not to extend the carrier’s exemption from liability in doubtful and uncertain cases. The Germania, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521.

In determining the effect of this statute in restricting the operation of general and well-settled principles, the proper course is to treat these principles as still existing and to limit the relief from their operation afforded by the statute to that called for by the language itself. The Irrawaddy, (1898) 171 U. S. 187, 18 S. Ct. 831, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 130.

Stipulations in a bill of lading exempting the vessel from liability for loss or injury to cargo are to be construed as operating prospectively, and not as relieving her from liability for unseaworthiness at the beginning of the voyage, unless so expressed in clear and explicit language. The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1910) 178 Fed. 591.

Effect of section as imposing new liability.—Where the evidence showed that a ship founded not because of any fault in navigation or from damage caused by the sea, but solely because of the fact that she was not seaworthy, this Act was held to have no application, the court declaring that this Act does not undertake to impose any new liability on vessel owners for sending an unseaworthy ship to sea, that liability being governed by the general rules of the maritime law. Benner Line v. Pendleton, (S. D. N. Y. 1913) 210 Fed. 47.

Scope of section —Causes for exemption.—The causes for exemption are five: 1. Fault in the navigation of the vessel; 2. Fault in the management; 3. Error in her navigation; 4. Error in her management; 5. "Danger of the seas or other navigable waters." The Manitoba, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 145.

Transportation between domestic ports.—This section governs the transportation contracts of domestic vessels between domestic ports, notwithstanding that sections 1, 2, and 4 refer solely to shipping between ports of the United States and foreign ports. The E. A. Shores, Jr., (E. D. Wis. 1898) 73 Fed. 342. See also The Nettie Quill, (S. D. Ala. 1903) 124 Fed. 667.

Vessels engaged in commerce on the Bay of San Francisco and between different ports on said bay are included in this section. The language of the statute cannot be construed otherwise than as meaning that the section shall apply to all vessels transporting merchandise to and from any port of the United States situated upon any navigable waters, inland or otherwise, over which the federal government has jurisdiction. In re Piper Aden Goodall Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 86 Fed. 670.

Contracts with charterers.— This statute does not interfere with the liberty of contract in regard to the proper fitting of the vessel for the voyage, or with any contract parties may make as respects the responsibility for the sufficiency of special fittings, or as regards other matters not within the prohibition of the Act. Hine v. New York, etc., Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 88 Fed. 920. See also The George Dumnis, (E. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 537.

Application to passengers.— Injuries to passengers, and claims for loss or damage to their personal baggage not shipped as merchandise and not paying freight, are not within the exceptions of the first clause of this section. The Rosedale, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 324, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 1021. 35 C. C. A. 167. See also The Kendusking, (1902) 183 U. S. 265, 22 S. Ct. 102. 46 U. S. (L. ed.) 190, as to the baggage of a passenger; Moses v. Hamburg American Packet Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 329; In re California Nav., etc., Co., (N. D. Cal. 1901) 110 Fed. 678.

Right to subject security funds.— When freight has been shipped on a vessel in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, and such freight is lost because of a fault or error in navigation or in the management of the vessel upon which it is carried, the shipper is not entitled to look for damages to the vessel or owner, nor to any fund in court representing such vessel and freight pending. In re California Nav., etc., Co., (N. D. Cal. 1901) 110 Fed. 678.

Combination of negligent acts.— Where a disaster is due to a combination of negligent acts, liability is established by the proof of one of these acts, and the party so charged will not be exculpated by showing that other faults for which he is not responsible contributed to produce the result. The Germanic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1. 59 C. C. A. 521.

Owner's liability.— Where the owner's negligence has made the danger operative, the exception of "danger of the sea" or "sea perils in a bill of lading will not avail the owner, because he remains liable for that negligence as the efficient cause, or causa causans, producing the loss. The Manitoba, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 145.

Though the acts of the master in attempting to cure a list of the vessel may be regarded as the immediate cause of loss, and is an act of "management of the ship," the owner is not relieved from responsibility where it appears that the essential factor in producing the damage was the unstable and unseaworthy condition of the ship, caused by improper stowage and distribution of the cargo, rendering the vessel unstable and top-heavy. The Oneida, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 108 Fed. 886.

Owner's liability to employees.— The liability of the ship and owners to employees as respects the sufficiency of equipment and appliances is not that of warranty as it is in regard to goods, but only for the exercise of due diligence, and the ship and carpenter cannot recover for injuries sustained by the breaking of a ladder when the ladder was apparently a firm and sound one and on examination would not disclose the defect of the rung. The Concord, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 58 Fed. 913.

Loss of goods in loading— delivery to vessel in open sea.— Where, in loading a cargo of mahogany logs, the ship was obliged to lie three miles off shore in the open sea, the logs being delivered in rafts, which were made fast to the ship, and bills of lading then given for the same, the vessel is not liable for losses which broke away from the rafts and were lost before they were loaded, when reasonable diligence was exercised in the loading, and the loss arose either from unusual weather conditions, making a case of perils of the sea within the exceptions in the bills of lading, or because they were insufficiently secured in the rafts through the negligence of the shipper. Munson Steamship Line v. Steiger, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 772, 69 C. C. A. 492.

"Dangers of the sea."— The phrase "dangers of the sea" has a settled meaning, and cannot be held to include a danger caused by a slight swell in the harbor caused by a passing steamer. Nord-Deutscher Lloyd v. Insurance Co. of North America, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1901) 110 Fed. 420, 40 C. C. A. 171.

If the jettison of cargo or damage therefrom is rendered necessary by or is due to any fault or breach of contract on the part of the owner or master of the vessel, the loss must be attributed to that cause, rather than to the sea peril, although that may enter into the case. Corses v. J. D. Spreekela, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378.

Damage to cargo caused by sea water which entered through a hatch during a voyage across the Atlantic by a new steamer held not due to the unseaworthiness of the vessel, any defect in the hatch covers, but to perils of the sea, for which the vessel and owners were not lia-
"Inherent defect, quality, or vice of thing carried."—A canal boat brought a cargo of hay from Quebec to New York, where it arrived in good condition. It was loaded by the consignor, and was to be unloaded by the tenants, who had become owners of the bills of lading. On arriving in New York the boat and cargo were seized by tenants under process from the state court in a suit against the consignor, and held on demurrage for some thirty days, when the suit was dismissed, and the cargo was unloaded. During such time the hay was piled up, and the hay and the hold became musty. The vessel was seaworthy, having no more leakage than was usual in that class of boats, and it was held that the injury arose from an "inherent defect, quality, or vice of the thing carried." The M. C. Currie, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 125.

Damage to a cargo of sugar shipped in bage from a Cuban port to New York held to have been due to the sweating of the cargo and ship, for which the vessel was not liable, and not to any lack of care in stowing. The Nicoet, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 134 Fed. 655.

Adverse through leakage of wood oil shipped from China to New York in ordinary barrels held not to have been due to improper stowage but to the insufficiency of the packages, for which the carrier was not liable under the terms of the bill of lading, it being shown that such oil has a tendency to shrink the barrel and cause leakage unless they are specially prepared. The Claverburn, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 147 Fed. 850.

Collision.—Liability of the vessel to other vessels with which it may come in contact was not intended to be affected by the statute. The whole object of the Act was to modify the relations previously existing between the vessel and her cargo. The Delaware, (1896) 161 U. S. 459, 16 S. Ct. 516, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 771. See also The Viola, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 59 Fed. 632; The Berkshire, (D. C. R. I. 1893) 59 Fed. 1007; The Viola, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 60 Fed. 206.

This Act concerns only the relations between the vessel and her cargo and has no relation to actions for death caused by collision with another boat. Monongahela Consol. Coal, etc., Co. v. Hurst, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 200 Fed. 711, 119 C. C. A. 127.

In a case of collision by mutual fault, resulting in the total loss of one vessel and her cargo, the provision of the statute which exempts the owner of a seaworthy vessel from responsibility for loss of or damage to cargo occurring through faults or errors of navigation or management, does not prevent the other vessel, which alone is sued by the cargo owners for the full amount of their loss, from recouping one-half the amount awarded from the half damages awarded to the owners of the lost vessel. The Chattoochee, (1890) 173 U. S. 540, 19 S. Ct. 491, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 801, affirming (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1896) 74 Fed. 899, 33 U. S. App. 510, 21 C. C. A. 162.

This statute is not to be construed as affecting the operation of the equitable rule which postpones the claims of exempts whose fault contributed to the common loss as against the claims of innocent cargo owners. The George W. Roby, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1901) 111 Fed. 601, 49 C. C. A. 481.

Personal injuries.—The liability of a ship for personal injuries to passengers and crew for deviation is not within the provision of the Act. The Hamilton, (1907) 207 U. S. 398, 28 S. Ct. 133, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 284.

This statute is limited to the regulation of the Hability of the vessel, her owners, and master to the shipper, and has no application to torts committed against other persons or their property. Homer Ramsdell Transp. Co. v. Compagnie Generale Transatlantique, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 63 Fed. 845.

Injuries to passengers, and claims for loss or damage to their personal baggage not shipped as merchandise and not paying freight are not within the application of the first clause of the third section of this Act. The Rosedale, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 324, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 1021, 35 C. C. A. 167.

Liability for deviation.—Deviation is a term of art, belonging in the main to the law of marine insurance and to be interpreted by that law; but the rule as to deviation is applicable to a shipper as well as to an insurer, and any deviation from the course of navigation which experience and usage have prescribed as the safest and most expeditious mode of proceeding from one port to another, and properly attended by no subsequent loss of or injury to either ship or cargo on the shipowner, without any reference to the question whether it had any bearing on the particular loss complained of. The Citta Di Messina, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 109 Fed. 472.

Liability in respect to the cargo is protected under this statute even if the bill of lading contained no stipulation allowing such deviation for salvage purposes. The Chinese Prince, (E. D. S. C. 1894) 61 Fed. 697. See also The Wells City, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1894) 61 Fed. 587, 26 U. S. App. 74, 16 C. C. A. 123, as to clause in bill of lading giving the vessel liberty “to tow and assist vessels in all situations.” Since the enactment of this statute the vessel is authorized to deviate for the purpose of salvage without incurring any responsibility to cargo for so doing, so that less consideration than formerly is now to be given to the value of the cargo of the salvaging vessel. The Florence, (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 65 Fed. 245, 17 C. C. A. 172.

Every vessel transporting merchandise and passengers has the right to deviate in its course so far as may be necessary to save life and property, but as soon as this duty is performed her right of deviation ceases, and it becomes her duty to pursue her regular voyage and fulfill her contracts by carrying her cargo and her passengers to their port of destination. In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881.

Delay of a vessel, even on the route prescribed by a policy or bill of lading, may amount to deviation. The Citta Di Messina, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 109 Fed. 472.

Negligence in towing.—This Act has no application to neglect in towing when tug and tow belong to distinct owners, having with each other only the relations arising under an ordinary contract for safe towing. The Murrell, (D. C. Mass. 1911) 206 Fed. 626, affirmed, Baltimore & Barges Co. v. Eastern Coal Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1912) 195 Fed. 483, 115 C. C. A. 393.

Salvage.—The value of the cargo at risk is not an element in determining what perils a salvaging vessel is obliged to encounter. The Erenza, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 124 Fed. 659.

Reduction in freight.—Where a cargo owner is allowed as damages against the vessel for loss of cargo its full value at the port of delivery, he is not entitled to a reduction in freight on account of the loss. Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 146, 109 C. C. A. 257.

General average.—If a vessel, seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, was afterwards stranded by the negligence of her master, the shipowner, who has exercised due diligence to make his vessel in all respects seaworthy, properly equipped, and supplied, has no right to general average contribution for sacrifices made and suffered by him subsequent to the stranding, in successful efforts to save the vessel, freight, and cargo. The Irrawaddy, (1898) 171 U. S. 187, 18 S. Ct. 831, 43 L. S. (L. ed.) 130.

This section is not to be construed so broadly as to entitle a vessel owner to collect a general average contribution from the cargo owners on account of expenditures incurred for the salvage of vessel and cargo after stranding through faults and negligence in navigation, and a provision in the bills of lading giving it such right is invalid. The Jason, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 414, 101 C. C. A. 628, affirmed (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 162 Fed. 56.

"While the shipowner, freed from liability by the statute, may not invoke an action for general average adjustment to obtain payment of his own losses, the cargo owner may do so; but as the statutes prevent his recovering any damages based upon the shipowner’s alleged negligence, the cargo owner may not, in the adjustment, invoke the doctrine of contributory negligence, and derive any benefit from such alleged negligence. In such case the usual rule of reciprocity of right and obligation exists, and the adjustment should be made as if there was no negligence in the case, there being none in fact on the part of the owners.” The Strathdrom, (E. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 206.

Where the owner of a vessel has been recruited to the provisions of the Act by exercising due diligence to make his vessel seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied, although she was stranded through a fault in navigation, he is entitled to have expenditures made by him for salvage of the vessel and cargo taken into a general average adjustment in a suit brought by cargo owners to enforce a general average contribution from the vessel on account of cargo jettisoned in his protection against liability, although not entitled to an affirmative decree for the recovery of any balance due him on such adjustment. The Jason, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 178 Fed. 414, 101 C. C. A. 628, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 102 Fed. 56. The cargo owner cannot, under the guise of an action for contribution in general average, recover, upon the basis of the shipowner’s constructive negligence, the portion of the damages which, upon the same alleged grounds, he could not recover in a direct action. The Strathdrom, (E. D. N. Y. 1899) 94 Fed. 206.

The rule that the owner is exempted from liability for a negligent stranding and may recover in general average for his own indemnity has no application where the owners have failed to supply the master with proper charts for the voyage, or where by particular instruction they have contributed to the imprudent navigation that resulted to the disaster. In such cases the owners themselves are in fault, and under the general rule are therefore precluded from having a general average charge for their own indemnity. Trinidad Shipping, etc., Co. v. Frame, (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 98 Fed. 528.

Although the Act relieves a shipowner from liability for the negligence of his servants in the navigation and management of the vessel, it does not, either expressly or by implication, render valid a contract which entitles him to share in a general average made necessary by such negligence, and a stipulation therefor in a bill of lading is void. New York, etc., Mail Steamship Co. v. Ansonia Clock Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 139 Fed. 894.

Sacrifice of cargo subsequent to stranding.—In The Jason, (1912) 223 U. S. 32, 32 U. S. Ct. 560, 56 U. S. (L. ed.) 980, it was held that cargo-owners under the circumstances stated therein had a right to contribution from the shipowners for sacrifices of cargo made subsequent to the stranding of the vessel, for the common benefit and safety of ship, cargo and freight. But it was also held that they could not recover contribution from the shipowner in respect of general average sacrifices of cargo, without contributing to the general average sacrifices and expenditures of the shipowner made for the same purpose.

Interest.—Interest at six per cent. per annum was allowed from the date of the decree of the District Court. The Manitoba, (1887) 122 U. S. 97, 7 S. Ct. 1158, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1095.

Costs.—In admiralty as in equity the prevailing party is generally entitled to costs; but they do not necessarily follow the decree, and are always, within the sound discretion of the court, to be allowed, withheld, or divided according to the equities of the case. The E. A. Shores, Jr., (E. D. Va. 1897) 79 Fed. 145. In a proceeding for limitation of liability, where there is an appraisal, and a stipulation for value given, the petitioner is entitled to a single docket fee, and may deduct from the fund the expenses of administration, but this may not include the cost of procuring the stipulation, nor the expense of giving the same, nor of the appraisal; each person claiming damages, and recovering the same, is entitled to a separate proctor’s fee, payable herein by the stipulators for costs, and not out of the fund. In re Excelsior Coal Co., (F. D. N. Y. 1905) 136 Fed. 271, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 724, 74 C. C. A. 56.

II. PROPERLY MANNED AND EQUIPPED

Competency of master.—Where the evidence shows that the master had been duly licensed by the United States inspector of steam vessels, it will be presumed that he was fully qualified notwithstanding it is not affirmatively shown that he was a licensed pilot, as required by R. S. sec. 4401 (title STEAM VESSELS). In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881.

“Crew”—An inspector’s certificate stated that the complement of the crew should be the master (and pilot), two mates, two engineers, and twelve crew. It was held that the “twelve crew” did not mean twelve sailors. In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 881.

Chinese sailors.—In In re Pacific Mail Steamship Co., (N. D. Cal. 1898) 126 Fed. 1020, it was held that a steamship was insufficiently manned where it appeared that the crew was mostly composed of Chinese but were competent sailors and could only receive orders through a Chinese boatswain, and the evidence showed that there was no difficulty in communicating orders to the crew in this way. Reversed (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 76, 64 C. C. A. 410, 69 L. R. A. 71, on the ground that it is the duty of the owners to provide a crew not merely competent for the ordinary duties of an uneventful voyage, but for any exigency that is likely to happen, and that calls for instant action to save the lives of passengers and crew.

Failure to maintain watch at night on vessel at pier.— Where the owner of a vessel, while in her home port, permitted all of her crew to leave for the night, except the fireman, cook, and a deck hand, and permitted them to sleep without maintaining a proper watch, and the fires to be banked so that no steam was available to work the pumps in case of an emergency, he was guilty of negligence, rendering the vessel liable for loss of cargo by the sinking of the vessel from injuries caused by an unknown person. The Valentine, (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 131 Fed. 559.

Foghorn.—The failure to provide an efficient mechanical fog horn is an omission in the proper equipment of the vessel. The Niagara, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1898) 84 Fed. 902, 55 U. S. App. 445, 28 C. C. A. 628.

III. DUE DILIGENCE

In general.—The law permits the owner to relieve himself from the rigidity of the warranty of seaworthiness, but offers nothing which lessens his obligation to exercise due diligence in all respects at the inception of the voyage. The obligation of due diligence to make the ship seaworthy is in all respects the same as before the statute, which does not establish any new rule of diligence but provides that if he furnishes seaworthy ships he is then to be relieved of responsibility for errors and faults of management when the ships are at sea and beyond the eye and control of their owner. Nord-Deutscher Lloyd v. Insurance Co. of North America, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1901) 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1. See also Grubman v. The Ontario, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 769, 53 C. C. A. 199, in which case it was found that the giving way of two rivets was caused by the violent pitching and straining of the vessel during heavy weather.

The employment of men of experience and skill to overhaul the vessel, make what repairs were found to be needed, supply and equip her for the voyage, and stow the cargo, will justify a finding that the owners exercised due diligence to make the vessel seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied in the absence of evidence of neglect or mistake on the part of the owners or their employees. The John Grey, (D. C. Wash. 1900) 99 Fed. 51.

The owner cannot claim "due diligence" to have been used to make the ship seaworthy when there is negligence of his employees, whether of the deck force, the ship's force, before the vessel leaves port. The Oneida, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 108 Fed. 886.

When the evidence shows not only the bad condition of the schooner's deck, but leaks through the deck, besides what water might have been taken in around the coamings and the waterways, there is no such evidence of due diligence on the part of the owner nor of those who represented him in the inspection and repair of the ship before sailing as to exempt the ship under the statute. The Mary L. Peters, (S. D. N. Y. 1901) 109 Fed. 919, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1898) 79 Fed. 998, 26 U. S. App. 784, 25 C. C. A. 681.

Negligence of agents.—Owners are chargeable with any neglect of their agents appointed to inspect vessels. The Flamborough, (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 89 Fed. 470.

Stranded vessel.—While the Hamburg relieved the owner of a stranded vessel from liability if he brings himself within the provisons of the Act, it does not relieve him, after such stranding, from the exercise of a reasonable degree of skill and diligence, under all the circumstances of the case, in preserving and caring for the shipper's goods. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Hudgins, (1914) 116 Va. 27, 81 S. E. 48.

Failure to close port holes.—A shipowner does not exercise due diligence within the meaning of the Act by merely furnishing proper structure and equipment, for the diligence required is diligence to make the ship in all respects seaworthy, and that means due diligence on the part of all the owner's servants in the use of the equipment before the commencement of the voyage and until it is actually commenced. The failure to close port holes before commencing the voyage necessarily creates unseaworthiness. International Nav. Co. v. Farr, etc., Mfg. Co., (1901) 181 U. S. 218, 21 S. Ct. 501, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 830.

Leaving the port holes open on sailing in consequence of insufficient care during loading, must be held, as between ship and shipper, to be the real, substantial, and efficient cause of the damage for which ship and owner are liable. The Manitoba, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 104 Fed. 158.

Worn plates.—When a vessel twenty-seven years old is proven to have been so worn in her plates, and unserviceable, the inspection could not have been such as due diligence required. The Flamborough, (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 89 Fed. 470.

Surveyors' certificates as evidence of diligence.—The fact of having obtained a surveyors certificate was not of importance. The diligence required of vessels to enable them to claim the benefit of the statute is due diligence with respect to the vessel, not in obtaining certificates. The Abbazia, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 127 Fed. 485. Affirmative proof of due diligence—Neither inference nor presumption can supply the place of affirmative proof of the due diligence required by this Act. But this principle does not oblige the court to insist on affirmative proof of what is admitted. The Murrell, (D. C. Mass. 1911) 200 Fed. 826.

IV. SEAWORTHY VESSEL

In general—Due diligence to make a vessel in all respects seaworthy within the meaning of this section is not required merely on the part of the owner himself, nor in respect to construction only, but it is also required on the part of those to whom the owner has, or that the oil, and in respect to inspection, maintenance, and repair, as well as construction. The Ninfà, (D. C. Ore. 1907) 156 Fed. 312.

To the same effect was the case of The R. P. Fitzgerald, (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1914) 212 Fed. 678, 129 C. C. A. 214. In that case it appeared a cargo of grain was damaged by a leakage of oil from a tank of kerosene in a lamp room situated directly over the cargo. Holding that the owner could not be said to have exercised due diligence in making the vessel seaworthy for such a cargo as to exempt him from liability under this Act the court said: "The third section of the Harter Act is an act of grace, giving the owner exemption from acts of carelessness in management, such as improper cleaning of the oil can, if only he shows his vessel to have been seaworthy at the inception of the voyage, and of course him from liability which he otherwise would be subjected for such negligence, if, in spite of the negligence and notwithstanding the injury resulting therefrom, his vessel is seaworthy as against such acts, or he has used reasonable diligence to make it so. The owner is not responsible for internal dangers such as the negligent handling of the oil can, but he is responsible for not providing, at the beginning of the voyage, a ship adequate to meet them. The rule is not, as claimed by counsel for respondent, that the owner is not bound to anticipate that his servants in handling or keeping the oil may leak from a defective can; but his foresight must be so comprehensive as to provide at the beginning of the voyage a ship seaworthy as against the consequences of negligence, accident, or leakage, or other errors or faults in management reasonably to be anticipated. In determining whether or not the claimant discharged in full the duty which it owed to the libelant in providing a seaworthy vessel and in caring for the cargo, the measure of that duty must be considered with reference to the conditions under which it was to be performed. Conduct reasonably prudent under one set of circumstances may be grossly negligent under another. A ship may be seaworthy for one kind of a cargo and not seaworthy for another, or may be fully equipped for one voyage and wholly unfit for another. The Southwark, (1903) 191 U. S. 1, 24 S. Ct. 1, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 65. A vessel might be fit for a voyage from Antwerp to Egermann and substantially seaworthy in equipment for a voyage from Antwerp to San Francisco; so 'due care' of a cargo of lumber would fall far short of the care required for a cargo of fresh fruit or dressed beef. The duty of the carrier is discharged only by the taking of precautions and the exercise of care, reasonably adequate for the protection of the cargo against perils which are known to exist or which by the exercise of reasonable foresight may be anticipated. Presumably the carrier's charges for transportation bear some relation both to the nature of the goods transported and the perils necessarily incident to their transportation and safe delivery." The Jean Bart, (D. C. Cal. 1911) 197 Fed. 1002.

The exemption of the owner or charterer from loss resulting "from faults or errors in navigation, or in the management of the vessel," and for certain other designated in no way implies that because the owner is thus exempted when he has been duly diligent, thereby the law has also relieved him from the duty of furnishing a seaworthy vessel. The Carib Prince, (1898) 170 U. S. 655, 18 S. Ct. 755, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1181.

This statute has not altered the obligation on which he, or the carrier to furnish a seaworthy ship at the inception of the voyage. The owner must show, since the passage of the Act as before, more than due diligence. He must show that the ship was in fact seaworthy. Insurance Co. of North America v. North German Lloyd Co., (D. C. Md. 1906) 106 Fed. 973.

The exemption from liability provided for in this section is not applicable to a ship unseaworthy at the inception of the voyage, although it appears that her owner exercised due diligence to make her in all respects seaworthy. The C. W. Elphicke, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 122 Fed. 439, 69 C. C. A. 421.

Whether the vessel was seaworthy or not is to be determined by the test whether she was reasonably fit for the contemplated voyage. If she was, it matters not that she was not impregnable to the assaults of the elements. If a vessel is reasonably sufficient for the voyage, and is lost by the peril of the sea, her owner is not responsible as a carrier for the cargo lost, upon proof that a stouter vessel would have outrived the storm. In this case it was held that the fact that a rivet was not long enough, when battened down, to completely fill the counter-sink, did not, under the circumstances of the case, render the vessel unseaworthy. The Sandfield, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1898) 92 Fed. 663, 34 C. C. A. 612.

Cargo was damaged by sea water admitted through a manhole door of a ballast tank. The tank was filled with sea water after the voyage was begun, and through the negligence of the engineers the valve was left open for seven and a half hours, though two hours were sufficient to fill the tank, so that during several hours after the tank was filled the manhole joint was subjected to the pressure of the sea. The ship's carpenter, who made the manhole joint which gave way and caused the damage, testified that he had made a good tight joint three weeks before loading and sailing, and within that time it was tested on several occasions by filling the tank. It was held that the vessel was reasonably fit to carry the cargo, and that she would have carried it safely had not the gross carelessness of her officers permitted the infusion of sea water. American Sugar Refining Co. v. Rickinson, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 188, 59 C. C. A. 604.

Private carrier.—The obligation to furnish a seaworthy vessel is not affected by the fact that the owner is a private carrier. Braker v. F. W. Jarvis Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1908) 166 Fed. 987.

Voyage charter.—There is no difference between a time charter and a voyage charter in respect to the liability of the vessel to the charterer for unseaworthiness. The Commerical Trading Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 143 Fed. 854, 74 C. C. A. 606, cecirorari de- nied (1906) 202 U. S. 622, 20 S. Ct. 767, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175.

Seaworthiness defined.—The term "seaworthy," as now construed, has relation to the fitness of the vessel for the particular service and duties of the port of loading and discharge. The Oxford, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 156 Fed. 216.

Liability for unseaworthiness.—This section, as construed by the Supreme Court, does not exempt the vessel or owner from liability for the consequences of unseaworthiness, even though due diligence was exercised to make her seaworthy. The Ninfa, (D. C. Ore. 1907) 50 Fed. 512.

Implied warranty of seaworthiness.—In every contract for the carriage of goods by sea, in the absence of agreement otherwise, there is an absolute implied warranty by the carrier that the ship is seaworthy at the time of the beginning of her voyage, and reasonably fit to encounter the ordinary perils that may be expected, and her liability for loss or injury to cargo from a breach of such warranty is not affected by the statute. The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1910) 178 Fed. 591.

Losses before commencement of voyage. —The Act applies to the vessel only after the voyage has commenced, and cannot be invoked by an owner to relieve him from liability for cargo lost while the vessel was loading, through the negligence of those in charge in permitting her to settle on the bottom and list until the deck cargo fell overboard. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 733, 108 C. C. A. 71.

Latent defects.—According to the doctrine of The Carib Prince, (1898) 170 U. S. 655, 18 S. Ct. 753, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 1181 (under section 2, supra, p. 576), a stipulation in a contract of affreightment exempting the vessel from liability for loss or damage occasioned by any latent defects in the hull of the vessel, does not extend to such as were in existence at the time of the commencement of the voyage, and the provisions of this section do not relieve the vessel notwithstanding it is satisfactorily proven that due diligence was thus exercised by the owner. The Sandfield, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1898) 92 Fed. 663, 34 C. C. A. 612.

Where a bill of lading contains no exception of liability for loss or damage from latent defects of the ship, her machinery or appliances, the owners are not entitled to the benefit of the Harter Act. The Indrapura, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 190 Fed. 711, 112 C. C. A. 351.

Injury due to stopping for repairs. —Injury to a cargo of oats shipped from Chicago to Buffalo, by stopping the vessel to repair a leak, is not a latent defect. The Ninfa, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 733, 108 C. C. A. 71.

Seaworthiness depends not only upon the vessel being staunch and fit to meet the perils of the sea, but upon its character in reference to the particular cargo to be transported, it follows that the vessel must be able to transport the cargo which it is held out as fit to carry or it is not seaworthy in that respect. The furnishing of the refrigerating apparatus in good order and repair for the purpose of safely carrying perishable cargoes, such as dressed beef, is within the obligation...

Asphalt is "lawful cargo," under a charter which includes the West Indies; and it is the duty of the owner, in order to render the vessel seaworthy, to fit her for the proper carriage of such cargo by lining, where her construction is such as to require it. Dene Shipping Co. v. Tweedie Trading Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 142 Fed. 864, 74 C. C. A. 606, certiorari denied (1906) 202 U. S. 622, 26 S. Ct. 767, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 1175.

In The William Power, (E. D. N. Y. 1904) 131 Fed. 136, damage to a cargo of hay from water was held, under the evidence, to have been due to leakage, owing to the inability of the vessel to carry the cargo for which she was chartered without straining, which rendered her unseaworthy.

Manner of stowing cargo.—Construing this clause with sections 1 and 2, supra, pp. 371, 378, it seems plain that the carrier is entitled to negligence in the loading, stowing, custody, care, handling, and delivery of the cargo, and that neither the carrier nor the vessel is liable for faults or errors in the navigation or in the management of the vessel, but in order to avail himself of this exemption he must use due diligence to provide a seaworthy vessel, properly manned and equipped. The Germanic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521.

The requirement of seaworthiness at the beginning of a voyage includes not only seaworthiness in hull and equipment, but also in the stowage of the cargo. Corsoa v. J. D. Spreckels, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 378; The Medea, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1910) 179 Fed. 781, 103 C. C. A. 273, reversing (N. D. Cal. 1909) 173 Fed. 498.

It is important, when from her improper loading she is rendered unfit to encounter the ordinary perils of navigation which could reasonably have been anticipated on the projected voyage. Steamship Wellesley Co. v. Hooper, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 183 Fed. 733, 108 C. C. A. 71.

A ship is responsible for the proper stowage of her cargo, although the charter-party gives the charterer the option of appointing the stevedores, to be paid by the owners, where it also provides that they shall be under the direction of the master and the owners responsible for all risks of loading and stowage. Corsoa v. J. D. Spreckels, etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 141 Fed. 260, 72 C. C. A. 278.

It is no excuse to the master that the charterers did the loading, insisted upon the master taking the deckload or that surveyors certified that the ship could do so safely, since it is the absolute duty of the master to see that the cargo is not stowed in such a manner as to render the vessel unseaworthy when she starts on the voyage. Allen v. U. S. Shipping Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1914) 213 Fed. 18, 129 C. C. A. 607.

It cannot be said that a vessel is in a seaworthy condition which has, at the inception of her voyage, little, if any, positive metacentric height, a list of eight or nine degrees, her cargo weight so distributed that her instability must increase as she proceeds, and the coal and water so stowed below the center of gravity as would increase the tendency to become top heavy as they were consumed. The Oneida, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 857, 63 C. C. A. 239.

Questions pertaining to the proper distribution of heavy and light cargo, or proper ballast and stowage in order to make the ship sufficiently easy and safe where the cargo is light, are not questions that devolve upon the shipper to determine, or in any way responsible for their solution. The responsibility is upon the carrier alone. When there was no such extraordinary weather or sea as might not have been reasonably anticipated, or any such weather as naturally to cause shifting and destruction of cargo in a well-loaded and ballasted ship, the primary cause of loss must be ascribed to the deficiencies in the ship's condition in that regard at the time of sailing as respects the needed loading and ballasting for the carriage of light cargo (drums of glycerine). The Frey, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 92 Fed. 867.

There was evidence that a ship having a light cargo, four feet higher in the water than an ordinary heavy cargo, in coming around Cape Horn had for twenty days very heavy seas, and shipped considerable water, with aft gales, which caused a good deal of rolling and straining so as to start the vessel back to working, which resulted in taking in considerable water. The surveyors of the insurers of cargo inspected the vessel and she was rated in the highest class; it was held that the evidence justified the conclusion not merely that the owners used all diligence to make the ship seaworthy within the terms of the statute, but that the ship was seaworthy at the time of sailing, having reference to the cargo and the contemplated voyage. The Sintram, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 64 Fed. 884.

"Teas and skins" were stowed in the same hold; the ventilator holes in the decks were plugged to provide for an expected storm; it was held that the method of stowage was bad. "The evidence shows that shipments have been made of skins in the same hold with tea without injury, but still the risk was the ship's, and even if the closing of the hole on account of storm, or anticipated storm, resulted in the

...damage, the ship can find no exonerator in such fact because the negligent stowage was the proximate cause of the loss." The Holton, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 122 Fed. 96.

Liquids and cargoes—Injury to a cargo of coffee shipped with a cargo of liquid in bulk, in a vessel which was designed to carry liquid cargoes in bulk as well as dry and perishable cargoes, cannot be charged to the unseaworthiness of the vessel, when the cause of the damage was negligence in the use of the means of safety provided by the owners. In planning a ship to carry liquids in bulk and dry cargo, valves in the offset may be relied upon to prevent the incursion of water or other liquid into the dry tanks so long as such pipe lines and valves are reasonably adapted to the double service to which the ship is designed, and a use of them is so simple, easy, and certain as to require only ordinary diligence for the protection of dry cargo. The ship cannot be held unseaworthy in construction or in stowage merely because damage may arise from inadvertent opening of the valves. The Mexican Prince, (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 82 Fed. 484, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 1003, 34 C. C. A. 168. See The Mexican Prince, (S. D. N. Y. 1895) 70 Fed. 246.

On a libel for damage to a shipment of green goatkins, evidence held to justify a finding that the injury was caused by brine leaking from citron barrels negligently stowed near the skins. Lazarus v. Barber, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 534, 68 C. C. A. 310.

As to whether battle were stowed in a proper mode, see The Tjomo, (S. D. Ala. 1902) 115 Fed. 919.

Overloading.—A barge which sank at a dock, after loading a cargo of bricks, held liable for the damage to the cargo on the ground of unseaworthiness due to overloading. The S. S. Boren, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 132 Fed. 887.

Weakness from long use.—A barge held liable in damages for dumping a large part of her cargo of copper ore which she was discharging from a steamship, and for injury to the ship, on the ground of unseaworthiness, due to weakness from long use in the same business, which caused her to careen after she had taken on her load, although the weather was calm and the water smooth. The Willie, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 134 Fed. 750.

A lighter was held to be seaworthy when it did not have sufficient stability to stand up while the weather was clear, the wind light, and the water smooth except from a slight swell caused by a passing steamer. Nord-Deutscher Lloyd v. Insurance Co. of North America, (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1901) 110 Fed. 420, 49 C. C. A. 1.

Failure to inspect vessel.—Failure to prove that the suction pipe was properly inspected within a year will not deprive the shipowner of protection where it is shown that after the commencement of the voyage it was in good condition. The Inlandri, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 914, 101 C. C. A. 194.

Failure to close steam valves.—Where it appears that steam valves were not properly closed before the steamer sailed, whereby steam was admitted to the hold and the cargo was injured, it was held that the vessel was unseaworthy and that the owners were not exempt from liability. The Manitou, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 116 Fed. 60.

Failure to protect valves in ballast tank.—Failure to protect a valve in the pipe by which water could be run into a ballast tank, also usable for cargo, so that a stick got into the valve, in consequence of which water leaked through the valve into the tank and damaged cargo stored therein, was a failure to exercise due diligence in equipment to make the ship seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, and which rendered her liable for the damage. The Brilliant, (S. D. N. Y. 1905) 138 Fed. 743, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 159 Fed. 1022, 86 C. C. A. 671.

Closing hatches.—A new steel steamer of the highest class was structurally perfect and seaworthy in all respects save one, and that was in covering of the hatches. The coamings were three feet in height and so constructed that it was impossible for water to stand on the hatches. The covers were made with straight edges, designed to fit tightly without calking, and two canvases of the best-known hatch covering were spread over them and securely battened down. Two days after leaving port the vessel was caught in a hurricane which disabled her steering gear, carried off everything movable, and produced a general straining and leakage of the ship, necessitating repairs costing $14,000. It was held that the vessel was seaworthy and that the damage to the cargo was due to the storm. The Hyades, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 58, 50 C. C. A. 424.
"It is manifest that a vessel, commencing her voyage with hatches so improperly or negligently covered that water in large quantities can find its way through them, is not seaworthy, especially when the voyage is undertaken at a season of the year when it is to be anticipated that the vessel will encounter heavy seas and that her decks will be constantly flooded." The C. W. Eiphicke, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 122 Fed. 439, 56 C. C. A. 491.

Open ports.—If a ship starts on a voyage with a port negligently left open, causing damage to cargo, her owners are liable for failing to provide a ship seaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, and are not protected by this section 3, on the ground that the fault was one in navigation or the management of the vessel, although proper appliances for closing the ports were furnished; and this rule is especially applicable where the ports were so located as to be submerged when the vessel was fully loaded. The Tenedos, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 157 Fed. 453, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 151 Fed. 1022, 82 C. C. A. 671.

Deviation in compass.—Slight deviation in a compass was held not sufficient evidence of unseaworthiness when there were two compasses, and all the direct testimony tended to show their substantial accuracy. The E. A. Shores, Jr., (E. D. Wis. 1896) 73 Fed. 342.

Defective boilers and foul hull.—In an action to recover the value of cargo burned for fuel on account of the supply of coal having become exhausted by reason of delay in the voyage, it appeared that the detention was caused by leaks in the boilers which were old and had become generally thin and weak, and the delay was also caused by the unusually foul condition of the vessel's bottom, which was covered with grass and slime below the load line, it being held that the unseaworthiness of the vessel was the cause of the delay and that the vessel was liable for the burned cargo. The Abbazia, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 127 Fed. 495.

Defective pipe from engine room to trimming tank.—The placing of the filling pipe extending from the engine room of a steamer to a trimming tank in the forepeak upon the floor of the intermediate hold, boxed in, and extending through the collision bulkhead, held not a faulty construction which rendered the vessel unseaworthy as to cargo carried in such hold, where the evidence showed that many contemporary vessels were so constructed and rated A1 by Lloyd's. But the omission to fit such pipe with a valve or stopcock within the forepeak, or where it passed from the hold, to prevent the flooding of the hold in case of a break in the pipe, rendered her as to such cargo, and liable for its injury from the flooding of the hold in consequence of the breaking of the pipe through some fault of construction. The Indrapura, (D. C. Ore. 1910) 176 Fed. 591.

Sudden leaks and defective pumps.—Proof that a vessel within a few hours after leaving port, and before encountering any peril of the sea, sprang a leak from defective butts in her bottom, and that, in addition, her steam pump was not in good working order, and broke down when put in use, raises a presumption that she was unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage, which is not rebutted by evidence merely of previous diligence, and, in the absence of a stipulation therefor in the bill of lading, the owner is not exempted from liability for damage to cargo caused by such leakage. Carolina Portland Cement Co. v. Anderson, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1911) 186 Fed. 145, 108 C. C. A. 257.

Sudden and heavy leaks when a few days out of port, when merely rolling in a calm, are inconsistent with seaworthiness; that is, a vessel in good fitness for the voyage. The Millie R. Bohannon, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 64 Fed. 883.

Sudden leak while loading.—Where a barge, being on uneven keel for a few hours, due to unloading in the usual manner, sprang a leak and the remaining cargo was damaged by water, such damage was not caused by fault or error in the management of the vessel, but from negligence, fault, or failure in proper loading within section 1, for which the vessel was liable. Donaldson v. J. W. Perry Co., (C. C. A. 4th Cir. 1905) 138 Fed. 646, 71 C. C. A. 93.

Defective feed pipe.—A cargo of grain carried by a steamer from a Lake Superior port to Buffalo was found on arrival to have been damaged by water escaping from a crack in the main feed pipe running through the cargo space between the boiler and engine, the damage was not unusual, and the vessel had an A1 rating, but had been built for eleven years, during which time the pipe had not been renewed, and had not been thoroughly inspected for more than a year, being covered with asbestos and inclosed in a box, which had not been removed in that time. Rough weather was encountered on the voyage, but not worse than was to be expected at the season. It was held that the evidence was not sufficient to sustain the burden of proof resting on the vessel to show that the damage resulted from a danger of navigation within the exception of the bill of lading, rather than from a defect in the pipe which rendered her unseaworthy at the beginning of the voyage. The Rappahannock, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 291, 107 C. C. A. 74, reversing (W. D. N. Y. 1906) 173 Fed. 829.

The minute or ounce sounding pipe for each dry tank for the detection of water in the bottom cannot be held to have contributed to the injury to the cargo where it appears that the pipe line and pumps were more than equivalent and the surrounding pipes were not required either by reasonable prudence or by any existing regulations. The Proctor, (S. D. N. Y. 1897) 82 Fed. 484, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 91 Fed. 1003, 34 C. C. A. 168.

Crack in cement lining.—When there was not sufficient evidence to show that a crack in the cement lining of an iron vessel was caused by some accident after sailing, it was held necessary for the shipowner to show such an inspection before sailing as would comply with the requirements that reasonable means or due diligence be taken or exercised. The Alvena, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 970, 51 U. S. App. 100, 25 C. C. A. 261.

Cracked beams.—The evidence showed that two beams of the main hatch had been cracked at some time previous to the voyage, and that repairs had been made and the beams strengthened by nailing slabs or planks across the cracks. The classification of the vessel had been kept up on repeated surveys and had not expired at the time the voyage was made. The evidence was held sufficient to afford presumptive evidence of seaworthiness at the time of leaving the first port and that the extraordinary weather soon after experienced, together with her subsequent voyage, was sufficient to account for the widening and increase of the cracks in the beams and for the sinking of the deck. The Guadeloupe, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 92 Fed. 670.

Effect on appeal of findings below.—The concurrent findings of the two lower courts that a vessel was inspected at the beginning of the voyage, and found to be seaworthy and fit to carry the cargo which she had undertaken to transport, will ordinarily not be disturbed by the federal Supreme Court on appeal. The Wildcroft, (1906) 201 U. S. 878, 26 S. Ct. 467, 50 U. S. (L. ed.) 794.

V. NAVIGATION OR MANAGEMENT OF SHIP

The words “navigation” and “management” of a vessel include the control during the voyage of everything with which the vessel is equipped for the purpose of protecting her and her cargo against the inroads of the seas. When portholes were furnished both with the usual glass covers and with the usual iron shutters or deadlights, and the vessel began her voyage, the weather being fair, with the iron covers left open for the purpose of lighting the compartment, it was held that if there was any neglect in not closing the iron covers of the ports for protection during rough weather it was a fault or error in navigation or in the management of the ship when no cargo was stowed against the ports so as to prevent or embarrass access to them in case change of weather should make it necessary or proper to close the iron shutters. The Silvia, (1808) 171 U. S. 462, 19 S. Ct. 7, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 241.

In a contract of hire, if the loss arose from dangers of the river or resulted from faults or errors in the navigation or in the management of the steamboat, the steamboat and her owners were not to be responsible for the damage or loss. The Nettie Quill, (S. D. Ala. 1903) 124 Fed. 667.

When the vessel was in condition to encounter the ordinary perils of the voyage, it was sufficient to make her seaworthy, and the owners are not liable because of the loss through the mistake or carelessness of the captain in attempting to enter a bay on an ebb tide, whereby, owing to the shallow water, the vessel became stranded. In re Meyer, (N. D. Cal. 1896) 74 Fed. 851.

Exemption applicable only after voyage has commenced.—This section applies to a vessel only after the voyage has commenced, and cannot be invoked by an owner to relieve him from liability for loss of cargo through the carelessness and sinking of a vessel at the pier before she was fully loaded, due to the negligence of a watchman in failing to adjust her lines to permit her to drop with the tide. Ralli v. New York, etc., Steamship Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 154 Fed. 286, 83 C. C. A. 280; Gilchrist Transp. Co. v. Boston Ins. Co., (C. C. A. 6th Cir. 1915) 223 Fed. 716, 739, 139 C. C. A. 248.

Leaving port in disregard of storm signals.—The navigation and management of a vessel includes the determination of the time and manner of leaving port, which is the prerogative of the master; and under said section, where a vessel was seaworthy and in all respects properly manned, equipped, and supplied, the owners are not liable for a loss or damage to cargo due to a peril of the seas, even though the exposure to such peril was through the fault of the master in failing to ascertain or heed the warnings of the weather bureau before starting on the voyage. Hanson v. Haywood Bros., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 7th Cir. 1907) 152 Fed. 401, 81 C. C. A. 527.

Acts for benefit of ship.—Tipping a vessel by the head while discharging cargo, for the purpose of examining her propeller, and having nothing to do with the discharge of the cargo, was an act of management of the ship. The Indrani, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1910) 177 Fed. 914, 101 C. C. A. 194.
Improper handling of cargo.—The condition of instability brought about by the improper handling, care, and custody of the cargo is not a fault in the management of the vessel. The Germanic, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521.

Jettison.—Jettison of cargo made necessary by the unsavorous condition of the ship, consequent entirely upon the mode of loading, stowing, and ballasting, is not a fault in the management of the ship. The Whittleburn, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 89 Fed. 524.

Failure of master to protect cargo.—When a vessel has encountered such severe weather as to render her decks unsavory with respect to the protection of the cargo, the failure of the master to make for a near port for the purpose of making repairs was not a fault or error in navigation or in the management of the vessel, but simply the failure of the master to proper care for the protection of the cargo in his custody. The Musselcrag, (N. D. C. 1903) 125 Fed. 736. The owner of a scow chartered by the day, with a man in charge, is liable to the charterer for loss of her cargo of stone by her careening while she lay in an exposed position at the end of a pier where she was left by a tug, through the neglect of her master to haul her into the slip, where she would have been protected, which he could have done without difficulty. Rodgers v. Bouker Contracting Co., (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 134 Fed. 702.

Allowing leaking oil to remain in bilges.—The action of the master of a vessel in permitting whale oil; which leaked from barrels, to remain in the bilges, with the object of saving it at the end of the voyage, did not pertain to the “management of the vessel.” The Persiana, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 185 Fed. 396. 107 C. C. A. 416, reversing (S. D. N. Y. 1907) 156 Fed. 1019.

Failure to close ventilators, etc., in rough weather.—“If there was any negligence in the management of the ship on the voyage in failing to cover the ventilators, or remove them and stop the tubes in rough weather, or in failing to keep the scuppers clear, the owner is exempted from liability by the Harter Act (Act Feb. 13, 1893, ch. 105, 27 Stat. L. 445) having used due diligence to make the ship seaworthy at the outset of the voyage.” The Hudson, (S. D. N. Y. 1909) 172 Fed. 1005.

Failure to keep lookout.—When the ship has a competent crew the failure to keep a lookout is part of the management of the ship for which the owners are not responsible to shippers of cargo. The Rosedale, (S. D. N. Y. 1898) 88 Fed. 324, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1899) 92 Fed. 1, 35 C. C. A. 524.

Failure to close sea valve.—Damage to a cargo of molasses, through its dilution by sea water while being pumped out at the port of destination, held to have been due to a sea valve connecting with one of the pumps having been left partially open, which was a fault in the management of the vessel, it being affirmatively shown that the valve was in good condition and that it was properly closed when the cargo was loaded and at the commencement of the voyage. Sun Co. v. Healy, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1908) 163 Fed. 48, 89 C. C. A. 300.

Failure to use pumps.—The failure to make use of the pumps is a fault of the management of the vessel, with the result that the ship is exempted from liability by the provisions of this section. The Merida, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1901) 107 Fed. 146, 46 C. C. A. 203. See also The Ontario, (S. D. N. Y. 1900) 106 Fed. 324, affirmed Grubman v. The Ontario, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1902) 115 Fed. 769, 53 C. C. A. 139.

Taking in fresh water.—Where the cargo was injured while the ship was lying at the wharf discharging her cargo, while filling the engine-room tank with fresh water from the river for ship’s purposes, by the water finding its way into the hold because the valves were improperly left open, it was held that the damage or loss resulted from fault or error in management. The Wildcroft, (E. D. Pa. 1903) 124 Fed. 631.

Omission to open sluices during a storm is an error in the management of the vessel. The Sandfield, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1898) 92 Fed. 663. 34 C. C. A. 612.

Position and method of anchoring.—For negligence of a local pilot in respect to the position assigned by him to the ship at anchor, and in not ordering over both anchors, instead of one only, the owners cannot be held responsible for injury to cargo in consequence of the grounding of the vessel upon a sand bank after dragging her anchor. The Etona, (S. D. N. Y. 1894) 64 Fed. 880.

Injury to cargo while unloading.—Damage to cargo from the sinking of a ship after arriving in port, due to hurried and imprudent loading, which brought the center of gravity of the ship too high for safety, does not result from “faults or errors in navigation or in the management of said vessel.” The Germanic, (1905) 196 U. S. 589, 25 S. Ct. 317, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 610, affirming (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1903) 124 Fed. 1, 59 C. C. A. 521.

Injury to cargo while lying at dock during winter.—Where it was shown that the vessel was in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied when the cargo was received, it was held that any injury to the cargo after the arrival at the dock, and while the vessel was moored and dismantled for the winter, arose from fault in the management of the vessel. The Richard Winslow, (E. D. Wis. 1895) 67 Fed. 259.

Repauper.—The extent of repairs necessary at a port of distress is a matter pertaining to the management of the ship.
The Guadeloupe, (S. D. N. Y. 1899) 92
Fed. 670.

A ship bound from Antwerp to San Francisco with a cargo of cement encountered such rough weather in attempting to round Cape Horn and was subjected to such strain that her deck seams opened and a part of the cargo was damaged by water. She finally abandoned the attempt and completed the voyage by way of the Cape of Good Hope and Australia.

At the time of her change of course she was 370 miles distant from Port Stanley, where she could have been repaired; but she did not put in for repairs, and before she reached Australia the cargo received further damage by reason of the open seams. Held, that the change of course and also the determination of the master to proceed without putting in for repairs were matters pertaining to the navigation and management of the vessel, and not to the custody, care, or proper delivery of the cargo, and that, assuming the

VII. BURDEN OF PROOF

Seaworthy vessel.—The burden of proof is upon the carrier to show that he has exercised due diligence to provide a vessel seaworthy and in a fit condition to receive and transport the cargo intended to be transported. The Southwark, (1903) 191
U. S. 1, 24 S. Ct. 1, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 65;
The River Meander, (S. D. N. Y. 1913)
209 Fed. 931.

The burden is upon the owner to show that the vessel was in a fit condition to transport the cargo. The Oneida, (C. C.
A. 2d Cir. 1904) 128 Fed. 687, 63 C. C. A.
239.

The burden of proving that a vessel was seaworthy at the time of beginning the voyage, or that due diligence had been used to make her so, rests upon the ship-owner claiming the benefit of the exemption against errors of management or navigation, whether or not there is any evidence to the contrary. The Wildcroft, (1906) 201 U. S. 378, 26 S. Ct. 487, 50
U. S. (L. ed.) 794; Bradley v. Lehigh
Val. R. Co., (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 153
Fed. 350, 82 C. C. A. 426, affirming (S. D.
N. Y. 1906) 145 Fed. 569; The Ninf,la, (D. C. Ore. 1907) 156 Fed. 512.

Where disaster overtakes a vessel at the beginning of her voyage, without stress of weather or other adequate cause appearing, the presumption is that she was seaworthy when the voyage de-menced, and the burden rests on the owner, to avoid liability for cargo lost or injured, to overcome such presumption by showing affirmatively that the ship was seaworthy. Steamship Welsley Co.
vs. Hooper, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 185

"The burden was clearly upon the defendant to prove that it had exercised "due diligence to make the vessel in all respects seaworthy and properly manned, equipped, and supplied" at the time of the commencement of the voyage." Levy
v. Gibson Line of Steamers, (1908) 150
Ga. 581, 61 S. E. 484.

Cause of damage in general.—Where the evidence shows that a ship received goods on board in good condition, and de-ivered them damaged, it has the burden of proving that the damage was due to a risk excepted in the bill of lading, although, if it is manifestly so, as from breakage or decay, which are excepted generally, the ship need not show the cause of the breakage or decay, but the cargo owner can only recover by proof of negligence. The Patria, (C. C. A. 2d Cir.
1904) 132 Fed. 971, 85 C. C. A. 397, affirming (S. D. N. Y. 1903) 125 Fed.
425.

A ship has the burden of explaining the cause of damage to cargo shown to have been received in good condition, to relieve itself from liability for such damage. The 935.

A decree dismissing a libel to recover for damage to cargo affirmed where the evidence left it uncertain whether the damage was caused by sea water or by sweat and heat, and the bill of lading exempted the vessel from liability for injury caused by perils of the sea or from sweat or decay. The Fomina, (C. C. A.
2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 364, 82 C. C. A.
440.

Loading of vessel.—The burden of proof is upon the owner to show that diligence was exercised in the loading of the vessel, with due regard to the exceptional model of the vessel and of what she could safely bear. The Colima, (S. D. N. Y. 1897)
82 Fed. 805.

But this rule does not obtain when the damage is brought within the exceptions of the bill of lading. In such case the ship is exonerated unless the libellant show that, notwithstanding such exceptions, the ship is liable because of the negligence of improper storage. The Del-bardom Castle, (N. D. Cal. 1914) 212
Fed. 565.

"The established rule is that where the evidence shows that the damage was occasioned by one of the causes for which the vessel was exempted from liabilin the absence of some fault, such as negligent stowage, the burden is upon the libelant to show that it might have been prevented by reasonable skill and diligence on the part of those employed by the vessel. * * * Lazarus v. Barber, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 136 Fed. 534, 69 C. C. A. 310.

Peril of navigation.—The burden of proving that a loss was caused by a peril of navigation is upon the owner of the vessel, and when it is established by clear proof, leaving no reasonable doubt for controversy, he cannot be held liable because of the alleged incompetency of the master, the incapacity of the vessel to answer her helm or the improper stowage of the cargo. Stern v. Fernandez, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1915) 229 Fed. 42, 137 C. C. A. 580.

The burden rests upon a lake carrier who, having agreed to deliver in good condition, "the dangers of navigation excepted," delivers cargo water-damaged, to show that the damage was caused by a danger of navigation. The Rappahannock, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1911) 184 Fed. 291, 107 C. C. A. 74, reefering (W. D. N. Y. 1919) 173 Fed. 829.

Damage by sea water.—A carrier by water is charged with the burden of proving that damage to a cargo from sea water was occasioned by the perils of the sea within an exception in the bill of lading against dangers and accidents of the seas. The Folmina, (1909) 212 U. S. 354, 29 S. Ct. 363, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 546, 15 Ann. Cas. 748. On certificate from the Circuit Court of Appeals, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1907) 153 Fed. 364, 82 C. C. A. 440.

Damage from excepted risk.—A vessel owner who receives goods in good condition, as evidenced by the bill of lading, and delivers them damaged, has the burden of proof to establish that the damage arose from an excepted risk. The Presque Isle, (W. D. N. Y. 1905) 140 Fed. 292.

Negligence of vessel.—Whenever damages which are attributable to causes excepted in the bill of lading are sustained in the transportation of the merchandise, the burden of proof is upon the libelant to show that the loss occurred through the negligence of the carrying vessel, as she is not permitted to exempt herself from the consequences of her negligence or lack of diligence and care in the transportation of the property. The Korranna, (S. D. N. Y. 1914) 214 Fed. 172.

Competency of master.—Gross negligence of the master at a critical time raises so strong a presumption of fact that the master was not competent as to throw the burden on the defendants to establish the proposition that they used due diligence with reference to his selection. The Cygnet, (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1903) 126 Fed. 742, 61 C. C. A. 348.

SEC. 4. [Bill of lading to be issued—contents.] That it shall be the duty of the owner or owners, masters, or agent of any vessel transporting merchandise or property from or between ports of the United States and foreign ports to issue to shippers of any lawful merchandise a bill of lading, or shipping document, stating, among other things, the marks necessary for identification, number of packages, or quantity, stating whether it be carrier's or shipper's weight, and apparent order or condition of such merchandise or property delivered to and received by the owner, master, or agent of the vessel for transportation, and such document shall be prima facie evidence of the receipt of the merchandise therein described. [37 Stat. L. 445.]

By section 7 of this Act, infra, p. 393, the provisions of the foregoing section 4 and section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 371, were not to apply to the transportation of live animals.

Passenger ticket.—A passenger ticket does not fall within the words "bill of lading or shipping document," used in this section and secs. 1 and 2, supra, pp. 371, 376. The Kensington, (1902) 183 U. S. 263, 22 S. Ct. 102, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 190.

False bill of lading.—The provision of the statute that a bill of lading should be prima facie evidence of the receipt of the merchandise therein described adds nothing to the general rule of law previously existing, and the rule previously established in the federal courts that a false bill of lading is not binding on the owner or the ship still remains the law; but if a false bill of lading is given the person giving it is liable to a fine not exceeding $2,000, and the amount of that fine is made a lien on the vessel under section 5, infra. The Isola Di Procida, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 124 Fed. 942.

Effect of charter party.—A master is not relieved from the duty of issuing a bill of lading by a provision in the charter party that the charterer should submit one. Hansen v. American Trading Co., (C. C. A. 1st Cir. 1913) 208 Fed. 884, 126 C. C. A. 44.
SEC. 5. [Penalty for violation — lien — recovery — proceeds.] That for a violation of any of the provisions of this act the agent, owner, or master of the vessel guilty of such violation, and who refuses to issue on demand the bill of lading herein provided for, shall be liable to a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars. The amount of the fine and costs for such violation shall be a lien upon the vessel, whose agent, owner, or master is guilty of such violation, and such vessel may be libeled therefor in any district court of the United States, within whose jurisdiction the vessel may be found. One-half of such penalty shall go to the party injured by such violation and the remainder to the Government of the United States. [27 Stat. L. 446.]

Test case.—An action cannot be maintained under this section by one who was not owner of the property shipped, but was a mere figurehead or dummy in the transaction, and the action is brought for the purpose of making a test case at the instigation of an organization of lumber exporters with a view to exacting such bill of lading as the masters thought they would be entitled to under the statute. The Minnehaha, (S. D. N. Y. 1902) 114 Fed. 672.

Violation as indictable offense.—The provisions of this section make it a criminal statute; and one violating either of such provisions is subject to indictment and prosecution therefor. U. S. v. Cobb, (D. C. Md. 1906) 163 Fed. 791.

Indictment — authority to sign bill of lading in defendant's name.—An indictment for issuing a bill of lading containing provisions in violation of the Act, which avers that such bill was issued by defendant, and sets out a copy of such bill, from which it appears that defendant's name was signed thereto "per" another, need not allege that the bill of lading was so signed by defendant's authority, which is a matter of proof. U. S. v. Cobb, (D. C. Md. 1906) 163 Fed. 791.

SEC. 6. [Existing laws not repealed.] That this act shall not be held to modify or repeal sections forty-two hundred and eighty-one, forty-two hundred and eighty-two, and forty-two hundred and eighty-three of the Revised Statutes of the United States, or any other statute defining the liability of vessels, their owners, or representatives. [27 Stat. L. 446.]

R. S. secs. 4281-4283 mentioned in the text are given supra, pp. 330-336.

Relation to section 3.—This section is not repugnant to section 3, supra, p. 377, because R. S. sec. 4283, supra, p. 336, does not at all define and was not intended to define the condition under which a legal claim arises against the shipowner for any damage or loss therein referred to. It only provides in effect that whenever legal claims do arise against him for loss or damage his liability shall not exceed the value of the ship and freight. To enlarge or to diminish by statute the cases in which legal claims for damage shall be held to arise is not, therefore, "to modify or repeal" R. S. sec. 4283. The Viola, (S. D. N. Y. 1893) 59 Fed. 632.

SEC. 7. [Certain sections not applicable to transportation of live animals.] Sections one and four of this act shall not apply to the transportation of live animals. [27 Stat. L. 446.]

Sections 1 and 4 of this Act mentioned in the text are given supra, pp. 371, 392.

For further provisions relating to the transportation of animals, see ANIMALS, vol. 1, p. 371.

SEC. 8. [Effect.] That this act shall take effect from and after the first day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-three. [27 Stat. L. 446.]

Sec. 4290. [Entries in log book.] Every vessel making voyages from a port in the United States to any foreign port, or, being of the burden of seventy-five tons or upward, from a port on the Atlantic to a port on the Pacific, or vice versa, shall have an official log-book; and every master of such vessel shall make, or cause to be made therein, entries of the following matters, that is to say:

First. Every legal conviction of any member of his crew, and the punishment inflicted.

Second. Every offense committed by any member of his crew for which it is intended to prosecute, or to enforce a forfeiture, together with such statement concerning the reading over such entry, and concerning the reply, if any, made to the charge, as is required by the provisions of section forty-five hundred and ninety-seven.

Third. Every offense for which punishment is inflicted on board, and the punishment inflicted.

Fourth. A statement of the conduct, character, and qualifications of each of his crew; or a statement that he declines to give an opinion of such particulars.

Fifth. Every case of illness or injury happening to any member of the crew, with the nature thereof, and the medical treatment.

Sixth. Every case of death happening on board, with the cause thereof.

Seventh. Every birth happening on board, with the sex of the infant, and the names of the parents.

Eighth. Every marriage taking place on board, with the names and ages of the parties.

Ninth. The name of every seaman or apprentice who ceases to be a member of the crew otherwise than by death, with the place, time, manner, and cause thereof.

Tenth. The wages due to any seaman or apprentice who dies during the voyage, and the gross amount of all deductions to be made therefrom.

Eleventh. The sale of the effects of any seaman or apprentice who dies during the voyage, including a statement of each article sold, and the sum received for it.

Twelfth. In every case of collision in which it is practicable so to do, the master shall, immediately after the occurrence, cause a statement thereof, Sec. 4291. [Mode of making entries.] Every entry hereby required to be made in the official log-book shall be signed by the master and by the mate, or some other one of the crew, and every entry in the official log-and of the circumstances under which the same occurred, to be entered in the official log book. Such entry shall be made in the manner prescribed in section forty-two hundred and ninety-one, and failure to make such entry shall subject the offender to the penalties prescribed by section forty-two hundred and ninety-two. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Acts of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 291, and Feb. 14, 1900, ch. 19, § 1, 31 Stat. L. 29. The first amendment consisted in substituting the words "ninety-seven" in the "Second" paragraph for the word "thirty" appearing in such paragraph as originally enacted. The second amendment consisted in the addition of paragraph "Twelfth." Section 2 of the latter Act provided "That this Act shall take effect sixty days after its passage."
For R. S. sec. 4597 mentioned in the "Second" paragraph of the text see SEAMEN.

Entry requisite to prosecution.—An entry in a log book of an alleged offense by a seaman, as soon as possible after the occurrence, must be made if the master intends to prosecute the seaman for its commission. U. S. r. Brown, (1876) 3 Sawyer 602, 24 Fed. Cas. No. 14,672. See R. S. sec. 4597 (title SEAMEN).

Effect of failure to enter.—From the failure to enter in the log book that the lights of the other vessel were not properly set, it should be inferred that the lights of that vessel were properly set and burning at the time of the collision. The Richmond, (E. D. Va. 1902) 114 Fed. 208. And to the same effect, see Pennell v. U. S., (D. C. Me. 1908) 162 Fed. 64, and The Etruria, (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1906) 147 Fed. 216, 77 C. C. A. 442, wherein the court held that the absence of any entry in the log was a "suspicious circumstance." Where the entries in the log are intentionally meager, vague and perfunctory, or where leaves probably containing entries relating to transactions in litigation are removed, the legitimate inference is that if the true facts were entered in the log, they would be unfavorable to the vessel. The Sicilian Prince, (S. D. N. Y. 1904) 128 Fed. 133, affirmed (C. C. A. 2d Cir. 1905) 144 Fed. 951, 75 C. C. A. 677.

Bunge v. The Victorian, (D. C. Wash. 1898) 88 Fed. 797, reviewing R. S. secs. 4290 to 4292 and secs. 4596 and 4597 (title SEAMEN), it was held that there was no statute in force requiring the production of an official log book containing evidence of desertion of any of the crew from a steamship while on a voyage from Puget Sound to British Columbia or Alaska.

Admissibility of log book in evidence.—The log book is in no just sense proof per se of the facts therein stated, except in certain cases provided for by statute. It is not evidence under oath. It does not import legal verity. It cannot be admitted per se, if objected to, as evidence of the facts stated therein. U. S. c. Gilbert, (1834) 2 Sumn. 19, 25 Fed. Cas. No. 15,504.

Orordinarily the entries in the log books are not receivable in support of the party who makes them, but where they are called for and made use of by the other party for the purpose of cross-examining the opposing witnesses and the testimony so adduced is more intelligible by a reference to the books, they should be received. The Kentucky, (S. D. N. Y. 1906) 149 Fed. 500.

The admissibility or competency of evidence in a legal proceeding pertains to the remedy and is governed by the lex fori, and therefore a clause in the British Shipping Act of 1854, making certain entries in the official log book competent evidence in all courts does not make them so in the courts of any other country. The City of Carlisle, (D. C. Ore. 1889) 39 Fed. 807.

Weight of log book as evidence—Generally.—Facts stated in the log book must, as against the ship, be taken to be true, where it is made and signed by those chiefly having knowledge of the facts, unless a mistake is clearly shown. Bunge v. The Steamship Utopia, (S. D. N. Y. 1880) 1 Fed. 892.

The log, being intended to be a correct record of the facts contained therein, an individual with full knowledge and opportunity of ascertaining the truth must be accepted as the truth if it tells against the party making it. The Newfoundland, (D. C. S. C 1898) 89 Fed. 510, reversed on the ground of inadequacy of proof (1899) 176 U. S. 97, 20 S. Ct. 274, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 386.

Captain's memorandum.—The captain's entries in his memorandum book, a month afterward, from previous pencil memoranda, are not entitled to the weight of evidence of a log book with proper contemporaneous entries. Brink v. Lyons, (S. D. N. Y. 1883) 18 Fed. 605.
book shall be made as soon as possible after the occurrence to which it relates, and, if not made on the same day as the occurrence to which it relates, shall be made and dated so as to show the date of the occurrence, and of the entry respecting it; and in no case shall any entry therein, in respect of any occurrence happening previously to the arrival of the vessel at her final port, be made more than twenty-four hours after such arrival. [R. S.]

Sec. 4292. [Penalty for omitting entries.] If in any case the official log-book is not kept in the manner hereby required, or if any entry hereby directed to be made in any such log-book is not made at the time and in the manner hereby directed, the master shall, for each such offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than twenty-five dollars; and every person who makes, or procures to be made, or assists in making, any entry in any official log-book in respect of any occurrence happening previously to the arrival of the vessel at her final port of discharge, more than twenty-four hours after such arrival, shall, for each offense, be liable to a penalty of not more than one hundred and fifty dollars. An Act to authorize medals commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the first meeting of the Continental Congress and of the Declaration of Independence.

[Medals commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of independence.] That medals with appropriate devices, emblems and inscriptions, commemorative of the Centennial Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence be prepared at the Mint at Philadelphia for the Centennial Board of Finance subject to the provisions of the fifty-second section of the Coinage act of eighteen hundred and seventy-three, upon the payment of a sum not less than the cost thereof, and all the provisions whether penal or otherwise of said coinage act against the counterfeiting or imitating of coins of the United States shall apply to the medals struck and issued under the provisions of this act. [18 Stat. L. 76.]
[Counterfeiting Columbian medals, diplomas, etc.] And every person who within the United States or any Territory thereof, without lawful authority, makes, or willingly aids or assists in making, or causes or procures to be made, any dies, hub, plate, or mold, either in steel or of plaster, or any other substance whatsoever, in the likeness or similitude as to the design, or inscription thereon, of any die, hub, plate, or mold, designated for the striking of the medals and diplomas of award for the World's Columbian Exposition, as provided in section three of the act approved August fifth, eighteen hundred and ninety-two, or conceals or shall have in his possession, any such die, hub, plate, or mold hereinbefore mentioned, with intent to fraudulently or unlawfully use the same for counterfeiting the medals and diplomas hereinbefore mentioned, or who shall fraudulently or unlawfully have in his possession or cause to be circulated any duplicate or counterfeit medal or diploma not authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall upon conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than five thousand dollars, and be imprisoned at hard labor not more than ten years or both at the discretion of the court. [27 Stat. L. 587.]

This is from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 208. The medals and diplomas intended to be protected by the text were authorized by the Act of Aug. 5, 1892, ch. 381, § 3, 27 Stat. L. 389, mentioned in the text.

Counterfeiting, generally, see PENAL LAWS.

Authority of Treasury Department over World's Columbian Exposition medals.—After the exhibitors shall have received the medals and diplomas awarded them, the Treasury Department has not any further authority over them, and has not any authority to say what use shall or shall not be made of them, or to restrict the making or using of facsimiles of them by exhibitors to whom they have been awarded. See (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 330.

Joint Resolution Authorizing the issue of duplicate medals where the originals have been lost or destroyed.

[Res. of April 15, 1904, No. 23, 33 Stat. L. 588.]

[Issue of duplicate medals.] That in any case where the president of the United States has heretofore, under any Act or resolution of Congress, caused any medal to be made and presented to any officer or person in the United States on account of distinguished or meritorious services, on a proper showing made by such person to the satisfaction of the President that such medal has been lost or destroyed through no fault of the beneficiary, and that diligent search has been made therefor, the President is hereby authorized to cause to be prepared and delivered to such person a duplicate of such medal, the cost of which shall be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated. [R. S.]

It is within the power of Congress to enact the provision forbidding the reappointment of a cadet who has been discharged from the academy on the report and recommendation of the academic board for deficiency in conduct or studies, unless such reappointment is made upon the recommendation of the board. (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 67.

The provisions of this section were in part superseded and repealed by those of the Act of May 28, 1908, ch. 214, given as amended infra. p. 421. The last cited Act also superseded a provision of the Act of June 11, 1878, ch. 181, 20 Stat. The same provision, with the exception of the omission of the word "hereafter," was contained in the Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 109, 19 Stat. L. 382.

"Hereafter" as used in Act of June 11, 1878.—It appeared from the context of the Act of June 11, 1878, and otherwise that "thereafter" was changed to "hereafter" by a clerical error, and all changes mentioned were referred to the date July 1, 1882. (1878) 16 Op. Atty.-Gen. 40.

Sec. 1330. [Leaves of absence.] Leave of absence may be granted by the superintendent, under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of War, to the professors, assistant professors, instructors, and other officers of the Academy, for the entire period of the suspension of the ordinary academic studies, without deduction from pay or allowances. The words "as professor" following the word "service" were added to the section by Act of June 23, 1879, ch. 35, § 4. 21 Stat. L. 34.
For a reference to the various Acts relating to professors and associate professors, see the note to R. S. sec. 1309, supra, p. 405.

Sec. 1337. [Assistant professors and instructors.] Each assistant professor and each senior assistant instructor of cavalry, artillery, and infantry tactics, shall receive the pay of a captain.

This section was amended by the Act of Feb. 27, 1877, ch. 69, 19 Stat. L. 244, by striking out, after the word "tactics," the words "and the instructor of practical military engineering," appearing in the section as originally enacted.
See the note to the preceding R. S. sec. 1336.
"Emoluments."—The Act of April 29, 1912, provided that "assistant professors," at the Military Academy should receive "the pay and emoluments of captains, and no other pay and emolument while performing these duties." The word "emolument:" was construed to include every allowance or perquisite annexed to an office, for the benefit of an officer, and by way of compensation for services and to entitle assistant professors to the quarters of captains. (1859) 9 Op. Atty.-Gen. 284.

Sec. 1338. [Master of the sword—duties—termination of office on vacancy.] The master of the sword shall hereafter act as instructor of military gymnastics and physical culture at the Military Academy, and shall have the relative rank and shall be entitled to the pay, allowances, and emoluments of a first lieutenant, mounted: Provided, however, That whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of master of the sword and instructor of military gymnastics and physical culture the said office shall cease and determine, and the duties thereunto pertaining shall thereafter be performed by an officer of the line of the Army to be selected for that purpose by the Secretary of War. [R. S.]

This section was amended to read as above by the Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 804, 31 Stat. L. 910. The section was originally as follows:

"Sec. 1338. The master of the sword at the Military Academy shall receive pay at the rate of fifteen hundred dollars a year, with fuel and quarters."

This section was in part superseded by the Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1404, infra, p. 490, which prescribed the rank and pay of the master of the sword.

See the note to R. S. sec. 1300, supra, p. 463.

R. S. Sec. 1339. This section was as follows:

"Sec. 1339. Cadets of the Military Academy shall receive five hundred dollars a year and one ration a day."

A subsequent provision of the Act of June 30, 1882, ch. 265, 22 Stat. L. 123, prescribed that "No cadet shall receive more than the rate of five hundred and forty dollars a year." Both of these were superseded by a provision of the Act of June 28, 1902, ch. 1300, infra, p. 419, fixing the pay of cadets at five hundred dollars per year and this was in turn superseded by a provision of the Act of May 11, 1908, ch. 163, infra, p. 421, fixing the pay of cadets at six hundred dollars per year.

Sec. 1340. [Librarian and assistant.] The librarian and assistant librarian at the Military Academy shall each receive one hundred and twenty dollars a year additional pay. [R. S.]

The Military Academy Appropriation Act of March 9, 1915, ch. 146, 38 Stat. L. 1131, contained, as did similar Acts of previous years, an appropriation under the head of "Pay of Civilians" for one librarian and one librarian’s assistant.

[R. S.]

The section originally read as follows:

"Sec. 1111. There shall be retained or enlisted in the Army one band, which shall consist of one band-leader, and not more than twenty-four musicians, and shall ordinarily be stationed at the Military Academy."

It was amended by making more comprehensive provisions as to the composition of the band, and the pay, rations, etc., of the members thereof by an Act of March 2, 1901, ch. 504, 31 Stat. L. 912. Said amendatory Act also expressly repealed R. S. sec. 1278, relating to the pay of the leader of the band, and also sections 2 and 3 of the Act of March 3, 1877, ch. 109, 19 Stat. L. 383, relating to the composition of the band, pay, etc. The Act last mentioned superseded the Act of March 3, 1875, ch. 131, secs. 8, 10, 18 Stat. L. 419, relating to the same subject.

The section was again amended by an Act of March 3, 1905, ch. 1404, 33 Stat. L. 853, to read as given in the text.

The provisions of the text relating to the pay of the various members of the band were superseded by the Act of May 28, 1908, ch. 214, infra, p. 421.

[31 Stat. L. 656.]

Residence of father.—Minors whose fathers are living and residing within the United States are, by reason of their minority, ineligible to appointment as cadets to the Military Academy from any other congressional districts than those in which their fathers reside. (1869) 13 Op. Atty.-Gen. 130.

Relation of rules and articles of war to cadets.—An early opinion of the Attorney-General reaches the following conclusions concerning cadets and the relation of Rules and Articles of War to them. The cadets of the Military Academy at West Point appertain by law to the Corps of Engineers, are therefore a part of the land force of the United States, and as such are subject to the Rules and Articles of War. The undergraduate cadets are not commissioned officers, and therefore are not competent to sit on a court martial, and are triable by a regimental or garrison court martial. But they are not the "non-commissioned" officers of the Acts of Congress and the General Regulations, which expression means "sergeants and corporals," and is inapplicable to the cadets. They are inchoate officers of the army, and subject by statute and regulation to no discipline incompatible with that character. The undergraduate cadets, and privates, are not subject to the Articles of War as respects their relation to one another, but only as respects their relation to commissioned officers of the army on duty as such in the academy. The graduated cadets, assigned to service as supernumerary officers, are brevet second lieutenants, and as such commissioned officers, and therefore subject to all the duties, and entitled to exercise all the powers, of that grade, including the legal capacity to sit on courts martial as commissioned officers, and be tried only as such according to the Articles of War. (1855) 7 Op. Atty.-Gen. 323. See also (1819) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 278; (1821) 1 Op. Atty.-Gen. 469.

[Hazing — prevention — penalty.] That the superintendent of the United States Military Academy, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, shall make appropriate regulations for putting a stop to the practice of hazing, such regulations to prescribe dismissal, suspension, or other adequate punishments for infractions of the same, and to embody a clear definition of hazing.

That any cadet who shall be charged with offenses under such regulations which would involve his dismissal from the academy shall be granted, upon his written request, a trial by a general court-martial, and any cadet dismissed from the academy for hazing shall not thereafter be reappointed to the corps of cadets nor be eligible for appointment as a commissioned officer in the Army or Navy or Marine Corps until two years after the graduation of the class of which he was a member. [31 Stat. L. 911, as amended by 36 Stat. L. 323.]

The provisions of the foregoing paragraph and of the following paragraph of the text are from the Military Academy Appropriation Act of March 2, 1901; ch. 504.

As originally enacted this paragraph was as follows: "That the Superintendent of the Military Academy shall make such rules, to be approved by the Secretary of War, as will effectually prevent the practice of hazing; and any cadet found guilty of participating in or encouraging or countenancing such practice shall be summarily expelled from the Academy and shall not thereafter be reappointed to the corps of cadets or be eligible for appointment as a commissioned officer in the Army or Navy or Marine Corps, until two years after the graduation of the class of which he was a member.

As originally enacted it superseded a provision of an Act of March 31, 1884, ch. 19, 23 Stat. L. 7. "That hereafter any cadet dismissed for hazing shall not be eligible to reappointment."

It was amended to read as given in the text by a provision of the Military Academy Appropriation of April 19, 1910, ch. 174, which amending Act contained a further provision as follows:

"That all Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed."

"The regulations of the United States Military Academy upon the subject of hazing having been modified, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to dispose of any cases which are now pending, and in which final action has not yet been taken, under the provisions of the said regulations as modified."

Hereafter there shall be maintained at the United States Military Academy an engineer detachment, which shall consist of one first sergeant, one quartermaster sergeant, eight sergeants, ten corporals, two cooks, two musicians, thirty-eight first-class privates, and thirty-eight second-class privates;

For pay of such engineer detachment, twenty-four thousand dollars; additional pay for length of service, six thousand four hundred and eight dollars: Provided, That the enlisted men of said detachment shall receive the same pay and allowances as are now or may be hereafter authorized for corresponding grades in the battalions of engineers: Provided further, That nothing herein shall be so construed as to authorize an increase in the total number of enlisted men of the Army now authorized by law. [37 Stat. L. 254.]

See the note to the first paragraph of this Act, supra, p. 424.

The provisions of the text superseded those of the Act of March 3, 1911, ch. 207, 36 Stat. L. 1019, relating to the pay, etc., of the acting first sergeant of the Military Academy detachment of engineers.

[Sale of unserviceable material, etc.—use of proceeds.] * * * That when any instrument, apparatus, implements, or materials which have been heretofore or may hereafter be purchased or acquired for the use of any department of instruction or for the maintenance and operation of the waterworks are no longer needed or are no longer serviceable they may be sold in such manner as the superintendent may direct and the proceeds credited to the appropriation for the department or the waterworks for which they were purchased or acquired. [37 Stat. L. 260.]

See the note to the first paragraph of this Act, supra, p. 424.

[Superintendent — leave of absence.] * * * Hereafter the Secretary of War may grant the superintendent of the academy leave of absence without deduction from pay or allowances for the same period that the superintendent may grant leave of absence to other officers of the academy under the provisions of section thirteen hundred and thirty of the Revised Statutes. [37 Stat. L. 263.]

See the note to the first paragraph of this Act, supra, p. 424.

See R. S. sec. 1330, supra, p. 410.

[Promotion of professor.] * * * That any officer of the United States Army now holding the position of permanent professor at the United States Military Academy who on July first, nineteen hundred and fourteen, should have served not less than thirty-three years in the Army, one-third of which service shall have been as professor and instructor at the Military Academy, shall on that date have the rank, pay, and allowances of a colonel in the Army. [37 Stat. L. 264.]

See the note to the first paragraph of this Act, supra, p. 424.

See also the note to R. S. sec. 1309, supra, p. 406.

[Sec. 1.] [Purchase of technical and scientific supplies.] * * * That all technical and scientific supplies for the departments of instruction of the Military Academy shall be purchased by contract or otherwise, as the Secretary of War may deem best. [38 Stat. L. 1136.]

The provisions of this and the following paragraph of the text are from the Military Academy Appropriation Act of March 4, 1915, ch. 146. Similar provisions have appeared in the Military Academy Appropriation Acts for many years.

[Use of wharf at West Point by vessels — collection of wharfage dues.]

The Secretary of War is authorized to have collected from vessels using the wharf and ferry slip at West Point, New York, such wharfage dues as he may deem just, reasonable, and necessary, the same to be paid at the time of landing to the post quartermaster or his authorized agent. [38 Stat. L. 1137.]

See the note to the preceding paragraph of this Act.

A further provision of this Act was as follows: "That until the apportionment under the Fourteenth Census of the United States becomes effective, whenever any cadet shall have finished three years of his course at the academy his successor may be admitted."

This was repealed by the Act of May 4, 1916. See the note to the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 792, § 4. supra, p. 417.

The Military Academy Appropriation Act of April 19, 1910, ch. 174, 36 Stat. L. 323, contained the following provision:

"Hereafter, for six years from July first, anno Domini, nineteen hundred and ten, whenever any cadet shall have finished three years of his course at the United States Military Academy, his successor may be admitted to the Academy; and the corps of cadets is hereby increased to meet this provision."

I. NATIONAL GUARD AND UNORGANIZED MILITIA

Sec. 57. [Composition of the militia.] The militia of the United States shall consist of all able-bodied male citizens of the United States and all other able-bodied males who have or shall have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, who shall be more than eighteen years of age and, except as hereinafter provided, not more than forty-five years of age, and said militia shall be divided into three classes, the National Guard, the Naval Militia, and the Unorganized Militia. [39 Stat. L. 197.]

This and the following section 117 are from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, entitled "An Act for making further and more effectual provisions for the national defense, and for other purposes," frequently referred to as the "National Defense Act."

Sections 1625-1661 constituted title 16 of the Revised Statutes entitled "The Militia." Of these sections 1625-1660 were repealed by the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 25, 32 Stat. L. 780, and the final section 1661 is noted under the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, § 87, infra, p. 454. This last cited Act superseded entirely said Dick Act of 1903, and the various amendments thereof, as noted under the various sections of this Act following.

This and the following section 117 of this Act would seem to supersede the former provisions of the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 1, 32 Stat. L. 778, which, as amended by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, § 1, 35 Stat. L. 399, was as follows:

"Sec. 1. That the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen of the respective States and Territories and the District of Columbia, and every able-bodied male of foreign birth who has declared his intention to become a citizen, who is more than eighteen and less than forty-five years of age, and shall be divided into two classes: The organized militia, to be known as the National Guard of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia, or by such other designations as may be given them by the States or Territories; the remainder to be known as the Reserve Militia: Provided, That the provisions of this Act and of section sixteen hundred and sixty-one, Revised Statutes, as amended, shall apply only to the militia organized as a land force."

Construction.—Statutes providing for the establishment, discipline, and pay of the army should be liberally construed. State v. Dudley, (1910) 173 Ind. 633, 91 N. E. 223.

An enlisted man of the Ohio National Guard is a soldier of "the organized militia" as defined in the above section, and, as such, is liable to trial and punishment by court-martial as provided in the code of regulations of the Ohio National Guard and the articles of war of the United States as adopted in said code of regulations. McGurray v. Murphy, (1909) 80 Ohio St. 413, 88 N. E. 881, 17 Am. Cas. 444.

So it has been held in a decision by a state court: "The power of state governments to legislate concerning the militia existed and was exercised before the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, and as its exercise was not prohibited by that instrument, it is understood to remain with the States, subject only to the paramount authority of acts of Congress enacted in pursuance of the constitution of the United States. The section of the constitution related [art. I, sec. 8] does not confer on Congress unlimited power over the militia of the States. It is restricted to specific objects enumerated, and for all other purposes the militia remain as before the formation of the constitution, subject to state authorities. Nor is there any merit in the proposition that the authority a State may exercise over its own militia is derived from the constitution of the United States. The States always assumed to control their militia, and, except so far as they have conferred upon the national government exclusive or concurrent authority, the States retain the residue of authority over the militia they previously had and exercised. And no reason exists why a State may not control its own militia within constitutional limitations. Its exercise by the States is simply a means of self-protection." Dunne v. People. (1879) 94 Ill. 120, 34 Am. Rep. 213. See also Houston v. Moore, (1820) 5 Wheat. 1, 5 U. S. (L. ed.) 19.

Organization of militia.—Under the provision of R. S. sec. 1870 (see note supra, this page), declaring that the militia of each state shall be arranged into divisions, etc., "as the legislature of the state may direct," the fact that but a portion of the militia has been so organized was held not to impair the validity of the organizations actually made. People v. Hill, (1891) 126 N. Y. 497, 27 N. E. 789. The governor of the state, as commander-in-chief of the military forces of the state, has power to consolidate companies and regiments. People v. Ewen, (1859) 17 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 375.

SEC. 117. [Applicable to land forces only.] The provisions of this Act in respect to the militia shall be applicable only to militia organized as a land force and not to the Naval Militia, which shall consist of such part of the militia as may be prescribed by the President for each State, Territory, or District: Provided, That each State, Territory, or District maintaining a Naval Militia as herein prescribed may be credited to the extent of the number thereof in the quota that would otherwise be required by section sixty-two of this Act. [39 Stat. L. 212.] See the note to the preceding section 57 of this Act.

[Militia Act construed—"State or Territory" to include District of Columbia.] That whenever the words "State or Territory" are used in the "Act to promote the efficiency of the militia, and for other purposes," approved January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, as amended, they shall be held to apply to and include the District of Columbia. [35 Stat. L. 636.]

This is from an Act of Feb. 18, 1909, ch. 146, entitled "An Act for the organization of the Militia in the District of Columbia." Said Act amended the prior Act of March 1, 1889, ch. 328, 25 Stat. L. 772, relating to the same subject and added several additional sections, among them being the provisions given in the text, numbered as "Sec. 74."

SEC. 59. [Exemptions from militia duty.] The Vice President of the United States; the officers, judicial and executive, of the Government of the United States and of the several States and Territories; persons in the military or naval service of the United States; customhouse clerks; persons employed by the United States in the transmission of the mail; artificers and workmen employed in the armories, arsenals, and navy yards of the United States; pilots; mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States, shall be exempt from militia duty without regard to age, and all persons who because of religious belief shall claim exemption from military service, if the conscientious holding of such belief by such person shall be established under such regulations as the President shall prescribe, shall be exempted from militia service in a combatant capacity; but no person so exempted shall be exempt from militia service in any capacity that the President shall declare to be noncombatant. [39 Stat. L. 197.]

This and the following sections 58, 60, 61 and 63 are from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134. This section superseded the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 2, 32 Stat. L. 775 which was as follows:

"Sec. 2. That the Vice-President of the United States, the officers, judicial and executive, of the Government of the United States, the members and officers of each House of Congress, persons in the military or naval service of the United States, all custom-house officers, with their clerks, postmasters, and persons employed by the United States in the transmission of the mail, ferrymen employed at any ferry on a post road, artisans and workmen employed in the armories and arsenals of the United States, pilots, mariners actually employed in the sea service of any citizen or merchant within the United States, and all persons who are exempted by the laws of the respective States in which they are stationed, shall be exempted from militia duty, without regard to age: Provided, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to require or compel any member of any well-recognized religious sect or organization at present organized and existing whose creed forbids its members to participate in war in any form, and whose religious convictions are against war or participation therein, in accordance with the creed of said religious organization, to serve in the militia or any other armed or volunteer force under the jurisdiction and authority of the United States."

Exemption of persons by state.—Under the Act of Congress of 1792, providing that persons of the age of eighteen years and under the age of forty-five years, except certain officers specified and "all persons who now are or may hereafter be exempted by the laws of the respective States," shall be enrolled in the militia, it was held to be competent for the state legislature to exempt persons from enrolment, designating them by their age; for example, persons under twenty-one or over thirty years of age. Opinion of Justices, (1830) 52 Pick. (Mass.) 571.

The legislature also has power to revoke an exemption from serving in the militia, before granted to a certain class of citizens, and require them to do military duty. Com. v. Bird, (1815) 12 Mass. 443.

Power of captain to exempt private.—A captain in the militia has no authority to exempt a private from the performance of military duty on account of bodily infirmity, upon the certificate of a physician who is not a surgeon or surgeon's mate of the regiment, and does not reside within the bounds of the regiment. Cobb v. Lucas, (1833) 15 Pick. (Mass.) 1.

The clerks employed in the offices of the several departments of the government are not liable to militia duty. Ex p. Smith, (1826) 2 Cranch C. C. 603, 22 Fed. Cas. No. 12,967.

A justice of the peace, in the District of Columbia, is an officer of the government of the United States, and is exempt from militia duty. Wise v. Withers, (1806) 3 Cranch 331, 2 U. S. (L. ed.) 457.

Mariners.—Generally.—"To be "actually employed in the service of a citizen or merchant of the United States, is to be a mariner, and, in that character, liabilities and privations are incurred, which are inconsistent with militia duty; because mariners properly engaged are subjected to duties and penalties at all times and seasons; and the public interest is as dependent on the uninterrupted performance of their duty, as in the training and disciplining of the militia. . . . Men employed in the fishing-business, in vessels which require a license, and an agreement in the nature of a shipping paper, are as much mariners, as those who go on coasting or foreign voyages, and they are so treated by the laws of the United States." Com. v. Douglas, (1820) 17 Mass. 49.

The master of an enrolled vessel, employed in transporting stones, etc., from one port to another of Boston Bay, and occasionally making a short trip to sea for the purpose of fishing, was held not to be exempted from militia duty, as a mariner in the sea service. Ex p. Dunbar, (1817) 14 Mass. 383.

A person employed as first officer and pilot on board a steamer plying daily between two ports about twelve miles distant from each other, and whose duty it was to take the mail to and from the steamer and the post-office, was held not to be exempted, either as a mariner, a ferryman, or by reason of his so taking the mail, from liability to perform duty in the militia. Cousins v. Cowing, (1839) 23 Pick. (Mass.) 208.

Officer in army.—One claiming exemption from duty in the militia, as having been an officer in the army of the United States, must produce his commission, or show actual service by virtue of a lawful appointment. Com. v. Smith, (1816) 13 Mass. 316.

Sec. 58. [Composition of the National Guard.] The National Guard shall consist of the regularly enlisted militia between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years organized, armed, and equipped as hereinafter provided, and of commissioned officers between the ages of twenty-one and sixty-four years. [39 Stat. L. 197.]

See the note to the preceding sec. 59 of this Act. The composition of the militia was formerly prescribed by the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 3, 32 Stat. L. 776 which, as amended by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, § 2, 35 Stat. L. 399, was as follows:
"Sec. 3. That the regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia in the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia who have heretofore participated or shall hereafter participate in the apportionment of the annual appropriation provided by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, whether known and designated as National Guard, militia, or otherwise, shall constitute the organized militia. On and after January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and ten, the organization, armament, and discipline of the organized militia in the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia shall be the same as that which is now or may hereafter be prescribed for the Regular Army of the United States, subject in time of peace to such general exceptions as may be authorized by the Secretary of War. Provided, That in peace and war each organized division of militia may have one inspector of small arms practice with the rank of major; each regiment of infantry or cavalry of organized militia one assistant inspector of small arms practice with the rank of captain; and each separate or unassigned battalion of infantry or engineers or squadron of cavalry of organized militia one assistant inspector of small arms practice with the rank of first lieutenant. Provided also, That the President of the United States in time of peace may, by order, fix the minimum number of enlisted men in each company, troop, battery, signal corps, engineer corps, and hospital corps: And provided further, That any corps of artillery, cavalry, and infantry existing in any of the States at the passage of the Act of May eighth, seventeen hundred and ninety-two, which, by the laws, customs, or usages of the States have been in continuous existence, shall be continued in existence under the provisions of this Act, unless the General Court of the State shall, by law, alter or modify the provisions of this Act. Provided further, That any corps of artillery, cavalry, and infantry of the United States, persons who are not members of the military service of the United States, who are commissioned for any period, who are not members of the militia of any State or Territory of the United States, or who are not members of the army of the United States, or who are not members of the militia of any foreign country or of any foreign power, shall be subject to the laws of the United States, and shall be subject to such privileges and be subject to the discipline prescribed by the laws of the United States. The word "organization," as used in the section here quoted as superseded, does not relate to or include the enlistment of a soldier. Organization relates to the distribution of the personnel of the army or militia, and to the enlistment of units. It provides for the distribution of the personnel into different arms and corps, such as infantry, cavalry, artillery, staff corps, medical corps, signal corps, etc., and the distribution of the personnel in each arm of the service corps into different units, such as divisions, brigades, companies, platoons, sections, squads, etc., and, further, into different ranks or grades such as generals, colonels, lieutenants-colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants, sergeants, corporals, privates, etc. Enlistment is the contract of service that a soldier, as distinguished from the officer, enters into with the state or the United States. The enlistment may be different in each state, some for seven years, some for five years, some for three years, with varying provisions for enlistment, and yet the organization of all may be the same; but it is essential to the effectiveness and efficiency of the forces called into the national service that the organization thereof should be the same—one harmonious whole. Acker r. Bell (1911) 62 FLA. 108, 57 So. 326, Ann. Cas. 1913C 1269, 39 L. R. A. (N. S.) 454.

Sec. 60. [Organization of National Guard units.] Except as otherwise specifically provided herein, the organization of the National Guard, including the composition of all units thereof, shall be the same as that which is or may hereafter be prescribed for the Regular Army, subject in time of peace to such general exceptions as may be authorized by the Secretary of War. And the President may prescribe the particular unit or units, as to branch or arm of service, to be maintained in each State, Territory, or the District of Columbia in order to secure a force which, when combined, shall form complete higher tactical units. [39 Stat. L. 197.]

See the note to section 59 of this Act, supra, p. 434.

SEC. 61. [Maintenance of other troops by the States.] No State shall maintain troops in time of peace other than as authorized in accordance with the organization prescribed under this Act: Provided, That nothing contained in this Act shall be construed as limiting the rights of the States and Territories in the use of the National Guard within their respective borders in time of peace: Provided further, That nothing contained in this Act shall prevent the organization and maintenance of State police or constabulary. [39 Stat. L. 198.]

See the note to section 59 of this Act, supra, p. 434.

SEC. 63. [Retention of ancient privileges.] Any corps of Artillery, Cavalry, or Infantry existing in any of the States on the passage of the Act of May eighth, seventeen hundred and ninety-two, which by the laws, customs, or usages of said States has been in continuous existence since the passage of said Act, under its provision and under the provisions of section two hundred and thirty-two and sections sixteen hundred and twenty-five to sixteen hundred and sixty, both inclusive, of title sixteen of the Revised Statutes of eighteen hundred and seventy-three, and the Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, relating to the militia, shall be allowed to retain its ancient privileges, subject, nevertheless, to all duties required by law of militia: Provided, That said organizations may be a part of the National Guard and entitled to all the privileges of this Act, and shall conform in all respects to the organization, discipline, and training of the National Guard in time of war: Provided further, That for purposes of training and when on active duty in the service of the United States they may be assigned to higher units, as the President may direct, and shall be subject to the orders of officers under whom they shall be serving. [39 Stat. L. 198.]

See the note to section 59 of this Act, supra, p. 434.

The Act of May 8, 1792, mentioned in the text was incorporated in various sections of the Revised Statutes which were subsequently repealed as indicated in the note to section 57 of this Act, supra, p. 432.

R. S. sec. 232 mentioned in this section was repealed by the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 25, 32 Stat. L. 775 and is set out in the note to section 12 of said Act, infra, p. 433.

As to R. S. secs. 1825-1860 and the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, mentioned in the text see the notes to section 57 of this Act, supra, p. 432.

[Officers and enlisted men — staff corps and departments.] • • • That the National Guard of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, shall include such officers and enlisted men of the Staff Corps and Departments, corresponding to those of the Regular Army, as may be authorized by the Secretary of War. [40 Stat. L. — ]

SEC. 62. [Number of the National Guard.] The number of enlisted men of the National Guard to be organized under this Act within one year from its passage shall be for each State in the proportion of two hundred such men for each Senator and Representative in Congress from such State, and a number to be determined by the President for each Territory and the District of Columbia, and shall be increased each year thereafter in the proportion of not less than fifty per cent until a total peace strength of not less than eight hundred enlisted men for each Senator and Representative in Congress shall have been reached: Provided, That in States which have but one Representative in Congress such increase shall be at the discretion of the President: Provided further, That this shall not be construed to prevent any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia from organizing the full number of troops required under this section in less time than is specified in this section, or from maintaining existing organizations if they shall conform to such rules and regulations regarding organization, strength, and armament as the President may prescribe: And provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to prevent any State with but one Representative in Congress from organizing one or more regiments of troops, with such auxiliary troops as the President may prescribe; such organizations and members of such organizations to receive all the benefits accruing under this Act under the conditions set forth herein: Provided further, That the word Territory as used in this Act and in all laws relating to the land militia and the National Guard shall include and apply to Hawaii, Alaska, Porto Rico, and the Canal Zone, and the militia of the Canal Zone shall be organized under such rules and regulations, not in conflict with the provisions of this Act, as the President may prescribe. [39 Stat. L. 198.]

This and the following sections 64, 65, 68-75, 77-80, 82, 91, 109, 110, 118, and 111 are from the Act of June 3 1916, ch. 134.

[39 Stat. L. 199.]

SEC. 68. [Location of units.] The States and Territories shall have the right to determine and fix the location of the units and headquarters of the National Guard within their respective borders: Provided, That no organization of the National Guard, members of which shall be entitled to and shall have received compensation under the provisions of this Act, shall be disbanded without the consent of the President, nor, without such consent, shall the commissioned or enlisted strength of any such organization be reduced below the minimum that shall be prescribed therefor by the President [39 Stat. L. 200.]

See the note to section 62 of this Act, supra, p. 438.

SEC. 69. [Enlistments in the National Guard.] Hereafter the period of enlistment in the National Guard shall be for six years, the first three years of which shall be in an active organization and the remaining three years in the National Guard Reserve, hereinafter provided for, and the qualifications for enlistment shall be the same as those prescribed for admission to the Regular Army: Provided, That in the National Guard the privilege of continuing in active service during the whole of an enlistment period and of reenlisting in said service shall not be denied by reason of anything contained in this Act. [39 Stat. L. 200.]

See the note to section 62 of this Act, supra, p. 438.

SEC. 70. [Federal enlistment contract.] Enlisted men in the National Guard of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia now serving under enlistment contracts which contain an obligation to defend the Constitution of the United States and to obey the orders of the President of the United States shall be recognized as members of the National Guard under the provisions of this Act for the unexpired portion of their present enlistment contracts. When any such enlistment contract does not contain such obligation, the enlisted man shall not be recognized as a member of the National Guard until he shall have signed an enlistment contract and taken and subscribed to the following oath of enlistment, upon signing which credit shall be given for the period already served under the old enlistment contract: "I do hereby acknowledge to have voluntarily enlisted this — day of ———, 19—, as a soldier in the National Guard of the United States and of the State of ———, for the period of three years in service and three years in the reserve, under the conditions prescribed by law, unless sooner discharged by proper authority. SEC. 75. [Same.] The provisions of this Act shall not apply to any person hereafter appointed an officer of the National Guard unless he first shall have successfully passed such tests as to his physical, moral, and professional fitness as the President shall prescribe. When the members of three or more regiments of the National Guard of any State, Territory, or District shall have been brought into the service of the United States, the reserve battalions of such regiments may be organized into provisional regiments and higher units. If for any reason there shall not be enough voluntary enlistments to keep the reserve battalions at the prescribed strength, a sufficient number of the unorganized militia shall be drafted into the service of the United States to maintain each of such battalions at the proper strength. As vacancies occur from death or other causes in any organization in the service of the United States and composed of men taken from the National Guard, men shall be transferred from the reserve battalions to the organizations in the field so that such organizations may be maintained at war strength. Regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of War shall determine the amount and character of service that must be rendered by officers to entitle them to the whole or specific parts of the maximum pay hereinbefore authorized: Provided, That all staff officers, aids-de-camp, and chaplains shall receive not to exceed one-half of the pay of a captain, except that regimental adjutants, and majors and captains in command of machine-gun companies, ambulance companies, field hospital companies, or sanitary troops shall receive the pay hereinbefore authorized for a captain. not less than the ratio of the part of the year so served to the whole year; and when any man's enlistment shall expire the compensation, if any, to which he may be entitled shall be determined in like manner: Provided further, That periods of any actual military duty equivalent to the drills herein prescribed (except those periods of service for which members of the National Guard may become lawfully entitled to the same pay as officers and enlisted men of the corresponding grades in the Regular Army) may be accepted as service in lieu of such drills when so provided by the Secretary of War.

All amounts appropriated for the purpose of this and the last preceding section shall be disbursed and accounted for by the officers and agents of the Quartermaster Corps of the Army, and all disbursements under the foregoing provisions of this section shall be made as soon as practicable after the thirty-first day of December and the thirtieth day of June of each year upon pay rolls prepared and authenticated in the manner to be prescribed by the Secretary of War: Provided, That stoppages may be made against the compensation payable to any officer or enlisted man hereunder to cover the cost of public property lost or destroyed by and chargeable to such officer or enlisted man.

Except as otherwise specifically provided herein, no money appropriated under the provisions of this or the last preceding section shall be paid to any person not on the active list, nor to any person over sixty-four years of age, nor to any person who shall fail to qualify as to fitness for military service under such regulations as the Secretary of War shall prescribe, nor to any State, Territory, or District, or officer or enlisted man in the National Guard thereof, unless and until such State, Territory, or District provides by law that staff officers, including officers of the Pay, Inspection, Subsistence, and Medical Departments, hereafter appointed shall have had previous military experience and shall hold their positions until they shall have reached the age of sixty-four years, unless retired prior to that time by reason of resignation, disability, or for cause to be determined by a court-martial legally convened for that purpose, and that vacancies among said officers shall be filled by appointment from the officers of the militia of such State, Territory, or District: Provided further, That the preceding proviso shall not apply to any State, Territory, or District until sixty days next after the adjournment of the next session of its legislature held after the approval of this Act. [39 Stat. L. 209.]

See the note to section 82 of this Act, supra, p. 438.

Sec. 111. [National Guard when drafted into Federal service.] When Congress shall have authorized the use of the armed land forces of the United States, for any purpose requiring the use of troops in excess of those of the Regular Army, the President may, under such regulations, including such physical examination, as he may prescribe, draft into the military service of the United States, to serve therein for the period of the war unless sooner discharged, any or all members of the National Guard and of the National Guard Reserve. All persons so drafted shall, from the date of their draft, stand discharged from the militia, and shall from said date be subject to such laws and regulations for the government of the Army of the United States as may be applicable to members of the Volunteer Army, and shall be embodied in organizations corresponding as far as practicable to those of the Regular Army or shall be otherwise assigned as the President may direct. The commissioned officers of said organizations shall be appointed from among the members thereof, officers with rank not above that of colonel to be appointed by the President alone, and all other officers to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Officers and enlisted men in the service of the United States under the terms of this section shall have the same pay and allowances as officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army of the same grades and the same prior service. [39 Stat. L. 211.]

See the note to section 62 of this Act, supra, p. 438.

The former provisions on this subject were contained in sections 4 and 5 of the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, 32 Stat. L. 776 as amended by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 294, §§ 3 and 4, 35 Stat. L. 400, and sections 6 and 10 of the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, 32 Stat. L. 776, which sections were as follows:

"Sec. 4. When ever the United States is invaded or in danger of invasion from any foreign nation, or of rebellion against the authority of the Government of the United States, or the President is unable with the regular forces at his command to execute the laws of the Union, it shall be lawful for the President to call forth such number of the militia of the State or of the States or Territories or of the District of Columbia as he may deem necessary to repel such invasion, suppress such rebellion, or to enable him to execute such laws, and to issue his orders for that purpose, through the governor of the respective State or Territory, or through the commanding general of the militia of the District of Columbia, from which State, Territory, or District such troops may be called, to such officers of the militia as he may think proper."

"Sec. 5. That whenever the President calls forth the organized militia of any State, Territory, or of the District of Columbia, to be employed in the service of the United States, he may specify in his call the period for which such service is required, and the militia so called shall continue to serve during the term so specified, either within or without the territory of the United States, unless sooner relieved by order of the President: Provided, That no commissioned officer or enlisted man of the organized militia shall be held to service beyond the term of his existing commission or enlistment. Provided further, that when the military needs of the Federal Government arising from the necessity to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrection, or repel invasion, can not be met by the regular forces, the organized militia shall be called into the service of the United States in advance of any volunteer force which it may be determined to raise."

"Sec. 6. That when the militia of more than one State is called into the actual service of the United States by the President he may, in his discretion, apportion them among such States or Territories or to the District of Columbia according to representative population."

"Sec. 10. That the militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall, during their time of service, be entitled to the same pay and allowances as are or may be provided by law for the Regular Army."

Power of President.—Congress may "provide for calling forth the militia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrection, and repel invasions," and the authority to call forth the militia has been exclusively vested in the President. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 522.

The Federal Constitution clearly distinguishes between the army and navy on the one hand and the militia upon the other. The latter may be called forth by the President for specific purposes, and when so called forth and assembled comes under the control of and into the service of the United States. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 522.

As to the similar power conferred on the President by the Act of 1795, it was said: "The power thus conferred by Congress to the President is doubtless of a very high and delicate nature. A free people are naturally jealous of the exercise of military power; and the power to call the militia into actual service is certainly felt to be one of no ordinary magnitude. But it is not a power which can be executed without a correspondent responsibility. It is, in its terms, a limited power, confined to cases of actual invasion, or of imminent danger of invasion. If it be a limited power, the question arises, by whom is the exigency to be judged of and decided? Is the President the sole and exclusive judge whether the exigency has arisen, or is it to be considered as an open question, upon which every officer to whom the orders of the President are addressed, may decide for himself, and equally open to be contested by every militia-man who shall refuse to obey the orders of the President? We are all of opinion that the authority to decide whether the exigency has arisen, belongs exclusively to the President, and that his decision is conclusive upon all other persons." Martin v. Mott, (1827) 12 Wheat. 19, 6 U. S. (L. ed.) 537.

It has, however, been ruled by the Attorney-General that the Constitution, which enumerates the exclusive purposes for which the militia may be called into the service of the United States affords no warrant for the use of the militia by the general government, except to suppress insurrection, repel invasions, or to execute the laws of the Union, and hence the President has no authority to call forth the organized militia of the states and send it into a foreign country with the regular army as a part of an army of occupation. (1912) 29 Op. Atty.-Gen. 322.

Under a state statute providing that each officer of the National Guard "shall be entitled to pay at the same rates in every respect, as the corresponding grades may at the time be entitled to in the United States army," it has been held that such officers are given the increased pay to which United States officers are entitled on account of length of service. State v. Dudley, (1910) 178 Ind. 633, 91 N. E. 228.

Joint Resolution To authorize the President to draft members of the National Guard and of the Organized Militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia and members of the National Guard and Militia Reserve into the military service of the United States under certain conditions, and for other purposes.

[Res. of July 1, 1916, No. 211, 39 Stat. L. 339.]

[SEC. 1.] [Drafting National Guard, etc., into federal service — period of service.] That in the opinion of the Congress of the United States an emergency now exists which demands the use of troops in addition to the Regular Army of the United States, and that the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to draft into the military service of the United States, under the provisions of section one hundred and eleven of the national defense Act approved June third, nineteen hundred and sixteen, so far as the provisions of said section may be applicable and not inconsistent with the terms hereof, any or all members of the National Guard and of the Organized Militia of the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia and any and all members of the National Guard and Organized Militia Reserves, to serve for the period of the emergency, not exceeding three years, unless sooner discharged: Provided, That all persons so drafted shall, from the date of their draft, stand discharged from the militia during the period of their service under said draft. [39 Stat. L. 339.]

The Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, § 111 mentioned in this section is given in the preceding paragraph of the text.

The Army Appropriation Act of Aug. 29, 1916, ch. 418, § 1, 39 Stat. L. 633 contained a provision as follows:

"That when members of the National Guard, who have been mustered into the service of the United States, have been discharged under the order of the War Department which provides that members of the National Guard with dependent families may be mustered out, transportation from their position on the Mexican border to their homes may be authorized by the Secretary of War; of persons on their discharge from the United States disciplinary barracks or from any place in which they have been held under a sentence of dishonorable discharge and confinement for more than six months, or from the Government Hospital for the Insane after transfer thereto from such barracks or place, to their homes (or elsewhere as they may elect), provided the cost in each case shall not be greater than to the place of last enlistment."

SEC. 2. [Pensions.] That the provisions of section one hundred and twelve of the national defense Act of June third, nineteen hundred and sixteen, shall be applicable to any officer or enlisted man drafted into the service of the United States pursuant to the provisions of this joint resolution. [39 Stat. L. 340.]

SEC. 3. [Organizations — officers — vacancies.] That when organizations the members of which are drafted under the provisions of this resolution do not constitute complete tactical units the President may, by combining such organizations, organize battalions, regiments, brigades, and divisions, and may appoint officers for such units from the Regular Army, from the members of such organizations, from those duly qualified and registered pursuant to section twenty-three of the Act of Congress approved January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, or members of the Officers Reserve Corps as provided in section thirty-eight of the national defense Act of June third, nineteen hundred and sixteen, officers with rank not above that of colonel to be appointed by the President alone and all other officers to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate: Provided, That vacancies incident to the appointment of officers of the Regular Army to the positions in the forces drafted for this emergency may be filled under the provisions of section eight of the Act of April twenty-fifth, nineteen hundred and fourteen. [39 Stat. L. 340.]

For the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 190, § 23 mentioned in this section see War Department and Military Establishment.

The Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, § 38, mentioned in this section is given in War Department and Military Establishment.

For the Act of April 25, 1914, ch. 71, § 8, also mentioned in this section see War Department and Military Establishment.

SEC. 4. [Rank and precedence.] That whenever in time of war or public danger or during the emergency declared in section one of this resolution, two or more officers of the same grade are on duty in the same field, department, or command, or organizations thereof, the President may assign the command of the forces of such field, department, or command, or of any organization thereof, without regard to seniority of rank in the same grade. In the absence of such assignment by the President, officers of the same grade shall rank and have precedence in the following order without regard to date of rank or commission as between officers of different classes, namely: First, officers of the Regular Army and officers of the Marine Corps detached for service with the Army by order of the President; second, officers of forces drafted into the military service of the United States: Provided, That officers of the Regular Army holding commissions in forces drafted into the service of the United States shall rank and have precedence under said commissions as if they were commissioned in the Regular Army; but the rank of officers of the Regular Army under their commissions in the forces drafted into the service of the United States shall not for the purpose of this resolution be held to antedate muster or draft into the service of the

SEC. 115. [Physical examination.] Every officer and enlisted man of the National Guard who shall be called into the service of the United States as such shall be examined as to his physical fitness under such regulations as the President may prescribe without further commission or enlistment: Provided, That immediately preceding the muster out of an officer or enlisted man, called into the active service of the United States he shall be physically examined under rules prescribed by the President of the United States, and the record thereof shall be filed and kept in the War Department. [39 Stat. L. 212.]

This is from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134.
This section together with section 111 of this Act, supra, p. 444, would seem to supersede the Act of Jan. 21, 1909, ch. 196, § 7, 32 Stat. L. 776, as amended by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, 35 Stat. L. 401, reading as follows:
"SEC. 7. That every officer and enlisted man of the militia who shall be called forth in the manner hereinafter prescribed, shall be mustered for service without further enlistment, and without further medical examination previous to such muster, except for those States and Territories which have not adopted the standard of medical examination prescribed for the Regular Army: Provided, however, That any officer or enlisted man of the militia who shall refuse or neglect to present himself for such muster, upon being called forth as herein prescribed, shall be subject to trial by court-martial and shall be punished as such court-martial may direct."

Consent of parents or guardian.—The provision in the superseded section that, when called into service by the President, no further enlistment is necessary, simply does away with the delay necessary to the physical examination or other prerequisites of a similar nature to the enlistment of the soldier, and has no reference to the necessity of the consent of his parents or guardian. Acker v. Bell,

SEC. 8. [Courts-martial — composition.] That the majority membership of courts-martial for the trial of officers or men of the militia when in the service of the United States shall be composed of militia officers. [32 Stat.
L. 776, as amended by 35 Stat. L. 401.]

This is a part of the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196.
As originally enacted this section was as follows:
"SEC. 8. That courts-martial for the trial of officers or men of the militia, when in the service of the United States, shall be composed of militia officers only."

It was amended to read as given in the text by the Militia Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, § 6.
For other provisions relating to courts-martial, see Articles of War; War Department and Military Establishment.

SEC. 101. [National Guard, when subject to laws governing Regular Army.] The National Guard when called as such into the service of the United States shall, from the time they are required by the terms of the call to respond thereto, be subject to the laws and regulations governing the Regular Army, so far as such laws and regulations are applicable to officers and enlisted men whose permanent retention in the military service, either on the active list or on the retired list, is not contemplated by existing law. [39 Stat. L. 208.]

This and the following sections 102–108 are from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134. The former provisions on this subject were contained in the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 3. 32 Stat. L. 776, which read as follows:

"Sec. 3. That the militia, when called into the actual service of the United States, shall be subject to the same Rules and Articles of War as the regular troops of the United States."

SEC. 102. [System of courts-martial for National Guard.] Except in organizations in the service of the United States, courts-martial in the National Guard shall be of three kinds, namely, general courts-martial, special courts-martial, and summary courts-martial. They shall be constituted like, and have cognizance of the same subjects, and possess like powers, except as to punishments, as similar courts provided for by the laws and regulations governing the Army of the United States, and the proceedings of courts-martial of the National Guard shall follow the forms and modes of procedure prescribed for said similar courts. Special courts-martial shall have power to try any person subject to military law, except a commissioned officer, for any crime or offense made punishable by the military laws of the United States, and such special courts-martial shall have the same powers of punishment as do general courts-martial, except that fines imposed by such courts shall not exceed $100. [39 Stat. L. 208.]

See the note to section 101 of this Act, supra, p. 449.

[Summary courts-martial.] In the National Guard, not in the service of the United States, the commanding officer of each garrison, fort, post, or other place, regiment or corps, detached battalion, company, or other detachment of the National Guard may appoint for such place or command a summary court to consist of one officer, who shall have power to administer oaths and to try the enlisted men of such place or command for breaches of discipline and violations of laws governing such organizations; and said court, when satisfied of the guilt of such soldier, may impose fines not exceeding $25 for any single offense; may sentence noncommissioned officer to reduction to the ranks; may sentence to forfeiture of pay and allowances. The proceedings of such court shall be informal, and the minutes thereof shall be the same as prescribed for summary courts of the Army of the United States. [39 Stat. L. 208.]

See the note to section 101 of this Act, supra, p. 449.

Sec. 106. [Courts-martial—sentences.] All courts-martial of the National Guard, not in the service of the United States, including summary courts, shall have the power to sentence to confinement in lieu of fines authorized to be imposed: Provided, That such sentences of confinement shall not exceed one day for each dollar of fine authorized. [39 Stat. L. 209.]

See the note to section 101 of this Act, supra, p. 449.

Sec. 107. [Approval of sentences.] No sentence of dismissal from the service or dishonorable discharge, imposed by a National Guard court-martial, not in the service of the United States, shall be executed until approved by the governor of the State or Territory concerned, or by the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia. [39 Stat. L. 209.]

See the note to section 101 of this Act, supra, p. 449.

Sec. 108. [Courts-martial—securing attendance of parties and witnesses—process.] In the National Guard, not in the service of the United States, presidents of courts-martial and summary court officers shall have power to issue warrants to arrest accused persons and to bring them before the court for trial whenever such persons shall have disobeyed an order in writing from the convening authority to appear before such court, a copy of the charge or charges having been delivered to the accused with such order, and to issue subpoenas and subpoenas duces tecum and to enforce by attachment attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers, and to sentence for a refusal to be sworn or to answer as provided in actions before civil courts.

and sentences shall be executed by a United States marshal or his duly appointed deputy, and it shall be the duty of any United States marshal to execute all such processes and sentences and make return thereof to the officer issuing or imposing the same. [39 Stat. L. 309.]

SEC. 11. [Commencement of pay.] That when the militia is called into the actual service of the United States, or any portion of the militia is called forth under the provisions of this Act, their pay shall commence from the day of their appearing at the place of company rendezvous, but this provision shall not be construed to authorize any species of expenditure previous to arriving at such places of rendezvous which is not provided by existing laws to be paid after their arrival at such place of rendezvous. [32 Stat. L. 776, as amended by 35 Stat. L. 401.]

This is from the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196.
This section was amended to read as given in the text by the Militia Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, § 7. The amendment consisted in the substitution after the words "any portion of the militia" of the words "is called forth" in lieu of the words "is accepted" which had appeared in the original text.

SEC. 67. [Appropriation, apportionment, and disbursement of funds for the National Guard.] A sum of money shall hereafter be appropriated

That the sum of two million dollars is hereby annually appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of providing arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for issue to the militia, such appropriation to remain available until expended."

The Act of Aug. 18, 1894, ch. 301, 28 Stat. L. 406, provided that the permanent annual appropriation made by this section should "not lapse with the end of any fiscal year nor be turned into the surplus fund, but shall remain a permanent appropriation and be available for the several States and Territories and District of Columbia until expended as provided in said Acts, or otherwise disposed of by Congress." This was superseded by said R. S. sec. 1661, as last amended, by which such appropriation was to "remain available until expended."

"Sec. 2. That said appropriation shall be apportioned among the several States and Territories, under the direction of the Secretary of War, according to the number of Senators and Representatives to which each State respectively is entitled in the Congress of the United States, and to the Territories and District of Columbia such proportion and under such regulations as the President may prescribe: Provided, however, That no State shall be entitled to the benefits of the appropriation apportioned to it unless the number of its regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia shall be at least one hundred men for each Senator and Representative to which such State is entitled in the Congress of the United States. And the amount of said appropriation which is thus determined not to be available shall be covered back into the Treasury: Provided also, That the sums so apportioned among the several States and Territories and the District of Columbia shall be available for the purposes named in section fourteen of the Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, for the actual excess of expenses of travel in making the inspections therein provided for over the allowances made for the same by law; for the promotion of rifle practice, including the acquisition, construction, maintenance, and equipment of shooting galleries and suitable target ranges; for the hiring of horses and draft animals for the use of mounted troops, batteries, and wagons; for forage for the same and for such other incidental expenses in connection with encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction provided for in sections fourteen and fifteen of the said Act of January twenty-first, nineteen hundred and three, as the Secretary of War may deem necessary."

A provision of the Act of June 13, 1890, ch. 423, 26 Stat. L. 156, reading as follows:

"That hereafter the cost of the Ordnance Department of all ordnance and ordnance stores issued to the States, Territories, and District of Columbia, under the act of February twelfth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, shall be credited to the appropriation for "manufacture of arms at national armories," and used to procure like ordnance stores, and that said appropriation shall be available until exhausted, not exceeding two years."

A provision of the Act of April 27, 1914, ch. 72, 38 Stat. L. 306, reading as follows:

"That hereafter the allotment to any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, from the annual appropriation made by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one, Revised Statutes, as amended, shall be available for the purposes specified by law only under such conditions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War to secure effective organizational field or camp service for instruction and generally increased field efficiency on the part of the Organized Militia."

Sec. 119. [Annual estimates required.] The Secretary of War shall cause to be estimated annually the amount necessary for carrying out the provisions of so much of this Act as relates to the militia, and no money shall be expended under said provisions except as shall from time to time be appropriated for carrying them out. [39 Stat. L. 213.]

See the note to section 66 of this Act, supra, p. 453.

Sec. 3. [Purchase of arms, etc., and accountability.] That the purchase or manufacture of arms, ordnance stores, quartermaster stores, and camp equipage for the militia under the provisions of this Act shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War, as such arms, ordnance and quartermaster stores, and camp equipage are now manufactured or otherwise provided for the use of the Regular Army, and they shall be received for and shall remain the property of the United States, and be annually accounted for by the governors of the States and Territories and by the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, for which purpose the Secretary of War shall prescribe and supply the necessary blanks and make such regulations as he may deem necessary to protect the interests of the United States. [24 Stat. L. 402, as amended by 34 Stat. L. 450.]

This section is part of an Act of Feb. 12, 1887, ch. 129. This section was amended to read as given in the text by an Act of June 23, 1906, ch. 3515, § 3. The amendment consisted in the addition of the words "and by the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia" after the word "Territories" making the section to read as here given.

The "provisions of this Act" relating to the purchase, etc., of arms, etc., mentioned in this section were those made by section 1 of this Act, which amended R. S. sec. 1661, noted under the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134, § 87, supra, p. 464.

When a state or territory had an unex- pended balance to its credit under the old law on June 30, 1887, which remained available, the attorney-general advised that such balance could be drawn upon to supply ordnance stores to it. But when the quota belonging to any state or territory under the old law had been over- drawn, the amount overdrawn was not chargeable to such state or territory under the new law. (1887) 19 Op. Atty.-Gen. 61.

Replacing arms and stores used in war.

— In the absence of any of the approv- iation for the maintenance of the militia in the several states, or of arms, ordnance stores, etc., purchased with it, the govern- ment is not required or empowered to issue to the several states stores in kind to replace such arms, ordnance stores, etc., as were exhausted, consumed, or im- paired by use in the war with Spain; nor can it make compensation for such stores, as they were the property of the United States. (1899) 22 Op. Atty.-Gen. 372.

SEC. 87. [Disposition and replacement of damaged property, and so forth.] All military property issued to the National Guard as herein pro- vided shall remain the property of the United States. Whenever any such property issued to the National Guard in any State or Territory or the Dis- trict of Columbia, shall have been lost, damaged, or destroyed, or become unserviceable or unsuitable by use in service or from any other cause, it shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the Regular Army or the National Guard, detailed by the Secretary of War, and the report of such surveying officer shall be forwarded to the Secretary of War, or to such officer as he shall designate to receive such reports; and if it shall appear to the Secretary of War from the record of survey that the property was lost, damaged, or destroyed through unavoidable causes, he is hereby authorized to relieve the State or Territory or the District of Columbia from further accountability therefor. If it shall appear that the loss, damage, or destruction of property was due to carelessness or neglect, or that its loss, damage, or destruction could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care, the money value of such property shall be charged to the accountable State, Territory, or District of Columbia, to be paid from State, Territory, or District funds, or any funds other than Federal. If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the Secretary of War shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them; and if sold, the proceeds of such sale, as well as stoppages against officers and enlisted men, and the net proceeds of collections made from any person or from any State, Territory, or District to reimburse the Government for the loss, damage, or destruction of any property, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States as a credit to said State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, accountable for said property, and as a part of and in addition to that portion of its allotment set aside for the purchase of similar supplies, stores, or material of war: Provided further, That if any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia shall neglect or refuse to pay, or to cause to be paid, the money equivalent of any loss, damage, or destruction of property charged against such State, Territory, or the District of Columbia by the Secretary of War after survey by a disinterested officer appointed as hereinbefore provided, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to debar such State, Territory, or the District of Columbia from further participation in any and all appropriations for the National Guard until such payment shall have been made. [39 Stat. L. 204.]

These and the following sections 88, 83-85 were from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134. The former provision on this subject was made by the Act of Feb. 12, 1887, ch. 129, §4, 24 Stat. L. 402, as amended by the Act of June 22, 1906, ch. 3515, §4, 34 Stat. L. 450, as follows:

"Sec. 4. That whenever any property furnished to any State or Territory, or the District of Columbia, as hereinbefore provided, has been lost or destroyed, or has become unserviceable or unsuitable from use in service, or from any other cause, it shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the organized militia, to be appointed by the governor of the State or Territory, or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, to whom the property has been issued, and his report shall be forwarded by said governor or commanding general direct to the Secretary of War, and if it shall appear to the Secretary of War from the record of survey that the property has been lost or destroyed through unavoidable causes, he is hereby authorized to relieve the State from further accountability therefor; if it shall appear that the loss or destruction of property was due to carelessness or neglect or that its loss could have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care, the money value thereof shall be charged against the allotment to the States under section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes as amended. If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the Secretary of War shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, except unserviceable clothing which shall be destroyed, and if sold the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States."

Sec. 88. [Proceeds of sale of condemned stores—disposition.] The net proceeds of the sale of condemned stores issued to the National Guard and not charged to State allotments shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States, as shall also stoppages against officers and enlisted men, and the net proceeds of collections made from any person to reimburse the Government for the loss, damage, or destruction of said property not charged against the State allotment issued for the use of the National Guard. [39 Stat. L. 205.]

See the note to the preceding section 87 of this Act.

Sec. 83. [Issuance by Secretary of War.] The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to procure, under such regulations as the President may prescribe, by purchase or manufacture, within the limits of available appropriations made by Congress, and to issue from time to time to the National Guard, upon requisition of the governors of the several States and Territories or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, such number of United States service arms, with all accessories, field-artillery matériel, engineer, coast artillery, signal, and sanitary matériel, accoutrements, field uniforms, clothing, equipage, publications, and military stores of all kinds, including public animals, as are necessary to arms, uniform, and equip for field service the National Guard in the several States, Territories, and the District of Columbia: Provided, That as a condition precedent to the issue of any property as provided for by this Act, the State, Territory, or the District of Columbia desiring such issue shall make adequate provision, to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War, for the protection and care of such property: Provided further, That, whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of War that the National Guard of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, is properly organized, armed, and equipped for field service, funds allotted to that State, Territory, or District for the support of its National Guard may be used for the purchase of any article issued by any of the supply departments of the Army.

"Sec. 14. That whenever it shall appear by the report of inspections, which it shall be the duty of the Secretary of War to cause to be made at least once in each year by officers detailed by him for that purpose, that the organized militia of a State or Territory or of the District of Columbia is sufficiently armed, uniformed, and equipped for active duty in the field, the Secretary of War is authorized, on the requisition of the governor of such State or Territory, to pay to the quartermaster-general thereof, or to such other officer of the militia of said State as the said governor may designate and appoint for the purpose, so much of its allotment out of the said annual appropriation under section sixteen hundred and sixty-one of the Revised Statutes as amended as shall be necessary for the payment, subsistence, and transportation of such portion of said organized militia as shall engage in actual field or camp service for instruction, and the officers and enlisted men of such militia while so engaged shall be entitled to the same pay, subsistence, and transportation or travel allowances as officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades of the Regular Army are or may hereafter be entitled by law, and the officer so designated and appointed shall be regarded as a disbursing officer of the United States, and shall render his accounts through the War Department to the proper accounting officers of the Treasury for settlement, and he shall be required to give good and sufficient bonds to the United States, in such sums as the Secretary of War may direct, faithfully to account for the safe-keeping and payment of public money so intrusted to him for disbursement."

Sec. 67. [Property and disbursing officers.] • • • The governor of each State and Territory and the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia shall appoint, designate, or detail, subject to the approval of the Secretary of War, an officer of the National Guard of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia who shall be regarded as property and disbursing officer for the United States. He shall receipt and account for all funds and property belonging to the United States in possession of the National Guard of his State, Territory, or District, and shall make such returns and reports concerning the same as may be required by the Secretary of War. authorities he shall be reimbursed for his actual necessary traveling expenses, the sum to be made a charge against the allotment of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia: Provided further, That the Secretary of War shall cause an inspection of the accounts and records of the property is empowered to make all rules and regulations necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section. [39 Stat. L. 200.]

See the note to the preceding section 93 of this Act.
The preceding part of this section is given supra, p. 463.

SEC. 116. [Noncompliance with Federal Act.] Whenever any State shall, within a limit of time to be fixed by the President, have failed or refused to comply with or enforce any requirements of this Act, or any regulation promulgated thereunder and in aid thereof by the President or the Secretary of War, the National Guard of such State shall be debarred, wholly or in part, as the President may direct, from receiving from the United States any pecuniary or other aid, benefit, or privilege authorized or provided by this Act or any other law. [39 Stat. L. 212.]

See the note to section 93 of this Act, supra, p. 463.

[Bonds not required of militia officers.] * * * That officers of the organized militia who may hereafter be furnished, under proper authority, with funds for the purchase of coffee, or other components of the travel ration for the use of their respective commands, shall not be required to

L. 117.]

This is from the Army Appropriation Act of May 11, 1908, ch. 163.

SEC. 94. [Encampments and maneuvers.] Under such regulations as the President may prescribe the Secretary of War is authorized to provide for the participation of the whole or any part of the National Guard in encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises, including outdoor target practice, for field or coast-defense instruction, either independently or in conjunction with any part of the Regular Army, and there may be set aside from the funds appropriated for that purpose and allotted to any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, such portion of said funds as may be necessary for the payment, subsistence, transportation, and other proper expenses of such portion of the National Guard of such State, Territory, or the District of Columbia as shall participate in such encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises, including outdoor target practice, for field and coast-defense instruction; and the officers and enlisted men of such National Guard while so engaged shall be entitled to the same pay, subsistence, and transportation as officers and enlisted men of corresponding grades of the Regular Army are or hereafter may be entitled by law. [39 Stat. L. 206.]

This and the following sections 95 and 97 are from the Act of June 3, 1916, ch. 134. The former provisions relating to the matter mentioned in these sections was contained in the Dick Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, § 15, 32 Stat. L. 777, which, as amended by the Act of May 27, 1908, ch. 204, § 9, 35 Stat. L. 402, and the Act of April 21, 1910, ch. 185, 36 Stat. L. 329, was as follows:

"Sec. 15. That the Secretary of War is authorized to provide for participation by any part of the organized militia of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, on the request of the governor of a State or Territory, or the commanding-general of the militia of the District of Columbia, in the encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction of any part of the Regular Army, at or near any military post or camp or lake or sea-coast defenses of the United States. In such case the organized militia so participating shall receive the same pay, subsistence, and transportation as is provided by law for the officers and men of the Regular Army, and no part of the sums appropriated for the support of the Regular Army shall be used to pay any part of the expenses of the organized militia of any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, while engaged in joint encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction of the Regular Army and militia: Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized, under requisition of the governor of a State or Territory or the commanding-general of the militia of the District of Columbia, to pay to the quartermaster-general, or such other officer of the militia as may be duly designated and appointed for the purpose, so much of its allotment, under the annual appropriation authorized by section sixteen hundred and sixty-one, Revised Statutes, as amended, as shall be necessary for the payment, subsistence, transportation, and other expenses of such portion of the organized militia as may engage in encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction with any part of the Regular Army at or near any military post or camp or lake or sea-coast defenses of the United States, and the Secretary of War shall forward to Congress, at each session next after said encampments, a detailed statement of the expense of such encampments and maneuvers: Provided, That the command of such military post or camp and the officers and troops of the United States there stationed shall remain with the regular commander of the post without regard to the rank of the commanding or other officers of the militia temporarily so encamped within its limits or in its vicinity: Provided further, That except as herein specified the right to command during such joint encampments, maneuvers, and field instruction shall be governed by the rules set out in Articles One Hundred and twenty-two and One hundred and twenty-four of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States."

Purpose of Act.—When the Act of Jan. 21, 1903, ch. 196, was enacted, Congress were not legislating to reward the officers of the militia for long and faithful service, but were merely providing a method whereby the militia at the request of the governor of a state might be instructed by experienced army officers. Bowie v. U. S., (1909) 45 Ct. Cl. 42.

Word "troops" construed.—The section here quoted implies a distinction between "the troops of the United States" stationed at a military post and "the militia temporarily encamped" there for instruction, in its provision that the regular commander of the post shall remain in command without regard to the rank of the commanding officers of the militia present. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 522.

Under the Constitution and military laws of Alabama and Mississippi the active militia or National Guard is enrolled for certain specific purposes, and while so enrolled as soldiers of the State they are not "troops" within the meaning of section 10, article 1, of the Federal Constitution. Alabama Great Southern R. Co. v. U. S., (1914) 49 Ct. Cl. 522.

Sec. 95. [Commanding officers at encampments, etc.] When any part of the National Guard participates in encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises, including outdoor target practice, for field or coast-defense instruction at a United States military post, or reservation, or elsewhere, if in conjunction with troops of the United States, the command of such military post or reservation and of the officers and troops of the United States on duty there or elsewhere shall remain with the commander of the United States troops without regard to the rank of the commanding or other officer of the National Guard temporarily engaged in the encampments, maneuvers, or other exercises. [39 Stat. L. 207.]

See the note to the preceding section 93 of this Act.

SEC. 97. [Camps for instruction of National Guard.] Under such regulations as the President may prescribe the Secretary of War may provide camps for the instruction of officers and enlisted men of the National Guard. Such camps shall be conducted by officers of the Regular Army detailed by the Secretary of War for that purpose, and may be located either within or without the State, Territory, or District of Columbia to which the members of the National Guard designated to attend said camps shall belong. Officers and enlisted men attending such camps shall be entitled to pay and transportation, and enlisted men to subsistence in addition, at the same rates as for encampments or maneuvers for field or coast-defense instruction. [39 Stat. L. 207.]

See the note to section 94 of this Act, supra, p. 464.

[Sec. 1.] [Reduced rates by common carriers to National Guard.]
- • • That hereafter nothing in the Act of February fourth, eighteen hundred and eighty-seven, known as the Act to regulate commerce, or any amendments thereto, shall be construed to prohibit any common carrier from giving reduced rates for members of National Guard organizations traveling to and from joint encampments with the Regular Army. [39 Stat. L. 646.]

Applicability generally.—An employee of a department absent from his duty while at Omaha, Nebr., at a prize drill duly ordered by a superior officer of the National Guard, of which he was a member, is entitled to his pay while absent. (1892) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 437.

So leaves of absence of employees of the government in the discharge of military duties are not to be charged to the thirty days allowed them annually for rest and recreation. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 353.

But it has been ruled by the attorney-general that employees of the United States who are members of the National Guard are not entitled to leave of absence from their respective duties without loss of pay or time in order to engage in rifle practice, even although in the general orders of the commanding general of the militia such rifle practice may be called a parade. (1893) 20 Op. Atty.-Gen. 699.

Effect of Civil Service Act.—This section was not repealed or modified by the Act of March 3, 1893, ch. 211, § 5, given in Civil Service, vol. 2, p. 164. The object of the former was to provide for the public defense and that of the latter to regulate leaves of absence for private reasons or purposes. There is, therefore, no inconsistency between the two acts. (1896) 21 Op. Atty.-Gen. 353.

[SEC. 1.] [Members of National Guard of District of Columbia—interest in claims.] * * * That members of the National Guard of the District of Columbia who receive compensation for their services as such shall not be held or construed to be officers of the United States, or persons holding any place of trust or profit, or discharging any official function under or in connection with any Executive Department of the Government of the United States within the provision of section fifty-four hundred and ninety-eight of the Revised Statutes of the United States. [31 Stat. L. 844.]

This is from the District of Columbia Appropriation Act of March 1, 1901, ch. 670. A similar provision appeared in the Act of June 6, 1900, ch. 789, 31 Stat. L. 577. R. S. sec. 5498 mentioned in the text forbidding officers of the United States to prosecute, or assist or be interested in the prosecution of claims against the United States, except in the discharge of their official duties, was incorporated in Penal Laws, § 109, and repealed by section 341 thereof. See Penal Laws.

arising from the necessity to execute the laws of the United States suppress insurrection, or repel invasion, can not be met by the regular forces, the Naval Militia qualified as herein provided and any existing Naval Reserve now or hereafter organized shall be called into the service of the United States in advance of any volunteer naval force which it may then be determined to raise: And provided further, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the Secretary of the Navy, when vessels are purchased or otherwise acquired by the United States for a war, from manning such vessels by all or part of the officers and men then serving on said vessels. [38 Stat. L. 284.]

See the note to section 9 of this Act, supra, p. 489.

Such officers and men, so enrolled by commission, warrant, or enlistment, shall be eligible and liable for call for immediate service in the event of any such emergency. [39 Stat. L. 595.]

This and the three paragraphs of the text following are from the Naval Appropriation Act of Aug. 29, 1918, ch. 417.

Such examination shall be under such rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy. The record of previous service of the applicant shall be considered as part of the examination. These applicants who pass such examinations shall be certified as to their fitness for naval duties and rank, and shall, subject to a physical examination at any time, constitute an eligible class for commissions, pursuant to such certification, in any volunteer naval force hereafter called for and organized under the authority of Congress other than a force composed of Organized Naval Militia; and the President is hereby further authorized, upon the outbreak of war, or when, in his opinion, war is imminent, to commission in the regular Navy for the exigency of such war such of the persons whose names have been certified as above provided as he may select: Provided, That no one shall be commissioned to a higher rank than the rank for which he may have been recommended by said examining board: And provided further, That the President may also, commission or warrant as of the highest rank formerly held by him, or the present equivalent of such former

I. BUREAU OF MINES

An Act To establish in the Department of the Interior a Bureau of Mines.

[Sec. 1.] [Bureau established—director—experts and employees.]
That there is hereby established in the Department of the Interior a bureau of mining, metallurgy, and mineral technology, to be designated the Bureau of Mines, and there shall be a director of said bureau, who shall be thoroughly equipped for the duties of said office by technical education and experience and who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive a salary of six thousand dollars per annum; and there shall be in the said bureau such experts and other employees, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, as may be required to carry out the purposes of this Act in accordance with the appropriations made from time to time by Congress for such purposes. [37 Stat. L. 681.]

The provisions of this and the following sections 2-6 of this Act were originally enacted as the "Bureau of Mines" Act of May 16, 1910, ch. 240, 36 Stat. L. 369. By an Act of Feb. 25, 1913, ch. 72, entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act to establish in the Department of the Interior a Bureau of Mines,' approved May sixteenth, nineteen hundred and ten," the enacting clause of which was as follows: "That the Act to establish in the Department of the Interior a Bureau of Mines, approved May sixteenth, nineteen hundred and ten, be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:" said Act of May 16, 1910, ch. 240, was amended to read as given in the foregoing section 1 and the following sections 2-6.
As originally enacted the Act of May 16, 1910, ch. 240, was as follows:

"[Sec. 1.] That there is hereby established in the Department of the Interior a bureau, to be called the Bureau of Mines, and a director of said bureau, who shall be thoroughly equipped for the duties of said office by technical education and experience and who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive a salary of six thousand dollars per annum; and there shall also be in the said bureau such experts and other employees as may from time to time be authorized by Congress.

"Sec. 2. That it shall be the province and duty of said bureau and its director, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to make diligent investigation of the methods of mining, especially in relation to the safety of miners, and the appliances best adapted to prevent accidents, the possible improvement of conditions under which mining operations are carried on, the treatment of ores and other mineral substances, the use of explosives and electricity, the prevention of accidents, and other inquiries and technological investigations pertinent to said industries, and from time to time make such public reports of the work, investigations, and information obtained as the Secretary of said department may direct, with the recommendations of such bureau.

"Sec. 3. That the Secretary of the Interior shall provide the said bureau with furnished offices in the city of Washington, with such books, records, stationery, and appliances, and such assistants, clerks, stenographers, typewriters, and other employees as may be necessary for the proper discharge of the duties imposed by this Act upon such bureau, fixing the compensation of such clerks and employees within appropriations made for that purpose.

"Sec. 4. That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to transfer to the Bureau of Mines from the United States Geological Survey the supervision of the investigations of structural materials and the analyzing and testing of coals, lignites, and other mineral fuel substances and the investigation as to the causes of mine explosions; and the appropriations made for such investigations may be expended under the supervision of the Director of the Bureau of Mines in manner as if the same were so directed in the appropriations Acts; and such investigations shall hereafter be within the province of the Bureau of Mines, and shall cease and determine under the organization of the United States Geological Survey; and such experts, employees, property and equipment as are now employed or used by the Geological Survey in connection with the subjects herewith transferred to the Bureau of Mines are directed to be transferred to said bureau.

"Sec. 5. That nothing in this Act shall be construed as in any way granting to any officer or employee of the Bureau of Mines any right or authority in connection with the inspection or supervision of mines or metallurgical plants in any State.

"Sec. 6. This Act shall take effect and be in force on and after the first day of July, nineteen hundred and ten." [36 Stat. L. 369.]

By a provision of the Act of June 25, 1910, ch. 384, 36 Stat. L. 743, so much of said Act of May 16, 1910, ch. 240, as transferred to the Bureau of Mines the supervision of the investigations of structural materials and equipment was repealed.

Sec. 2. [DUTIES OF BUREAU.] That it shall be the province and duty of the Bureau of Mines, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, to conduct inquiries and scientific and technological investigations concerning mining, and the preparation, treatment, and utilization of mineral substances with a view to improving health conditions, and increasing safety, efficiency, economic development, and conserving resources through the prevention of waste in the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries; to inquire into the economic conditions affecting these industries; to investigate explosives and peat; and on behalf of the Government to investigate the mineral fuels and unfinished mineral products belonging to, or for the use of, the United States, with a view to their most efficient mining, preparation, treatment and use; and to disseminate information concerning these subjects in such manner as will best carry out the purposes of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 681.]

See the notes to the preceding section 1 of this Act.
SEC. 3. [Reports of investigations—recommendations of Bureau.] That the director of said bureau shall prepare and publish, subject to the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, under the appropriations made from time to time by Congress, reports of inquiries and investigations, with appropriate recommendations of the bureau, concerning the nature, causes, and prevention of accidents, and the improvement of conditions, methods, and equipment, with special reference to health, safety, and prevention of waste in the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries; the use of explosives and electricity, safety methods and appliances, and rescue and first-aid work in said industries; the causes and prevention of mine fires; and other subjects included under the provisions of this Act. [37 Stat. L. 681.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 505.

SEC. 4. [Personal interest of director or members in mines, etc.—temporary employment of experts.] In conducting inquiries and investigations authorized by this Act neither the director nor any member of the Bureau of Mines shall have any personal or private interest in any mine or the products of any mine under investigation, or shall accept employment from any private party for services in the examination of any mine or private mineral property, or issue any report as to the valuation or the management of any mine or other private mineral property: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as preventing the temporary employment by the Bureau of Mines, at a compensation not to exceed ten dollars per day, in a consulting capacity or in the investigation of special subjects, of any engineer or other expert whose principal professional practice is outside of such employment by said bureau. [37 Stat. L. 682.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 505.

SEC. 5. [Fees for tests—exceptions.] That for tests or investigations authorized by the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of this Act, other than those performed for the Government of the United States or State governments within the United States, a reasonable fee covering the necessary expenses shall be charged, according to a schedule prepared by the Director of the Bureau of Mines and approved by the Secretary of the Interior, who shall prescribe rules and regulations under which such tests and investigations may be made. All moneys received from such sources shall be paid into the Treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts. [37 Stat. L. 682.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 505.

SEC. 6. [Effect.] That this Act shall take effect and be in force on and after its passage. [37 Stat. L. 682.]

See the notes to section 1 of this Act, supra, p. 505.

[Sec. 1.] [Estimates for personal services in Bureau at Washington.] • • • For the fiscal year nineteen hundred and seventeen, and annually thereafter, estimates shall be submitted specifically for all personal services required permanently and entirely in the Bureau of Mines at Washington, District of Columbia, and previously paid from lump-sum or general appropriations. [38 Stat. L. 858.]

The provisions of the foregoing and of the following paragraph of the text are from the Sundry Civil Appropriation Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 75.

[Detail of employees — expenses — report.] * * * Persons employed during the fiscal year nineteen hundred and sixteen in field work, outside of the District of Columbia, under the Bureau of Mines, may be detailed temporarily for service in Washington, District of Columbia, for purposes of preparing results of their field work; all persons so detailed shall be paid in addition to their regular compensation only their actual traveling expenses or per diem in lieu of subsistence in going to and returning therefrom: Provided, That nothing herein shall prevent the payment to employees of the Bureau of Mines their necessary expenses or per diem, in lieu of subsistence while on temporary detail in Washington, District of Columbia, for purposes only of consultation or investigations on behalf of the United States. All details made hereunder, and the purposes of each, during the preceding fiscal year, shall be reported in the annual estimates of appropriations to Congress at the beginning of each regular session thereof. [38 Stat. L. 859.]

See the note to the preceding paragraph of this section.

An Act To provide for the establishment and maintenance of mining experiment and mine safety stations for making investigations and disseminating information among employees in mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, and for other purposes.

[Sec. 1.] [Mining experiment and safety stations — duties — number.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to establish and maintain in the several important mining regions of the United States and the Territory of Alaska, as Congress may appropriate for the necessary employees and other expenses, under the Bureau of Mines and in accordance with the provisions of the Act establishing said bureau, ten mining experiment stations and seven mine safety stations, movable or stationary, in addition to those already established, the province and duty of which shall be to make investigations and disseminate information with a view to improving conditions in the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, safeguarding life among employees, preventing unnecessary waste of resources, and otherwise contributing to the advancement of these industries: Provided, That not more than three mining experiment stations and mine safety stations hereinabove authorized shall be established in any one fiscal year under the appropriations made therefore. [38 Stat. L. 959.]

Sec. 2. [Acceptance of lands, etc., from States.] That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to accept lands, buildings, or other contributions from the several States offering to cooperate in carrying out the purposes of this Act. [38 Stat. L. 959.]
II. MINERAL LANDS AND MINING RESOURCES

Sec. 2318. [Mineral lands reserved.] In all cases lands valuable for minerals shall be reserved from sale, except as otherwise expressly directed by law. [R.S.]

Act of July 4, 1866, ch. 166, 14 Stat. L. 86.
Sections 2315-2362 constitute chapter 6 (entitled "Mineral Lands and Mining Resources") of title 32 (entitled "The Public Lands") of the Revised Statutes.

Generally.—After Dec. 1, 1873, title to lands known at the time to be valuable for their minerals, could only have been acquired under provisions specially authorizing their sale, as found in this chapter, except in the states of Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, and after May 5, 1876, in the states of Missouri and Kansas. By the Act of Congress of this latter date, "deposits of coal, iron, lead, or other mineral" in Missouri and Kansas were excluded from the operation of the Act of May 10, 1872, that is, from such provisions of that Act as were re-enacted in the Revised Statutes. In those portions of the Revised Statutes which relate to pre-emption and to homestead entries the clauses from the original acts excepting mineral lands are retained. R. S. secs. 2255, 2302 (title PUBLIC LANDS). Deffebach v. Hawke, (1885) 115 U. S. 392, 6 S. Ct. 95, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 423. See also Davis v. Weibold, (1891) 159 U. S. 507, 11 S. Ct. 626, 35 U. S. (L. ed.) 238.

"This [text section] must be taken, in view of the fact that prior to the Act of July 4, 1866, no law authorized the sale or disposal of any mineral lands belonging to the United States, and the further fact that subsequent laws incorporated in the Revised Statutes provide expressly how title to such lands may be acquired, as limiting the power and authority of the land department in disposing of the public lands valuable for minerals to some method and under such conditions as may be specifically pointed out by some Act of Congress." Kansas City Min., etc., Co. v. Clay, (3 Ariz. 326, 1802) 29 Pac. 9.

R. S. secs. 2318-2328 relate mainly, if not exclusively, to mineral lodes or veins, and, among other things, they fix the amount or quantity of land which may be acquired under any one claim, the maximum of which is 1,500 feet along its length and 300 feet in width on each side of it, subject to further limitations under acts of the state legislatures, and the mining rules of the district. Reynolds v. Iron Silver Min. Co., (1886) 116 U. S. 687, 6 S. Ct. 601, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 774.

Lands reserved.—It is not only valuable mineral lands and deposits that are reserved from sale. A township map showing a mining claim upon which there was upon the section "copper, gold, and silver bearing quartz," does not tend to show whether it was there in quantity or quality sufficient to make the land valuable for mining purposes. Merrill v. Dixon, (1880) 15 Nev. 401.

Lands valuable for minerals.—It is not enough to render lands valuable for minerals that there is some trace of minerals, but there must be minerals in such quantities as to justify the expenditure of effort to extract them; but it is not necessary that minerals of sufficient amount and value to allow immediate profitable working be shown to exist in the land, and it is enough if the vein or deposit has a present or prospective commercial value. Madison v. Octave Oil Co., (1908) 154 Cal. 768, 90 Pac. 176.

As to the effect of this statute qualifying a grant of lands to a state by enabling act, see Milner v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 431, 143 C. C. A. 13, distinguishing Sweet v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1915) 228 Fed. 421, 143 C. C. A. 3, wherein it was held that the grant of lands to Utah for school purposes was not a sale, and this section reserving mineral lands from sale was not applicable thereto.

Reserved for military purposes.—Mineral lands belonging to the public domain, which are reserved from sale under this section, may be reserved for military or other public purposes by the President. (1881) 17 Op. Atty.-Gen. 230.

Question of fact.—The question whether land is mining land, or valuable for minerals, is one of fact, which is the peculiar province of the land department of the United States to determine before the patent is issued. The issuance of such patent is conclusive in the absence of fraud, mistake, or imposition. Standard Quicksilver Co. v. Habashaw, (1901) 132 Cal. 115, 64 Pac. 113.

Sufficiency of evidence.—As to the sufficiency of evidence to prove that lands were mineral lands, see Madison v. Octave Oil Co., (1908) 154 Cal. 768, 90 Pac. 176.

Fraudulent purchase as agricultural land.—U. S. v. Culver, (W. D. Ark. 1892) 52 Fed. 81, was a suit brought for the purpose of procuring the cancellation of two patents issued by the government to the defendant to certain lands named in the complaint. The lands were purchased under a presidential proclamation, offering them, together with a large quantity of other lands, for sale, and were purchased at private sale. They were bought by private cash entry as agricultural lands, though the purchaser knew their mineral character. It was held that such a purchase vitiated the sale because of the fraud perpetrated upon the officers of the government. To similar effect see Murray v. White, (1911) 43 Mont. 423, 113 Pac. 754, Ann. Cas. 1912A 1297.

Cited.—This section was cited in Mon-tello Salt Co. v. Utah, (1911) 221 U. S.
462, 31 S. Ct. 706, 55 U. S. (L. ed.) 810,
Ann. Cas. 1912D 635, reversing (1908) 54
Utah 466, 98 Pac. 468.

Sec. 2319. [Mineral lands open to purchase by citizens.] All valuable mineral deposits in lands belonging to the United States, both surveyed and unsurveyed, are hereby declared to be free and open to exploration and purchase, and the lands in which they are found to occupation and purchase, by citizens of the United States and those who have declared their intention to become such, under regulations prescribed by law, and according to the local customs or rules of miners in the several mining-districts, so far as the same are applicable and not inconsistent with the laws of the United States.

[R. S.]

See R. S. sec. 2345, infra, p. 592.

Purpose of statute.—The object of the Act of May 10, 1872, 17 Stat. L. 91, from which the provisions of this section were carried into the Revised Statutes, was "to promote the development of the mining resources of the United States." It is so expressed in its title and such development is sought to be promoted by indicating the manner in which claims to mines can be established, and their extent, and by offering a title to the original discoverer or locator who should develop the mine discovered and located or to his assigns. McKinley v. Wheeler, (1888)
130 U. S. 639, 9 S. Ct. 638, 32 U. S.
(L. ed.) 1048.

Rights of property.—"Such right as the mining laws allow and as Congress concedes to develop and work the mines, is property in the miner, and property of great value.... Those claims are the subject of bargain and sale, and constitute very largely the wealth of the Pacific coast state. They are property in the full sense of the word, and their ownership, transfer, and use are governed by a well-defined code or codes of law, and are recognized by the states and the federal government. This claim may be sold, transferred, mortgaged, and inherited without infringing the title of the United States." Forbes v. Gracey, (1876) 94

Title by occupancy.—Title to mineral lands cannot be acquired by occupancy unless for the purpose of mining or extracting minerals. Burns v. Clark, (1901) 133 Cal. 634, 66 Pac. 12, 85 A. S. R. 233.

Persons entitled to locate claim—Corporation—A private corporation formed under the laws of a state, whose members are citizens of the United States, may locate a mining claim on the public lands of the United States. McKinley v.
638, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 1048. See also
U. S. v. Trinidad Coal, etc., Co., (1890)
187 U. S. 166, 11 S. Ct. 57, 34 U. S.

Minor.—A minor may become a locator of mineral lands under this statute. No requirement that the citizen shall be of any particular age is expressed. Thompson v. Spray, (1887) 72 Cal. 258, 14 Pac.
192.

Aliens.—The location by an alien and all the rights following from such location are voidable, not void, and are free from attack by any one except the government.

As to invalidity of a territorial statute denying right of aliens to acquire

MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING 509
mining lands, see Territory v. Lee, (1874) 2 Mont. 124.

"When application is made for the issuance of evidence of title to mining property, it is necessary to show that the applicant is a citizen of the United States, or has declared his intention to become such, before a conveyance of title can be properly issued; and, therefore, as was held by the Supreme Court in the case just cited [O’Reill v. Campbell, (1866) 116 U. S. 418 (6 S. Ct. 421, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 669)], if a party is seeking to procure the title to mining property from the United States, if taken at the proper time, the objection of alienage would prevent the acquisition of title, and such objection may be made by any one adversely interested. In such cases the sovereign is a party in fact to the prosecution, as well as a party in law, for the procurement of title, and the objection of alienage, no matter by whom suggested, is based solely upon the right of the government to interpose the fact of alienage as a bar to procuring or holding an interest in real property. If, however, the grant of title, or the equivalent, is made to an alien, it cannot be attacked by any third party." Billings v. Aspen Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 52 Fed. 250, 10 U. S. App. 322, 3 C. C. A. 69.

"In order to acquire a right of location and purchase under this act, a party seeking to acquire such right must either be a citizen of the United States, or must have declared his intention to become such. If, therefore, Smith, or any other locator under whom plaintiff claims, was not a citizen, or had not declared his intention to become such at the time of making his location, he acquired no right, under the act, by virtue of such location." North Noonday Min. Co. v. Orient Min. Co., (C. C. Cal. 1890) 1 Fed. 522.

"If a citizen and an alien jointly locate a claim, not exceeding the amount of ground allowed to one locator, such location is void. Hill v. Hill, (1900) 22 Utah 257, 62 Pac. 803, 83 A. S. R. 786.

"Soldier honorably discharged.—An alien who is honorably discharged after serving an enlistment in the United States army, occupies the status of one who has declared his intention to become a citizen under R. S. sec. 2166 (title NATURALIZATION). The fact that a locator of mineral lands was honorably discharged from the army has a strong bearing to show a declaration of intention to become a citizen, as well as a strong circumstance tending to show naturalization, and in connection with other facts and circumstances may be sufficient to establish the fact itself. Strickley v. Hill, (1900) 22 Utah 257, 62 Pac. 803, 83 A. S. R. 786.

"Naturalization before judgment.—Manuel v. Wulff, (1894) 162 U. S. 506, 14 S. Ct. 651, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 332, was a case between two claimants of a mining claim, to determine the right to proceed in the United States land office for a patent, and proceedings were commenced in accordance with R. S. sec. 2326, infra, p. 565. The applicant at the time of making application for the patent was an alien, but it was held that naturalization before judgment removed the infirmity. See also Croesus Min., etc., Co. v. Colorado Land, etc., Co., (C. C. Colo. 1884) 19 Fed. 78.

"Right to select.—Under the provisions of a state constitution, that "foreigners who are, or who may hereafter become, bona fide residents of this state, shall enjoy the same rights in respect to the possession, enjoyment, and inheritance of property, as native born citizens," a bona fide resident of the state is capable of taking by purchase the interest of one having the right of possession under R. S. sec. 2322, infra, p. 523. Ferguson v. Neville, (1882) 61 Cal. 356.

"Right to inherit.—The question of the right of an alien to inherit a mining claim located upon government land is, as against every person but the United States, determined by the laws of the state in which the mine is located. Lohmann v. Helmer, (C. C. Ore. 1900) 104 Fed. 178. See also Billings v. Aspen Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1892) 51 Fed. 338, 10 U. S. App. 1, 2 C. C. A. 252.

"Mineral deposits distinguished from land where found.—The valuable mineral deposits mentioned in the statute are declared to be open to purchase, and are distinguished from the land in which they are found. Water v. Min. Co. v. Doe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 82 Fed. 45, 48 U. S. App. 411, 27 C. C. A. 50. But see St. Louis Min., etc., Co. v. Montana Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 113 Fed. 900, 51 C. C. A. 530, 64 L. R. A. 207.

"Stone.—Under this statute the public lands are free and open to exploration and occupation by the citizen for his own profit. This applies to all land containing valuable deposits, including building stone. The right thus granted necessarily carries with it the license to take what may be found in the course of exploration and apply it to the discoverer's own use, or option is left to him to acquire the exclusive right to the land containing deposits; but if he does not choose to do so, he may still avail himself of the deposit exclusively or in common with others, unless someone else acquires the exclusive right from the government. In getting stone upon the public domain, the person Is not a trespasser; by taking it and bestowing his labor upon it, and causing labor to be bestowed by an employee, he becomes the owner of it in fact against every person. See also the Act of Aug. 4, 1892, ch. 375, infra, p. 602. Sullivan v. Schultz, (1899) 22 Mont. 541, 57 Pac. 279.

Limes of land containing valuable deposits of building stone or limestone are permitted as "placer claims" under this section and R. S. sec. 2329, infra, p. 575, and one who had filed a coal declaratory statement on certain land may extract therefrom either stone or coal, if found therein, and become the owner of either. Johnston v. Harrington, (1892) 5 Wash. 73, 31 Pac. 316.

Limestone.—The mining laws were intended to embrace only deposits of ore, and Congress' "national" exclusions is idea of any nonmineralized deposit. Wheeler v. Smith, (1893) 5 Wash. 704, 32 Pac. 784. But see Sullivan v. Schultz, (1899) 22 Mont. 541, 57 Pac. 279.

Granite quarries.—Lands valuable solely or chiefly for granite quarrying are mineral lands. "The rulings of the land department, to which we are to look for the contemporaneous construction of these statutes, have been subject to very little fluctuation, and almost uniformly, particularly of late years, have lent strong support to the theory of the patentee, that the words 'valuable mineral deposit's' should be construed as including all lands chiefly valuable for other than agricultural purposes, and particularly as including nonmetallic substances, among which are held to be alum, asphaltum, borax, guano, diamonds, gypsum, resin, marble, mica, slate, amber, petroleum, limestone, building stone, and coal. The cases are far too numerous for citation, and there is practically no conflict in them. According to P. R. Co. v. Sodenberg, (1903) 188 U. S. 526, 23 St. Ct. 365, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 575.

Gypsum is a mineral, and lands containing it are mineral lands, within the federal statutes. Madison v. Octave Oil Co., (1908) 164 Cal. 788, 99 Pac. 176.

Exception as to lands withdrawn from sale.—"Public lands belonging to the United States, for whose sale or disposition Congress has made provision by its general laws, are to be regarded as legally open for entry and sale under such laws, unless some particular lands have been withdrawn from sale by congressional authority or by an executive withdrawal under such authority, either expressed or implied." Lockhart v. Johnson, (1901) 181 U. S. 516, 21 S. Ct. 665, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 979.

Withdrawals by President.—Withdrawals by the President of mineral lands from private acquisition have been made from time to time notwithstanding that there has been no direct authorization by Congress. Such practice having been acquiesced in by Congress leads to the presumption that the power is exercised in pursuance of the consent of Congress. U. S. v. Midwest Oil Co. (1915) 256 U. S. 469, 41 S. Ct. 306, 65 U. S. (L. ed.) 73.

Surface ground.—Necessity for appropriation of surface ground belonging to United States.—In order to make a valid mining location under this section, providing that all mineral deposits in mineral lands belonging to the United States, and the lands containing the same, shall be open to entry, etc., surface ground, including the vein or lode, must be appropriated, and such surface must be the property of the United States. Traphagen v. Kirk, (1904) 30 Mont. 562, 77 Pac. 53.

Location of lode claim after patent for placer claim.—Under this and the following sections providing for the disposition of lode or vein mining claims and placer deposits, a vein known to exist within the boundaries of a placer claim at the date of an application for a patent, and not included in the application, may be located by an adverse claimant after the issuance of the patent. Mitchum v. McCarty, (1906) 149 Cal. 603, 87 Pac. 86.

Location of mining claim through an agent.—"...Long prior to the Mineral Land Act of 1872, it had been held by the courts of California that a valid location of a mining claim could be initiated through an agent. So at that time it was well understood on this coast that the law authorized a location by an agent; or, in other words, that a valid location could be made without the locator participating in person. The law, as interpreted by the courts, had been acted upon in all this mining region until it had, in a certain sense, become a rule. Congress had full knowledge of the local laws, and had they intended to change or disaffirm this rule, it certainly would have been done by express provision. As there is no such provision, it is a fair presumption arising from section 2319, that it was the intention to affirm and continue in force this as well as all local laws and customs, as construed by the courts, not in conflict with the laws of the United States." Schultz v. Keeler, (1887) 2 Idaho 323, 13 Pac. 481. See also McCulloch v. Murphy, (C. C. Xev. 1908) 125 Fed. 147; Moore v. Hamerslag, (1895) 109 Cal. 122, 41 Pac. 805; Murley v. Ennis. (1874) 2 Colo. 300; Schultz v. Keeler. (1889) 2 Idaho 568, 21 Pac. 418; Dunlap v. Patterson, (1896) 4 Idaho 473, 42 Pac. 504, 85 A. S. R. 140.

Local customs or rules of miners.—In a given case the right of possession may not involve any question under the Constitution or laws of the United States, but simply a determination of local rules and customs, or state statutes, or even only a mere matter of fact." Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, (1900) 177 U. S. 505, 20 S. Ct. 726, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 804.

"The readjustment of the government, and this court also, have always acted upon the rule that all mineral locations were to be governed by the local rules and customs in force at the time of location, when such location was made prior to the passage of any mineral law by Congress." Glacier Mountain Silver Min. Co. v. Willis, (1888) 127 U. S. 471, 8 S. Ct. 1214, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 172.

"Not conflict with statutes.—Rules and customs of miners, reasonable in themselves, and not in conflict with any higher law, have long been recognized and sanctioned by legislative enactments and judicial decision. A mining custom limiting all placer claims in that locality to eighty rods in length is a reasonable one and does not conflict either with the Acts of Congress or the laws of the territory. Rosenthal v. Ives, (1887) 2 Idaho 265, 12 Pac. 904."

"Existence of local law question of fact. —The question what local laws of the district were in force at the time of an application for a patent is one of fact, to be determined by the commissioner of the general land office. Parley's Park Silver Min. Co. v. Kerr, (1889) 130 U. S. 256, 9 S. Ct. 511, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 906."

"Mining district.—The phrase "mining district" is well known, and means a section of country usually designated by name and described or understood as being confined within certain natural boundaries in which gold or silver, or both, are found in paying quantities and which is worked therefor under rules and regulations prescribed by the miners therein. U. S. v. Smith, (D. C. Ore. 1882) 11 Fed. 487."

"Town sites.—Whenever mines are found in lands belonging to the United States, whether within or without town sites, they may be claimed and worked, provided existing rights of others, from prior occupation, are not interfered with. Steel v. St. Louis Smelting, etc., Co., (1902) 106 U. S. 447, 1 S. Ct. 359, 27 U. S. (L. ed.) 236. See also Deffebach v. Hawke, (1886) 115 U. S. 392, 6 S. Ct. 95, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 423."

"Cutting timber.—A locator may cut down or destroy trees as fast as the earth in which they stand is dug or washed away by the process of mining, and such timber may be used and disposed of by him in any way that is most profitable to himself rather than to let it remain on the ground to decay. But whether the cutting of the timber is incidental to the bona fide mining operation, or the mining operation is a mere pretext for appropriating or disposing of the timber, is a fact to be determined in each case by its own circumstances. U. S. v. Nelson, (1878) 5 Saw. 68, 27 Fed. Cas. No. 15,864."

"State tax.—A state tax on the proceeds of a mining claim is a lien only on the claim of the miner; that is, on his possessory right to explore and work the mine under the existing laws and regulations on the subject. Forbes v. Gracey, (1876) 94 U. S. 762, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 315."

"Relation to R. S. sec. 453.—This section and R. S. sec. 452 (title PUBLIC LANDS) are in pari materia and must be construed together. Lavagnino v. Ulhig, (1903) 26 Utah 1, 71 Pac. 1046, 99 A. S. R. 508."

Sec. 2320. [Length of mining claims upon veins or lodes.] Mining-claims upon veins or lodes of quartz or other rock in place bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, lead, tin, copper, or other valuable deposits, heretofore located, shall be governed as to length along the vein or lode by the customs, regulations, and laws in force at the date of their location. A mining-claim located after the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, whether located by one or more persons, may equal, but shall not exceed, one thousand five hundred feet in length along the vein or lode; but no location of a mining-claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located. No claim shall extend more than three hundred feet on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface, nor shall any claim be limited by any mining regulation to less than twenty-five feet on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface, except where adverse rights existing on the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, render such limitation necessary. The end-lines of each claim shall be parallel to each other. [R.S.]

I. IN GENERAL

Purpose of statute.—The object of the law in requiring a discovery to precede the location of a mining claim is to insure good faith on the part of the locator and prevent frauds upon the government. Lange v. Robinson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 799, 79 C. C. A. 1; Hall v. McKinnon, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 193 Fed. 572, 113 C. C. A. 440. This action was not drawn by geologists or for geologists. They were not framed in the interests of science, and consequently with scientific accuracy in the use of terms. They were for the protection of miners in the claims which they had located and developed, and should receive such a construction as will carry out this purpose.

Scope of section—Placer claims. This section on its face applies only to claims for veins or lodes situated in rock in place; but by R. S. sec. 2329, infra, p. 575, it and all other provisions for the entry, location, and patent of vein or lode claims are made applicable also to placer mine claims. Smith v. Union Oil Co., (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

Distinction between lode and placer claims.—The distinguishing test which determines whether or not a valuable mineral deposit may be secured by a lode claim or by a placer claim is the form and character of the deposit. If it is in a vein or lode in rock in place, it may be secured by a lode claim, and it may not be by a placer claim. If it is in a vein or lode in rock in place, it may be secured by a placer claim, and it may not be by a lode claim. Webb v. American Asphaltum Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 203, 84 C. C. A. 651.

Asphaltum in lodes or veins in rock in place may be entered and patented by means of lode mining claims under this section, and it may not be secured by means of placer mining claims under R. S. sec. 2329, infra, p. 575. Webb v. American Asphaltum Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 203, 84 C. C. A. 651.

Definitions.—A “mining claim” is the name given to a location on the public mineral lands which the miner, for mining purposes, takes up and holds in accordance with mining laws, local and statutory. Mt. Diablo Mill, etc., Co. v. Callison, (1879) 5 Savy. 439, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,866.

“The word ‘claim,’ used as a noun, has a definite and particular meaning, denoting, when coupled with the name of miner, a particular piece of ground to which that miner had a recognized, vested, and exclusive right of possession for the purpose of extracting precious metals therefrom.” Northern Pac. R. Co. v. Sanders, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1892) 49 Fed. 129, 7 U. S. App. 47, 1 C. C. A. 192, affirmed (1897) 166 U. S. 620, 17 S. Ct. 671, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 1139.

A mining claim is a parcel of land containing precious metal in its soil or rock. A location is the act of appropriating such parcel, according to certain published rules. If a miner has only the ground covered by one location his “mining claim” and “location” are identical, but if by purchase he acquires the adjoining location of his neighbor and adds it to his own, then his mining claim covers the ground embraced by both locations.

The words “other valuable deposits” in the clause “mining claims upon veins or lodes of quartz, or other rock in place bearing gold, silver, cinnabar, lead, tin, copper, or other valuable deposits,” in this section, include nonmetalliferous as well as metalliferous deposits. Webb v. American Asphaltum Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1907) 157 Fed. 203, 84 C. C. A. 651.

The words “location” and “located,” as used in this section, mean and include the posting of a notice, and the recording thereof when required, and the marking of the boundaries, as required by R. S. sec. 2324, infra. Smith v. Union Oil Co., (1913) 166 Cal. 217, 135 Pac. 966.

Prerequisites to valid location—Complete possessory title.—The statute prescribes two prerequisites to the vesting in a competent locator of the complete possessory title to a lode mining claim. They are the discovery upon unappropriated public land of the United States within the limits of his claim of a mineral-bearing lode, and the distinct marking of the boundaries of his claim so that they can be readily traced. No appropriation of the land is made until both these requirements are fulfilled, and until that time the lode and land sought are open to location and appropriation by any competent locator; but when these requirements have been complied with the land is no longer public, but the possession, the right to the possession, and the right to acquire the title, are irrevocably vested in the locator. There is no requirement in the legislation of Congress that the discovery shall be made before the location, or that the location shall precede the discovery. Erwin v. Perigo, (C. C. A. 5th Cir. 1890) 95 Fed. 696; 35 C. C. A. 482; Sharkey v. Canadiani, (1906) 48 Ore. 112, 85 Pac. 219.

The validity of a location of a mining claim is made to depend primarily upon the discovery of a vein or lode within its limits, and until such discovery, no rights are acquired by location. The other requisites which must be observed in order to perfect and keep alive a valid location are not imperative, except as against the rights of third persons. If the necessary steps outside of discovery are not taken within the time required by law, but are complied with before the rights of third parties intervene, they relate back to the date of location, but not so with discovery; for it is upon that act that the very life of a mineral location depends, and from the time of such discovery only would the location be valid, provided, of course, that others had not previously acquired rights therein. Beals v. Cone, (1900) 27 Colo. 473, 62 Pac. 948, 83 A. S. R. 92.

Possession of the surface of a mining claim location is possession of all veins, lodes, and ledges, the top and apex of which are inside the surface lines, although such veins, lodes, and ledges, as they go downward, may extend outside such surface lines; and the possession of the surface ground protects such veins, lodes, and ledges from the operation of the statute of limitations. Therefore, before the defendants could set up any adverse claim to the Salmon and Cliff extension vein, they ought to have shown that they were in possession of the same at the surface. No adverse possession could become operative by going outside of its boundaries and sinking a shaft upon what they claimed as another location, and stricking in the original location extension, on its dip, and outside of its surface lines, no matter how long continued, if unknown to the original locators. Pardee v. Murray, (1882) 4 Mont. 234, 2 Pac. 16.

A discovery of a vein in a tunnel is like a discovery on the surface. Until one is made there is no right to locate a claim in respect to the vein, and the time to determine where and how it shall be located arises only upon the discovery. Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co., (1897) 167 U. S. 105, 17 S. Ct. 792, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 96.

If, on the same vein, there are surface outcroppings within the boundaries of two claims, the one first located necessarily carries the right to work the vein. Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co., (1887) 122 U. S. 478, 7 S. Ct. 1356, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 1140.

Mere possession.—While no valid location of a mining claim can be made under the mining laws until the discovery of mineral, it does not follow that because no mineral has been discovered the land is unoccupied. The mere possession of a piece of mining ground is only good as against an intruder, but not as against one who subsequently locates the same in compliance with the mining laws. Cosmos Exploration Co. v. Gray Eagle Oil Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1901) 112 Fed. 4, 50 C. C. A. 79, 61 L. R. A. 230. See also Haws v. Victoria Copper Min. Co., (1895) 160 U. S. 303, 16 S. Ct. 282, 40 U. S. (L. ed.) 438; English v. Johnson, (1869) 17 Cal. 107, 76 Am. Dec. 574.

Parallelism of end lines.—The requirement of parallelism of end lines of lode mining locations which is made by this section cannot be deemed to apply where the location had been made at the time of the passage of that Act, and the proceedings under the Act of July 26, 1866, had then so far advanced as to exclude adverse claims, in view of the various provisions of the later Act for the protection of all rights previously acquired under existing laws, and of the provision of R. S. sec. 2222 that prior locators shall have the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations, and of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface locations. East Cent. Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co., (1907) 204 U. S. 286, 27 S. Ct. 258, 51 U. S. (L. ed.) 476.

When it was contended that title to mines was not acquired under the Act of 1872, but under the Act of 26, 1866, which did not require parallelism of end lines, a federal question was presented, giving the federal Supreme Court jurisdiction. Kennedy Min., etc., Co. v. Argo-naut Min. Co., (1903) 189 U. S. 1, 23 S. Ct. 501, 47 U. S. (L. ed.) 685.

Surface lines.—There is no command that the side lines shall be parallel, and the requisition that the end lines shall be parallel was for the purpose of bounding the underground extralateral rights which the owner of the location may exercise. Del Monte Min., etc., Co. v. Last Chance Min., etc., Co., (1898) 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 895, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 72.

When a mining claim crosses the course of the lode or vein instead of being "along the vein or lode," the end lines are those which measure the width of the claim as it crosses the lode. The side lines, are those which measure the extent of the claim on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface. In this case the lines which separate the location of the plaintiff from the location of the defendant are end lines, across which, as they are extended downward vertically, the defendant cannot follow a vein, even if its apex or outcropping is within its surface boundaries. Argentine Min. Co. v. Terrible Min. Co., (1887) 122 U. S. 478, 7 S. Ct. 1536, 30 L. S. (L. ed.) 1140.

When the apex of the vein crosses the east and south lines of the boundary, the fact that the apex crosses the east line after the lode extends on its strike in the general course of the location does not make such east line an end line, and a locator is entitled to so much of the lode upon its dip as lies between the south end line and the point of divergence of the apex of the vein across the east line. Del Monte Min. etc., Co. v. New York, etc., Min. Co., (C. C. Colo. 1895) 66 Fed. 212. See also Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney, (C. A. A. 9th Cir. 1893) 34 Fed. 254, 7 U. S. App. 463. 4 C. C. A. 329.

When a location as surveyed and certified is intercepted by another valid claim going through it, perpendicularly or obliquely, the end lines are not determined by the intersecting claim but there remains on either side of the intersecting claim unchallenged ground. Cheesman v. Hart, (C. C. Colo. 1890) 42 Fed. 98.

The locator is not compelled to follow the lines of the government surveys, or to make his location in any manner correspond to such surveys. Del Monte Min., etc., Co. v. Last Chance Min., etc., Co., (1898) 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 306, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 72.

If the end lines are substantially parallel, that meets the requirement of the law. Cheesman v. Shreve, (C. C. Colo. 1889) 40 Fed. 787.

The provision requiring the lines of each claim to be parallel to each other is merely directory, and no consequence is attached to a deviation from its direction.

Horswell v. Ruiz, (1885) 67 Cal. 111, 7 Pac. 197.

Strike.—The course of the vein longitudinally, as it passes through the country, is its strike; and where the dip of the vein is vertical, or practically vertical, the line of its ore bodies may mark the line of its strike. In determining the location and strike of a vein, the geological features of the adjacent country, so far as in evidence, will be considered, which the Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 644.

II. VEIN OR LODE

Definition.—The words "vein," "lode," and "ledge" are used as synonymous terms, in the common parlance of miners, in the laws of Congress. Symmes v. Shaughnessy, (1885) 2 Idaho 122, 7 Pac. 82; Noyes v. Clifford, (1906) 37 Mont. 138, 94 Pac. 842.

"The use of the terms 'vein' and 'lode' in connection with each other in the act of 1866, and their use in the act of 1872, would seem to indicate that it was the object of the legislator to avoid any limitation in the application of the acts, which a scientific definition of any one of these terms might impose. It is difficult to give any definition of the term, as understood and used in the act of Congress, which will not be subject to criticism. A fissure in the earth's crust, an opening in its rocks and strata made by some force of nature, in which the mineral is deposited, would seem to be essential to the definition of a lode, in the judgment of geologists. But to the practical miner the fissure and its walls are only of importance as indicating the boundaries within which he may look for and reasonably expect to find the ore he seeks. A continuous body of mineralized rock, lying within any other well-defined boundaries on the earth's surface and under it, would equally constitute, in his eyes, a lode. We are of opinion, therefore, that the term as used in the acts of Congress is applicable to any zone or belt of mineralized rock lying within boundaries clearly separating it from the neighboring rock. It includes, to use the language cited by counsel, all deposits of mineral matter found through a mineralized zone or belt coming from the same source, impressed with the same forms, and appearing to have been created by the same process." San Francisco Chemical Co. v. Duffield, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1912) 201 Fed. 830, 120 C. C. A. 160.

In determining what is a "vein," "lode," or "ledge" of rock in place bearing silver or other precious metals, miners themselves must be called in. Such a dispute does not make a federal question. Blue Bird Min. Co. v. Largey, (C. C. Mont. 1892) 49 Fed. 280.
The terms "vein" and "lode" are employed in this statute in the sense in which miners use them, uncontrolled by scientific definitions. Hayes v. Lavagnino, (1889) 17 Utah 185, 53 Pac. 1029. See also Eureka Consol. Min. Co. v. Richmond Min. Co., (1877) 4 Sawy. 392, 8 Fed. 481; Gregory v. Perahbaker, (1887) 73 Cal. 106, 14 Pac. 401.

In general it may be said that a lode or vein is a body of mineral or mineral body of rock, within defined boundaries in the general mass of the mountain. The thinness or thickness of the matter in particular places does not affect its being a vein or lode. If there is a general and pervading continuance of this mineral matter, with a casual and occasional interruption, but pursuing the same general course, bounded by the same rocky material above and below as far as you can trace that until it breaks off totally and is interrupted for a very large distance, it is a vein of rock or mineral matter. Stevens v. Williams, (1879) 1 McCray 490, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,413. See also Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cheesman, (1886) 116 U. S. 529, 6 S. Ct. 481, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 712; Cheesman v. Shreve, (C. C. Cal.) 40 Fed. 265; Duffield v. San Francisco Chemical Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1913) 205 Fed. 480, 123 C. C. A. 548; Myers v. Lloyd, (1910) 4 Alaska 263; Gregory v. Perahbaker, (1887) 73 Cal. 106, 14 Pac. 401; Synnett v. Shaughnessy, (1885) 2 Idaho 122, 7 Pac. 82; Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

A body of mineral or mineral-bearing rock in the general mass of the mountain, so far as it may continue unbroken and without interruption, may be regarded as a lode. Whatever the boundaries may be, Hyman v. Wheeler, (C. C. Colo. 1886) 19 Fed. 347.

A vein or lode that has never been claimed; that has not been located; that has not been marked out by metes and bounds, and in which there has been no actual development, or, to use the language of the statute, "discovery of a vein or lode within the limits of the claim located,"—is not a vein or lode such as is described in this section. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Sullivan, (C. C. Colo. 1883) 16 Fed. 829.

A vein or lode cannot be in place, within the meaning of this section, unless it be within the general mass of the mountain. It must be inclosed by, or held within, the general mass of fixed and immovable rock. It is not enough to find the vein or lode lying on the top of fixed or immovable rock, for that which is on top is not within, and that which is without, cannot in principle be said to be within it. Leadville Min. Co. v. Fitzgerald, (1879) 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,158.

Whether a lode is in place depends upon the position of the ore or vein matter in the earth, as whether the inclosing mass is fixed and immovable, more than upon the character of the ore itself. Whether the ore is loose and friable, or very hard, if the inclosing walls are country rock, it may be located as a vein or lode. If the ore is upon the surface of the ground, or has no other covering than the superficial deposit, which is called alluvium, diluvium, drift, or debris, it is not a lode or vein within the meaning of the Act, which may be followed beyond the lines of the location. Tabor v. Decker, (1878) 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,723.

Mineralization.—In the absence of defined walls and of mineralization appreciably greater than that contained in the general mass of the mountain, broken, strained, and fissured material, or crushed and brecciated matter, characteristic of the district, cannot be held to constitute a vein or lode, under the statute. In such case the limits of fracturing do not constitute the limits of the vein, and even if there be found an occasional vug or fragment of ore, yet, where it is disconnected from any ore body, and so intermingled with the surrounding country rock that it cannot be regarded as continuous, it does not mark the line of the vein or lode, within the meaning of the law. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Rock or matter of any kind, in order to constitute a vein or lode within the meaning of the statute, must be metalliciferous and contain such mineral value as will distinguish it from the country rock, especially where no well-defined walls appear. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Where a vein, located in sedimentary beds of rock, is formed by replacement, and the mineralization ceases within a short distance of the ore body or ore channel, the limits of the deposition of ore are the limits of the vein; and this is so whether the vein be considered laterally or with reference to the apex. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Sedimentary rock.—The mere fact that sedimentary rock is broken, crushed, seamed, stained, and fissured does neither constitute such material a vein nor an apex of a vein, where no hanging wall nor foot wall appears, where the mineralization ceases, and the crushed material is not appreciably greater than that existing generally throughout the sedimentary area, and where the same kind of crushed and brecciated material exists elsewhere and generally within that area. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Value of filling.—What values the filling or material of a fissure should contain to constitute it a vein, within the meaning of the Act of Congress, must necessarily depend upon the characteristics of the district or country in which the vein or lode, in any particular instance, is located, and upon the character, as to boundaries, of the vein itself. Values, therefore, of the filling of the vein must be considered with special reference to the district where the vein or lode is found. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1906) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Boundaries ill-defined.—Where the boundaries of what is claimed to be a vein are not well, or not at all, defined, either at the surface or at depth, the value of the material must be so in excess of the country rock as to differentiate it from such rock; else the material cannot be held to constitute a vein. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1906) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Evidence.—Under the Acts of Congress the essential elements of a vein are mineral or mineral-bearing rock and boundaries, and in case of controversy, where one of these elements is well established, very slight evidence may be accepted as to the existence of the other. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1906) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

III. DISCOVERY OF VEIN OR LODE

Discovery of a vein or lode must be made within the boundaries of the claim before it can be located. Discoveries made after a location by another may be availed of. Ledoux v. Forester, (C. C. Wash. 1899) 94 Fed. 600. See also Michael v. MHa, (1906) 22 Colo. 439, 45 Pac. 429.

Until discovery is made, no right of possession to any definite portion of the public mineral lands can even be initiated. Until that is done, the prospector's rights are confined to the ground in his actual possession. A notice of location posted upon the surface before discovery is made is an absolute nullity. Gemmell v. Swain, (1903) 28 Mont. 331, 72 Pac. 682, 98 A. S. R. 570.

A location of a mining claim based on a discovery within the limits of an existing and valid location is void. Lockhart v. Farrell, (1906) 31 Utah 155, 86 Pac. 1077.

A discovery becomes a condition precedent to the location. Recording the notice or declaratory statement in the proper county is one of the acts of location, but the statute of the territory provided that before such a record can be made there must have been a discovery of a vein or lode of quartz or ore with at least one well-defined wall. Upton v. Larkin, (1866) 5 Mont. 600, 6 Pac. 66.

A discovery of seams, containing mineral-bearing earth and rock, which were similar in their character to the seams or veins of mineral matter that had induced other miners to locate claims in the same district, which by continued development thereof had resulted in establishing the fact that the seams, as depth was obtained thereon, were found to be a part of a well-defined lode or vein containing ore of great value, is sufficient to show a compliance with the statute as to the necessity of a discovery of a vein or lode to make a valid location. Shoshone Min. Co. v. Rutter, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1898) 67 Fed. 801, 59 U. S. App. 538, 31 C. C. A. 233, reversed on other points (1900) 177 U. S. 666, 20 S. Ct. 728, 44 U. S. (L. ed.) 984.

Place claims.—Discovery is as necessary to a location of a placer claim as to a location of a lode claim. Steele v. Tanana Mines R. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 676, 78 C. C. A. 412; Hall v. McKimson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1911) 193 Fed. 572, 113 C. C. A. 440.

What constitutes.—To constitute discovery, it is necessary that mineral-bearing rock in place be found, under such circumstances and of such character that a reasonably prudent man, not necessarily a skilled miner, would be justified in expending time and money developing it with the reasonable expectation of finding ore in paying quantities. This implies not only that the conditions warrant a reasonably prudent man in so proceeding, with such reasonable expectation, but that the applicant for a patent has that expectation. U. S. v. Lavenson, (W. D. Wash. 1913) 206 Fed. 755.

To constitute a discovery which will support the location of a gold placer claim as against another mineral claimant it is not necessary that gold should have been found therein in paying quantity, but there must have been such a discovery of gold as gives reasonable evidence that the ground is valuable for placer mining, taking into consideration its character, location, and surroundings. Lange v. Robinson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 799, 79 C. C. A. 1.

What may constitute a sufficient discovery to warrant a location of a mining claim may be wholly inadequate to justify the locator in claiming or exercising rights reserved by the statute. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.
What constitutes a discovery that will validate a location is a very different thing from what constitutes an apex to which attaches the statutory right to invade the possession of and appropriate the property which is presumed to belong to the true owner. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1906) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Subsequent discoveries may validate earlier locations, and the latter may then inure to the benefit of the locators as against the United States and all parties whose claims were initiated subsequent to the discoveries. But they would inure to their benefit as of the dates of the discoveries and not as of the dates of the locations, and they would neither destroy nor affect intervening rights. The marking of boundaries and filing of location certificates may precede discovery or discovery may precede them, but no location is valid until both are complete. The earlier Act then inures to the benefit of the locator as of the date of the later, subject to all rights which have intervened between them. Uinta Tunnel Min., etc., Co. v. Creede, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1902) 119 Fed. 164, 57 C. C. A. 200; Sharkey v. Canadiani, (1906) 48 Ore. 112, 85 Pac. 219. See also Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1899) 98 Fed. 673, in which case the court said: "All of this, however, is based upon the supposition, as is expressly shown in the opinion of the court, that the location has also been made in conformity with any valid state legislation that may exist in the particular state in which the mineral land is situated, and with any valid local rules and regulations of the mining district in which the land may be situated, if any such exist." See R. S. sec. 2324, infra, p. 533.

The discovery of the vein or lode before any other steps are taken to perfect the location is not required by the provision of this section that "no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located," which means nothing more than that no location shall be considered complete until there has been a discovery. Creede, etc., Min., etc., Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min., etc., Co., (1905) 196 U. S. 337, 25 S. Ct. 206, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 501.

Discovery by sinking shaft.—It is but just and reasonable to infer that if a mineralized vein or lode is discovered by the sinking of a shaft, its existence was known to the locator before the location was made. Hayes v. Lavagnino, (1898) 17 Utah 185, 53 Pac. 1045; Zellers v. Evans, (C. C. Colo. 1880) 5 Fed. 172.

Discovery of vein in tunnel.—The right to a vein discovered in a tunnel is declared to be "to the same extent as if discovered from the surface." See R. S. sec. 2323, infra, p. 532. If discovered from the surface, the discoverer might, under this section, claim "one thousand five hundred feet in length along the vein or lode." The clear import of the language is that if a miner is developing a vein in the tunnel, a right to appropriate fifteen hundred feet in length of that vein. Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co., (1897) 101 U. S. 108, 17 S. Ct. 702, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 96.

"Willing to spend time and money in developing. — "When a locater of a mining claim finds rock in place containing mineral in sufficient quantity to justify him in expending his time and money in prospecting and developing the claim, he has made a discovery, within the meaning of the statute, whether the rock or earth is rich or poor, whether it assays high or low, with this qualification, that the definition of a lode must always have special reference to the formation and peculiar characteristics of the particular district in which the lode or vein is found." Bonner v. Meikle, (C. C. Nev. 1897) 82 Fed. 697. See also Book v. Justice Min. Co., (C. C. Nev. 1893) 68 Fed. 106; Montana Cent. R. Co. v. Migeon, (C. C. Mont. 1896) 63 Fed. 811, affirmed (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1896) 77 Fed. 249, 44 U. S. App. 724, 23 C. C. A. 156; Shreve v. Copper Bell Min. Co., (1891) 11 Mont. 309, 28 Pac. 315; McShane v. Kenkle, (1896) 18 Mont. 208, 44 Pac. 979, 56 A. S. R. 579, 33 L. R. A. 851; Murray v. White, (1911) 42 Mont. 425, 113 Pac. 754, Ann. Cas. 1912A 1297; Muldick v. Brown, (1900) 37 Ore. 185, 61 Pac. 428.

Even as between rival mineral claimants to petroleum lands, there must have been such a discovery, in order to sustain a location, as would justify an adverse person in the expenditure of money and labor in exploitation for petroleum. Chrissman v. Miller, (1905) 197 U. S. 313, 25 S. Ct. 468, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 770.

An instruction that, to constitute a discovery of gold sufficient to support a location of a gold placer mining claim as against an adverse mineral locator, the gold found must be of such character and quantity and found under such circumstances as to justify a man of ordinary prudence in the expenditure of time and money in the development of the property, is not erroneous; the word "development" as so used being the equivalent of "exploration." Charlton v. Kelly, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 156 Fed. 433, 84 C. C. A. 295.

In an action to recover certain land which was a part of the public domain, plaintiff claimed under a placer mining location. The court charged that it was essential to the validity of such location that the discovery of mineral thereon was such that an ordinarily prudent man, not necessarily a miner, would be justified in expending his time and labor in developing the property, but in the same connection, it is clear that the essential to a recovery by plaintiffs that they prove with reasonable clearness that for the labor and capital expended in working the ground it would yield a reasonable profit. It was held that the latter instruction was not an incorrect interpretation of the correct rule previously charged.

Cascaden v. Bartolis, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 739, 77 C. C. A. 496.

Conclusiveness of patent.—An entry of a lode mining claim, sustained by a patent, though conclusive evidence that at the time of entry there had been a valid location, does not preclude the owner of a tunnel site located across the lode, who claims that his location was prior to any discovery, notwithstanding the provision of this section that “no location of a mining claim shall be made until the discovery of the vein or lode within the limits of the claim located,” which means nothing more than that no location shall be considered complete until there has been a discovery. Creed, etc., Min., etc., Co. v. Uinta Tunnel Min., etc., Co., (1905) 196 U. S. 337, 25 S. Ct. 266, 49 U. S. (L. ed.) 501.

Question of fact.—Whether there has been such a discovery as would sustain a location involves a question of fact. Bonner v. Meikle, (C. C. Nev. 1897) 92 Fed. 697.

Evidence.—Upon an issue as to whether there was a sufficient discovery of mineral in a mining claim to meet the requirement of the statute and support a location, where there was evidence that gold had actually been found within the limits of the claim, sufficient to warrant the submission of the case to the jury to determine whether the discovery was sufficient within the rule which requires it to be such as to justify an ordinary prudent man, not necessarily a miner, in expending his time and money in the development of the property, the locator was entitled to supplement such evidence by showing the situation, character, and value, and mineralogical conditions of adjacent claims, and to prove by the opinions of experienced miners, based upon the facts, that the discovery was sufficient to justify him in developing the claim. Cascaden v. Bartolis, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1908) 162 Fed. 267, 89 C. C. A. 247, 15 Ann. Cas. 625.

Evidence that there were seams of minerals on a claim without any showing as to what the minerals were was insufficient to establish a discovery of valuable minerals within the lines of the claim essential to the valid location of a mining claim. Harper v. Hill, (1911) 159 Cal. 250, 113 Pac. 162.

In Lange v. Robinson, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 148 Fed. 799, 79 C. C. A. 1, it appeared that the plaintiff located certain gold placer mining claims along a creek in Alaska, and before doing so washed on each a few pans of the sediment deposited along the sides of the creek, and in each found small particles or colors of gold. Placer gold in paying quantities had been found on the bed rock on a tributary to the creek, and within a mile of such locations, and the bed rock at the place of the location was from 125 to 150 feet below the surface. The plaintiff and other experienced miners testified that the gold found was sufficient to reasonably justify the investment of money to sink shafts. It was held that there was a sufficient discovery to support the locations as against another mineral claimant.

Location certificates as evidence of discovery.—Where the validity of a location had been unchallenged for more than five years up to the commencement of ejectment, and the original locators were absent from the country, the certificate of location created a presumption of discovery of mineral and of a valid location, especially on an application for a preliminary injunction depending on affidavits in which plaintiff appeared as a subsequent locator and attached the title of the prior locator and that of his successor in interest. Vogel v. Warsing, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 146 Fed. 949, 77 C. C. A. 199.

IV. LEGAL LIMITS OF LODGE

Length of location.—The discoverer is entitled to claim 750 feet of the lode each way from the point of discovery, or in the language of the statute, “1,500 feet in length along the vein or lode.” Ellet v. Campbell, (1894) 18 Colo. 510, 33 Pac. 521.

“On the public domain of the United States a miner may hold the place in which he may be working with all others having no better right. But when he asserts title to a full claim of 1,500 feet in length and 300 feet in width, he must prove a lode extending throughout the claim.” Zollars v. Evans, (C. C. Colo. 1880) 6 Fed. 172.

“Three hundred feet on each side.”—A claim may, if there is no restriction in the local rules, be six hundred feet wide, although the known lode to include which such claim is located is not twelve inches in width. Mt. Diablo Mill, etc., Co. v. Colisson, (1879) 5 Savy. 493, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,886.

Exceeding legal limits.—The cases which protect the locator where he exceeds the legal lateral limits are cases where he has marked his point of discovery and lode line and has made what would otherwise be required in making a valid location under R. S. sec. 2324, infra, p. 533. Madeira v. Sonoma Magnesite Co., (1912) 20 Cal. App. 719, 130 Pac. 175.
The mere fact that in establishing his exterior boundaries, the locator has marked out too great a quantity of land, does not necessarily invalidate his location. Where, however, the locator relies upon the corner he has established or has attempted to mark as indicia of the location of the lode or ledge, a different question may arise and a different rule may govern. Madeira v. Sonoma Magnesite Co., (1912) 20 Cal. App. 718, 190 Pac. 176.

Rejection of excess.—The land department has no power to issue a patent for a greater width of land than 300 feet, and a patent is void as to any excess over 300 feet. Lakin v. Roberts, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1893) 64 Fed. 461, 7 U. S. App. 596, 4 C. C. A. 435. See also Lakin v. Dolly, (N. D. Cal. 1901) 63 Fed. 323; Price v. McIntosh, (1901) 1 Alaska 292; Hansen v. Fletcher, (1894) 10 Utah 366, 37 Pac. 490. But in Carson City Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co. (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1907) 192 Fed. 453, 48 U. S. App. 754, 28 C. C. A. 323, the court said that every case must be considered with reference to its own peculiar facts. The Lakin cases did not involve any construction of the law pertaining to the extraterritorial rights of the lode patented. The lode in neither its length nor depth was involved; it was only the surface ground that was in dispute. "In this case the plaintiff in error does not claim any right whatever to the surface boundaries of the North Star claim, as patented; and it is a well-settled and elementary principle of law that the possession of this surface ground by the defendant in error is sufficient evidence of title, as against any one not showing any higher or better right thereto. Moreover, even if the principles of the Lakin cases could be considered, remotely or otherwise, as having any application to the present case, still the defendant in error would be entitled to the vein or lode, which was proved and established in this case, and to surface ground four feet on each side of the center of the lode; and this is all that is required to give the party the extra rights which are provided for by the statute." And see Hauswirth v. Butcher, (1882) 4 Mont. 299, 1 Pac. 714; Leggatt v. Stewart, (1883) 5 Mont. 107, 7 Pac. 520.

In McElligott v. Krogh, (1907) 151 Cal. 126, 90 Pac. 823, it was held that though locators did not place a monument at an intervening point on the line between the end monuments, as under their mistaken belief as to the accuracy of the location of the end monuments there could be no validity for it, yet they were entitled to have a line established on the correction of the location of one of the end monuments, which would include the corrected corner, that point, and the original corner not corrected, where no part of such line was more than 300 feet from the middle of the vein. On the correction of this corner, the court was not required to fix the boundary line as a straight line between the corner corrected and the original corner not corrected.

When under the local laws of the mining district, only 200 feet can be appropriated to each locator, the inclusion of a larger number of lineal feet than 200 does not render a location, otherwise valid, totally void, but the excess may be rejected, and the claim held good for the remainder, unless it interferes with rights previously acquired. Richmond Min. Co. v. Rose, (1885) 114 U. S. 576, 5 S. Ct. 1055, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 273. See also Taylor v. Parenteau, (1887) 23 Colo. 366, 48 Pac. 506, as to state statute limiting width of claims.

Where a mining location made in good faith includes within its boundaries more than this section permits, being 300 feet on each side of the middle of the vein at the surface, it is invalid as to the outer part of the claim. McElligott v. Krogh, (1907) 151 Cal. 126, 90 Pac. 823.

The rule that where a locator has marked his corners so that the side lines lie more than 300 feet from the apex of the vein as located at the time, or otherwise marks a claim larger than allowed by statute, he cannot claim the excess as against a subsequent locator of adjoining ground, does not apply to a case where a claim of the statutory size was originally located in good faith, but by mistake as to the actual location of the vein as evidenced by subsequent exploitation the side lines were not each 300 feet distant from the center thereof. Harper v. Hill, (1911) 159 Cal. 250, 113 Pac. 162.

Inaccuracy in location of vein.—Since the grant of the exclusive right to possession of the ground included within the lines of a location is a present grant, taking effect from the date of the location, a locator, having established his side lines in good faith, is protected against subsequent locators on the land included within the lines as originally located, though it may be subsequently determined by reason of an inaccuracy in the location of the vein or lode when the claim was located that the side lines at the end were more than 300 feet distant from the center thereof. Harper v. Hill, (1911) 159 Cal. 250, 113 Pac. 162.

Essentials of location.—Mere indications of mineral, however strong, are not sufficient to answer the requirements of the statute, which requires, as one of the essential conditions to the making of a valid location of unappropriated public land, a discovery of mineral within the limits of the claim. "If a competent locator actually finds upon unappropriated public land petroleum or other mineral in or upon the ground, and so situated as to constitute a part of it, it is a sufficient discovery, within the meaning of the statute, to justify a location under the law, without waiting to ascertain by exploration whether the ground contains the mineral in sufficient quantities to pay. The question whether a particular piece of public land is more valuable for mineral than for agricultural purposes is one that does not arise in cases like the present." Nevada Sierra Oil Co. v. Home Oil Co., (S. D. Cal. 1899) 95 Fed. 673.

Imaginary existence of vein.—Locations resting simply upon a conjectural or imaginary existence of a vein or lode within their limits are not permitted. King v. Amy, etc., Consol. Min. Co., (1894) 162 U. S. 222, 14 S. Ct. 510, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 419.

Original discoverer.—This section does not require that the locator of a claim must be the original discoverer of the vein or lode. If there has been a discovery of a vein, and the knowledge on the part of the locators of metal there, the locators are entitled to make their location, even though the original discovery was made by some one other than the locators. Hayes v. Lavagnino, (1898) 17 Utah 185, 53 Pac. 1026. See also Erwin v. Pergo, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 93 Fed. 608, 36 C. C. A. 482.

Effect of amended location.—An amended location of a lode mining claim, made because of an error as to the course of the vein when the original location was made, in consequence of which the original side lines became end lines, did not operate as an abandonment of all rights under the original location, where it is expressly stated in the new location notice that such was not the intention; and where the end lines of the amended location do not entirely coincide with the side lines of the original claim, it was not error for the court, in determining collateral rights as among the various lode miners, to lay vertical planes through the side lines of the original claim, which became end lines by operation of law, owing to the course of the vein, and through the end lines of the amended claim, extending both in the direction of the dip of the vein, and to award to the claim extralateral rights in so much of the vein on its dip as lay within both of such extensions; treating as abandoned only so much of the original claim, with its planes so extended, as lay without the extended end-line planes of the amended claim. Empire State-Idaho Min., etc., Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 591, 66 C. C. A. 99.

V. CONFLICTING LODE CLAIMANTS

Rule of construction.—It is the object and policy of the law to encourage the prospector and miner in their efforts to discover mineral, and therefore, as between conflicting lode claimants, the law is liberally construed in favor of the senior location; but where one claims what, prima facie, belongs to another, because of the apex in the claimant's location, a more rigid rule of construction against the claimant prevails. Grand Coit. Min. Co. v. Math et Min. Co., (1906) 29 Utah 960, 83 Pac. 648.

Overlapping claims.—A location is the initial step taken by the locator to indicate the place and extent of the surface which he desires to acquire, and works no injury to one who has acquired prior rights. Some confusion may arise when locations overlap each other and include the same ground, for then the right of possession becomes a matter of dispute. "It will often happen that locations which do not overlap are so placed as to leave between them some irregular parcel of ground. Within that, it being no more than one locator is entitled to take, may be discovered a mineral vein and the discoverer desire to take the entire surface and yet it be impossible for him to do so and make his end lines parallel unless, for the mere purposes of location, he be permitted to place those end lines on territory already claimed by the prior locator." Del Monte Min., etc., Co. v. Last Chance Min., etc., Co., (1888) 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 985, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 72.

A party who is in actual possession of a valid location may maintain that possession and exclude every one from trespassing thereon, and no one is at liberty to forcibly disturb his possession or enter upon the premises. These locations are generally made upon lands open, unclosed, and not subject to any full actual occupation, where the limits of possessory rights are vague and uncertain, and where the validity of apparent locations is unsettled and doubtful. Under these circumstances it is a common experience that conflicting locations are made, one overlapping another, and sometimes the overlap repeated by many different locations. While in the adjustment of these conflicts the right of the first locator to the surface within his location, as well as to the veins beneath the surface, is secure, a subsequent location is not void and cannot be ignored as to rights not covered by the first location. Del Monte Min., etc., Co. v. Last Chance Min., etc., Co., (1889) 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 985, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 72.

Where the locators of two association claims, which overlap, are sinking shafts at the same time, the first to discover mineral has priority of right, although the location was staked after the other, if it was made openly and peaceably. Hanson v. Craig, et al. v. Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1909) 170 Fed. 82, 86 C. C. A. 338.

Where the discovery of mineral-bearing vein is made on land subject to location, that the corners were not placed on unappropriated land subject to location does not render the location entirely void, but it is valid to the extent that such location is within the marked boundaries and on unappropriated land. McElligott v. Krogh, (1907) 151 Cal. 126, 90 Pac. 823.

Town-site patent.—A grant, by a town-site patent, issued prior to the Act of 1872, carried an absolute fee-simple title to the grantee and a mining claim under it of all land in which "no gold, silver, copper, or cinnabar mine" existed, or in which no valid mining claim or possession was had or held under local authority, or rules, or existing law. See R. S. secs. 2386 and 2392 (title PUBLIC LANDS). The owner of the lot under the patent holds all the ground save that in which the mine is located by fee-simple title, and no one can tunnel under the part of the lot held by this title in fee-simple, except by contract with the owner. On land embraced by such a grant a locator has no right to 300 feet of ground on each side of a quartz ledge. Dower v. Richards, (1887) 73 Cal. 477, 15 Pac. 105.

Rights under prior Act.—Rights in mining property entitled to protection under the Act of May 10, 1872, as previously acquired under existing laws, existed where a lode mining location had been made at the time of the passage of that Act, and the proceedings under the Act of July 26, 1866, had then so far advanced as to exclude adverse claims. East Cent. Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co., (1901) 204 U. S. 266, 27 S. Ct. 258, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 476.

Waiver.—An election by the grantee of a patent for a lode mining claim to abandon rights acquired under the Act of July 26, 1866, cannot be imported from the fact that such patent, in addition to granting such rights, also purports to grant all that would have been acquired by a location under this section. East Cent. Eureka Min. Co. v. Central Eureka Min. Co., (1907) 204 U. S. 266, 27 S. Ct. 258, 61 U. S. (L. ed.) 476.

Sec. 2321. [Proof of citizenship.] Proof of citizenship, under this chapter, may consist, in the case of an individual, of his own affidavit thereof; in the case of an association of persons unincorporated, of the affidavit of their authorized agent, made on his own knowledge, or upon information and belief; and in the case of a corporation organized under the laws of the United States, or of any State or Territory thereof, by the filing of a certified copy of their charter or certificate of incorporation. [R. S.]

Further provisions relating to the affidavit were made by the Act of April 26, 1882, ch. 106, § 2, infra, p. 601.

Proof of citizenship.—Where, in an action in support of an adverse claim to a mining location, it was admitted on the trial that, as far as the defendant was concerned, plaintiffs were citizens of the United States when they made their purported location, and a certified copy of the notice of plaintiffs' location was introduced in evidence, with an affidavit of assessment work for the year 1902, which contained evidence showing that each of the plaintiffs was a citizen of the United States at the time of locating the ground in dispute, the proof of citizenship was prima facie sufficient under this section. Stolp v. Treasury Gold Min. Co., (1905) 38 Wash. 610, 80 Pac. 817.

The oath of one of the locators, accompanying the recorded notice of location, as to their citizenship, is prima facie evidence of the fact, and it will be deemed sufficient until doubt is thrown upon the accuracy of his statement. Hammer v. Garfield Min., etc., Co., (1889) 130 U. S. 291, 9 S. Ct. 548, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 984.

Sufficiency of affidavit.—An affidavit based on information and belief is contemplated by the statute. North Noon-

As to the sufficiency of the form of affidavit, see Dean v. Omaha-Wyoming Oil Co., (1913) 21 Wyo. 153, 128 Pac. 681, 129 Pac. 1093.

Corporation.—Where, in an action on an adverse by a corporation against an application for a patent to a mining claim, the complaint alleged that the plaintiff was a corporation organized under the laws of the state, and the answer admitted the allegation, it was not necessary to prove the citizenship of plaintiff's stockholders. Jackson v. White Cloud Gold Min., etc., Co., (1906) 36 Colo. 122, 85 Pac. 639.

Other modes of proof.—The provision for proof of citizenship by affidavit is not exclusive of other modes of proof. Thompson v. Spray, (1887) 72 Cal. 528, 14 Pac. 182.
Sec. 2322. [Locators’ rights of possession and enjoyment.] The locators of all mining locations heretofore made or which shall hereafter be made, on any mineral vein, lode, or ledge, situated on the public domain, their heirs and assigns, where no adverse claim exists on the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, so long as they comply with the laws of the United States, and with State, territorial, and local regulations not in conflict with the laws of the United States governing their possessory title, shall have the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations, and of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface-lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side-lines of such surface locations. But their right of possession to such outside parts of such veins or ledges shall be confined to such portions thereof as lie between vertical planes drawn downward as above described, through the end-lines of their locations, so continued in their own direction that such planes will intersect such exterior parts of such veins or ledges. And nothing in this section shall authorize the locator or possessor of a vein or lode which extends in its downward course beyond the vertical lines of his claim to enter upon the surface of a claim owned or possessed by another. [R. S.]

I. IN GENERAL

Common-law rule.—The right granted by the mining laws is in direct contravention of the common law. Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., (C. C. Idaho 1885) 71 Fed. 848.

The doctrine of the common law, that he who has a right to the surface of any portion of the earth, has also the right to all beneath and above that surface, has but a limited application to the rights of miners. Necessity has compelled a great modification of that doctrine. The well established custom of miners to locate veins of mineral, claiming to follow them with all their dips, spurs and angles, without reference to the occupancy of the surface, has compelled a departure from the common-law rules. Bullion Min. Co. v. Croesus Gold, etc., Min. Co., (1886) 2 Nev. 168, 90 Am. Dec. 526.

The rule of common law that whoever owns the surface is entitled to all beneath the same is not fully applicable to lode mining claims. Montana Co. v. Clark, (C. C. Mont. 1890) 43 Fed. 628.

It will be observed that the lodes, veins, or ledges granted by this section are distinguished from the surface ground and are made the subject of a separate grant and to separate provisions. It may be that Congress, considering the provisions of the common law which reserved in every grant from the crown all precious metals, wished to set this matter at rest in these provisions. Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, (C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 82 Fed. 45, 48 U. S. App. 411, 27 C. C. A. 50.

This section, conferring what is commonly known as the “apex right,” is in derogation of the common law which granted to the owner of lands all veins within the vertical lines of his land to the center of the earth, and it has been generally held in the determination of cases under this statute, that the presumption is with the owner of the claim as to his right to veins and ore bodies within his vertical sidelines. Collins v. Bailey, (1912) 22 Colo. App. 149, 125 Pac. 543.

The statute introduced an important modification of the common-law rule. It gives to the proprietor of a vein a right unknown to the common law, the right to pursue such vein beyond his own lines, outside of that particular segment of the earth embraced within the lines of his claim extending vertically downward; and it is therefore, to that extent, an enlargement of his common-law right. But, on the other hand, inasmuch as the same right is granted to every locator under the statute, each holds his possession subject to the same right in others, and is therefore liable to have his land entered by an adjoining proprietor pursuing his vein in its course beyond his own side lines; and to this extent, therefore, his common-law possession is abridged.
Two points cannot fail to be noticed in this connection: first, that this enlargement of the common-law possessory right is incident only to a claim located in the manner provided by law; and second, that the exercise of such right operates to the abridgment of the possession of every tenement penetrated or intersected by a vein having its top or apex in a superior tenement. Duggan v. Davey, (1856) 4 Dak. 110, 26 N. W. 897. The right to follow the ledge upon its dip between the vertical planes of the parallel end lines extending in their own direction, when it departs beyond the vertical planes of the side lines, is an expansion of the rights which would be conferred by a common-law grant. On the other hand this grant is subject to the right of an adjoining locator to follow his vein upon its course downward beneath the surface included in the grant. In these two respects only do the rights conferred by the statute differ from those held under a common-law grant. Parrot Silver, etc., Co. v. Heinzl, (1901) 25 Mont. 129, 64 Pac. 326, 87 A. S. R. 386, 53 L. R. A. 491. "Except as modified by the statute, no reason is perceived why one who acquires the ownership or possession of such lands should not hold them with and subject to the incidents of ownership and possession at the common law." Doe v. Waterloo Min. Co., (S. D. Cal. 1893) 54 Fed. 935.

State regulations.—A state statute requiring an affidavit to be attached to the location notice of a mining claim is not in conflict with the provisions of this section. Van Buren v. McKinley, (1901) 8 Idaho 93, 66 Pac. 936.

It is a reasonable regulation that the legislature is fully authorized to make. Dunlap v. Patterson, (1895) 4 Idaho 473, 42 Pac. 504, 95 A. S. R. 140. And to similar effect see McBurney v. Berry, (1885) 5 Mont. 300, 5 Pac. 867; McCowan v. McLea, (1893) 16 Mont. 234, 40 Pac. 602; Berg v. Koegei, (1895) 16 Mont. 209, 40 Pac. 605.

II. Possessory Rights

Exclusive right of possession.—The location of mineral ground gives to the locator before discovery, and while he complies with the statutes of the United States and the state and local rules and regulations, the valuable right of possession against all intruders, and this right he can convey to another. Rooney v. Barnet (N. C. 1912) 200 Fed. 700, 119 C. C. A. 118.

The rights of one entering upon the public domain and locating and working a mineral claim are of as high order as those of a settler, each of whom is in possession under rights initiated which may by the observation of precedent conditions ripe into the right to a final patent. Southern California R. Co. v. O'Donnell, (1906) 3 Cal. App. 385, 55 Pac. 932.

"The right of 'exclusive right of possession and enjoyment,' as used in this section, means enjoyment of the surface for mining purposes alone, and hence the location of a mining claim within a forest reserve did not operate to withdraw the land embraced therein from the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture, nor give to locators having acquired a possessory interest only any authority to use the surface for the erection and maintenance of a saloon without a permit from the Secretary of Agriculture. U. S. v. Rizzinelli, (D. C. Idaho 1910) 182 Fed. 675.

The effect of this section and R. S. secs. 2324 and 2332, infra, pp. 533, 580, is to confer on the mining locator and his assigns something more than a preemption right. The locator acquires under it an exclusive right of possession, which he can transmit to his heirs and assigns, and this possession continues so long as the laws are complied with. Forbes v. Gracey, (1876) 9 Fed. Cas. No. 4924; Worthen v. Sidway, (1894) 72 Ark. 215, 78 S. W. 777.

So long as he locator complies with statutory requirements, he is entitled against all the world, subject to the paramount authority of the United States, to hold and enjoy his possession. He may never apply for nor take out a patent, yet so long as he does the acts required by R. S. sec. 2324, infra, p. 533, he may hold and enjoy perpetually his claim. Gillis v. Downey, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1896) 56 Fed. 483, 58 U. S. App. 567, 29 C. C. A. 286.

Mining claims are not open to relocation until the rights of the former locator have come to an end. A locator cannot avail himself of mineral in the public lands which another has discovered until the discoverer has in law abandoned his claim, and left the property open for another to take it up. Belk v. Meagher, (1881) 104 U. S. 279, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 735.

After a locator has done all that is necessary, under the law, for the acquisition of an exclusive right to the possession and enjoyment of the ground, the claim is thenceforth his property. He needs only a patent of the United States to render his title perfect, and until the patent issues the government holds the land in trust for the locator or his veneree. The ground itself is not afterwards open to sale. Noyes v. Mantle, (1886) 127 U. S. 348, 8 S. C. 1132, 22 U. S. (L. ed.) 168.

MINERAL LANDS, MINES AND MINING

Against trespass.—The exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of the location given by this section forbids any trespass; that exclusive right is as much the property of the locator as the vein or lode by him discovered and located. Clipper Min. Co. v. Kli Min., etc., Co., (1904) 194 U. S. 220, 24 S. Ct. 632, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 944. See also Cheesman v. Shreve, (C. C. Colo. 1888) 37 Fed. 36.

From this section it is manifest that Congress intended the locator should hold, be entitled to, and enjoy the profits of all the surface included within the boundary lines of his claim, and, if in possession in person or by agent, no one has a right to enter upon and take therefrom mineral or other valuable substances. Actual possession is sufficient evidence of title to authorize the maintenance of an action to recover damages against a trespasser. Fuller v. Harris, (D. C. Alaska 1887) 29 Fed. 844.

Outfitting timber.—While the location of a mining claim withdraws the land from the public domain so that no rival claimant can successfully initiate any right to it until such location has been avoided and entry canceled, it does not divest the legal title of the United States or impair its right to protect the land and its product, by either civil or criminal proceedings, from trespass or waste, and the occupant has no right to cut timber on the claim prior to the payment to the United States of the purchase price of the land. Teller v. U. S., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1901) 133 Fed. 273, 51 C. C. A. 230.

Injunction.—A mere locator is entitled to an injunction against a trespasser. Allen v. Dunlap, (1893) 24 Ore. 229, 33 Pac. 675.

Actual possession.—Actual possession of a mining claim is not necessary for the protection of the title acquired to such a claim by a valid location. Belk v. Meagher, (1861) 104 U. S. 279, 26 U. S. (L. ed.) 735.

Unpatented claim.—A party can show a right to the possession of a mining claim, where no patent has been issued, only by showing an actual possessio pedis as against a mere wrongdoer, or by showing a compliance with the requirements of the statute. R. S. sec. 2324; infra, p. 533. Patchen v. Keeley, (1857) 19 Nev. 404, 14 Pac. 347.

The estate acquired by the locator of a mining claim is an interest in real property, and although the paramount title remains in the government, the courts have universally recognized such interest as a freehold; and in all controversies arising between the locator and other persons as to any right or claim thereto, he is treated as the owner in fee.” Mt. Rose Min., etc., Co. v. Palmer, (1899) 26 Colo. 56, 56 Pac. 176, 77 A. S. R. 246, 60 L. R. A. 259, citing Forbes v. Gracey, (1876) 94 U. S. 762, 24 U. S. (L. ed.) 313; Merced Min. Co. v. Fremont, (1857) 7 Cal. 237, 25 Am. Dec. 282; Merritt v. Judd, (1859) 14 Cal. 59; Hughes v. Devlin, (1863) 23 Cal. 501; Roseville Alta Min. Co. v. Iowa Gulch Min. Co., (1860) 15 Colo. 29, 24 Pac. 920, 22 A. S. R. 373.

Unpatented claims.—Unpatented lode mining claims are “real property,” and as such are subject to the lien of a judgment recovered against their owner when docketed pursuant to a statute making a docketed judgment a lien upon the judgment debtor’s real property, the term being defined by a statute in force when the judgment was rendered and docketed as coextensive with lands, tenements, and hereditaments. Bradford v. Morrison, (1869) 212 U. S. 389, 29 S. Ct. 349, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 384.

Community property.—The property in a mining claim is the sole property of the locator, his heirs and assigns, and therefore is not community property. Phenix Min., etc., Co. v. Scott, (1890) 20 Wash. 45, 54 Pac. 777.

lien of general judgment.—A locator’s interest in an unpatented mining claim is not such an interest as will support the lien of a general judgment. Phenix Min., etc., Co. v. Scott, (1890) 20 Wash. 45, 54 Pac. 777.

Transfer of claim.—Written conveyance.—A written conveyance is not necessary to the transfer of a mining claim. Union Consol. Silver Min. Co. v. Taylor, (1879) 100 U. S. 37, 25 U. S. (L. ed.) 541. See also Kinney v. Consolidated Virginia Min. Co., (1877) 4 Haw. 382, 14 Fed. Cas. No. 7,873. But see Moore v. Hamerstag, (1890) 109 Cal. 122, 41 Pac. 806, in which case the court said that the interest in a mining claim, given to a locator by this statute, cannot be transferred by parol, or otherwise than in accordance with the statute of frauds.

Rights of being.—Upon the death of the owner of a mining claim, the right of possession is to be deemed and treated as an interest in real estate and must descend accordingly. That the right of possession descends to the administrator cannot be inferred from the use of the term Unpatented claim. — The possessory right of a locater of a mining claim, who has not applied for a patent nor done anything to obtain title other than to do the required assessment work, is property, and upon his death passes to his heirs by descent, and not directly as the designated donees or beneficiaries of the United States under the mining laws, and hence such rights may be administered upon and sold as other property by his executor or administrator. O'Connell v. Pinnacle Gold Mines Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1905) 140 Fed. 854, 72 C. C. A. 645, 4 L. R. A. (N. S.) 919, affirming (C. C. Wash. 1904) 131 Fed. 106.

Right of dower.—"The interest in a mining claim, prior to the payment of any money for the granting of a patent for the land, is nothing more than a right to the exclusive possession of the land based upon conditions subsequent, a failure to fulfill which forfeits the locater's interest in the claim. We do not think that under the federal statute the locater takes such an estate in the claim that dower attaches to it." Black v. Elkhorn Min. Co., (1896) 163 U. S. 445, 18 S. Ct. 1101, 41 U. S. (L. ed.) 221.

Apex of vein.—The apex of a vein, within the meaning of the statute, is the highest point of that vein where it approaches nearest to the surface of the earth, and where it is broken on its edge so as to appear to be the beginning or end of the vein. If it is merely a swell in the mineral matter, and turns over and goes on down, it is not a true apex. Stevens v. Williams, (1879) 1 McCravy 480, 23 Fed. Cas. No. 13,413.

As to what is the "top" or "apex" of a vein is a question of fact and not of law. Blue Bird Min. Co. v. Largay, (C. C. Mont. 1892) 49 Fed. 286.

The definitions of the word "apex," as used in the statute, reach the one inevitable conclusion that it is the highest point in the vein. But this is only a general definition, and its application to any particular vein or peculiar location may and often will call for further particularity of description. It must be the top or terminal edge of the vein on the surface or the nearest point to the surface, and it must be the top of the vein proper rather than of a spur or feeder, just as the highest point in the roof of a house would be taken to be the apex of the house, and not the chimney or flagstaff. Again, an apex is a point from which the vein is taken up as well as strike or course; else it confers no extralateral right. Stewart Min. Co. v. Ontario Min. Co., (1913) 23 Idaho 724, 132 Pac. 787.

Apex partly within and partly without. — A locator having the apex of a vein entirely within the surface lines of his claim for a portion of its length and the remaining portion partly within and partly without and within the surface lines of another claim, owns the whole lode within the end lines of his claim. Bullion, etc., Min. Co. v. Eureka Hill Min. Co., (1886) 5 Utah 3, 11 Pac. 615. If both the end lines of a location cut a vein, but the apex, in the course of the vein from east to west, should pass out of a side line and then back into the claim, the locator would have no right to any part of the apex which is not within the surface boundaries. Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 82 Fed. 45, 48 U. S. App. 411, 27 C. C. A. 50.

When a secondary or accidental vein crosses a common side line between two mining locations at an angle, and the apex of the vein is of such width that it is for a given distance partly within one claim and partly within another, inasmuch as neither statute nor authority permits a division of the crossing portion of the vein, and the weight of authority favors the senior locator, the entire vein must be considered as apexing upon the junior location until it has wholly passed beyond its side line. St. Louis Min., etc., Co. v. Montana Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1900) 104 Fed. 664, 44 C. C. A. 120, 56 L. R. A. 725.

Where the apex of a vein is of such width as to extend beyond the side-line of a claim onto a junior claim, the extralateral rights therein belong to the senior claim, within its extended end-line planes. Empire State-Ideal Min., etc., Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 591, 66 C. C. A. 90.

The senior location takes the entire width of the vein on its dip, where the apex of such vein is partly within two or more adjacent lode mining claims. Lawson v. Idaho Mining Co., (1907) 207 U. S. 1, 28 S. Ct. 15, 52 U. S. (L. ed.) 65.

All veins, lodes, and ledges.—A locator is not confined to the vein upon which he based his location and upon which the discovery was made, but is entitled to all other lodes having their tops or apaxes within the surface boundaries. Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co., (1901) 188 U. S. 499, 21 S. Ct. 885, 45 U. S. (L ed.) 1200. See also Campbell v. Ellet, (1897) 167 U. S. 116, 17 S. Ct. 765; Chessman v. Shreeve, (C. C. Colo. 1889) 40 Fed. 787; Gilpin v. Sierra Nevada Consol. Min. Co., (1890) 2 Idaho 606, 23 Pac. 1014.
A discovery and location vests in the locator all the unappropriated public land within its limits, and every vein whose apex is found within the boundary lines of the claim extended downward vertically, whether the surface thus secured is all or only a part of the tract within the boundary lines of the claim. Crown Point Min. Co. v. Buck, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1899) 27 Fed. 462, 36 C. C. A. 273.

The title to a vein depends on the right to the occupancy or the ownership of its apex within the limits of the right to the occupation of the surface. Gwilliam v. Donnellan, (1885) 115 U. S. 45, 8 S. Ct. 1110, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 348.

A lode, vein, or ledge containing a valuable mineral deposit is distinguished from the ground in which the same is found. Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doe, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 82 Fed. 45, 48 U. S. App. 411, 27 C. C. A. 50.

The end lines of the original veins are the end lines of all the veins found within the surface boundaries. Walrath v. Champion Min. Co., (1898) 171 U. S. 293, 18 S. Ct. 909, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 170.

Horizontal vein.—The title to a horizontal vein or deposit, "blanket" vein as it is generally called, may be acquired under the sections concerning veins, lodes, etc. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Mike, etc., Gold, etc., Min. Co., (1902) 143 U. S. 394, 430, 12 S. Ct. 543, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 201.

Surface locations made prior to the Act of 1872.—It is their essence that the language of the statute reaches the cases of locators who had while the Act of 1866 was in force located claims the surface lines of which included the tops of more than one lode, and confirms their possession to all the surface, and all the lodes included within their lines. Mt. Diablo Mill, etc., Co. v. Callison, (1870) 5 Savy. 439, 17 Fed. Cas. No. 9,886.

Limitation.—"A person who retains the possession of any portion of the surface ground of such mining claim, and occupies the same continuously for a period of ten years or more after the location of such mining claim, and before patent issued therefor, may successfully plead the statute of limitations in resisting the mining claimant's action in ejectment or for possession, and may maintain his action in ejectment even after patent issued, though the ten years required to be pleaded by the statute of limitations have not expired since patent issued, but had in part run before patent and after location." Tyoe Consol. Min. Co. v. Langstedt, (1902) 1 Alaska 467.

III. EXTRALATERAL RIGHTS

Extent of right.—"Our conclusions may be summed up in these propositions: First, the location as made on the surface by the locator determines the extent of rights below the surface. Second, the end lines, as he marks them on the surface, with the single exception hereinafter noticed, place the limits beyond which he may not go in the appropriation of any vein or veins along their course or strike.

Third, every vein at the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically becomes his by virtue of his location, and he may pursue it to any depth beyond his vertical side lines, although in so doing he enters beneath the surface of some other proprietor.

Fourth, the only exception to the rule that the end lines of the location as the locator places them establish the limits beyond which he may not go in the appropriation of a vein on its course or strike is where it is developed that in fact the location has been placed not along but across the course of the vein. In such case the law declares that those which the locator called his side lines are his end lines, and those which he called end lines are in fact side lines, and this upon the proposition that it was the intent of Congress to give to the locator only so many feet of the length of the vein, that length to be bounded by the lines which the locator has established of his location." Del Monte Min., etc., Co. v. Last Chance Min., etc., Co., (1898) 171 U. S. 55, 18 S. Ct. 895, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 72; Work Min., etc., Co. v. Doctor Jack Pot Min. Co., (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1912) 194 Fed. 620, 114 C. C. A. 392.

The surface side lines extended downward vertically determine the extent of the claim, except when in its descent the vein passes outside of them, and the outside portions are to lie between vertical planes drawn downward through the end lines. This means the end lines of the surface location, for all locations are measured on the surface. "The difficulty arising from the section grows out of its application to claims where the course of the vein is so variant from a straight line that the end lines of the surface location are not parallel, or, if so, are not at a right angle to the course of the vein. This difficulty must often occur where the lines of the surface location are made to control the direction of the vertical planes. The remedy must be found, until the statute is changed, in carefully making the location, and in posteriorly marking any part of its boundaries until explorations can be made to ascertain, as near as possible, the course and direction of the vein. In Colorado the statute allows for this purpose sixty days after notice of the discovery of the lode. Then the location must be distinctly marked on the ground, and thirty days thereafter are given for the preparation of the proper certificate of location to be recorded. Erhardt v. Boaro, (1885) 113 U. S. 527, 533 [5 S. Ct. 590, 28 U. S. (L. ed.) 1113]. Even then, with all the care possible, the end lines marked on the surface will often vary greatly from a right angle to the true course of the vein. But whatever inconvenience or hardship may thus happen, it is better that the boundary lines should be definitely determined by the lines of the surface location, than that they should be subject to perpetual readjustments according to subterranean developments made by mine workings. Such readjustment at every discovery of a change in the course of the vein would create great uncertainty in titles to mining claims. The rule, whatever hardship it may work in particular cases, should be settled, and thus prevent, as far as practicable, such uncertainty." Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Elgin Min., etc., Co. (1888) 118 U. S. 196, 6 S. Ct. 1177, 30 U. S. (L. ed.) 98. See also Fitzgerald v. Clark, (1895) 17 Mont. 100, 45 Pac. 273, 52 A. S. R. 665, 30 L. R. A. 803.

The ownership and possession of the surface of a lode mining claim carries with it the ownership and possession of the lode which has its apex therein to the full extent of the extralateral right given by the statute to the owner of the claim. Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 379, 377. The owner of a lode mining claim has the right to the ore beneath the surface of his claim in a vein not having its apex there, subject only to the right of the owner of the claim where such vein apaxes to follow it downward on its dip. Mammoth Min. Co. v. Grand Cent. Min. Co., (1909) 213 U. S. 72, 29 S. Ct. 413, 53 U. S. (L. ed.) 702. Compare McElligott v. Krogh, (1907) 151 Cal. 126, 29 S. Ct. 523.

The right given by the location of a lode mining claim in that portion of the vein lying within its surface boundaries and that portion lying beyond them in which the statute gives the owner extralateral rights is integral, and no adverse right can be acquired by the locator of another claim in respect to that portion that could not in respect to the former. Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 130 Fed. 379, 377.

When the owner is in possession of the surface and apex of a vein, he must be deemed also in possession of all parts of the vein to which he has title, though it departs beyond his side lines, just as he is in possession of that portion of the earth vertically beneath his surface, and when he has followed it he commits no wrong, and is not a trespasser. Montana Ore Purchasing Co. v. Boston, etc., Consol. Copper, etc., Min. Co., (1903) 27 Mont. 536, 71 Pac. 1005.

The object of the Act of 1872 in requiring parallelism of end lines was to give to the claimant of the lode as much of the lode or vein in its downward course as he had at the surface, but no more. Carson City Gold, etc., Min., Co. v. North Star Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 658, 48 U. S. App. 724, 25 C. C. A. 35.

This section gives to a locator the right to follow outside of his lines and into adjacent claims all veins or lodes which have their apaxes in his own claim. The statute gives the right to follow the vein but not the right to attempt to reach the vein by tunneling into an adjacent claim. St. Louis Min., etc., Co. v. Montana Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1906) 113 Fed. 900, 51 C. C. A. 530, 64 L. R. A. 207, affirmed (1904) 194 U. S. 235, 24 S. Ct. 654, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 953.

If the lode is somewhat below the plane of the horizon, it is within the meaning of the act, as one which may be pursued beyond the side lines of the claim in which its outcrop may be found. Leadville Min. Co. v. Fitzgerald, (1879) 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,158.

The extralateral rights conferred by this section only apply to rights acquired before other parties acquire interests in the adjacent lands, and do not apply to adjacent agricultural lands obtained before as rights had been acquired for a mining location. Amador Medoc Gold Min. Co. v. South Spring Hill Gold Min. Co., (N. D. Cal. 1888) 36 Fed. 666.

How determined. — The extralateral right conferred by this section is determined by the apex on the surface upon which the prospector makes his location and the dip of the vein, and not upon the levels in the depth of the earth opened and disclosed in the working of the mine. Alameda Min. Co. v. Success Min. Co., (1916) 29 Idaho 616, 161 Pac. 862.

Establishing line on older claim. — The locator of a lode mining claim has the legal right to lay an end line of his claim on the surface of a prior claim, in the absence of objection by the owner; and, as against the government and subsequent locators, such location carries precisely the same rights, both surface and extralateral, as it would if all its lines were

departure of vein from perpendicular.

—The locator of a mining claim has the right to the surface included within the lines of his claim, and if a vein has its top or apex within the claim, he may follow such vein downward, though it may depart from a perpendicular in its downward course outside "of the vertical side lines" of the location—that is, into adjoining grounds. The length of the side lines and the claim they bound are limited by the end lines, or, as it is expressed in the statute, by vertical planes drawn downward through the end lines. The statute would seem to call for no effort of construction, and the distinction which obtains in the parlance of miners and in the cases, between the strike or course and the dip of a vein, is compelled by the statute, and marks accurately the parallel and extralateral rights of a location. This certainly, as far as any language can do it, expresses the distinction which must be observed, however various may be the natural conditions. In other words, the strike and the dip of the vein must not be confounded nor the rights dependent upon them confused. Stewart Min. Co. v. Ontario Min. Co., (1915) 237 U. S. 350, 36 S. Ct. 610, 59 U. S. (L. ed.) 889.

irregular location.—"A surface location might be made in such an irregular and many-sided shape as to destroy the right to go beyond the surface lines. That consequence, however, would not be because the end lines were not exactly parallel, but because it would be difficult, if not impossible, to tell which were side lines and which were end lines. Doe v. Sanger, (1890) 83 Cal. 203, 23 Pac. 365.

vol. vi—18

lode crosses side line.—Where a lode enters an end line of a regularly located mining claim, and runs in its course lengthwise, nearly parallel with the side lines of the claim for the greater part of the length of the claim, the owners of the claim are not deprived of the extralateral rights attached to the claim, under the provisions of this section, because the lode or vein crosses a side line before reaching the other end line; the true construction of the statute is that, when the lode or vein crosses a side line before reaching the other end line, the owner's extralateral rights will extend from the end at which the lode enters to the point on the lode at which it crosses the side line. Republican Min. Co. v. Tyler Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 733, 48 U. S. App. 213, 25 C. C. A. 178.

patent to adjacent claimant.—The extralateral rights of a mere certificate holder are not taken away by the grant of a patent to an adjacent claimant. Cheeseman v. Hart, (C. C. Colo. 1890) 42 Fed. 98.

purchase of adjoining locations.—A party may purchase all the various locations comprising a certain area, covering one or more lodes or veins, and, being the owner thereof, might obtain a patent covering all the ground embraced in the original locations; and he is not required to show the separate lines of any of the original locations embraced within the surface boundaries of his patented claim, to entitle him to extralateral rights given by the statute. Carson City Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 638, 48 U. S. App. 724, 28 C. C. A. 333.

lode or vein must be continuous in the sense that it can be traced through the surrounding rocks, though slight interruptions of the mineral-bearing rock would not be alone sufficient to destroy the identity of the vein. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Cheeseman, (1888) 116 U. S. 529, 6 S. Ct. 481, 29 U. S. (L. ed.) 712. The case also Fitzgerald v. Clark, (1895) 17 Mont. 100, 42 Pac. 273, 52 A. S. R. 605, 30 L. R. A. 803.

To establish the right to pursue lodes beyond the side lines of a claim, it must be shown that the lode is continuous and in place throughout its whole course from its origin within the boundaries of the claim to the place in which the locator claims it. Leadville Min. Co. v. Fitzgerald, (1879) 15 Fed. Cas. No. 8,158.

the burden is upon the party claiming it to show by a preponderance of evidence that the ore which he extracted from beneath the surface of an adjoining patent belonged to the lode or vein the apex of which was within the surface lines of his own patented ground. Carson City Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. North Star Min. Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 83 Fed. 659, 48 U. S. App. 724, 28 C. C. A. 333. See also con-

Priority upon two locations.—When two locations have been made in such form and shape as to entitle them to follow the lode in its downward course, their rights depend upon the question of priority. "In cases of controversy where the right exists under each valid location to follow the lode in its downward course it necessarily follows that both locations cannot rightfully occupy the same space of ground, and in all cases where a controversy of this kind arises the prior location must prevail, precisely as in cases of like controversy between locations overlapping each other lengthwise on the course of the lode." Tyler Min. Co. v. Sweeney, (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1893) 54 Fed. 284, 7 U. S. App. 463, 4 C. C. A. 329. See also Tyler Min. Co. v. Last Chance Min. Co., (C. C. Idaho 1895) 71 Fed. 848.

Rights of junior locators.—So long as no forcible entry is made, a junior locator may project the end line of his claim across the surface of a senior location for the purpose of fixing the extralateral rights to so much of the vein located as is subject to location. Davis v. Shepherd, (1903) 31 Colo. 141, 72 Pac. 57.

The fact that a vein or lode is of such width on the surface as to extend beyond the side line of a claim located thereon does not affect the extralateral rights of such claim as against a junior location. Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 579, 66 C. C. A. 299.

Secondary veins.—The extralateral rights in secondary veins depend, inter alia, upon the extent of the apexes within the surface lines, and while the end lines of the claim as fixed by the location are the end lines of all veins apscising within it, where the apexes bounding such veins may be as different as the extent of their respective apexes, though all such planes must be drawn vertically downward parallel with the end lines. There can be but one set of end lines for one location, and these must perform that function not only for the discovery vein, but for all other veins apscising within the surface lines. "This, however, does not mean that all such veins have exactly the same extralateral rights, nor can it be said that only so much of a secondary vein as apscises within that part of the claim where the apex of the discovery vein is found has such rights." Ajax Gold Min. Co. v. Hilkey, (1903) 31 Colo. 131, 72 Pac. 447, 102 A. S. R. 23, 62 L. A. 555. See also Walrath v. Champion Min. Co., (1890) 19 U. S. 293, 18 S. Ct. 909, 43 U. S. (L. ed.) 140.

Agreed boundary between overlapping claims.—An oral agreement between the owners of two overlapping lode mining claims, located on the same day, in accordance with which a monument was built, which it was agreed should be a point on the line between the claims, cannot affect the extralateral rights appertaining to one of the claims which has passed into the hands of other owners, having no knowledge of such agreement, as against third parties owning junior claims, and having no interest in the other claim or privity with the agreement. Empire State-Idaho Min., etc., Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 591, 66 C. C. A. 99.

Mineralization essential.—In order to entitle the owner of a mining claim to extralateral rights, it is not sufficient that the vein he seeks to follow outside the boundaries of his claim consists of rock sufficiently mineralized so that a miner can follow it with a reasonable expectation of finding ore; but it is necessary that there should be a ledge or body of mineral or mineral-bearing rock of such value as will distinguish it from the country rock or from the general mass of the mountain. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Course of vein.—Where the end lines of a lode claim cross the surface outcrop- ping of a vein, they determine the extralateral right of the claim, without regard to the angle at which they cross the general course of the vein; its course for that purpose being fixed by the course of the apex on the surface of the claim. Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 579, 66 C. C. A. 299.

Where a person owns a mining claim having an apex of a vein within its limits extending through the claim lengthwise, he has, by virtue of the extralateral rights reserved under the statute, a right to follow the vein between vertical planes drawn downward through the end lines of the location, from the apex, on the dip, to the deep, although such vein may so far depart from a perpendicular, in its course downward, as to extend outside of the vertical side lines of the surface of the location into ground belonging to the adjoining owner. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

"A claim located in conformity with the provisions of this section would take the form of a parallelogram, if the course or strike of the vein or lode should run in a straight line; but such veins and lodes are often found upon exploration to run in a course deviating at different points from such line. And from the uncertainty sometimes arising in determining the lateral rights of locators. Lines which cross the course of the strike of the vein and do not run parallel with it, are end lines notwithstanding they are marked as side lines. When lines are drawn inaccurately and irregularly, the most that the court can do is to give the miner such rights as his imperfect location warrants, under the statute. Where it finds that what are called sides lines are in fact end lines, the court, in determining its lateral rights, will treat such side lines as end lines and such end lines as side lines; but the court cannot make a new location for him, and thereby enlarge his rights. He must stand upon his own location, and take only what it will give him under the law." King v. Amy, etc., Consol. Min. Co., (1894) 152 U. S. 222, 14 S. Ct. 510, 38 U. S. (L. ed.) 419.

If a location is made in substantial compliance with the intent of the statute, that is, where there are two side lines running along the course of the vein, and two shorter end lines running across it, so that the two sets of lines are distinct and apparent,—such a location is not void, but gives the right to follow a vein laterally, although the original end lines may not be exactly parallel, or although they may differ from a true parallel. A prospector will not lose his location simply because he failed in the first instance to run his end lines on a perfect parallel. Such a locator has the right, and perhaps it is his duty, to make such change as is necessary to parallel his end lines the next day, or the next month, or within any reasonable time, if such change interferes with the substantial property rights of another person. Doe v. Sanger, (1890) 83 Cal. 203, 23 Pac. 365.

Downward course.—In this statute the words "downward course" and "course downward" are used interchangeably. It was undoubtedly intended by the use of the words to signify the course of the vein from the surface downward towards the earth. Sometimes it may happen that the "downward course" of a vein will be perpendicular and the vein will form a vertical plane, but, as a rule, there is a deflection in the downward course of these mineral veins from the perpendicular, which is called their dip; but still the deflection of the dip is always "downward," and when the plane of the vein reaches the horizontal, then there is a blanket vein or lode, and on such a vein a locator has a lateral right. Stewart Min. Co. v. Ontario Min. Co., (1913) 23 Idaho 794, 132 Pac. 787.

Where the strike of the vein passes perpendicularly through the end lines, the mere meanderings of the outer border of the end lines do not absolutely control the question of parallelism; the spirit and reason of the statute require that the settled and permanent course of the vein on its strike, as nature fixed it, should control. Chesman v. Hart, (C. C. Colo. 1890) 42 Fed. 98.

Where the apex of a vein crosses what were originally intended as the side lines of a lode claim, and they are parallel, they become, by operation of law, the end lines. Empire Milling, etc., Co. v. Tombstone Mill, etc., Co., (1904) 131 Fed. 339; Last Chance Min. Co. v. Bunker Hill, etc., Min., etc., Co., (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1904) 131 Fed. 579, 66 C. C. A. 290.

Where the vein within a mining claim ran in a northerly and southerly direction, and the location was crosswise of the vein, the side lines were really end lines, considering the direction of the lode on the surface, and the rights of the locators were restricted to the area within the side lines three hundred feet on each side of the vein or lode. Southern California R. Co. v. O'Donnell, (1906) 3 Cal. App. 382, 85 Pac. 932.

When a vein passes in and out of the same line of a location, such line constitutes an end line so as to cut off extra lateral rights. Catron v. Leach, (1897) 23 Colo. 433, 49 Pac. 687, 58 A. S. R. 256.

That the course of a vein is across a claim as located upon the surface instead of in the direction of its length, does not invalidate the patent as to any part of the territory included therein; the side lines become end lines and the end lines become side lines, so far as lateral rights are concerned. Argonaut Consol. Min., etc., Co. v. Turner, (1897) 23 Colo. 400, 48 Pac. 695, 58 A. S. R. 245.

Premise.—An extraneous lode of a lode claim is presumed to own all the ore within planes drawn vertically downward.
to the deep through the boundary lines of such claim, as well as the surface and everything appurtenant to the claim, which presumption continues until some other locator establishes that such deposits belong to another lode having its apex in its ground, so that he is entitled to extralateral rights reserved by this section. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Burden of proof. — Where the defendant, who was the owner of a lode claim, claimed ore underlying plaintiff’s adjoining claim by virtue of extralateral rights, the defendant was bound to show, not only that the apex and strike of the vein were within the boundaries of defendant’s claim, but that between planes drawn vertically downward through the end line of plaintiff’s claim and a certain parallel line the vein from its apex on its dip was continuous, that the continuity extended to and through plaintiff’s ground, and that the ore bodies claimed formed a part of such vein. Grand Cent. Min. Co. v. Mammoth Min. Co., (1905) 29 Utah 490, 83 Pac. 648.

Jury trial. — In a suit to determine extralateral mining rights, the parties are not entitled, as matter of right, to a trial by jury. Hickey v. Anaconda Copper Min. Co., (1905) 32 Mont. 46, 81 Pac. 806.

IV. Effect of Patent

Effect of patent. — The owner of a fee in a patented lode mining claim is presumed to be in possession of the surface included within the lines of the location, and the burden of proof rests on one claiming any part thereof by adverse possession. Original Consol. Min. Co. v. Abbott. (C. C. Mont. 1908) 167 Fed. 881.

A patent for a lode claim takes the sub-surface as well as the surface, and there is no other right to disturb the sub-surface than that given to the owner of a vein apexing without its surface but descending on its dip into the sub-surface to pursue and develop that vein. St. Louis Min., etc. Co. v. Montana Min. Co., (1904) 194 U. S. 235, 24 S. Ct. 654, 48 U. S. (L. ed.) 953. But see New Dunderberg Min. Co. v. Old, (C. C. A. 8th Cir. 1897) 79 Fed. 398, 49 U. S. App. 201, 25 C. C. A. 116.

The patent, when issued, is for the land, and conveys to the patentee not only the common-law right to the full enjoyment of the surface and all below it, but also the right, in the case of a vein, to pursue that vein throughout its entire depth, even though it may pass beyond the vertical side lines of the surface location. Hawke v. Deffebach, (1855) 4 Dak. 20, 22 N. W. 480.

The rights of a patentee are to be determined by the terms of his patent, and when the description in a patent gives it parallel end lines, and grants the right to follow all lodes on their dip outside of the side lines whose apex is within the surface lines of the claim, the courts cannot go behind it in a collateral proceeding, though the end lines are not in fact parallel. Waterloo Min. Co. v. Doc. (C. C. A. 9th Cir. 1897) 82 Fed. 45, 48 U. S. App. 411, 27 C. C. A. 50.

Sec. 2323. [Owners of tunnels, rights of.] Where a tunnel is run for the development of a vein or lode, or for the discovery of mines, the owners of such tunnel shall have the right of possession of all veins or lodes within three thousand feet from the face of such tunnel on the line thereof, not previously known to exist, discovered in such tunnel, to the same extent as if discovered from the surface; and locations on the line of such tunnel of veins or lodes not appearing on the surface, made by other parties after the commencement of the tunnel, and while the same is being prosecuted with reasonable diligence, shall be invalid; but failure to prosecute the work on the tunnel for six months shall be considered as an abandonment of the right to all undiscovered veins on the line of such tunnel. [R. S.]

"To the same extent" obviously refers to the length along the line of the lode or vein. The discovery of the vein in the tunnel, worked according to the provisions of the statute, gives a right to the possession of the vein to the same length as if discovered from the surface, and a location on the surface is not essential to a continuance of that right. Campbell v. Ellet, (1897) 167 U. S. 116, 17 S. Ct. 765, 42 U. S. (L. ed.) 101.

The right to a vein discovered in a tunnel may be exercised by locating the claim the full length of 1,500 feet on either side of the tunnel, or in such proportion thereof on either side as the locator may desire. Enterprise Min. Co. v. Rico-Aspen Consol. Min. Co., (1897)
Rights as against surface locator.—This section contemplates that tunnels may be run for the development of veins or lodes or for the discovery of mines, gives a right of possession of such veins or lodes if not previously known to exist, and makes locations on the surface after the commencement of the tunnel invalid. There is no implication of a displacement of surface locations made before the commencement of the tunnel. There can be no implication of a conflict with the rights given by R.S. sec. 2322, supra, p. 535; those rights are exclusive, and a tunnel can only be run in subordination to them. Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co., (1901) 182 U. S. 499, 21 S. Ct. 885, 45 U. S. (L. ed.) 1200.

The effect of this section is to withdraw from exploration for lodes not appearing on the surface so much of the public domain as lies upon the face of a tunnel, and to reserve such for the benefit of the proprietor of the tunnel so long as he prosecutes his work thereon with reasonable diligence, and gives him the right of possession for this purpose, and such tunnel locator may avail himself of the provisions of R.S. sec. 2326, infra, p. 563. Back v. Sierra Nevada Consol. Min. Co., (1885) 2 Idaho 420, 17 Pac. 83.

When a party has discovered a lode not appearing on the surface and not previously known to exist, which lies in such position in relation to a tunnel that the same may be discovered therein, and taken by the tunnel claimant, he can be restrained from acquiring such lode while the tunnel claimant is prosecuting his tunnel according to law. Hope Min. Co. v. Brown, (1901) 11 Mont. 370, 28 Pac. 732.

Rights of prior surface locator.—A person does not acquire by virtue of a tunnel and tunnel-site location the ownership and right to the surface by virtue of its location therein, to wit, veins or lodes not appearing on the surface, and not known to exist prior to the date of location of said tunnel site, as against a prior surface location embracing within its boundaries the apex of such blind vein. Calhoun Gold Min. Co. v. Ajax Gold Min. Co., (1899) 27 Colo. 1, 50 Pac. 607, 83 A. S. R. 17, 50 L. R. A. 209.

Rights prior to passage of mining law.—Where a location was made prior to the passage of any general mining law, the limit of the length of the tunnel would be determined by the local rules and customs in force at the time of the location. Glacier Mountain Silver Min. Co. v. Willis, (1888) 127 U. S. 471, 8 S. Ct. 1214, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 172.

Location for discovery.—The privilege granted by this section applies to one who locates a tunnel for discovery purposes as well as for development purposes. Fissure Min. Co. v. Old Susan Min. Co., (1900) 22 Utah 438, 63 Pac. 587.

The discovery of a vein in a tunnel gives to the discoverer rights therein though he proceeds with the tunnel, and after finishing work on the tunnel does not immediately commence to develop it. Iron Silver Min. Co. v. Mike, etc., Gold, etc., Min. Co., (1892) 143 U. S. 394, 430, 12 S. Ct. 543, 36 U. S. (L. ed.) 201.

The “line” of the tunnel designates a width marked by the exterior or sides of the tunnel. Corning Tunnel Co. v. Poll, (1878) 4 Colo. 507. See also Hope Min. Co. v. Brown, (1888) 7 Mont. 550, 19 Pac. 218.

Discovery within 300 feet of line of tunnel.—Third persons have a right to locate any veins or lodes within a distance of 300 feet on either side of the line of the tunnel, but not on the line of the tunnel. Any locations so made are at the risk of the locators, for upon the discovery of the vein or lode in the tunnel, all locations made subsequent to the commencement of the tunnel be invalid, if they are within 300 feet of the vein or lode, and within 1,500 feet as located along the vein or lode discovered. Hope Min. Co. v. Brown, (1888) 7 Mont. 550, 19 Pac. 218.

Excess claim.—If a tunnel is 5,000 feet in length the claim would not be void, but the location would be good to the extent of 3,000 feet. Glacier Mountain Silver Min. Co. v. Willis, (1888) 127 U. S. 471, 8 S. Ct. 1214, 32 U. S. (L. ed.) 172.
that its boundaries can be readily traced. All records of mining-claims hereafter made shall contain the name or names of the locators, the date of the location, and such a description of the claim or claims located by reference to some natural object or permanent monument as will identify the claim. On each claim located after the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, and until a patent has been issued therefor, not less than one hundred dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made during each year. On all claims located prior to the tenth day of May, eighteen hundred and seventy-two, ten dollars' worth of labor shall be performed or improvements made by the tenth day of June, eighteen hundred and seventy-four, and each year thereafter, for each one hundred feet in length along the vein until a patent has been issued therefor; but where such claims are held in common, such expenditure may be made upon any one claim; and upon a failure to comply with these conditions, the claim or mine upon which such failure occurred shall be open to relocation in the same manner as if no location of the same had ever been made, provided that the original locators, their heirs, assigns, or legal representatives, have not resumed work upon the claim after failure and before such location. Upon the failure of any one of several co-owners to contribute his proportion of the expenditures required hereby, the co-owners who have performed the labor or made the improvements may, at the expiration of the year, give such delinquent co-owner personal notice in writing or notice by publication in the newspaper published nearest the claim, for at least once a week for ninety days, and if at the expiration of ninety days after such notice in writing or by publication such delinquent should fail or refuse to contribute his proportion of the expenditure required by this section, his interest in the claim shall become the property of his co-owners who have made the required expenditures. Provided, That the period within which the work required to be done annually on all unpatented mineral claims shall commence on the first day of January succeeding the date of location of such claim, and this section shall apply to all claims located since the tenth day of May, anno Domini eighteen hundred and seventy-two. [R. S.]

This section was first amended by Act of June 6, 1874, ch. 220, 18 Stat. L. 61, by providing "that the time for the first annual expenditure on claims located prior to the passage of said act shall be extended to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and seventy-five."
